As for the other Jewes that were in the kynges landes, they came together, ad stode for their lyues, & they myght haue rest from their enemyes: & slew of their enemyes fyue and seuentye thousand, howbeit, they layed no handes on their goodes. This they dyd on the thirtenth daye of the moneth Adar, and on the fourtenth daye of the same moneth rested they, which daye they helde to feastinge ad gladnesse. But the Jewes that were at Susan, came together both on the thirtenth daye and on the fourtenth, and on the fyftenth daye of the same they rested, and helde that daye with feastinge and gladnes. And therefore the Jewes that dwelt in the villages and unwalled townes, helde the fourtenth daye of the moneth Adar, with gladnes and feastinge, and kepte holy daye, and euery one sent gyftes vnto another.

And Mardocheus wrote these actes, and sent the sent the writynges vnto all the Jewes that were in all the landes of kynge Abasuerus, both nye & farre that they shuld make a law among them selues & holde the fourtenth & fifteenth daye of the moneth Adar, as p dayes wherein the Jewes came to rest fro their enemyes, and as a moneth wherein their payne was turned to ioye, & their sorowe into a holy daye, & that in those dayes they shuld make feastes and gladnes, & one to lende gyftes vnto another, & to distribute vnto the poore.

And the Jewes were content with it & they had begonne to do, and p Mar docheus wrote vnto them: how that Haman the sonne of Hamabatha all the Jewes enemy, had deuised against p Jewes, how he might destroye the ad caused to cast Phur (that is a Lot) for to put them in feare, & to bringe the to naught: & how hester went, and spake to the kynge, & thow we letters his wicked deuice (which he ymagined agaynst p Jewes) myght be turned vpo his awne heed, & how hee & his sonnes were hanged on the tre. For the which cause they called this daye Phurim, because of the name of the lott, ad because of all the wordes of this writyng: & what they the felues had sene, & what had happened vnto the.

And the Jewes set it vp, and toke it vpo them and their seide, ad vpon all soch as ioyned them selues vnto them, that they wolde not misse but obserue these two dayes yercly, accordyng as they were wyrtten and appoynted, how that these dayes are not to be forgotten, but to be kepte of childers childe among all kynredes in all lades and cyties. They are the dayes of Phurim, which are not to be overslypte among the Jewes, & the memoriall of them ought not to perishe fro their seide.

And quene Esther the daughter of Abihail and Mar docheus the Jew wrote w all auctorite (to confirme this seconde writting of Phurim) and sent the letters vnto all the Jewes in the hundreth & seuen and twentye landes of the empyre of Abasuerus, w frendly and faythfull wordes, to confirme these dayes of Phurim, in their tyme appoynted, accordyng as Mar docheus the Jew & Esther the quene had appoynted them. And they bound their soule and their seide to fasting, & prayer. And Esther stablished the wordes of these lottes, as it is written in the boke.

And the kynge Abasuerus layed tribute vpon the lande, and vpon the fles of the see. And all that he dyd by his power and auctorite, & the great worshippe of Mar docheus, which the kynge gaue him, be they not writen in the Chronicles of the kynges of Media and Persia: For Mar docheus the Jewe was the seconde next vnto kynge Abasuerus and greate among the Jewes, and accepted among the multitude of his bretheren, as one p seeketh the welth of his people, and speaketh the best for all hys seide.

The ende of the boke of Esther.

The boke of Job.

The fyrst Chapter.

Job is plagued of God by the losse of hys goodes and chyldren.

In the lande of * thus there was a man whose name was Job: & the same was a perfect & iust mā, soch a one as feared God & eschued euell. And he had seuen sonnes, & thre daughters * his substance also was seuen thysse, & thre. Camels, v. C. yocke of oxen, & yue. C. she asses, and a very greate household: so that he was one of the most principall me among all them of the east countre. And his sonnes wet and made banckettes: one daye in one house, another daye in another, and sent for theyr thyssters, to eat & drinke with the. And it fortuned, that when they had passed ouer the tyme of their bancketting roside aboute, Job sent for them, and sanctified them, and gat vp early, and offered for euery one a brett offeringe. For Job sayde: lest peraduenture my sonnes haue done some offence, & haue bene vnthankfull to God in their hertes. Thus did Job euery daye. And vpon a daye * when the children of God cam & stode before the Lord, it fortuned that Sathan ca also among them. And the Lord sayde vnto Sathan. From whence comest thou? Sathan answered the Lord, and sayde: * I haue gone about the lande, and walcked thorow it.

And the Lord sayde vnto Sathan: hast p not considered my seruaunt Job, how p there is none lyke him in the land: a perfect & a iust man: soch a one as feareth God, ad eschuet euell? Sathan answered, and sayde vnto the Lord. Doth Job feare God for naught? hast thou not preferred him, & his house, and all p he hath on euery syde? Thou hast blessed the worckes worckes of hys handes, and hys possession is encreased in the lade. But laye thyne had now vpon hym * (a lytle) and touch all that he hath, and he shal curse the to thy face. And the Lord sayde vnto Satan: lo, all that he hath, he in thy power: onely vpon hym selfe that thou laye not thyne hande. And Satan went forth fro the presence of the Lord.

And vpo a certayn daye it fortuned, that his sonnes and daughters were eatyng and drynking wyne in their eldest brothers house, and there came a messenger vnto Job, ad sayde: Whyle the oxen were a plowynge, and the asses goynge in the pasture besyde them, the Sabres came in vpolently, and toke the awaye: yee, they haue slayne thy seruantes with the edge of the sweard, and I onely ranne my waye, to tell the.

Whyle he was yet speakyng, there came another, and sayde: The fyre of God is falle from heauen, and hath bzent vp all thy shepe and seruantes, and consumed them: & I onely ranne my waye, to tell the. And whyle he was yet speakinge, there came another, and sayde: The Caldees made thre armyes, and fell in vpo the camels, and haue carped them awaye, yee, and slayne thy seruantes with the swearde: and I onely am gotten awaye, to tell the. And whyle he was yet speakyng, there came another, and sayde: Thy sonnes and thy daughters were eatyng and drynking wyne in theyr eldest brothers house, and beholde, there came a myghtye greate wynde out of the south, and smote the foure corners of the house: which fell vpo thy children, and they are deed, and I am gotten a waye alone to tell the.

Then Job stode vp, and rent his clothes, and shaued hys heade, fell downe vpon the ground, worshipped, and sayd: * Naked came I out of my mothers wombe, and naked shall I turne thither agayne. The Lord gaue, and the Lord hath taken awaye: * euen as it hath pleased the Lord, so is it come to passe: blessed be the name of the Lord. * In all these thynge dyd Job not offende, ner murmured foolishly agaynst God.

The. ij. Chapter.

Job ys plagued with sore byles, and afterward ys mocked of hys wyfe. Hys frendes byspte hym, & haue compassyon of hym.

And the children of God came and stode before the Lord, and Satan came also amonge them, and stode before the Lord. And the Lord sayde vnto Satan: From whence comest thou? Satan answered the Lord, and sayde: I haue gone about the lad, and walcked thorow it.

And the Lord sayde vnto Satan: hast p not considered my seruaunt Job: for there is none lyke him in the land. For he is a perfect and iust man, soch a one as feareth God, and eschuet euell, & contynucth styll in hys godlynesse. And thou mouedest me agaynst him, & I shulde punyssh him for naught. And Satan answered the Lord, & sayde: Shyn for sayne: yee, a man wyll geue all that euer he hath, for his lyfe. But laye thyne had now vpon him, and touch once his bone and flesh, and he shal curse the to thy face. And p Lord sayde vnto Satan: lo, there hast thou hym in thy power, but spare hys lyfe.

So went Satan forth from the presence of the Lord, and smote Job with maruelous sore byles, from the sole of hys fote vnto hys crowne: so that he sat vpon the ground in the ashes, and scraped of the scyth of hys sores with a potsherde.

Then sayde hys wyfe vnto hym: * Dost thou contynue yet in thy perfectnesse: curse God & dye. But Job sayde vnto her: Thou speakest lyke a folysh woman. Shal we receaue prosperite at the hand of God, and not receaue aduersite? * In all these thinges, did not Job synne with his lypes.

Now when Jobs frendes hearde of all the trouble, that happened vnto hym, there came thre of them, euery one from hys awne place: namely, Eliphaz the Themanite, Bil dad the Suhite, & zophad the Naamathite.

And they were agreed together to come, to shewe their compassion vpon him, and to comforte hym. So when they lyfte vp theyr eyes a farre of, they knewe him not.

Then they cryed, and wepte: & euery one of them rete his clothes, and sprynckled dust vpon theyr heades in the ayre. They sat the downe by hym also vpon the grounde seuen dayes and seuen nyghtes. Nether was there any of them that spake one worde vnto hym: for they sawe, that hys payne was very greate.

The. iij. Chapter.

The wordes of Job, wherein he declareth that hys present lyfe ys miserable, and that the death of the ryghteous ys ioyous and comfortable.

After this opened Job his mouth, and cursed hys daye. And Job answered, and sayde: lost be that daye, wheri I was borne, and the nyght, in the which it was sayde: there is a man chyldre conceived. The same daye be turned to darchenes, and not regarded of God from aboue, nether lett hym shyne vpon it with lyght, but lett it be stayned with darchnesse, and the shadowe of death. Let the dynme cloute fall vpon it, and lett it be lapped in with sorowe on the daye tyme. Let the darche storne overcome that nyght, and lett it not be ioynd vnto the the dayes of the yeaere, ner counted in the monethes. Desolate be that night, and without gladnesse, lett them that curse the daye, and that be ready to rayse vp mourning, geue it also their curse. Let the starres of that night be dymme thozow darcknesse of it. Let it loke for lyght, but lett it se none, nether the rylunge vp of the fayre moynunge: because it shyt not vp the wombe that bare me. For then shulde these sorowes haue bene hyd fro myne eyes.

* Jer. x. d.

Alas, * why dyed I not in þ byrth? Why dyd not I perishe, as sone as I came oute of my mothers wombe? Why let they me vpo their knees? Why gaue they me suck with theyr brestes? Then shulde I now haue lyeen styll, I shulde haue slepte, and bene at reste, lyke as the kynge and lordes of the earthe, which haue bylded them selues special places. Or as the princes that haue had greete substance of golde, and theyr houses full of syluer. Or why was I not hyd, as a thynge bozne out of tyme, ether as yonge chyldren, which neuer sawe the light? There must the wycked ceasse from theyr tyzannye, and ther soch as are ouerlaboured be at reste: ther are those lett out fre, which haue bene in prison, so that they heare nomore the voyce of the opprelloure. There are small & great, and the seruaunt is fre from hys master.

Wherfore is the lyght geuen to hym that is in mysery: and lyfe vnto them, that haue heuy hertes? Whych longe for death (and though it come not) wolde dygg it oute of hyd places which also wolde be excedyng glad and reioyce, yf they coulde fynde theyr graue any where. That shuld be ioye to that man whose waye is hyd, and God kepeth it backe from him. For my syghes come before I eate, and my roarynges fall out like the water. For the thynge that I feared, is come vpon me: and the thynge that I was afrayed of, is happened vnto me. Was I not happy? Had I not quyetnesse? Was I not in rest? And now cometh soch mysery vpo me.

The. iij. Chapter.

Job is reprehended of impacience and vntruste, and of the presumption of hys awne righte welles.

And Eliphaz the Themanite answered, and sayde: Yf we begynne to commen with the, wylt thou be discontent? but who can withhold him selfe from speakinge? Behold, thou hast bene a chastener of many, and hast comforted the weery handes.

Thy wordes haue set vp those that were fallen, thou hast refreshed the weake knees. But now that the plage is come vpon the, thou art greued: now yf it hath touched thy selfe, thou art faynt harted. * Is not this thy feare, thy stedfastnesse, thy pacience, and the perfectnesse of thy wayes? Cosydre (I praye the) whoeuer persyshed beyng an innocent? Or, wher were the godly destroyed? For (as I haue proued by experience) they p plowe iniquyte, & so we wretchednesse, reape the same. With the blast of God they perishe, and with the bryth of hys nastreles are they consumed awaye. The roaryng of the lyon, and the voyce of the lyon, & the teeth of the lyons whelpes are pulled out. The lyon perissheth for lacke of praye, and the lyons whelpes are scatered abrode.

And vnto me came the worde secretly, & myne eare hath receaued a lytell therof. In the thoughtes and visyos of the night (wher slepe cometh on men) feare came vpon me, and drede, which made all my bones to shake. The wynde passed by, before my presence, and made the heares of my flesh to stande vp. He stode there, and I knew not hys face, an ymage ther was before myne eyes, and in the stylnesse hearde I a voyce. * Shall man be more iust than God? Or shall a man be purer than hys maker? Beholde, he founde no treuth in hys seruantes, and in hys aungels ther was foly. How moche more in them that dwell in houses of claye, and whose foundacyon is but dust: which shalbe consumed as it were with a Moth? They shalbe smitten from the moynunge vnto the euenyng: yee, they shal perishe for ever, wher no man thynketh theron. Is not their royaltie gone awaye with the: they shal dye trulye, and not in wyldome.

The. v. Chapter.

The ende of a sole. The righte welles of God. The Lord chasteneth hys, and deliuereth them agayne.

Ive (I praye the) yf happye there be any that wylt answer the, and loke thou vpon eny of the holy men. As for the foolyshe man, displeasure kylleth hym, and anger slayeth the ignorant.

* I haue sene my selfe, when the folysh was depe roted, and sobenly. I cursed hys habitacyon. Hys chyldren were without prosperite, and they were slayne in the gate, and there was no man to deliuer the. * Hys harvest was eaten vp of the hungry, & the weapened man spoyled it, and the thurstye dracke vp theyr labour. It is not the earth that bryngeth forth iniquyte, nether cometh sorowe out of the ground: but man is bozne vnto labour, lyke as the sparkes flye vp out of the hote coles.

But I wyl aske counsell at the Lorde, & wyl talke with God: which doth thynge, that are vnsearcheable, and maruels without nombre. * He geueth rayne vpon þ erth, and poureth water vpon the stretes, so þat let vp them that be of lowe degre, ad that those which which are in heynesse may come to prosperite. He destroyeth the deuyces of the sotyll, so that their handes are not able to perfozme any stedfast thing. * He compaseth the wyse in their awne craftynesse, and ouerthroweth the counsell of the wycked. In someche that they runne into darcknes by fayre daye, and * grope aboute them at the none daye, lyke as in the nyght.

He shall deliuer the poze fro the sweard, and from the threatenynge of the vngodly, and from the violence of the myghty. He is the hope of the poore, and the mouth of the wicked shalbe stopped.

Beholde, * happye is the man, whom God punissheth: therfore, refuse not thou the chastenynge of the almyghty. For though he make a wounde, he geueth a playster: though he smyte, hys hande maketh whole agayne.

He shall deliuer the in fyre troubles, and in the seuenth there shal no euell come to the. In honger he shal saue the from death: and when it is warre, from the power of the swearde.

Thou shalt be kept from the euell tonge, and when trouble cometh, thou shalt not nede to feare. In destruction and derth thou shalt be mery, and * shalt not be afrayed of beastes of the earth. For þ stones of the lande shalbe confederate with the, & the beastes of the felde shal geue the peace.

And thou shalt knowe that thy dwelling place shalbe in rest: and thou shalt go and beholde thy habitacyon, and shalt not synne. Thou shalt se also, yf thy lede shal encrease, and that thy posterite shalbe as the grasse vpon the earth. Thou shalt come also to thy graue in a fayre age, lyke as when they take vp a corne shefe in due season. Lo, thys we oure selues haue proued by experience, and even thus it is. Werken thou to it also, that thou mapest take hede to thy selfe.

The. vi. Chapter.

Job answered, that hys payne is more greuous than hys faulte, yet notwithstandinge he deliureth the.

Job answered also, & sayde: That the displeasure which I haue were truly weped, and my punishment layed in the balaunces together: for now is it heuier then the sande of the see. And thys is the cause, that my wordes are so sorowfull.

For the arrowes of the almyghty are round about me, whose indygnacyon hath droncke vp my sprete, and the terrible feares of God are sett agaynst me. * Doth the wyld ass roare wher he hath grasse? Or cryeth the ore, when he hath foder ynough? What which is vnlaury, shal it be eaten without salt, or is there any taste in the whyte of an egge?

The thynge that some tyme I myght not awaye withall, are now my meate for very sorowe. * That I myght haue my desyre: and that God wolde graunte me the thynge that I longe for. * That God wold begynne and smyte me: that he wolde let hys hande go, and take me cleane awaye. Then shulde I haue some comforte: yee, I wolde desyre hym in my payne, that he shulde not spare, for I wyl not be agaynst the wordes of the holy one.

For what power haue I to endure? And what is myne ende, that my soule myght be pacient? Is my strength the strength of stones? Or, is my flesh made of brasse? Is it not so þ there is in me no helpe: and that my substance is taken from me. He that is in tribulacyon ought to be comforted of hys neyghbour: but the feare of the Lord is cleane awaye. Myne awne brythreu passe ouer by me as the water brooke, and as the ryuer of water, do hastily go awaye. But they that feare the hoze frost, the snowe shal fall vpon them.

When theyr tyme cometh, they shalbe destroyed and perishe: when they be sett on fyre, they shalbe remoued out of theyr place, for þ pathe that they go in, are croked: they haite after vayne thynge, and shal perishe. They turne them to the pathe of Theman, and to the wayes of Saba, wherin they haue put their trust. Confounded are they that put eny confydence in them. For whan they come to obtayne the thynge that they loke for, they are brought to confusion.

Even so are ye also come vnto me: but now that ye se my mysery, ye are afrayed. Dyd I desyre you, to brynge vnto me, or to geue me eny of youre substance? To deliuer me from the enemyes hande, or to saue me from the hande of tyrantes? Teache me, and I wyl holde my tonge: and whan I do erre, ther we me wherin. How stedfast are the wordes of treuth? And which of you can rebuke and reprove them? Do ye take deliberacyon to check mens saynges, and iudge a poze worde spoken in bayne? Ye fall vpon the fatherles and go about to ouerthrowe your awne frende. And therfore be content, and loke now vpon me, and I wyl not lye before youre face. Turne (I praye you) be indifferent iudges, turne agayne, and ye shal se myne vngyltynesse: whether there be eny vnrighteousnesse in my tonge, or bayne wordes in my mouth.

The. vii. Chapter.

Job sheweth that thys lyfe is but a bataylle or warfare.

Ith man any certayn tyme vpo the earthe? * Are not hys dayes also lyke þ dayes of an hyed seruaunt? For lyke as a bonde seruaunt despyeth the shadowe, and as an hyselunge wolde fayne haue an ende of hys woꝝke. Enſo haue I laboured whole monethes longe (but in vayne) and many a ca-refull night haue I tolde. * When I laye me downe to ſlepe, I ſay: * When ſhall I riſe?

 Agayne, I longed ſore for the nyght. And in the meane tyme am I full of ſozowes vntill the twylyght. My fleſh is clothed with wormes and duſt of the earth: my ſkynne is withered, and become horryble, * my dayes paſſe ouer more ſpedely, then a weecur can weene out his webbe: and are gone oꝛ I am aware. * Remembre, that my lyfe is but a wynde, and that myne eye ſhall nomore ſe pleaſures therof, yee, & that none other mens eye ſhall ſe me any more. * For yf thou faſten thine eye vpon me, I come to naught. The cloude is conſumed and vaniſhed awaye, euen ſo he that goeth downe to the graue, ſhall come nomore vp, ner turne agayne into hys houſe nether ſhall hys place knowe hym any more.

* Therefore, I will not ſpare my mouth, but will ſpeake in the trouble of my ſpyete, and muſe in the bytterneſſe of my mynde. Am I a ſee oꝛ a whalſpy, that thou keepest me ſo in pꝛeſon? When I ſaye: my bedd ſhall com-foꝛte me. I ſhall haue ſome reſreſhyng by talcking to my ſelfe vpon my couche. * Then troubleſt thou me with dreames, ad makeſt me ſo afrayed thozow viſions, that my ſoule wiſheth rather to periſh and dye, then my bones to remayne.

* I can ſe no remedy, I ſhall lye nomore:
 O ſpare me then, for my dayes are but vayne.
 What is man, that thou haſt hym in ſoch reputacyon, & ſetteſt ſomoch by hym? Thou viſyteſt hym early, and euery daye, ſodenly doeſt thou * tꝛyſe hym.

* Why goeſt thou not from me, ner letteſt me alone, ſo longe tyll I maye ſwalow do-wne my ſpetle? I haue offended, and what ſhall I do vnto the, O thou pꝛeſeruer of me?
 Why haſt thou made me to ſtande in thy waye, and am ſo heuy a burden vnto my ſelfe? Why doeſt thou not forgeue me my ſynne? Wherefore takeſt thou not awaye my wyckednes?
 Beholde, now muſt I ſlepe in the duſt, ad yf thou ſekeſt me to morow in the moꝛnyng, I ſhall be gone.

The. viij Chapter.

* Job is reprehended and noted to haue deſerued hys payne. A deſcription of pꝛocꝛyſe.

In answered Baldad ſubite, and ſayde: How longe wilt thou talke of ſoch thynges? how longe ſhall thy mouth ſpeake ſo proude woꝝdes? Doth God peruerſe the thyng that is lauffull? O doth the almyghty deſtroye the thyng that is ryght? For ſeyng that thy ſonnes ſynned agaynſt hym, dyd not he punyſh them for they wycked-neſſe? Iſthou woldeſt now reſort vnto God by tymes, and make thine humble prayer to the almyghty: yf thou woldeſt lye a pure and a godly lyfe: ſhulde he not a wake vp vnto the immediatly, and geue the, the bew-tye of ryghte weſneſſe agayne? In ſo moche, that where in ſeuer thou haddeſt lytle afore, thou ſhuldeſt now haue greate aboun-daunce. Enquere (I praye the) of them that haue bene befoꝛe the, * and ſearch diligently amonge they fathers. For we are but of yeſterdaye, and conſyde not, * oure dayes vpon earth are but a very ſadowe. Shall not they ſewe the, and tell the, yee, ad gladly confeſſe the ſame?

* Make a rpyſhe be grene without moyſtneſſe? O maye the graſſe growe without water? No: but (oꝛ euer it be ſhot forth, & oꝛ euer it be gathered) it withered, befoꝛe any other herbe. Euen ſo goeth it with all them, that forget God: and euen thus alſo ſhall the pꝛocꝛyſes hope come to naught. Hys conſydence ſhall be deſtroyed, and hys truſt ſhall be aſpiders webbe. He ſhall leane vpon his hou-ſe, but it ſhall not ſtande: he ſhall holde hym faſt by it, yet ſhall it not endure. It is eue as a grene tree befoꝛe the ſonne, & ſhoteth forth the bꝛanches in hys garden. It taketh many rotes by a well ſyde, in ſo moche that it is lyke an houſe of ſtones.

But yf it be taken out of hys place, euery man denyeth it, ſapenge: I knowe the not.
 Lo, thus is it with him, that reioyſeth in his awne doynges: and as for other, they growe out of the earth.

Behold, God will not caſt awaye a ver-tuous man, nether will he helpe the vngod-ly. Thy mouth ſhall be fylled with laughing, and thy lyppes with gladneſſe. They alſo y hate the, ſhall be confounded, and the dwel-linge of the vngodly ſhall come to naught.

The. ix Chapter.

* Job declareth the benefytes of God, and that mannes ryghte weſneſſe is nothyng.

Jn answered, & ſayde: I know it is ſo of a treuthe: For how maye a man (compared vnto God) * be iuſtified? If he will argue with him, he ſhall not be able to anſwere hym vnto one amonge a thouſande. Concernyng ſoch as be wyle of herte, oꝛ myghte in ſtrength, who euer prospered, that toke part agaynſt hym? He tranſlateth the mountaynes, oꝛ euer they be aware. It is he that overthroweth them in hys wrath. He remoueth the earthe out of her place, that the py-lers therof ſhake with all. He commaundeth the ſonne, and it riſeth not: he cloſeth by
 the

the ſtarres, as it were vnder a ſygnett. He him ſelf alone ſpꝛedeth out the heauens, and goeth vpon the waues of the ſee. He maketh the waynes of heauen * the Orion * the ſeuene ſtarres, and the ſecrete places of the ſouth. He doth greate thynges, ſoch as are vnſearchable, yee, and wonders withoute nombꝛe.

Lo, whan he goeth ouer by me, I ſhall not ſe hym. And whan he departeth, by me, I ſhall not loke vpon hym. I ſhall not perceauie hym. If he be haſty to take any thyng awaye, who will make him reſtore it agayne? O who will ſaye vnto hym * what doeſt thou? + He is God, whole wrath no man maye withſtāde: but the proudeſt of all muſt ſtoute vnder hym. How ſhulde I then an-ſwere hym? O what woꝝdes ſhulde I ſynde oute agaynſt hym? Yee, though I were ryghteous, yet myght I not geue hym one woꝝde agayne, but inckely ſubmytte my ſelfe to hym as my iudge. Yf I had called vpon hym, and he had answered me: yet wold I not beleue, that he herd my voyce: he troubleth me ſo with the tempeſt, and woundeth me out of meaſure without a cauſe. He will not lett my ſpyete be in reſt, but ſpilleth me w bytterneſſe.

If men will ſpeake of ſtrength, lo, he is ſtronger: yf men will ſpeake of ryghteouſnes, who darre be my recorde. If I will iuſtifie my ſelfe, & my awne mouth ſhall condemne me: yf I will put forth my ſelfe for a perfecte man, he ſhall pꝛoue me a wycked doer. For though I be an innocent, and my conſcience cleare, yet am I weery of my lyfe.

One thyng it is and therfore I ſayde. He deſtroyeth both the righteous and vngodly.
 And though he ſlaye ſodenly with the ſcourge, yet will he laugh at the punyſhment of the innocent. As for the woꝝde, it is geuen ouer into the hand of the wicked, and he ſhal couer the faces of the iudges therof. As it not ſo: where is there any, but he is ſoch one?

* My dayes are more ſwyfte then a runner: they are gone & haue ſene no good thing.
 They are paſſed awaye, as the ſhyppes that be good vnder ſayle, and as the aegle y ſlieth to the praye. When I am purpoſed to forget my complayning, to leaue of fro my wrath, and to comforte my ſelfe, then am I afrayed of all my ſozowes, for I knowe, that thou wilt not iudge me innocent. If I be then a wicked doer, why labour I in vayne? If I waſhe my ſelfe with ſnowe water, and make myne hādes neuer ſo cleane, * at the wel, yet ſhalt thou dyppe me in the myer: and myne awne clothes ſhall deſyle me. For he that I muſt geue anſwere vnto, ad with whom I go to lawe, is not a man. I am.
 Nether is there any dayesman to laye hys hande betwene vs. Lett hym take hys rod a waye from me, yee, lett him make me nomore afrayed of him, and then ſhall I anſwere hi without any feare. For as loꝛge as it is thus,

 I can make no anſwere.

The. x Chapter.

* Job is weery of hys lyfe, and ſetteth out his fragyltye befoꝛe God. He deſcribeth the tyme to repent. A deſcription of death.

In greueth my ſoule to lye. I will make my complaynte, and will ſpeake out of the very heuynelle of my ſoule. I will ſaye vnto God: O do not condemne me, but ſewe me the cauſe, wherfoꝛe thou contendſt ſo with me?
 Thinckeſt thou it well done, to oppreſſe me, to caſt me of? beyng the woꝝkes of thy hādes) and to mainteyne the counſel of the vnigodly? Haſt thou fleſhy eyes: oꝛ doeſt thou loke as a man loketh? O are thy dayes as y dayes of man, and thy yeares as mans yeres? that thou makeſt ſoch iniquity for my wickednes, & ſearchest out my ſynne: where as (not withſtādinge) thou knoweſt that I am no wycked perſon, and that * there is no man able to deliyuer me out of thine hande.

* Thy hādes haue made me, and faſhioned me all together roude aboute, wilt thou then deſtroye me ſodenly? Remembre (I beſeche the) how that thou madeſt me of the mould of y erth, & ſhalt bꝛyng me into duſt agayne.
 Haſt thou not turned me, as it were my lye, and turned me to cruddes lyke cheſe? Thou haſt couered me with ſkynne and fleſhe, and ioyned me together with bones and ſynnowes. Thou haſt graunted my life, and done me good: and the diligent hede that thou tokeſt vpon me, hath pꝛeſerued my ſpyete.

Thou haſt hyd theſe thynges in thine hert. I am ſure, that thou remembreſt thys thyng. Yf I dyd ſynne, thou haddeſt an eye vnto me, and ſhalt not declare me innocent becauſe of myne offence. Yf I haue done wickedly, wo is me therfoꝛe. Yf I haue done righteouſly, yet darre I not liſt vp my hede: ſo full am I of confuſion, and ſe myne awne miſery.

Thou hunteth me out (being in heuynes) as it were a lyon, & troubleſt me out of meaſure. Thou bꝛyngest freſh wytnelle agaynſt me, and thy wrath increaſeth thou vpon me, very many are y plagis y I am in. * Wherefore haſt thou brought me oute of my mothers wombe? O that I had periſhed, and y no eye had ſene me. Yf they had carped me to my graue as ſone as I was borne, then ſhuld I be now, as though I had neuer bene Arre not my dayes ſeawe? Lett hym then leaue of from me and let me alone, that I may caſe my ſelfe a lytle afoꝛe I go thyther, from whence I ſhall not turne agayne: euen to the lande

lande of darcknesse and shadowe of death: yee, into that darck cloudy land and deadly shadowe, where as is no ordre, but terrible feare as in the darcknesse.

The. xi. Chapter.

Job is vniuersally reprehended of Sophar. Job is incomprehensible. He is mercifull to the repents sinner.

When answered Sophar the Naamathite, and sayde: Shulde not he that maketh many wordes, be answered? Shuld he p hableth moch, be cominced therein? Shulde men geue care vnto the onely? Thou wilt laugh other men to scozne, and shal no body mock the againe? Wylt thou saye vnto God. The thyng that I take in hande is perfecte, and I am cleane in thy syght? That God wolde speake, and open his lippes agaynst the, that he myght shewe the (out of his secreete wysdome) why he rewardeth the double as he was appoynted to do: then shuldest thou knowe, y God had forgotton the because of thy synne.

Art thou able to fynde out the secretes of God? Wylt thou attayne to the perfectnesse of the almyghtye? He is hyer then heauen, what arte thou able to do? Deper then the hell, how wilt thou then know him? His length exceedeth the length of the earth, and his bredth the bredth of the see. Though he turne all thynges vp syde downe, close them in, gather them together, who wyl turne hym from his purpose? (Who maye saye vnto hym, why dost thou so.)

For it is he that knoweth the vanite of men: he seyth they wyckednesse also, shulde he not then conside it? A vayne body exalteth hym selfe, and man new borne is lyke a wylde assescolte. If thou haddest nowe a ryght hert, and lyftedst vp thyne handes toward hym: yf thou woldest put awaye the wickednes which thou hast in hande, so that no vngodlynelle dwell in thy house. Then myghtest thou lyft up thy face without shame, and then shuldest thou be sure, and haue no neede to feare.

Then shuldest thou forget thy miserie, & thyneke nomore vpon it then vpon the waters that runne by. Then shuld the residue of thy lyfe be as cleare as the noone daye, and sprynge forth as the mozynng. Then myghtest thou haue coforte, in the hope that thou hast: and slepe quietly, whē thou art buried. Then shuldest thou take thy rest, & no man to make the afrayed, yee, many one shuld let moch by the. The. xii. Chapter.

Job rebuyng his payence declareth the myght and power of God.

Job answered, and sayd: Then (no doute) ye are the men alone, & wysdome shall perpysh with you. But I haue vnderstādyng as wel as ye, and am no lesse then ye. Yee, who knoweth not these thynges? Thus he that calleth vpon God, and whom God heareth, is mocked of his neygbboure: the godly and innocent man is laughed to scozne. Godlynes is a lyght despyled in p hertes of the ryche, and is set for them to stumple vpon. The houses of robbers are in wealth & prosperite: and they that maliciously medle agaynst God, dwell without care, in those thynges that God hath geuen rybely with his hande.

Aske the catell, and they shall infourme the: the foules of the ayre, and they shall tell the. Of the increace of the earth, and it shall shewe the. Of the fyllers of the see, ad they shall certifie y. What is he, but he knoweth that the hande of the Lorde made all these? In whose hāde is the soule of euery liuyng thyng, and the bryth of the flesh of all men. I haue not the cares pleasure in hering, and the mouth in tastynge the thyng that it eateth. Amonge olde personnes there is wysdome, and in age is vnderstandyng. Yee, with God is wysdome and strenght, it is he that hath counsell and forknowledge. Beholde, If he breake downe a thyng, who can set it vp agayne? If he shut a thyng, who will open it? Beholde, yf he withholde y waters, they drye vp. If he let them go, they destroye the erth. With him is strenght & wysdome: he knoweth both the disceauer & hym that is disceaued.

He carieth awaye the wylde mē, as it were a spoyle, and byngeth the iudges oute of theyr wittes. He taketh awaye the subiecciō of the people from their kinges, and gyrdeth theyr loynes with a bonde. He ledeeth awaye the greafe men into captiuyte, and turneth the myghtye vpsyde downe. He taketh the veryte from out of the mouth, and disapointeth the aged of theyr reason. He poureth the confusio vpon prynces, and comforteth them that haue bene oppressed. Loke what lyeth hyd in darcknes, he declareth it openly: and the very shadowe of death byngeth he to lyght. He both increaseth the people, ad destroyeth them. He maketh them to multiplye, and dryueth them awaye. He chaungeth the herte of them that rule the people of the earthe, and disapoynteth them: so that they go wandrynge out of the waye, and grope in the darcke without lyght: he maketh the also to stalker to and fro lyke dōcken men.

Job rebuyeth his frendes with theyr adone sayenges, and condeimneth pprophete.

Job answered, and sayd: All thys haue I sene with myne eye, heard with myne eare, and vnderstande it. Loke what ye knowe, that same do I knowe also, nether am I inferior vnto you. Neuerthelesse, I talke with the almyghtye, and my desire is to comen with God. As for you, ye are workmasters of lyes, and vnprofytable. Whisicpans all together. Wold God ye kepte your tonge, for then myght ye be taken for wyle men. Now heare my chydynge, and pōdye the sentence of my lippes.

Do ye speake iniquite agaynst God, and talke agaynst hym with disceate: Wylt ye not accepte the person of hym? Or wylt ye contende with God? Shall that helpe you, whē he calleth you to rekeninge. For as one man mocketh another, so do ye mocke hym. He shall punysh you, and reprove you, yf ye do secretly accept any persone. Shal he not make you afrayed, when he sheweth hym selfe? Shall not his terrible feare fall vpon you? Your remembraunce is lyke vnto a sparke, and your bodies lyke the claye. Holde your tōges for my sake, that I also maye speake, and my sorow shalbe the lesse. Wherefore do I beare my flesh in my teth, & put my soule in myne handes? Lo, though he slaye me, yet wyl I put my trust in hym. But I wil reprove myne a wne wayes in his sight, he shall make me whole: and there maye no ypocrite come before hym. Heare my wordes, and pōdye my sayenges with your cares. Beholde, now haue I prepared my iudgement, and knowe y I shalbe founde ryghteous. What is he, that wil go to lawe with me? (Let hym come) that I maye nowe holde my tonge, and dye. Neuertheles, graunt me two thynges, and then wyl I not hyde my selfe from the.

Withdrowe thyne hande from me, and let not the fearfull drede of y, make me afrayed. And then call me, and I wil answer: or els, let me speake, ad geue me thou an answer. How many are my mysdoes & synnes? Lett me knowe my transgressions and offences. Wherefore hydest thou thy face, & holdest me for thyne enemye? Wylt thou be so cruel and extreme vnto a flyeng lease, ad folowe vpo drye stubble? For thou layest sharpely to my charge, and punyshest me for the synnes of my youth. Thou putttest my fete also in the stocks: and lokest narrowly vnto all my pathes, and markest the steppes of my fete: where as I (not withstandynge) must consume lyke as a foule carion, & as a cloth that is mothbraten.

The. xiiii. Chapter.

Job describeth the lyfe of man, and prophesyeth of the resurrection. Hope susteyneth the godly, till they obteyne that they loke for.

Job answered, and sayd: In that is borne of woman, hath but a short tyme to lyue, and is full of miserye. He cometh vp and is cutt downe lyke a floure. He flyeth as it were a shadowe, and neuer contynueth in one state. Dost thou open thyne eyes vpo soche one, and byngeth me in thy iudgement? Who can make cleane, that cometh of an vncleane thyng? No body. The dayes of man surely are determyned, the nombze of his monethes are knowne onely vnto the. Thou hast appoynted hym his boundes, whych he can not go beyonde. Soo from hym, that he maye rest (a lytle) vntill his daye come: which he loketh for, lyke as an hyrlyng doth.

If a tre be cut downe, there is some hope yet, that it wyl sproute, and shute forth the braunches agayne. For though the rote of it be wahren olde, and the stock therof be dead in the ground, yet when it getteth the sent of water, it wyl budde, and bynge forth bowes, lyke as a tre that is planted. But as for man, when he is dead, perished and consumed awaye, what becommeth of hym? The floudes when they be dryed vp, and the ryuers when they be empty, are filled agayne thozowe the flowynge waters of the see: but when mā slepeth, he ryseth not agayne, (of his a wne strenght) vntill the heauen perpysh: he shall not wake by ner ryse out of his slepe. That thou woldest kepe me, and hyde me in the hell, vntill thy wrath were styllled: and to appoynte me a tyme, wherein thou myghtest remembre me. Make a dead man lyue agayne? All the dayes of my lyfe wyl I waite styll, till my chaungynge shall come. Thou shalt call me, and I shall answer the: despyse not thou the worke of thyne a wne handes.

For now thou nombrest all my goinges, yet be not thou to extreme vpon my synnes. My iniquite is sealed by, as it were i a bagg but be mercifull vnto my wickednesse. The mountaynes fall awaye at the last, the rockes are remoued out of theyr place, the waters pearle thozowe the very stones by lytle and lytle, the floudes washe awaye y grauell and carth. And destroyest thou the hope of man? Thou preyntest styll agaynst him, so that he passeth awaye: thou chaugest his estate, and putttest hym from the. And whether his chyldren come to worshyp or no, he cannot tell. And yf they be men of lowe degree, he knoweth not. Whyle he lyueth, his flesh must haue trauayle, and while the soule is in hym, he must be in sorowe.

The. xv. Chapter.

Eliphaz reprehendeth Job because he ascribeth wysdome and purces to hym selfe. He describeth the curse that falleth on the wycked, rebuyng Job to be one of that nombze.

When answered Eliphaz the Themanite, and said: Shal a wyle mans answer be the science of the wynde, and fil any mans Wely as it were with the wynde of the east? Shal he reprove wa word, that is nothynge worth: and speake the thynges, which can do no good? As for shame, thou hast lett it asyde, elles woldest thou not make so many wordes before God: but thy wyckednesse teacheth thy mouth, and so thou hast chosen the a craftye tonge. Thyne awne mouth condemneth the, and not I: pee, thynne awne lypyes shapen an answer agaynst the. Art thou the fyrste man, that ever was bozne? Or, wast thou made before the hylles? hast thou hearde the secreete counsell of God, that all wysdome is to lytle for the? What knowest thou, y we knowe? And what understandest thou, but we can the same? With vs are both olde and aged men, pee, soch as haue lpyed longer then thy father.

Thynckest thou it a small thyng of the consolacions of God? with the is a lpyenge word. Why doth thynne hert so bewyche the? And wherfore wyndest thou wyth thynne eyes, that thy mynde is so puffed up agaynst God, and letteth soch wordes go oute of thy mouth: what is man, y he shulde be cleane? what hath he (which is bozne of a woman) wherby he myght be righteous? Behold, he doth not trust hys saynctes: pee, the very heauens are not cleane in hys syght. Howe moch more then an abhominable and vyle man, which drincketh wickednesse lyke water? I wyll tell the, heare me: and I wyll shewe the that I haue sene: which wyle men haue tolde, and hath not bene hyd from their fathers: vnto whom onely the earthe was geuen, and no straunger went amonge them.

The * vngodly soroweth all the dayes of hys lyfe as it were a woman with a childe, and the nombre of a tyrauntes yeares is unknowne. A fearfull sounde is euer in hys eares, and when it is peace, yet feareth he destruction. He beleueth neuer to be deliuered oute of darckenes, for the swearde is alwaye before hys eyes. When he goeth forth to get his lpying, he seeth plainely, that the daye of darcknesse is at hande. Sorowe and carefulnesse wyll make hym afrayed, and compasse hym rounde aboute, lyke as it were a kynge with hys hoost ready to the batayll. For he hath stretched out hys hande agaynst God, and armed hym selfe agaynst the almyghty, he runneth proudly vpon hym, and with a styff necke fyghteth he agaynst hym: where as he couereth hys face with fatnesse, and maketh hys body well lpyng. Therfore shall hys dwellinge be in desolate cyties, and in houses which no man inhabiteth, but are become heapes of stones.

He shall not be riche, nether shall hys substance contynue, ner encrease vpon earthe. He shall neuer come oute of darcknesse, the flame shall drye vp hys bzaunches: with the blast of the mouth of God shall he be taken awaye. He beleueth not that he is in vayne, and yet he is oute of the waye, and vanyte shall be hys recompence.

He shall perysh, afore hys tyme be worne out, and hys bzaunche shall not be greene. He shall be pluckt of as an vntymely grape fro the vyne, & shall lett his floure fall, as the olpue doth. For the congregacyon of ypocrites shall be desolate and vnfutell, and y fyre shall consume y houses of soch as are greedy to receaue giftes. He conceauneth frauayle, and beareth vanyte, and the yz bodye byngeth forth disceate.

When answered, and sayde: I haue oft tymes hearde soch thynges. Myferable geuys of conforste are ye, all the sorte of you. Shall not vayne wordes come yet to an ende? Or, hast thou yet eny more to saye? I coulde speake, as ye do also. But wold God, that youre soule were in my soules steade: then shuld I heape vp wordes agaynst you, and shake my heade at you. I shuld comforte you with my mouth, and release youre payne with the talkyng of my lippes. (But what shall I do) For all my wordes, my sorow wyll cease: and though I holde my tonge, yet wyll it not departe from me. But now that God hath sente me aduersyte, thou hast troubled all my congregacyon. And that thou hast fylled me wyth wyndles, my flethe is recorde, and my leanesse ryseth vp agaynst me, and beareth wytnesse agaynst me. He is angre at me, he hateth me and gnasheth vpon me wyth hys teth. Myne enemye shoulde vpon me wyth hys eyes.

They haue opened their mouthes wyde vpon me: & smytten me vpon y cheke despitefully, they gather them selues together agaynst me. God hath put me in prease with the vngodly, & deliuered me into the handes of the wycked. I was in wealth, but he hath brought me to naught. He hath taken me by the neck, he hath rent me, and lett me as a march for him selfe. His archers compass me rounde rounde aboute: he wounded my loynes, and doth not spare. My bowels hath he poured vpon the ground. He hath geue me one wound vpon another, and is fallen vpon me lyke a glaunte. I haue sowed a sack cloth vpon my skynne, & lye with my heare in the dust.

My face is swollen with wepyng, and in myne eyes is the shadow of death. Howbeit, there is no wyckednesse in my handes, but my prayer is cleane. Deaerth & couer not thou my bloude, and let my cryenge synde no rowme. For lo, my witnesse is in heauen: & he that knoweth me, is aboue in the heygth. My frendes geue me many wordes, to scoone, and myne eye poureth out teares vnto God. O that a body might pleate with God, as one man doth with another, yet the nombre of my yeares is come, and the waye that I must go is at hande, from whence I shall not turne agayne.

My breth stincketh, my dayes are shortened. I am harde at deathes doze. Forward men are wme, and myne eye must continue in the bitternesse of them. Deuiler me, and loke out one to be my suertie in thy sight, what is he that knoweth who will promys for me? For thou hast with holden their hertes from vnderstandyng, therefore shalt thou not lett (them) vpon hys. He promyseth his frendes parte of his good, but his awne children spende it. He hath made me as it were a byworde of the people: where as afore, I was the yz ioye. Myne eye is dymme, for very heupnesse, & all my strength is become like a shadow. Certuous me therefore shall well conspyde this, and the innocent shall take parte agaynst the ypocrite.

The righteous also will kepe hys wape, and he that hath cleane handes, wyll euer be stronger and stronger. As for you, turne you, and get you hence: I praye you) lpyng I cannot fynde one wyle man amonge you: My dayes are past, and my counells and thoughtes of my hart are vanyshed awaye chaungyng the night into daye, and y light into darcknes. Though I tarp neuer so moch, yet the graue is my house, and I haue made my bed in the darcke. I call corrupcyon my father, and the wormes call I my mother and my syster. What helpeth then my longe taryenge? Or, who hath confidred the thyng, that I loke for? All that I haue, shall go downe into the pytt, and lye with me in the dust.

When answered Baldad the Shubi- te, and sayde: When wyll ye make an ende of youre wordes? Marke well, and then we wyll speake. Wherfore are we counted as bestes, & reputed so vyle in youre sight? He destroyed him selfe with his anger: Shal the earth be forsaken, or any stone remoued out of his place because of the? Pee, the light of the vngodly shall be put out: and the sparke of hys fyre shall not burne. The lpyght shall be darcke in his dwelling, and his candle shall be put out with him. His presumptuous goinges are kepte in, and his awne counsell shall cast him downe. For his fete are taken as it were in the nett, and he is at his wittes ende. His fote shall be holden in the snare, and it shall catch them that be thyrst of bloude: The snare is layed for him in the grounde, ad a pytt fall in the waye.

Fearfulnesse shall make him afrayed on euery syde, that he shall not knowe, where to get out. Longer shall be his strength: my fortune shall hange vpon him. He shall cate the strength of his awne skynne, eny y fyrst borne of death shall cate his strength. His hope shall be rote out of his dwellinge, very ferfulnesse shall bringe him to the kyng. Other men shall dwell in his house (but shall be none of his) and byrmstone shall be scatered vpon his habitacyon. His rotes shall be dried vp beneth, and aboue shall his bzaunch be cutt downe. His remembraunce shall peryshe from y earth, and he shall haue no name in the strete: they shall dryue him from y light into darcknesse, and cast him cleane out of the worlde. He shall nether haue chyldre nor kynfolkes amonge his people, no, ner eny posterite in his dwellinges. They that come after hym, shall be astoned at his daye, and they that go before, shall be afrayed. Soch are now the dwellinges of the wycked, and this is the place of hym y knoweth not God.

When answered, and sayde: how longe will ye bere my soule, and trouble me with wordes? Lo & ten tymes haue ye reproved me: and are not a shamed, for to laugh me so to scoone. yf I go wronge, I go wronge to my selfe. But yf ye will enhaunce your selues agaynst me, and accuse me to be a wycked personne because of the shame that is come vpon me: knowe this then, that it is God, which hath handled me so violently and hath compassed me aboute with his nette. yf I * coplayne of the violence y is done vnto me, I cannot be herde. And yf I crye, there is no p v sentence

* Abacu. i. a.

Bentence geuen with me: he hath hedged vp agaynst me: he taketh me, as though I were his enemy.

¶ These myn men of warre came together, which made their waye ouer me, and beseged my dwellynge roude aboute. * He hath put my brethren farre awaye fro me, and soch as my redeemer lyueth, and that I shall rylc out of the earth in the latter daye: that I shall be a iudgement.

The xx. Chapter.

T Sophar sayth, that the vnlawfull, the couetouse and the wycked shall haue a short ende.

A Then answered Sophar the Naamathite, and sayde. For the same cause do my thoughtes compell me to answer. And why? my mynde is ready within me. I haue sufficiently herde thy checking and reproofe, therfore am I purposed to make answer after myne vnderstandynge. Knowest thou not this, namely : that from the begynnynge (euer sence y creacion of man vpon earth) y gladnes of the vngodly hath bene shorte, and that the ioye of ypocrites continued but the twyncklynge of ane eye : Though he be magnified vnto the heauē, so that his head reacheth vnto y cloudes: yet at a turne he perisheth for euer. Insomoch that they which haue sene hym, shall saye. Where is he? He shall vanysh as a drea-me, so that he can no more be founde, and shall passe awaye as a vision in y nyght. So that the eye which sawe hym before, shall haue no more syght of hym, and hys place shall knowe hym nomore. y hys chyl dren shall be fayne to agree with the poore, and his han-des shall restore them their goodes.

ffrō his youth his bones are full of pleasures, but now shall it lye downe within him in þe earth. When wyckednesse, was swete in his mouth, he hid it vnder hys tonge. That he fauoured, þe wolde he not forsake, but kepte it close in his throte. The breade that he dyd eate, is turned to the popson of serpētes, within his body. The ryches that he deuoured, shall he perbake agayne, for God shall drawe them out of his bely, he shall sucke the gall of serpentess, and the adders tonge shall slaye hym: so that he shall nomoze se the ryuers and brokes of hony and butter. The thing that other men haue laboured for, shall he restore agayne, and shall not eate it vp. Greate trauayle shall he make for ryches, but he shall not enioye them. And why: he hath oppressed the poore, & not helped them: houses hath he spoyled, & not buylded them. His bely coulde neuer be fylled, therfore shall he perishe in hys coucteousnesse. There shall none of hys meate be left behinde, therfore shall no man loke for hys prosperite. Whan he had plenteousnesse of euery thyng, yet was he poore, though he was helped on euery syde.

ffor though the wycked haue neuer somuch to fyll his bely, yet God shall sende his wrath vpon him, and cause his indignacyon to raygne ouer him: so that yf he fle the prynces weapens, he shall be thott wth the stele bowe.
The arrowe is taken forth, and gone out of the quyer, & a glystering sweard thorowe the gall of him, feare shall come vpon hym.
There shall no darchnes be able to hyde him An vnkynndled fyre shall consume him, and loke what remaineth in hys house, it shall be destroyed. The heauen shall declare hys wyckednesse, and the earth shall take parte agaynst him. The substance that he hath in hys house, shall be taken awaye and perishe in the daye of the Lordes wrath. * This is the porcyon that the wycked man shall haue of God, and the herpytage that he maye loke for of God. ¶ because of his wordes.

The

The. xxi. Chapter.

¶ Job receybeth the prosperitie of the weeked, & after describeth their todayn raigne and destruccion.

Answered, and sayde: O heare my wordes, and that shalbe my co-fort of you. Suffre me a lytle, that I maye speake also, and then laugh my wordes to scoorne or (yf it lyke you.) Is it for mans sake that I make thys disputacyon?
Whiche yf it were so, shulde not my sprete be then in soze trouble? Marke me well, and be abashed, and laye youre hand vpon youre mouth. For when I consyder my selfe, I am afrayed, and my fleshe is smytten with feare. * Wherfore was wycked me lyue in health and prosperite, come to theyr olde age, and increase in ryches? Their chyldren lyue in theyr syght, and theyr generacyon before theyr eyes. Their houses are safe from all feare, and the rodd of God doth not smyte them. Their bullocke gendreth, and that not out of tyme: theyr cowe calueth, and is not vnfrutefull.

B They sende forth their children by flockes, and their sonnes lede the daunce. * They beare with them tabrettes and harpes, and haue instrumentes of musycke at their pleasure. They spende their dayes in welthyngnesse: but sodenly they go downe to hell. They saye also vnto God: go from vs, we desyre not the knowledge of thy wayes. * Who is the Almyghtie, that we shulde serue hym? And what profyte shuld we haue to submyt our selues vnto him? Lo, there is vtterly no goodnesse in them, therfore will not I haue to do with the counsell of the vngodly. How oft shall the candle of the wycked be put out? how oft cometh their destruccion vpon the? What soeuer shall God geue them for their parte in hys wrath? Pec, they shall be euil as hape before the wynde, and as chaffe that the storme carryeth awaye.

C And though God saue their children from such sorowe, yet will he sorwarde the sel-ues, & they shall knowe it. Their awne destruction and misery shall they se with their eyes, & drinke of the fearfull wrath of the Almyghty. ffor what careth he what become of his householde after hys death, whan y nombze of his monethes is cut short? In as moch then as God hath the hyest power of all, who can teach him any knowledge? One dyeth now when he is myghtye and at hys best, ryche, and in prosperite: euen when his bowels are at the fattest, and hys bones full of mary. Another dyeth in sorowe & heu-nelle, and neuer had good dayes. They shall slepe both a lyke in the earth, & the wormes shall couer them. Beholde, I knowe what ye thincke, pee, and the sotilste that ye ymagyn agaynst me. ffor ye saye: ¶ where is the princes palace? and where is the dwellynge of the vngodly: haue ye not asked them y^e go by the waye: ¶ Doubtesse ye cannot denye their tokens, that * the wicked is kepte vnto the daye of destruccyon, and that the vngodly shalbe brought forth to the daye of wraath. Who darre reprocue him for his waye to hy^s face: Who wyll rewarde him for the vngraciousnesse that he doth: Yet shall he be brought to his graue, and dwelle among the heape of the deed. Then shall he be fayne to be buried amonge the stones of the playne: All men also must folowe him, and there are innumerable gone befoze him. How sayne then is the comforte that ye geue me? Doth not falschede remaine in all youre answers?

The. xxiij. Chapter.

Eliphaz reprehendeth Job of vniuersitallnesse.

Soliphias the Themanite gauc an swere, and sayde: Maye a man be profitable vnto God, as he that is wyse maye be profytable to hym selfe: Is it any vauntage to the Almyghtye that thou art ryghteous?
Or shall it profyte hym, that thou makest thy wayes perfect: Is he afrayed to reproue the, and to steppē forth with the into iudgment: Is not thy wickednesse greate, and thyne vngacious dedes innumerable: For thou hast taken the pledge from thy brother for naught, and robbed the naked of their clothinge: To soche as were weery, hast ygeuen no water to drinke, & hast withdrawen thy hand from the hungrye: Shulde soch one the as vseth violence, wrong & oppressiō (doing all thinge of parcialite, and hauinge respecte of personnes) dwell in the lande: Thou hast sent wyddowes awaye emptye and oppressed the poore fatherlesse.

Therfore art thou compassed aboute with snares on euery syde, and sodenly vered with feare. Shuldest thou then se no darckenesse?
 Shulde not the water floude runne ouer þe?
 Now* because that God is hyer then þe hea-uens, and because thou seyst that the starres are so hye, wilt thou therfore saye: Cuius, how shulde God knowe? Dost his domynion reache beyonde the cloudes? Cuius, the cloudes couer him that he maye not se, & he dwelleth aboue heauen. Dost not thou kepe the olde waye, that daynemen haue gone: Which were cut downe out of tyme, and whose foudacyon was as a runnyng water, which sayed vnto God: go from vs, and what dyd the Almyghty with them: he fylled the yzhouses with good thinges. But the counsell of the vngodly is farre fro me. The ryghteous sawe it and were glad, and the innocēt laughed the to scoorne. Is oure increase hewē downe? As for the remnaunt of them, the fyre hath consumed it.

 Then shalt thou haue thy delite in the Almighty, & lyft vp thy face vnto God. Then shalt thou make thy prayer vnto him, and he shall

The xxij. Chapter.

Job affirmeth that he both knoweth and feareth the power and sentence of the iudge, and sayeth th. the daye shall walke in hys ryghteousnesse.

Job answered, and sayde: My sayinge is yet this daye in bytternes, and my hande heuy because of my gro-uynge. O that I myght se him, and fynde hym: O that I myght come before his seate, to pleate my cause before him, and to fyl my mouth with argumentes. That I myght knowe, what answer he wolde geue me: ad that I myght vnderstande, what he wolde saye vnto me. Wyl he pleate agaynst me with his great power and strength? No, but he wyl make me the stronger. He that is iust, shall entre disputation with hym, and my iudge shall deliuer me for euer. Beholde, though I go before, I fynde him: If I come behynde, I can get no knowledge of him:
 If I go on the left syde where he doth hys worke, I cannot attayne vnto hym. Agayne, yf I go on the ryght syde, he hydeth hym selfe, that I cannot se him. But as for my waye, he knoweth it: and * tryeth me as the golde in the fyre.

* Sap. iii. b.
 i. Psal. cxi. b.

Job fore doth kepe his path, his hye waye haue I holden, and will not go out of it. I will not forsake the commaundment of his lippes, but loke what he charged me with his mouth, that haue I shutt vp in my herte.
 He is styll at one poynt, and who wyl turne him back? He doth as him listeth, and bringeth to passe what he will. He perfourmeth the thynges that is appoynted for me, & many soch thynges doth he. This is y cause that I thinke at his presence, so that when I consyde hym, I am afrayed of him. For in somoch as he is God, he maketh my her-te soft: and seynge that he is Almighty, he putteth me in feare. Thus can not I gett out of darckenesse, nether hath he couered the cloude fro my face.

The xxij. Chapter.

Job descreybeth the wykednes of men, and sheweth what curse belongeth to the wyked.

Job descreybeth then that there is no tyme hid from the Almighty, how happeneth it, that they which knowe hym, do not re-garde his dayes? For some men there be, that * remoue other mens lande-* Deu. xxi. a. and xxvii. c. markes: that robbe them of their catell, and kepe the same for the yf a wone: that * dyne awaye the asse of the fatherlesse: that take the wyddowes ore for a pledge: that thrust the poore out of the waye, and oppresse the simple of the worlde together. Beholde, euē as the wylde asses in y deserte goo they forth to their worke, and ryle by tymes to spoyle: yee y very wyldernesse ministrerth foode for their chyldre. They reape the corne felde that is not their awne: and let the vyne parde of the vngodly alone. They are the cause that so many men are naked and bare, hauinge no clothes to couer them and to kepe them from colde: So that whē the showers in the mountaynes haue rayned vpon them, & they be all wet, they haue none other suc-cure, but to kepe them amonge the rockes.

They spoyle y suckinge fatherlesse childe, and take the pledge fro the poore. In somoch that they let him go naked without clothing, and haue taken awaye the sheafe of the hugrie. The poore are fayne to labour in their oyle milles, yee, and to treade in theyr wyne presses, and yet to suffre thyrst. The men of the cytie crieth vnto the Lorde with sything,
 * the soules of the slayue also make theyr complainte: But God destroyeth them not for all this, where as they (not withstandinge) are conuersant amonge them that abhorre the lycht: they knowe not hys waye, ner contynue in his pathes. * Tymely in the moynynge do they aryle, to murther the symple and poore, and in the nyght they go a stealynge.

The eye of the aduoutherer wayteth for the darcknesse, and sayeth thus in him selfe: Tush, there shall no eye se me, and so he disgiseth his face. In y night season they search the houses, and hyde them selues in the daye tyme, but will not knowe the light. For as soone as the daye breaketh, the shadowe of death cometh vpon them, ad they go in horrible darcknesse. The vngodly is swifter then the water: their porcion shall be cursed in the earth, and he shall not beholde the waye of the vineyardes. O that they (for the wickednesse which they haue done) were drawē to the hell, soner then snowe melteth at the drowth and heate. O that all compassiō vpo the were forgottē: that their daynties were wozines, that they were cleane put out of remembrance,

membrance, and vngodlynesse vtterly he wen downe lyke as a tre. He hath oppressed the baren, that he cannot beare, and vnto y wyddowe hath he done no good. He drue the mightie after hym with his power, and whē he was gottē vp, no man was without feare, as longe as he lyueth. And though they might be safe, yet they wyl not receaue it, for their eyes loke vpon their awne wayes.
 They are exalted for a lytle, but shortly are they gone, brought to extreme pouerte, and taken out of the waye: yee ad vtterly pluckte of, as the eares of corne. Is it not so? Who wyl then reprove me as a lyar, and saye that my wordes are nothyng worth?

The xxij. Chapter.

Job addeth prou. that no man is cleane and without synne before God.

Job answered Baldad the Subite, and sayde. Is there power and feare with him aboue, that maketh peace, sytting in his hyghnesse, whose men of war-re are innumerable, and whose light aryleth ouer all. But how maye a mā compared vnto God, * be iustified? How can he be cleane, that is borne of a woman? Beholde, the Moone synneth nothyng in comparison to him, ad the starres are vncleane in his sight.
 How moche more then man, that is but corruption: and the sonne of man, which is but a worme?

The xxij. Chapter.

Job sheweth that man cannot helpe God, and pro-ueth it by hys in eadles.

Job answered, and sayde: Whom hast thou helped? him that is wout strength: what comforte ge-uest thou vnto hym that hath no strength? Where is the counsell y thou shuldest geue him, which hath no wyldome? Hast thou shewed the waye of ryght lyuynge. To whom hast thou spoken those wordes? Who made the bryth to come out of thy mouth? Are not deed thynges shapen vnder the waters: & thynges by the waters syde? Hell is naked before him, and the very destruccion it selfe cannot be hyd out of his syght. He stretcheth out the north ouer the emptie, and hangeth the earth vpon nothing. He byndeth the * waters in his cloudes, and the cloude is not broken vnder the.
 He holdeth back his stole, that it cannot be sene, and spreadeth his cloude before it.

when they loke vpon his place:

The xxviij. Chapter.

Job setteth that the wysdome of God is vnsearchable.

A Here is a place where silver is brought out of, and where golde is tried: where yron is dygged out of the ground, and stones resolu'd to metal. The darckenes shall once come to an ende, he can seke out the grounde of all thynges: the stones, the darcke, and the shadow of death. With the ryuer of water parteth he a funder the straunge people, & knowe no good neyghbour head: such as are rude, vnnamely and vopustours. He bringeth foode out of the erth, and that which is vnder, consumeth he with fyre. There is founde a place, whose stones are cleane Saphires, and where the clottes of the earth are golde. There is a waye also that the byrdes knowe not, that no vulturs eye hath sene: wherin the lions whelpes walke not, and where no lion cometh. There putteth he his hande vpon the stony rockes, and ouerthroweth the mountaynes. Riueres flowe out of the rockes, and loke what is pleasaunt, his eye seyth it. Out of dropes bringeth he greates floudes together, and the thinge that is hyd bringeth he to light. How cometh a man then by wysdome? Where is the place that men fynde vnderstanding? Verely no man can tell how worthy a thinge she is, nether she is founde in the lande of them that lyue. (at the yowne place) The depe saith: she is not with me. The see saith: she is not not with me. She can not be gotten for: (the most pure) golde, nether maye the pryce of her be bought with eny syluer. No wedges of golde of Ophir, no precious Onix stones, no Saphires maye be compared vnto her. No, nether golde ner Chystrall, nether swete odours ner golden plate. There is nothinge so worthy, or so excellent, as once to be named vnto her: for perfecte wysdome goeth farre beyonde the all. The Copas that cometh out of Inde, maye in no wyse be likened vnto her: yee, no manner of apparell howe pleasaunt and fayre soeuer it be.

D From whence then cometh wysdome? and where is the place of vnderstanding? She is hid from the eyes of all men liuinge, yee, and from the foules of the ayre. Destruction and death saie: we haue herde tell of her with oure eares. But God seeth her waye, and knoweth her place. For he beholdeth the endes of the world, and loketh vpon all that is vnder heauen. When he weyed the wyndes, and measured the waters: when he set the rayne in ordre, and gaue the myghtye floudes a lawe. Then dyd he se her, then declared he her, prepared her and knew her. And vnto man he sayde: Behold, * to feare the Lorde, is wysdome: and to forsake euell, is vnderstandinge.

The xxx. Chapter.

Job complaineth of the prosperitie of the tyme past, secretly rejoycinge his frendes of iniurie, because they sayde that Job suffered accordinge to his deservynge.

S Job proceeded and went forth in his communicacyon, sayenge. That I were as I was in y monethes by past, and in the dayes when God preserved me: when his light shyned vpon my head: when I wente after the same lyght and shynynge, euen thozowe the darcknesse. As it stode with me when I was yonge: when God prospered my house: when the Almyghtie was yet with me: when my chyldren stode aboute me: when my wayes ranne ouer with butter, and when the stony rockes gaue me ryuers of oyle: when I wente thozowe the cytie vnto the gate, and when they set me a chayre in the strete: when the yonge men (as soone as they sawe me) bid them selues, and when the aged arose, and stode vp vnto me, when the Princes left of their talkinge, and layed their hande to their mouth: when the myghty kepte still their voyce, and when their tonge cleued to the rofe of their mouthe. When all they that herde me, called me happye: and when all they that sawe me, spake good of me. For I deliuered the poore when he cried, and so did I the fatherlesse and him that had none to holde him. He that shulde haue bene lost, gaue me a good worde, and the wyddowes herte prayd me. And why? I put vpon me ryghteousnes, which couered me as a garment, and equyte was my crowne. I was an eye vnto the blynde, and a fote to the lame, I was a father vnto the poore: and when I knewe not the cause, I sought it out diligently. I brake the chawes of the vnrightheous man, * and plucked the spoyle out of his teth.

Therefore, I thought verely that I shuld haue dyed in my nest: and that my dayes shulde haue bene as many as the sondes of y see. For my roote was spred out by y water syde, and the dewe laye vpon my corne. Myne honour encreased more and more, and my bowe was euer the stronger in my hand. Vnto me men gaue eare, me they regarded, and with splence they tarped for my counsell. If I had spokē, they wolde haue it none other wayes, my wordes were so well take amonge them. They wayted for me as for the rayne: and gaped vpon me, as y grounde doth to receaue the latter shower. When I laughed, they knewe well it was not earnest: and the lyght of my countenance wolde they not put out. When I agreed vnto they waye, I was the chefe, and sat as a kynge with my armye aboute hym. And when when they were in heynnes, I was theyr comfortoure.

The xxx. Chapter.

The greates dyspyrge of men and curse of God that Job suffereth.

B At now they that are yonger then I, haue me in derpyson: yee, euen they, whose fathers I wolde haue thought scoone to haue set with the dogges of my catell. The power & strength of their handes might do me no good: for the tyme is but lost among them. For very misery and hunger, they fled into the wylder-nesse horrible & waite, pluckynge vp nettels amonge the bushes, and the Juniper rotes for their meate. And when they were dyuē forth, me cryed after them, as it had bene after a thefe. Their dwelling was besyde foule brokes, yee, in the caues and denues of the earth. Amonge the bushes wente they aboute crying, and vnder the thornes they gathered them selues together. They were the chyldren of fooles and vplaines, which are vaxed out of the worlde. * Now am I their songe, and am become their iestynge stock: they abhorre me, and flye farre fro me, and stayne my face with spetle. For y Lord hath loosed the strength of my body, and brought me lowe. The bydle haue they cast out of my syght. Vpon my right hande ryle the yonge men agaynst me, they haue hurte my fete, treadinge vpon me, as vpon the wayes that they wolde destroye. My pathes haue they clene marred. It was so easy for them to do me harme, that they neded no man to helpe them. They fell vpon me, as it had bene the breakinge in of waters, and came in by heapes to destroye me. Fearfulnesse is turned agaynst me.

E Myne honoure vanished awaye more swyftly then the wynde, and my prosperite departed hence, lyke as it were a cloude. Therefore is my mynde powred full of heynnesse, and the dayes of my trouble haue taken holde vpon me. My bones are pearled thozow, in the night season, and my synewes take no rest. For the vehemencie of sorow is my garment chaunged: and accordyng to the diuersite of heynnes am I gyrded with my coate. He hath cast me into the mire, and I am become like asthes and dust. When I crye vnto the, thou doest not heare me, & though I stāde before the, yet thou regardest me not. Thou art become myne enemye, and with thy violent hande thou takest part agaynst me. In tymes past thou didest set me vp on hie, as it were aboue the wynde, but now hast thou geuen me a very sore fall. Sure I am, that thou wilt deliuer me vnto death: * yee, to the lodgyng that is due vnto all me liuinge. Now vlc not men to do violence vnto them, that are destroyed all ready: but where hurte is done, there vlc they to helpe. Did not I wepe with him that was in trouble? Had not my soule compassion vpon the poore? Yet neuerthelesse, where as I looked for good, euell happened vnto me: and where as I wayted for light, there came darcknesse. My bowles sette within me, & take no rest, for the dayes of my trouble are come vpon me. Mekely and lowly came I in, yee, and without any displeasure: I stode vpon the congregacion, and communed with them. But now, I am a companion of dragons, and a felowe of Estriches. My skynne vpon me is turned to black, and my bones are bryt with heate: my harpe is turned to sorowe, and my pype to wepyng.

Job receyeth the innocency of his iurynge, and nombre of his vertues.

Made a couenaunt w myne eyes: * I wolde not loke vpon a damsell. For how great a porcion shall I haue of God: & what inheritaunce from the almyghtie on hie? As for the vngodly and he that ioy- neth him selfe to the company of wycked doers, shall not destruction and misery come vpon him? * Doth not he se my wayes, and tell all my goynges? If I haue walked in vanite, or yf my fete haue runne to disceane: let me be weyed in an euē balasce, that God may se my innocency. * If so be that I haue withdraue my fote out of the right waye, and yf my hert hath folowed mine eye sight: If I haue stained or defiled my handes: then shall I slowe, and another cate, yee, my generation and posterite shall be cleane roted out. If my hert hath lusted after my neyghbours wyffe, or yf I haue layde wayte at his doore: * then let my wyffe grinde vnto another mā and let other mē lie with her. * For this is a wickednesse and synne, that is worthy to be punished, yee, a fyre that vterly shulde consume, and rote out all my substantice. Did I euer thinke scoone to do right vnto my seruantes and maydens, when they had enymatce agaynst me? But sence that God will sytt in iudgment, what shall I do? And for so moch as he will nedes visett me, what answer shall I geue him? He that faithio- ned me in my mothers wombe, made he not him also: were we not both shapena like in oure mothers bodies? When the poore desired any thinge at me, haue I denied it them? haue I caused the widdowe to stande way- tinge for me in bayne? haue I feare my por- tion alone, that the fatherlesse hath had no parte with me: for mercy grewe vp with me fro my youth, and compassion fro my mothers wombe. haue I sene any man perishe thozow nakednesse and want of clothynge? Or any poore mā for lack of raymēt, whose sydes sydes thacked me not, because he was warmed with the wolfe of my shepe?

Byd I euer lyfte vp my hande to hurte the fatherlesse: yee, in the gate where I sawe my selfe to be in auctorite: then let myne arme fall fro my shulder, and myne arme holes be broken from the ioyntes. For I haue euer feared the vengeance and punishment of God, and knewe very well, that I was not able to beare hys burthen. Haue I put my trust in golde? Or haue I sayde to the fynest golde of all: thou arte my confidence? Haue I reioyced because my power was great, and because my hande gat so moche? * Byd I euer greatly regarde the rysynge of y sonne?
Or had I the goynge downe of the moone in greate reputacyon? Hath my hert medled pryncely with any discreate? Or, byd I euer lyfte myne awne hande? that were a wyekednesse worthy to be punished, for the shul-de I haue denyed the God that is aboue.

* Haue I euer reioysed at the hurte of myne enmy? Or was I euer glad, that any har-me happened vnto him? Oh no. I neuer suffred my mouth to do soch a synne, as to withhold him euell. Byd not the men of myne awne household saye: who shall let vs to haue oure belly full of his fleshe? I haue not suffred a stranger to lye without, but I opened my dores vnto him, y went by the waye. Haue I kepte secreete my synne and hyd myne iniquite, as Ada dyd? Haue I feared any great multitude of people: or yf I had bene dispyssed of the synple, then shulde I haue bene afrayed. Thus haue I quietly spent my lyfe, and not gone out at the doore. That I had one which wolde heare me. Lo, this is my cause. In the which the almyghty shall answere for me: though he that is my cotrary party, hath written a booke agaynst me.

¶ Yet I wyll I take him vpon my shulder, and as a garlande about my head. I wyll tell him, the number of my goynge, and go vnto him as to a Prince. But yf case be that my lande crye agaynst me, or that the forowes therof make any complaynte: yf I haue eaten the frutes therof vnpayed for, yee yf I haue greued any of the plowmen: then let thystles growe in steade of my wheate, & cockle for my barleye.

¶ Here ende the wordes of Job:

The xxxij. Chapter.

¶ Elihu after the other had synned they communicacyon, reprooueth them of folyshnes. Age maketh not a man wyse, but the sperte of God.

¶ These thre men wolde stryue no more with Job, because he helde hym selfe a ryghteous mā. But Elihu the sonne of Barachel the Bullyte of the kynred of Ram, was very sore displeased at Job, because he called hym selfe iust before God. And with Jobs thre frendes he was angry also, because they had founde no reasonable answer to ouercome Job. Now taried Elihu, tyll they had ended the communication with Job, for why, they were elder then he. So when Elihu the sonne of Barachel the Bullyte sa-we, that these thre men were not able to make Job answer, he was mycontent: Elihu the sonne of Barachel the Bullyte answered hym selfe, and sayde: * Considringe, that I am younge, and ye be men of age, I was a-frayed, and durst not shew forth my mynde, For I thought thus within my selfe, It becommeth olde men to speake, and the aged to teach wysdome. Every man (no doute) hath a mynde, but * it is the inspiraciō of the Al-myghty that geueth vnderstandinge. Great men are not allwaye wyse, nether doth eue-ry aged man vnderstande the thyng that is lawfull. Therefore wyll I speake also (heare me) and I wyll shew you also myne vnderstandinge. For when I had wayted tyll ye made an ende of youre talkynge, and hearde yours communicacyon: yee, when I had diligently pondered what ye sayde, I founde not one of you that made any good argument agaynst Job, that directly coulde make answer vnto his wordes: lest ye shulde saye. We haue founde out wysdome: God shall cast hym downe, and no man. He hath not spoken vnto me, and I wyll not answe-re hym as ye haue done (for they were so abashed, that they coulde not make answer, nor speake one worde) but in so moche as ye wyll not speake, standynge still lyke domme men, and makynge no answer: I haue a good hope for my parte to shape hym an an-swere, and to shewe him my meanynge: For I am full of wordes, and the sperte that is within me, compelleth me.

Beholde, my belly is as the wyne, which hath no vente, and bursteth the new vessels in sunder. Therefore wyll I speake y I may haue a vete: I will open my lippes, & make answer. I will regarde no maner of personne, no man wyll I spare. For * yf I wold go aboute to please men, I knowe not howe sone my maker wolde take me awaye:

The xxxij. Chapter.

¶ Elihu sheweth wherein Job offendeth, with God may we not stryde, nor curiously scrache out hys wordes.

Therefore, heare my wordes (O Job) and hearken vnto me all that I will saye: Be-holde, I haue now opened my mouth, my tonge hath spoken in my throte. My hert doth orde my wordes a ryght,

a ryght, and my lippes talke of pure wyf-dome. The sperte of God hath made me, and
* the bryth of the Almyghty hath geuen me my lyfe. If thou canst, then geue me answer: prepare thy selfe to stande before me face to face. Beholde, before God am I eue as thou, for I am fashioned and made euen of the same mould. Therefore, thou nedest not to be afrayed of me, nether nedest thou to feare, that my auctorite shalbe to heuy for the. Now hast thou spoken in myne ea-res, and I haue herde the voyce of thy wor-des: I am cleane wythout any faute, I am innocent, and there is no wyckednes in me.
But lo, he hath picked a quarrell agaynst me, and taketh me for hys enemy: * he hath put my fote in the stocks, and loketh narrowly vnto all my pathes. Beholde, in thys hast thou not doner yght. I wyll make answer vnto the, that God is more then man. And why doest thou then stryue agaynst him: for he shall not geue the accomptes of all hys wordes. For whē God doth once commaunde a thyng, there shulde no man be curyous, to searche whether it be ryght. * In dreames and visions of the nyght (when slombing commeth vpon men, that they fall a slepe in their beddes) he roundeth them in the eares, he infourmeth the, and sheweth them playnely, that it is he, whych withdraueth man from euill, deliuereth hym from pryde, kepeth hym from the graue, and hys lyfe from the swearde. He chasteneth hym wyth syknesse, and byngeth hym to his bed: he layeth sore punishment vpon hys bones, so that hys lyfe maye awaye wyth no byed, and his soule abhorreth to eat any dayntie meat: In so moch that hys body is cleane consumed awaye, and his bones appeare no more. Hys lyfe draueth on to the graue, and hys lyfe to death. Now, yf there be a messenger (one amonge a thousande) sent for to speake vnto man, and to shewe him the ryght waye: then the Lorde is mercifull vnto hym, and sayeth: he shalbe deliuered, that he fall not downe to the graue, for I am sufficiently reconyled. Than shall hys flesh be as well lykynge as it was afore, and shalbe as it was in hys youth. For yf he submytte hym selfe vnto God, he shalbe gracious vnto him, and shewe him his countenance ioyfully, & rewardeth man for his ryghteousnes. Socha respecte hath he vnto men. Therefore, let a man con-fesse (and saye) I haue offended: I byd vn-ryghteously, and it hath done me no good.
Yee, he hath deliuered my soule from de-struccyon, and my lyfe shall se the lyght. Lo, thus worcketh God allwaye with mā, that he kepeth hys soule from perishing, and letteth hym enioye the lyght of the lyuynge.
Marke well (O Job) and heare me: holde the still, and I will speake. But yf thou hast any thyng to saye, then answer me, and speake, for thy answer pleaseth me. If thou hast nothinge, then heare me, and holde thy tonge, so shall I teach the wysdome.

The xxxij. Chapter.

¶ Elihu prayeth the iustice of God, whych subgeth the worlde, and gouerneth all.

Elihu prayeth for the iustice of God, whych subgeth
the worlde, and gouerneth all.

mouth tasteth y meates: As for iudgement, let vs seke it out amonge oure selues, that we may knowe what is good. And why?
Job hath sayde: I am ryghteous, but God doth me wronge. I must needs be a lyer, though my cause me ryght, and violently I am plaged where as I made no fault: where is there soch a one as Job, that drinketh by scornfulnes lyke water: whych goeth in the company of wycked doers, and walketh wyth vngodly men? For he hath sayde: Though a man be good, yet is he naught before God. Therefore hearken vnto me, yf that ye haue vnderstandynge.

Farre be it from God, that he shuld med-le wyth wyckednesse: and farre be it from the Almyghty, that he shulde medle wyth vn-ryghteous dealyng: * For he shall reward the workes of man, and cause euery man to fynde accordynge to his wayes. For sure it is, that * God condemneth no man wrongfully, and the iudgement of the Almygh-tye is not vnyghteous. Who ruleth y earth in his steade? Or, whom hath he sett to gouerne the whole worlde? To whom hath he geuen hys herte, for to draue hys sperte and bryth vnto hym? All flesh shall come together vnto naught, and all men shall turne agayne vnto * dust. If thou now haue vnderstandynge, heare what I saye, and hearken to the voyce of my wordes:

Maye he be a ruler, that loueth no ryght?
Or maye he that is a very innocent man, do vngodly? Is it reason, y thou shuldest saye to the kynge: Thou art wycked, or, thou art vngodly, and that before the prynces? * He hath no respecte vnto the personnes, of the lovely, and regardeth not the ryche more then the poore. For they be all the worcke of hys handes. In the twyncklinge of an eye shall they dye: and at mydnight, when the people and the tyrantes rage, then shall they perishe, and be taken awaye without handes. And why? * his eyes loke vpo the wayes of mā, and he seythall hys goynge. There is no darknes nor shadowe of death, y can hyde the wycked doers from hym. For no man shalbe

shalbe suffered to go into iudgement wth God.

Why one: p^{er} innumerable doth he puny^{sh} the, & lette^rth other in their steads. Therfore shall he declare their workes, he shall turne the w^{ro}ght, and they shall be destroyed. They that were in p^{re}ade of Seare, dealt lyke vngodly men: and therfore he puny^{sh}ed them, because they turned back from hym, and wolde not consyder all hys wayes. In somoch that they haue caused the voyce of the pooze to come vnto hym, ad now he heareth the complaynte of soche as are in trouble. If he graunte pardon, who wyl conde^mne? And yf he hyde awaye hys countenance, who shalbe able to se it? whether it be to the people or to any man, thus wyl he do. For the vngodlynesse of the people, doth God make an ypo^{cr}ite to reygne, ouer them. For somoch then as I haue begone to talke of God, I will not hynde y. If I haue gone a myse, enfourme thou me: yf I haue done w^{ro}ge, I will leaue of. Can he do nothinge without the? For thou hast reynoued hys iudgemēt. Thou also hast thynne a wne mynde ad not I. But speake on what thou knowest. Let men of vnderstanding tell me, and let a wyle man berken vnto me. As for Job, he hath nether spoken to the purpose nor wisely. O father, let Job be well tryed, because he hath answered for wycked me: yee, aboue his synne he doth wyckedly: triumpheth amonge vs, and multiplieth hys wordes agaynst God.

The xxxiij. Chapter.

Whether doth godlynesse profit, or vngodlynes hurt to God but to man.

Ihu spake mozeouer, & sayde: Thynkest thou it ryght, that thou sayest: I am ryghtuous before God? For thou sayest: What aduantage will it be vnto the, and what profit shalst thou haue of my synne. Therfore will I geue answere vnto the and to thy companyos wth the: loke vnto the heauen, and beholde it: consyde the cloudes, whych are hyer then thou. If thou hast synned, what hast thou done agaynst him? If thine offences be many, what hast thou done vnto hym? If thou be ryghtuous what geuest thou hym? Or what will he receaue of thy hand? Of soche an vngodly personne as thou, and of the sonne of man that is ryghtuous as thou pretendest to be: there is a greate cry and complaynte made by them that are opp^{re}s^sed wth vyolence, yee, euery man coplayneth vnto the cruelte of t^{yr}antes. For soche a one neuer sayeth: Where is God that made me: & that geueth vs occasion to prayse hym in p^{re}sight: whych geueth vs moze vnderstādyng then he doth the beastes of the earth, & teacheth vs moze then he doth the sonles of heauen.

If any such complayne, no man geueth answere, and that because of the wyckednesse of proude t^{yr}antes. But yf a man call vpon God, doth not he heare him? Doth not the almyghty accepte his crye? Whan thou speakest then, shulde not he pardon the, yf thou open thy selfe before hym, and put thy trust in hym? Then vseth he no vyolence in hys w^{ra}th, nether hath he pleasure in curyng & depe inq^{ui}sitions. Therfore doth Job open hys mouth but in vayne, and folysly doth he make so many wordes.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

Elihu sheweth wherfore God punyssheth and correcteth.

Elihu proceeded forth in hys talkyng, and sayd: holde the still a lytle, & I shall shewe y, what I haue yet to speake on Goddes behalfe. I will open vnto the yet moze of myne vnderstādyng, & p^{ro}ue my mater ryghtuous. And truly, my wordes shall not be vayne, seynge he is with the that is perfect in knowlege: beholde, the greate God casteth awaye no mā, for he him selfe is myghty in power and w^{is}domme.

As for the vngodly, he shall not preserue hym, but shall helpe the pooze to their ryght. He shall turne hys eyes awaye frō the ryghteous, but as kynges shall they be in theyr throne, he shall stablysh them for euer, & they shalbe exalted. But yf they be layed in p^{re}son and cheynes, or bounde with the bondes of trouble, then wyl he shewe them theyr w^{ro}cke, and the synnes wher with they haue v^{se}d cruell vyolence.

He wyl punysshynge and nurtryng of them, roundeth them in the eares, warneth them to leaue of from theyr wyckednesse, & to amende. * If they now wyl take hede ad serue him, they shall were out theyr dayes in prosperite, and theyr yeares in pleasure and tope. But yf they wyl not herke, they shall go thorow the swerde, and peryshe or euer they be aware. As for soch as be fayned ypo^{cr}ites, they shall heape v^{pon} w^{ra}th for them selues: for they call not vpon hym, though they be hys p^{re}soners. Thus shall theyr soule peryshe in folyshe^{nes}se, & theyr lyfe shalbe condēned amonge the fornicatours. The pooze shall he deliuer out of his affliction, & rōude them in the eare whā they be in trouble. Eue so shall he kepe the (yf thou wylt be content) from the bottomlesse pytte that is beneth: & yf thou wylt holde y quyet, he shall fyll thy table wth plenteousnesse.

Neuerthelesse, thou hast condemned the iudgement of the vngodly, yee, euen soche a iudgement and sentence shalt thou suffre.

For

For then shall not thy cause be styll wth cruelte, nor pacyfyed wth many gyftes. Thynkest thou, that he wyl regarde thy riches? he shall not care for golde, ner for all them that excell in strength. How longe not thou y tyme, tyll ther come a nyght for the, to set other people i thy steade. But beware that thou turne not alyde to wyckednesse ad synne, which hither to thou hast chosen more the mekenesse. Behold, God is of a myghty hye power: Where is there soche a gyde & lawe geuer as he? Who wyl reynoue hym of hys waye? who wyl saye vnto him: thou hast done wrong?

Whydye how greate and excellent hys w^{ro}ckes be, whom all men loue and prayse: yee, wondre at hym, and yet they se hym but afarre of. Beholde, so greate is God, that he passeth oure knowlege, nether are we able to come to the experience of hys yeares. * He turneth the water to small droppes, he dryneth hys cloudes together for to rayne, so y they poure downe and droppe vpon men. He can sprede out the cloudes (a couerynge of hys tabernacle) and cause hys lyght to shyne vpon them, and to couer the botome of y see. By these thynges gouerneth he hys people, and geueth them aboundaunce of meate.

Wth the cloudes he hydeth the lyght, and at hys commaundment it commeth agayne. The ryngyng v^{pon} ther of sheweth he to hys frendes & to the catell.

The xxxvij. Chapter.

Elihu proueth that the wylsome of God is vns^{ear}cheable.

And this, my hert is astōied, and moued out of hys place. Heare then the sounde of hys voyce, ad the noyse that goeth out of his mouth. He gouerneth euery thyng vnder the heauen, and his lyght reacheth vnto the ende of the worlde. A roaring voyce foloweth hym: for his glorious maiesty geueth soche a thondre clappe, y (though a man heare it) yet maye he not perceaue it afterwarde. It geueth an horryble sōwnde, when God sendeth oute hys voyce: greate thynges doth he, whych we can not comp^{re}hende. * When he commaundeth the snowe, it falleth vpon the erth: As soone as he geueth the rayne a charge, immediatly the showres haue theyr strength, and fall downe. He sendeth feare vpon euery man, that they myght knowe their awne w^{ro}ckes. The beesles crepe into theyr denmes, and take theyr rest. Out of the south commeth the tempest, and colde out of the north.

At the byeth of God, the frost commeth, and the waters are shed abrode. He maketh the cloudes to do theyr labour in geuyng moystnesse, & agayne wth his lyght he dryneth awaye the cloude. He dist^{ri}bute^th also on euery syde, accordyng as it pleaseth hym to deale out hys w^{ro}ckes, that they maye do whatsoeuer he commaundeth them thorow the whole worlde: whether it be to puny^{sh} any lande, or to doo good vnto them, that seke hym.

Herken vnto thys (O Job) stande still, & consyde the wondrous w^{ro}ckes of God. Art thou of counsell wth God, when he doth these thynges? When he causeth y lyght to come forth of hys cloudes? Art thou of hys counsell when he sprede^th out the cloudes? Hast thou the perfecte knowlege of hys wōders? & how thy clothes are warme, when the lande is styll thorow the south wynde? Hast thou helped hym to sprede out the heauen, whych is to lōke vpon, as it were cast of cleare metall? Teach vs what we shall saye vnto hym, for we are vnnete because of darcknesse. Shall it be tolde hym what I saye? Shuld a mā speake, or shulde he kepe it backe? For euery man seyth not the light, that he kepeth cleare in the cloudes whych he clenseth whan he maketh y wynde to blowe. Golde is brought out of y North, but the prayse and honoure of Gods feare commeth from God hym selfe. It is not we y can fynde out the almyghty: for in power, equite, and ryghteousnesse, he is hyer than can be exp^{re}s^sed.

Let men therfore feare hym, for thre shall no man se hym that is wise in his awne cōceate.

The xxxviij. Chapter.

The wōders and maruelles that the Lorde hath done from the bygynnyng.

When answered the Lorde vnto Job out of the storme, ad sayd: what is he that hydeth his mynde with folyshe w^{ro}ckes? * Gyde v^{pon} thy loynes lyke a man, for I wyl question wth the, se thou geue me a directe answere. Wher wast thou, whē I layde the foundacyons of the earth? Tell playnely, yf thou hast vnderstādyng. Who hath measured it, knowest thou? Or, who hath sprede the lyne vpon it? Where vpon stande the pylers of it? Or, who layed the corner stone therof? Where wast thou, when the moynyng starres prayled me together, and all the chyldren of God reioysed triumphantly: * Who shut the see wyth doores, when it brake forth as a chyld out of hys mothers wombe: When I made the cloudes to be a couerpyng for it, and swadled it with the darcke: when I gaue it my commaundement, makynge doores and barres for it, sayng: hyther to shalt thou come, but no farther, & here shalt thou laye downe thy proud and hye waues. Hast thou geuen the moornyng charge (as sone as thou wast borne) and shewed the daye spyng hys place, that it myght take holde of the corners of earth, and that the vngodly myght be spake out: They tokens and weapens are turned lyke clape, and sett vp agayne as the chaungyng of a garment. The vngodly shalbe disapoynted of their lyght, and the arme of the proude shalbe broken. Camest thou euer into the grounde of the see: or walkedest in the lowe corners of the depe: haue the gates of death bene opened vnto the, or hast thou sene the doores of the shadowe of death: Hast thou also perceaued how broad the earth is: yf thou hast knowledge of all thys, then shew me, where lyght dwelleth, and where darcknes is: that thou mayest bypunge vs vnto theyr quarters, yf thou canst tell the waye to theyr houses.

Knewest thou (asore thou wast borne) how olde thou shuldest be: Wetest thou euer into the treasures of the snowe, or hast thou sene the secrete places of the hayle, * whych I haue prepared agaynst the tyme of trouble, agaynst the tyme of batell and warre: By what waye is the lyght parted, and in to what lande breaketh y cast wynde: Who deuydeth the aboundaunce of waters into ryuers, or who maketh a waye for the lyghtenynge and thonder, that it watereth & moystrureth the drye and barengrounde: to make the grasse growe in places where no body dwelleth, and in the wyldernes where no man remayneth: Who is the father of rayne: Or who hath begotten y droppes of dewe: Out of whose wombe came the yse: Who hath gedred the coldnes of the ayre: that the waters are as harde as stones, and lye congeled aboue the depe. Wylt thou byndre the swete influences of the. viij. starres: Or art thou able to byrke the circle of heauen: Canst thou bypunge forth the moornyng starre or y euenynge starre at conuenient tyme, & conueye them home agayne: Knowest thou the course of heauen, that thou mayest set vp the ordinaunce therof vpon the erth: Moreover, canst thou lftt vp thy voyce to the cloudes, that they maye poore downe a greate rayne vpon the: Canst thou thondre also, that they maye go theyr waye, and be obedient vnto the, sayng: Lo here are we: Who geueth sure wysdome or stedfast vnderstandynge: who nombrerth y cloudes in wysdome: who stytleth the vehement waters of the beauer: who turneth the clottes to dust, & then to be clottes agayne: Wylt thou hunt the prape from the lyon, or fede hys whelpes lyng in theyr denmes, and luyng in theyr couches: who * prouideth meate for the rauen, when hys yonge ones crye vnto God, and fle aboute for lack of meate:

The. xxix. Chapter.

God speaketh vnto Job bewyng hys by the examples of hys wythes, that hys rygthynesse is vnscheacheable.

Knowest thou the tyme when the wyldc goates bypunge forth theyr yonge, amonge the stony rockes: Or layest thou wayte when y hyndes vse to fawne: rekenest thou the monethes after they engendre, that thou knowest the tyme of theyr bearyng: or when they lye downe, when they cast theyr yonge ones, and when they are deliuered of theyr trauaple and payne: How their yonge ones growe vp, & waxe greete thorow good fedynge: when they go forth, and retorne not agayne vnto them: who letteth the wyldc alle go fre, or who loweth the bodes of the mule: Euen I whych haue geue the wyldernes to be theyr house, and the vntylled land to be theyr dwellyng place. That they maye geue no force for the multitude of people in the cyties, nether regarde the cryenge of the dyuer: but seke theyr pastuze about the mountaynes, & folowe the grene grasse. Wylt thou the vncorne be so tame as to do the seruice, or to abyde styll by thy crybbe: Canst thou bynd the pock about the vncorne in thy sorowe, to make hym plowe after y in the valleys: Mayest thou trust hym (because he is strong) or committe thy labour vnto hym: Mayest thou beleue hym, that he wyl bringe home thy corne, or to cary any thyng vnto thy barne: Canst thou the sayre wynges vnto the pecockes, or wynges & fethers vnto the stork: For he leaueth hys egges in the earth and layeth them in the dust. He remembereth not, that they myght be troden wyth fete, or broke wyth some wyldc beast. So harde is he vnto hys yonge ones, as though they were not hys, and labourerth in vayne wythout any feare. And that because God hath taken wysdome from hym, & hath not geuen hym vnderstandynge. When hys tyme is that he flyeth vp on hye, he careth nether for hysle ner man.

Hast thou geue the hysse hys strength, or lerned him to howe downe his neck w feare: that he letteth hym selfe be dryuen forth lyke a greshopper, where as the stoute neyng that he maketh, is fearfull: he breaketh the grounde with the hooves of his fete chearfully in hys in his strength, and runneth to mete the hardest men. He layeth a lyde all feare, hys stomack is not abated, nether starteth he a back for any swerde. Though the quyuers rattle vpon him, though the speare and shilde glyste: yet russheth he in fearself, and beatech vpon the grounde. He feareth not the noyse of the trompettes, but as soone as he heareth the shawmes blowe, tush (sayeth he) for he smelleth the battel a farre of, the noyse, the captaynes and the shoutinge.

Commeth it thorow thy wysdome, that the Goshauke flyeth toward the South: Doth the Aegle mount vp, & make hys nest on hye at thy commaundement: He abydeh in the stony rockes, and vpon the hye toppes of harde mountaynes, where no man can come. From thence seketh he his prape, & looketh farre about with hys eyes. Hys yonge ones are fed with bloud: & where any deed body lyeth, there is he immediatly.

The. xl. Chapter.

Job humbleth hym selfe vnto God, the description of Behemoth and Leupathan.

Dreouer, God spake vnto Job and sayde: Canst thou stryue with y Almyghyte, be at rest: Shulde not he which disputeth wyth God, geue hym an answer: Job answered the Lorde, sayng: Beholde, I am to vyle a personne, to answer the, therefore wyl I laye my hande vpon my mouth. Once or twise haue I spoken, but I wyl saye nomore.

Then answered the Lorde vnto Job out of the storme, and sayde: * Gyde vp thy loynes now lyke a man, & tell me the thynges that I will aske the. Wylt thou disanul my iudgement: Or wylt thou condemne me, that thou thy selfe mayest be made ryghteous: Is thy power then lyke the power of God: Maketh thy voyce such a sounde as hys doth: Then arme thy selfe wyth thyne awne power, vp, decke the in thy ioly arape, powze out the indignacion of thy wyath: se y thou cast downe all the proude, loke well, that thou makest all such as be stubburne, to obey: treade downe all the vngodly in their place, cast them downe into the dust, and couer their faces with darcknesse: Then will I confesse vnto the also, that thyne awne right hande shall saue the.

Beholde, & the beast Behemoth (who I made wyth the) whych eateth haye as an oxe: lo, how stronge he is in hys loynes, and what power he hath in the nauell of his body. He spredeth out hys taylor lyke a Cedre tre, all hys baynes are styf, hys rynges are lyke pyppes of brasse, hys rydye bones are lyke stanes of yron. If yst, when God made hym, he ordered the wildernes for hym, that the mountaynes shulde geue hym grasse, where all the beastes of the felde take there pastyme. He lyeth amonge the reedes in the Molles, the fennes hyde him with their shadowe, and the wylowes of the broke couer him rounde aboute. Lo, without any labour myght he drinke out of the whoale floude, & suppe of Iordane without any trauaple. Who darre laye hande vpon hym openly, and vndertake to catch him: Or, who darre put a hooke thorow his nose, and lay a snare for hym:

Darrest thou drawe out * Leviathan wyth an Angle, or bynde hys tonge wyth a snare: Canst thou put a ryng in the nose of hy, or boze hys chawe thorow with a naule: Wylt thou make many sayre wordes with the (thynkest thou) or flatter the: Will he make a couenaunt with the: Or art thou able for to compell hym to do the continuall scrupce: Wylt thou take thy pastyme wyth hym, as with a byrde, or geue hym vnto thy maydes, that thy companyons may make a refeccion of hym, or that he maye be parted amonge the marchant men: Canst thou fyll the basket with his skynne, or the fyth pannier w his heade: Darrest y laye hande vpon hym: It is better for the to consydre what harme myght happen the there thorow, and not to touch him. For when thou thynkest to haue holde vpon him, he shall begyle the.

The. xli. Chapter.

Of the same Leupathan wherof is mencyoned in the Chapter afore.

Man is so cruell, y is able to sterce hy vp. * Who is able to stude before me: Or, who hath geuen me any thyng afore hade, y I maye rewarde him agayne: All thynges vnder heauen are myne: I feare him not, whether he threaten or speake sayre. Who lyfteth hym vp, and stripeth hym out of his clothes, or who taketh him by the bytt of his bydle: Who openeth y doze of his face: for he hath horrible tethe rounde about. His body is couered wyth scales as it were with shylles, lockte in, kepte, and well compacte together: One is so iopned to another, y no ayre can come in: Pee, one hageth so vpon another, and stycketh so together, y they cannot be sundered. His nelyng is lyke a glysteryng fyre, and his eyes lyke y moornynge hyne. Out of his mouth go torches, and out of his nostrils ther goeth a smoke, lyke as out of an hote sethyng pot. His bryth maketh the coales burne, and the flame goeth out of hys mouth. In his necke remayneth strenght, and nothing is so laborious for him. The members of his body are iopned so strayt one to another, and cleaue so fast together, that he cannot cannot be moved.

This bert is as hard as a stone, and as fast as the stythe that the mythe smyteth upon. When he goeth: the myghte are afrayed, and feare troubleth them. If any man draw out a swerde at him, it shall not hurt him: there may nether speare, iavelinge ner best plate, abyde hym. He setteth as moch by a strawe as by brasse. He starteth not awaye for hym that bendeth the bowe: and as for spynge stones, he careth as moch for stubble as for the. He counteth the dardes no better then a strawe. He laugheth hym to scoone that shaketh the speare. He treadeth the gold in the myre lyke the sharpe pottherdes. He maketh the depe to boyle lyke a pot, and stereth the see together lyke an oymment. He maketh a path to be sene after hym, the depe is hys walkynge place. Uponerth is there no power lyke unto hys, for he is so made that he feareth not. If a man wyll consydre all hys thynges, thys same is a kynge ouer all the chyldren of pryde.

The xliij. Chapter.

The repentance of Job. He prayeth for hys frondes, and his goodes are rejoyced dou- ble unto him.

When Job answered the Lorde, and sayde. * I knowe that thou hast power ouer all thynges, and that there is no thought hyd vnto y. For who can kepe hys awne counsell so secrete, but it shal be knowne? Therefore haue I spoken that I vnderstode not, the thynges that are so hye, & passe myne vnderstanding. O herken thou vnto me also, and let me speake: answere vnto the thyng that I wyll aske y. I haue geuen diligēt care vnto the, and now I se the wyth myne eyes. Wherefore, I geue myne awne selfe the blame, and take repen- taunce in the dust and ashes.

Now when the Lorde had spoken these wordes vnto Job, it fortuneth, that the Lorde sayde vnto Eliphaz the Themanite: I am displeased with the, and thy two frēdes, for ye haue not spoken of me the thyng that is ryght, lyke as my seruaunt Job hath done.

Therefore, take you now seven oxen and se- uen rammes, and go to my seruaunt Job, and * offre vp for youre selues a bent offe- ringe: and my seruaunt Job shall praye for you. hym wyll I accepte, and not deale wyth you after youre folyshnesse: in that ye haue not spoken the thyng which is ryght, lyke as my seruaunt Job hath done.

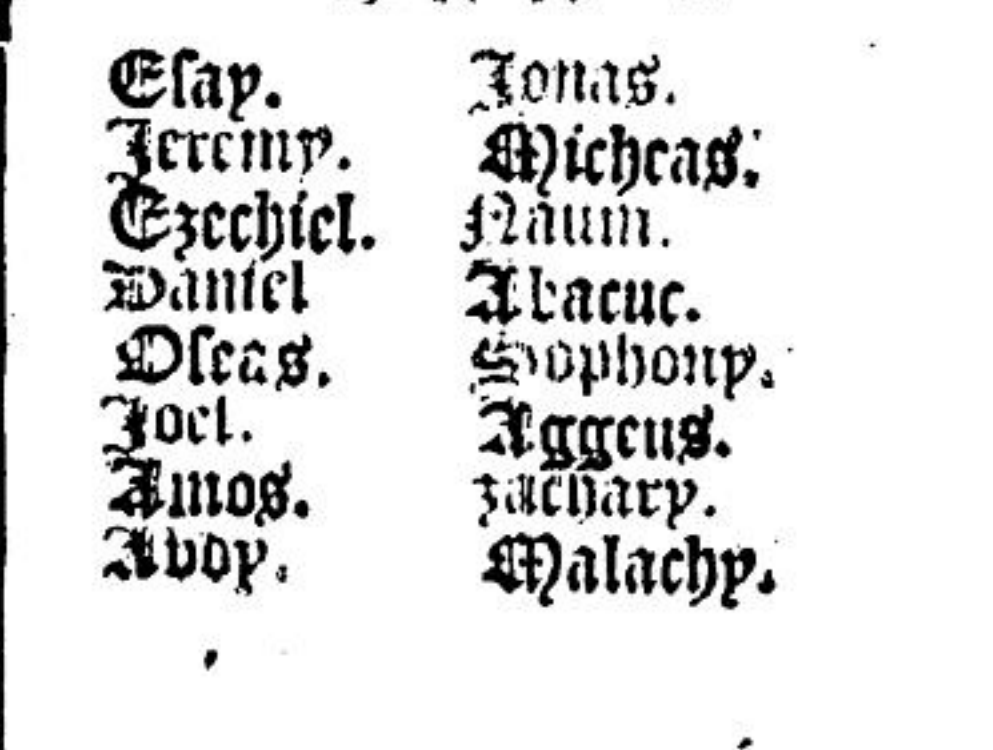

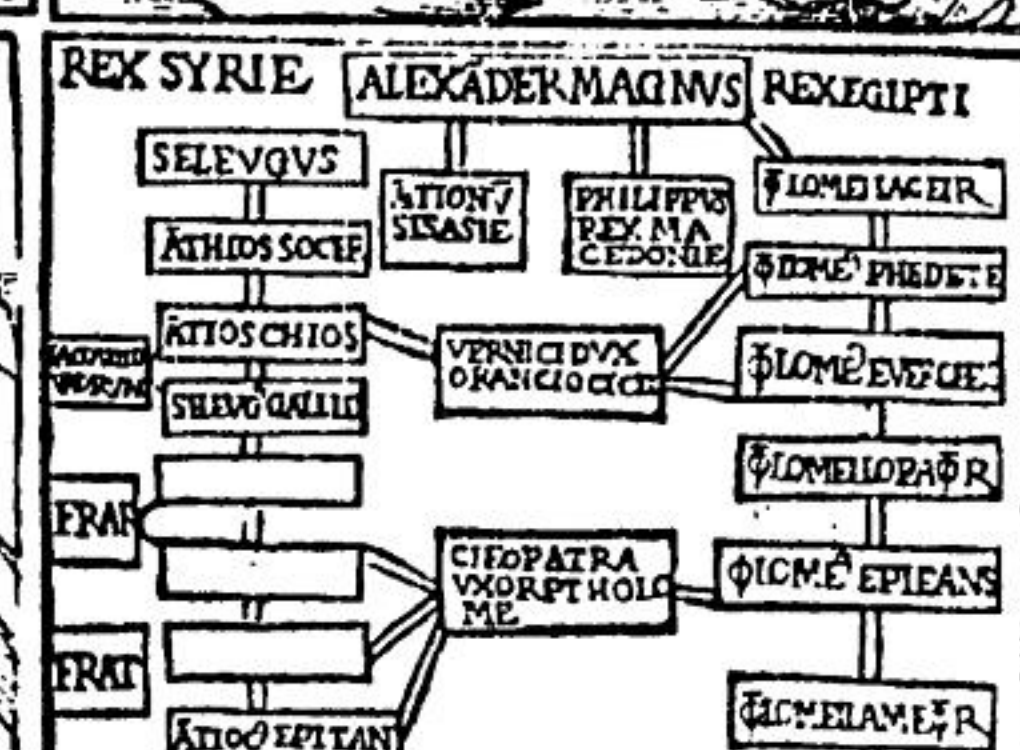

So Eliphaz the Themanite, and Bildad the Suhite & Sophar the Naamathite wēt their waye, and dyd accordyng as the Lorde commaunded them. * The Lorde also accep- ted the personne of Job, and the Lorde tur- ned the captiuite of Job, when he prayed for his frindes: Dee, the Lorde gaue Job * twofle as moch as he had afore.

And then came there vnto hym all hys brethzen, all hys systers, & all they that had bene of hys acquaintaunce afore, & dyd eat bread with him in his housse, wondrynge at hym, and cōfortynge hym ouer all the trou- ble, that the Lorde had brought vpon hym. Every man also gaue hym a certayne some of money and a Jewell of golde.

And the Lorde made Job rycher then he was before: for he had fourtene M. shepe. vi. M. camels, a M. pouck of oxen, and a M. asses. He had seue sonnes also & thre daugh- ters. The fyrst daughter called hee Jemi- ma: the second Kezia, and the thirde Keren- hapuch. In all the land were no wemē found so fayre, as the daughters of Job, and their father gaue them enheritaunce amonge their brethzen. After thys luyed Job an hundred and fourty peares, so that he sawe * hys chyldren, & hys chyldrens chyldren into the fourth generacion.

And so Job dyed, beyngē older & of a perfect age.

The first psalme.

BEATVS VIR QVI NON ABIIT.

Blessed is mañ þ hat
not walked in þ coucel of þ vngodly, ner stonde
in þ waye of sinners, & hath not sytt in the seate of the scornefull.

But hys deylte is in the lawe of the Lorde: and in his lawe will he exercise him selfe daye & night.

And * he shal be lyke a tre planted by the watersyde, þ wyll byngge forth hys frute in due season. His leafe also shall not wither: & loke whatsoeuer he doth, it shall prospeere.

As for the vngodly, is it not so withē: but
* they are lyke þ chafe which the wynde sca-tered a waye * (fro the face of the erth). Therfore, the vngodly shall nott be able to stande in the iudgment, nether the synners in þ congregaciō of the ryghtewes. But þ Lorde knoweth the waye of the ryghtewes, and þ waye of the vngodly shall peryshe.

The second psalme.

QVARE FREMERVNT GENTES.

Why * do the hepten so furiouslye rage together: and why do þ people ymagyne a vayne thyng?

The kynges of the erth stande vp, and the rulers take counsell together * a-gaynst the Lorde, and agaynst hys anoynted.
Let vs breake theyr bondes asunder, and cast a waye theyr conardes from vs.

He that dwelleth in heauen * shall laugh them to scoerne: the Lorde shall haue them in derisyon. Then shall he speake vnto them in hys wrath, and bere them in hys sore displeasure. Yet haue I set my kyng vpon my holy hyll of Syon. I wyll preach the lawe, wherof the Lorde hath sayd vnto me:

* thou arte my sonne, thys daye haue I begotten the. Desyre of me, and I shall geue the, þ hepten for thyne enheritaunce, & the vtmost partes of the erthe for thy possessiō.

* Thou shalt bruse them with a rodd of yron, and breake them in peeces: lyke a potters vessell. We wyle nowe therfore, O ye kinges, be warned, ye that are iudges of the earth. Serue the Lorde in feare, and reio-yse: * (vnto hym) with reuerence. * Kysse the sonne, lest he be angrye, & so ye peryshe fro the * (ryght) waye, yf his wrath be kindled (ye but a lytle) blessed are all they that put theyr trust in hym.

The thyrde psalme.

DOMINE, QVID MULTPLICATI.

A psalme of David when he fledd from the face of Absalon hys sonne.

TOrd, howe are they increased, that trouble me: many are they, þ cryse against me. Many one there be, þ slaye of my soule: there is no helpe for hym in (hys) God. * Sela. But thou, O Lorde, arte my defender: þ arte my worthyppye, and the lyfter vp of my heed. I did call vpon the Lorde with my voyce, and he heard me out of hys holy hyll. Sela.

* I layed me downe and slepte, and rose vp agayne, for the Lorde susteyned me.

I will not be afrayde for ten thousandes of the people, that haue set them selues agaynst me rounde about. O Lorde, & helpe me, O my God, for thou smyttest all myne enemyes: * vpon the cheke bone: thou hast broken the teeth of the vngodly. Salua-cyon belōgeth vnto the Lorde, and thy bles-syng is vpon thy people. Sela.

The fourth psalme.

CVM INVOCAREM.

To hym that excelleth in musick,
a psalme of David.

Care me, when I call, O God, of my ryghtewesnes: thou hast set me at ly-bertye, when I was in trouble: haue mercy vpon me, and herke vnto my prayer.

O ye sonnes of men, howe longe wyll ye blaspheme myne honoure, & haue loch pleasure in vanprie, and seke after lesyng? Sela.

Knowe thys also, that the Lorde hathe chosen to hym selfe the man that is godlye: when I call vpon the Lorde, he wyll heare me. Stonde in awe, and synne not: comen with

with your a wne herte, and in your chamber, and be still: Sela. Offer the sacri-fyce of ryghte wyllesse, and put your trust in the Lorde. There be many that saye: who wylt thou vs any good? Lorde lyfte vp the lyght of thy countenance vpon vs.
Thou hast putt gladnesse in myne herte, sencc the tyme that they cozne & wyne (and opic) increased. I wylt laye me downe in peace, and take my rest: for it is thou Lorde only, that makest me dwell in safetie.

¶ The. v. psalme.

VERBA MEA AVIBVS.

¶ To hym that excelleth in songes of Musick: a psalme of David.

Lorde my wordes, O Lorde, con-fyde my meditacyon. O herke thou vnto the voyce of my cal-lynge, my kinge and my God. for vnto the wylt I make my prayer. My voyce shalt thou heare by tymes, O Lorde, early in y morning will I directe my prater vnto the, and wylt loke vp. * For y arte the God that hath no pleasure in wycked-nes, nether shall any euell dwell with the.

Such as be foolys, shall not stande in thy syght, thou hast all them that worke vayne. Thou shalt destroye them that speake leasynge: y Lorde wylt abhorre both the blond thyf, and disceatfull man.

But as for me, I will come into thy house, euen vpo the multitude of thy mercy, and in thy feare wylt I worchyp towarde thy holly temple. Leade me, O Lorde, in thy ryghte wyllesse because of myne enemyes:

make thy waye playne before my face.

For there is no faythfulnesse in hys mouth: they inwarde partes are very wickednes. * They throte is an open sepulchre: they flatter by their tonge. Destroye thou them, O God, let the perpythe thowoe they a wne ymaginacions, cast them out in the multitude of they vngodlynes: for they haue rebelled agaynst the. And let all the that put they trust in the reioyce: they shall euer be geuinge of thanks, because thou defendest them: they that loue thy name shalbe ioyfull in the. For thou Lorde wylt geue thy blessing vnto the ryghteous: and with thy fauorable kyndnesse wylt thou defende hym, as with a thyld.

¶ The. vi. psalme.

DOMINE NE.

¶ To hym that excelleth in musick, vpon the instrument of ryght strynges. A psalme of David.

Lorde, * rebuke me not in thyne indi-gnacion: nether chasten me in thy displeasure. Haue mercy vpon me, O

Lorde: for I am weake: O Lorde heale me: for my bones are vexed. My soule also is soze troubled: but Lorde howe longe wylt thou punyche me? Turne the, O Lorde, and deliuer my soule: O sane me for thy mercy sake. For * in death no man remembere the: & who will geue the thanks in the pytte? I am weery of my gromynge: euer y nyght washe I my bedd, & water my couche with my teares. My bewte is gone for very trouble, and wone awaye because of all myne enemyes. * A waye fro me all ye y worke vayne: for y Lorde hath hearde the voyce of my wepyng. The Lorde hath heard my petycon, the Lorde wylt receaue my prayer. All myne ene-myes, shalbe confounded & soze vexed, they shalbe turned backe & put to shame sodenly.

¶ The. vii. psalme.

DOMINE DEVS MEVS.

¶ Signation of David, which he sang vnto y Lorde in y busynes of Chus the sonne of Jemini.

Lorde my God, in y haue I put my trust: sane me fro all the y persecute me, & deliuer me: lest he deuoure my soule lyke a lyon, and teare it in pees, whyle there is none to helpe.

Lorde my God, * yf I haue done any soche thyng, or yf there be any wyckednes in my handes. Yf I haue rewarded euill vnto him that dealt frendly with me, yee, I haue deliuered hym, that without any cause is myne enemye. Then lett myne enemye persecute my soule, and take me: ye let hym treade my lyfe downe vpo the earth, & laye myne honoure in the dust. Sela. Stande vp, O Lorde, in thy wrath: and lyfte vp thy selfe, because of the indignacions of myne enemyes: aryle vp for me, in the iudge-ment that y hast commaunded. And so shall the congregacyon of the people come aboute the, for they shalke therfore lyft vp thy selfe agayne. The Lorde shall iudge the people geue sentence with me, O Lorde, accordyng to my ryghte wyllesse, and accordyng to the innocence y is in me. Oh let the wycked-nes of y vngodly come to an ende: but guyd thou the iust. For y righteous God trieth the very hertes and the reynes. My helpe commeth of God, which preseruech the that are true of herte. * God is a ryghteous iudge, & strong, and pacient, and God is prouoked euery daye. Yf a mā will not turne, he wylt whet his swerde: he hath bet his bowe and made it ready. He hath prepared hym the instrumentes of deeth: he ordeyneth hys arowes agaynst the persecutours. Be-holde * he traunpleth with myschefe, he hath conceaued sorow, and brought forth vngodlynesse. * He hath grauen and dygged vp a pytte,

a pytte, & is fallen hym selfe into the destruccyon that he made (for other.) For his tra-uayll shall come vpon his a wne head: & his wyckednes shall fall vpon hys a wne pate.
I wylt geue thanks vnto the Lorde ac-cordyng to his ryghteousnes, & will praye the name of the Lorde the most hest.

¶ The. viii. psalme.

DOMINE DOMINVS NOSTER.

¶ To hym that excelleth in Sittith,
a psalme of David.

Lorde our gouernoure, howe excellēt is thy name in all the world, thou that hast sett thy glorye aboue the heauens?

* Out of the mouth of very babes and sucklynges hast thou ordeyned strength because of thyne enemyes, that thou myghtest styll the enemye and the auenger. For I wylt cōfyde thy beaues, euen the worcke of thy fyngers: the moone & y starres which thou hast ordeyned. * What is man, that thou art myndfull of hym: and the sonne of man, that thou vlystest hym? Thou ma-dest hym lower then the aungels, to crowne hym with glorye & worchyppe. Thou makest him to haue domynion in the workes of thy handes: and * thou hast put all thynges in subieccion vnder his fete. All shepe and oren, ye and the bestes of the felde. The foules of the ayre, and the fyssh of the see, & whatsoeuer walkech thowow the pathes of the sees. O Lorde our gouernoure, howe excellent is thy name in all the worlde.

¶ The. ix. psalme.

CONFITEBOR TIBI DOMINE.

¶ To hym that excelleth vpon Almut Labben, a psalme of David.

I wylt * geue thanks vnto y, O Lorde wyth my whole herte, I wylt speake of all thy maruelous workes.

I wylt be glad, and reioyce in the, yee my son-ges will I make of thy name, O thou moost hest.

Whyle myne enemyes are dyruen backe, they shall fall, & perpyth at thy presence. For thou hast mayntened my ryght & my cause: thou art sett in the throne that iudgest ryght. Thou hast rebuked y hepythen, & destroyed the vngodly, thou hast put out their name for euer & euer. O thou enemye: destruccions are come to a perpetuall ende:

euen as the cities which thou hast destroyed: their memoriall is perished with the. But the Lorde shall endure for euer, he hath also prepared his seate for iudgemēt: for he shall iudge the world in ryghteousnes, and minister true iudgement vnto the people. The Lorde also wylt be a defence for the oppressed
* eue a refuge in due tyme of trouble. And they y knowe thy name, wylt put their trust in the: for thou (Lorde) hast neuer fayled the, that seke the. O praye the Lorde, * which dwelleth in Syon, shewe the people of hys doinges. For when he maketh inquisicion for bloude, he remembreth them: & * for * getteth not the complaynte of the poore.

Haue mercy vpon me (O Lorde) con-fyde the trouble whych I suffre of them that hate me, thou that lyftest me vp from the gates of death. That I maye shewe all thy prayers wyth in the portes of the daughter of Syon, I wylt reioyce in thy saluacyon.

The heithen are suncken downe in the pytte that they made: in the same nett which they hydd pryuelly, is their a wne foote take.

The Lorde is knowen to execute iudge-ment: the vngodly is trapped in the worcke of his a wne hādes: A consyderacyon Sela.

The wycked shall beturned vnto hell, & all people that forget God: For the poore shall not be all waye forgotten, the patient abyng of the meke shall not perpythe for euer. O Lorde, and let not man haue the upper hande, let the hepythen be iudged in thy syght. Put them in feare (O Lorde) that the hepythen maye knowe them selues to be but men. Sela.

¶ The. x. psalme.

VT QUID DOMINI.

Why stondest y so farre of (O Lorde) I hydest thy face in that neadefull tyme of trouble? The vngodly for his owne lust, doth persecute y poore: let them be taken in the craftye wyllesse that they haue ymagined. For the vngodly hath made boast of hys a wne hertes despre, & speaketh good of y couetous, who God abhorreth. The vngodly is so proude that he careth not for God, nether is God in all his thoughtes. * His wayes are all waye greuous, thy iudgements are farre aboue out of his syght, & therfore despyeth he all his enemyes.

For he hath sayed in his hert: Cush I shall neuer be cast downe, ther shall no harme happen vnto me. * His mouth is full of cursynge, and disceate and fraude: vnder his tōge is vngodlynesse & vayne. * He sytteth lurking in y the wylth corners of y stre-tes, & pryely in his lurking denes doth he murder y innocēt: his eyes are set agaynst y poore. For he lyeth wayting secretly (eue as a lyon, lurketh he in his denne) y he maye raunsh the poore. He doth raunsh the poore, whē he getteth him i to his nett. * He falleth downe & hūbleth him selfe, that the congregacyon of the poore maye fall in to y hāde of his captaynes. He hath sayed in his herte: Cush, God hath forgottē, he hydeth a waye his face, and he wylt neuer se it. Aryle (O Lorde God) and lyfte vp thyne hāde, forget not the poore. Wherefore shulde the wycked blaspheme God, whyle he doth saye in his herte: tush, thou God carest not for it:

Surely thou hast sene it. For thou beholdest vngodlynesse and wronge. That thou mayest take the matter in to thy hāde: the poore committeth hym selfe vnto the, for thou art the helper of the frendlesse. Break thou the power of the vngodly and malycious, take away hys vngodlynesse, and thou shalt fynde none. The Lorde is kynge for euer, and euer, and the hethen are perpyshed out of the lande. Lorde, thou hast heard the desyre of the poore: thou prearest theyr hert and thyn eare hekeneth therto. To helpe the fatherlesse and poore vnto theyr right: that the man of the erthe be no more exalted agaynst them.

The xi. psalme.
IN DOMINO CONFIDO.
To the chaunter, A psalme
of David.

The Lorde put I my trust: howe safe ye then to my soule: that the shuldes be as a byrde vpon your hyll? For lo, the vngodly benche theyr bowe, and make ready theyr arrowes wth in the bowe: that they maye ppyuely shote at them, which are true of hert. For theyr foundacions wilbe cast downe, and what hath the ryghteous done?

The Lorde is in hys holy temple: the Lordes seat is in heauen: hys eyes conspyde: (the poore) & hys eye lyddes cryeth the chyldren of men.

The Lorde aloweth the ryghteous: but the vngodly, and hym that delpteth in wickednes, doth his soule abhorre. Vpon the vngodly he shall rayne snares, fyre, and byrmystone, for me & tēpest: thys shalbe theyr porcyon to dysyncke. For the ryghteous Lorde loueth ryghteousnes: hys countenance wyll beholde the thynge that is iust.

The xii. psalme.
SALVVM ME FAC DOMINE.
To him that excelleth vpon an instrument of egypte strynges a psalme of David.

Help me, Lord, for there is not one godly man left. For the faythfull are mynished from amonge the chyldren of men. They talke of vanitye, every one wth hys neyghboure, they do but flatter wth theyr lyppes & dyssemble in theyr double herte. The Lorde shall rote out all disceatfull lyppes, and the tonge that speaketh proude thynge. Whych haue sayde: wth oure tōge wyll we preuaile: we are theyr pought to speake, who is Lord ouer vs.

Howe for the comfortles troubles sake of the neadpe, & because of the deape syghthing of the poore, I will vnto (sayeth the Lorde) and wyll helpe every one, from hym that swelleth agaynst hym, and wyll let the at rest. The wordes of the Lorde are pure wordes euē as the syluer, whych from earth is tryed and purifyed seuē tymes in the fyre. Thou shalt kepe them (O Lorde) thou shalt preserue hym from thys generacyō for euer. The vngodly walke on every syde: whan they are exalted, the chyldren of men are put to rebuke.

The xiii. psalme.
VSQVEQVO DOMINE.
To the chaunter, a psalme
of David.

How longe wilt thou forget me (O Lorde) for euer: howe longe wilt thou hyde thy face fro me? Howe longe shall I seke counsell in my soule? & be so vexed in myne hert: howe longe shall myne enemye triumphe ouer me? Consydre, and heare me (O Lorde my God) lyghten myne eyes, that I scape not in death. Lest myne enemye saye: I haue preuailed agaynst hym: for yf I be cast downe, theyr trouble me wyll reioyse at it. But my trust is in thy mercy, and my hert is ioyfull in thy saluacyon. I wyll synge of the Lord because he hath dealt so louyngly wth me.

The xiiii. psalme.
DIXIT INSIPIENTS.
To the chaunter a psalme of David.

He * sole hath sayed in hys hert, there is no God. They are corrupt, and become abhomyneable in theyr doynges: there is not one that doth good, (no not one.) The Lorde looked downe from heauen vpon the chyldren of men, to se yf there were any that wolde vnderstāde, and seke after God. But they are all gone out of the wape, they are all together become abhominable: there is none that doeth good, no not one. (Theyr throte is an open sepulchre: wth their tonges they haue disceayd, the poyson of aspes is vnder theyr lyppes. Theyr mouth is full of cursynge and bytternes, theyr sette are layd to shew bloude. Destruction and unhappynesse is in theyr wayes, and the wape of peace haue they not knowen, there is no feare of God before their eyes.)

Haue they no knowledge, that all are soche workers of myschecce, eatynge vpon my people, as it were bread and call not vpon the Lorde? There were they brought in great feare: (euen where no feare was) for God is in the generacyon of the ryghteous. As for you, ye haue made a mocke at the counsell of the poore, because he putteth hys trust in the Lorde. Wherfore the saluacyon were geuen vnto Israel * out of Sion.

Whan the Lorde turneth the captiuite of hys people, then shall Jacob reioyse, and Israel shall be glad.

The xv. psalme.
DOMINE QVIS HABITABIT.

Lorde

Lorde, who shall dwell in thy tabernacle: who shall rest vpon thy holy hyll? * Euen he yf ledeth an vncorrupt lyfe, & doth the thynge which is ryght, and that speaketh the trueth from hys hert.

He that hath vled no disceat in his tōge, ner done euell to hys neyghboure, & hath not sleaundred his neyghbours. He that setteth not by hym selfe: but is lowly in hys awne eyes, & maketh moch of them yf feare the Lorde: he yf sweareth vnto his neyghbour, & disapoynteth hym nott, though it were hys awne hindrance. * He yf hath not geuen hys money vpon vsury, ner taken rewarde agaynst the innocent. Who so doth these thynge, shall neuer fall.

The xvi. psalme.
CONSERVA ME DOMINE.

The badge or armes of David.

Reserue me, O God, for in the haue I put my trust. O my soule thou hast sayd vnto the Lorde: parte my God, my goodes are nothing vnto the. All my delyte is vpon the sayntes yf are in the erth, & vpon soch as excell in vertue. But they yf rine after another God, shall haue greete trouble. Their drinckoffrynges of bloude will not I offre, nether make mencion of their names within my lyppes. * The Lorde hym selfe is the porcyon of myne enheritaunce: and of my cup: thou shalt maynteyne my lot.

The lot is fallē vnto me in a fayre ground, yf I haue a goodly heritage. I wyll thanke the Lorde for geuynge me warnynge: my reynes also chasten me in the nyght season.

I haue set God alwayes before me, for he is on my right hāde, therfore I shall not fall.

Wherfore my hert was glad, & my glory reioysed, my flesch also shall rest in hope.

For why? * thou shalt not leaue my soule in hell, nether shalt thou suffre thy holy one to be corrupciō. Thou shalt therewe me the path of lyfe: in thy presence is the fulnesse of ioye, and at thy ryght hande ther is pleasure for euermore.

The xvii. psalme.
EXAUDI DOMINE IVSTITIAM.

A prayer of David.

Heare the right, O Lorde, consydre my cōplaynte, & heken vnto my prayer, that goeth not out of sayned lyppes.

Let my sentence come forth from thy presence: and let thyn eyes loke vpon the thing that is equall. * Thou hast proued & vityd myne herte in the nyght season: yf haste tryed me and shalt fynde no wyckednesse in me: for I am vnterly purposed, yf my mouth shall not offende. Because of mens workes that are done agaynst the wordes of thy lyppes I haue kepte me from the wayes of the destroyer. Wholde yf vpon my goynge in thy pathes, yf my fote steppes slippe not.

I haue called vpon the, O God, for thou shalt heare me: enclyne thyn eare to me, and heken vnto my wordes. Shewe thy maruelous louynge kyndnesse, thou yf art the sayour of them which put theyr trust in the, from soch as resyst thy ryght hande. Kepe me * as the apple of an eye, hyde me * vnder the shadowe of thy wynges. Fro the vngodly yf trouble me: mine enemies cōpasse me round about, to take awaye my soule. They are enclosed in their awne fatt: & their mouth speaketh proude thynge. Theyr lye waytynge in oure wape on every syde, turnynge their eyes downe to the groude. Lyke as a lyon that is greedy of hys praye, and as it were a Lyons whelp lurching in secrete places. * O Lorde, disapoynte hym, and cast hym downe: deliuer my soule from the vngodly which is as a swerde of thynge.

Fro the men of thy hāde, O Lorde fro the men, I saye, and from the euill worlde, which haue their porcyon in thys lyfe, whose helpes yf fyllest wth thy hyd treasure. They haue chyldren at their desyre: & leaue the reste of theyr substance for theyr babes. But as for me, I wyll beholde thy presence in rightousnes: & when I awake vnto thy lykenes, I shalbe satysfied wth it.

The xviii. psalme.
DILIGAM TE DOMINE.

To the chaunter of David the seruaunt of the Lorde, which spake vnto the Lord the wordes of thys song, (in the daye that the Lorde deliuered hym from the hande of all hys enemyes, and from the hande of Saul) and he sayde:

Will loue yf, O Lorde, my strength. The Lorde is my stony rock, & my defence, my sauour, my God, & my might, in whō I wyll trust: my buckler, yf horne also of my saluacyō, and my refuge. * I will call vpon yf Lord, which is worthy to be prayd, so shall I be safe from myne enemyes. * The sorowes of deeth cōpasse me, & the ouerflowinges of vngodlynesse made me afayed. The paynes of hell came about me, the snares of deeth ouertoke me. In my trouble wyll I call vpon the Lorde: & cōplayne vnto my God. So shall he heare my voyce out of his * (hoyle) temple, & my cōplaynte shall come before him, it shall entre euen into hys cares. * The erth trembled & quaked, the very foundacions also of the hylls shoke & were remoued, because he was wroth. There wēt a smoke out in his presence: & a consumynge fyre out of hys mouth, so yf coales were kyndled at it. He bowed the heauens also, & came downe, and it was darcke vnder his fete. He rode vpon the cherubins, & dyd flye: he came flying vpon the wynges of the wynde. He made darcknes hys secrete place: hys pauphion rounde about aboute hym, with darcke water and thycke cloudes to couer hym. At the bryghtnesse of hys presence hys cloudes remoued, hyle stones and coales of fyre. The Lorde also thondred out of the heauen, & the best gaue hys thondre, hyle stones, and coales of fyre. He sent out his arrowes and scattered the, he cast forth lychtynnges, & destroyed them.

The sprynges of waters were sene, & the foundations of the round worlde were discovered at thy chydunge, O Lorde, at the blastynge of the bryth of thy displeasure. He shall send downe fro the heygth to fetch me, & shall take me out of many waters. He shall deliuer me fro my strongest enemye, & fro the which hate me: for they are to myghty for me. They preynted me in the daye of my trouble: but the Lorde was my upholder.

He brought me forth also into a place of liberty: he brought me forth, euen because he had a fauoure vnto me. The Lorde shall rewarde me after my righteous dealing: according to the cleynes of my handes shall he recouerse me. Because I haue kepte the wayes of the Lorde: and haue not forsaken wyckedlye my God. For I haue an eye vnto all hys lawes: & wyll nott cast out hys commaundementes fro me. I was also vncorrupte before him: and eschued myne awne wickednes. Therefore shall the Lorde rewarde me after my righteous dealing: and according vnto the cleynes of my handes in hys eye syght. With the holy thou shalt be holy, and w a perfecte man thou shalt be perfecte. With the cleane thou shalt be cleane: and with the trowarde thou shalt lerne forwardnes. For thou shalt saue the people that are in aduersite, and shalt bypunge downe the hyl lookes of the proude. Thou also shalt lighte my candel: the Lorde my God shall make my darcknes to be light. For in the I shall discomfyte an host of men: and w the helpe of my God I shall leape ouer the wall.

The waye of God is an vndefyled waye: the worde of the Lorde also is tryed in the fyre: he is the defender of all them that putt their trust in him. For who is God but the Lorde: or who hath any strength except o God. It is God y gyrdeth me w strength of warre, and maketh my waye perfecte. He maketh my fete lyke hertes fete: and setteth me vp on hye. He teacheth myne handes to fyght, & myne armes shall breake euen a bow of sterle. Thou hast geuen me the defence of thy saluacion: thy right hande also shall holde me vp, and thy louynge correction shall make me greate. Thou shalt make rowme ynough vnder me for to go, & my fete shalpe shall not slyde. I wyll folowe vpon myne enemies, & ouertake them: neyther wyll I turne agayne, tyll I haue destroyed them. I will smyte the, & they shall not be able to stande: but fall vnder my fete. Thou hast gyrded me with strength vnto the battayll, thou shalt throwe downe myne enemies vnder me. Thou hast made myne enemies also to turne theyr backs vpon me, & I shall destroye the that hate me.

* They shall crye: but there shall be none to helpe them: yee, euen vnto the Lorde, shall they crye: but he shall nott heare them. I wyll beate them as small as the dust before the wynde: I will cast them out, as the claye in the stretes. Thou shalt deliuer me fro the strynges of the people: and thou shalt make me the head of the hepten. A people whom I haue not knowe shall serue me.

A stone as they heare of me, they shall obeye me: but the straunge chyldren shall dissemble with me. The straunge chyldren shall sayle, and be afrayed out of theyr prisons.

The Lorde lyueth: & blessed be my strong helpe, and prayled be the God of my saluacyon. Euen the God which seeth that I be auenged, and subdueth the people vnto me. It is he that deliuereth me from my enemies, and setteth me vp aboue myne aduersaries: thou shalt rydd me from the wycked man. For this cause I will geue thanks vnto the, O Lorde, amonge the Gentyles, and syng prayles vnto thy name. COELI ENARRANT

To the chaunter, a psalme of Dauid.

He heauens declare the glory of God, and the firmament sheweth his handy worke. One daye telleth another: & one nyght certifieth another. There is nether speech ner language, but their voices are heard among the. Their sounde is gone out into all landes: & their wordes into the endes of the worlde. In them hath he set a tabernacle for the sunne, which cometh forth as a bydgrome out of hys chambr, and reioysseth as a giant to rane his course. It goeth forth from the vttmost parte of the heauen, and runneth about vnto the ende of it agayne, & there is nothynge hyd from the heate therof.

The lawe of the Lorde is an vndefyled lawe conuerting the soule. The testimony of the Lorde is sure, and geueth wisdom vnto the symple. The statutes of the Lorde are right & reioyse the hert, the commaundement of the Lorde is pure, and geueth light vnto the eyes. The feare of the Lorde is cleane, and endureth for euer: the iudgementes of the Lorde are true and ryghteous all together.

* Moze to be despyzed are they then golde, & they pee then moche fyne golde: sweter also then hony, and the hony combe. Mozeouer, by the is thy seruaut taught, & in keepynge of the there is greate rewarde. Who can tell, howe oft he offendeth. Oh clense thou me fro secreta fautes. Kepe thy seruaut also from presumptuous synnes, lest they get the dominion ouer me: so shall I be vndefyled, & innocent from the greate offence. Let the wordes of my mouth, and the meditation of my herte be acceptable in thy syght O Lorde, my strength and my redeemer.

The. xx. psalme.

EXAUDIAT TE DOMINVS.

To the chaunter, a psalme of Dauid.

The Lorde heare the in the daye of trouble, the name of the God of Jacob defende the. Sende the helpe from the Sanctuary, and strength the out of Sion.

Remembre all thy offerynge, and accepte thy bzent sacrifice. Sela. Graunte the thy hertes desire, & fulfyll all thy mynde.

We wyll reioyse in thy saluacyon, and triumphe in the name of the Lorde oure God the Lorde perfourme all thy petitions.

Nowe knowe I, that the Lorde helpeth hys anoynted, and wyll heare hym from hys holy heau: euen with the whollome strength of hys ryght hande. Some put theyr trust in charettes, and some in horses: but we wyll remembre the name of the Lorde oure God.

DOMINE IN VIRTUTE TVA.

To the chaunter, a psalme of Dauid.

The kyng shall reioyce in thy strength, O Lorde, excedynge glad shall he be of thy saluacion. Thou hast geuen hym his hertes desire, and hast not denyed him the request of hys lypes. Sela.

For thou shalt preynt him with blessinges of goodnes, and shalt set a crowne of pure golde vpon his head. He asked lyfe of the, and thou gauest him a longe lyfe, eue for euer and euer. Hys honoure is greate in thy saluacion: glory and greate worthynesse shalt thou laye vpon hym. For thou shalt geue hym euerylastynge felcitye, & make hym glad with the ioye of thy countenance.

And why: because the kyng putteth hys trust in the Lorde, and in the mercy of the most best he shall not myscarpe. All thynne enemies shall fele thy hand: thy ryght had shall fynde out them that hate the. Thou shalt make them lyke a fyre ouen in tyme of thy wrath: the Lorde shall destroye them in hys displeasure, and the fyre shall consume them.

Their frute shalt thou roote out of the earth, & they shall be as chylde of men. For they intended myscheke agaynst the, and ymagined such a deuys, as they are not able to perfourme. Therefore shalt thou put them to flyght, and the strynges of thy bowe shalt thou make ready agaynst the fauces of them. Se thou exalted, Lorde, in thynne awne strength: so wyll we syng and prayse thy power.

DEVS DEVS MEVS.

To the Chaunter vpon the hynde of the dawninge a psalme of Dauid.

God, my God: take vpo me why hast thou forsake me: and art so farre from my health, and fro the wordes of my complaynte. O my God, I crye in the daye tyme, but thou hearest not: and in the nyght season also I take no rest. And thou continuest holy, O thou worshyppe of Israel. Oure fathers hoped in the: they trusted in the, and thou dydest deliuer them.

They called vpon the, and were helped: they put theyr trust in the, and were not confounded. But as for me, I am a worme & nomā: a very scoone of men & the outcast of the people. All they se me, laugh me to scoone: they shote out theyr lippes, & shake theyr heade sayynge. He trusted in God that he wolde deliuer him: let him deliuer him, yf he wyll haue him. But art he yf toke me out of my mothers wombe: thou wast my hope, when I hanged yet vpo my mothers brestes.

I haue bene left vnto y euer sence I was bozne: thou art my God, eue from my mothers wombe. O go not fro me, for trouble is harde at hande, and ther is none to helpe me. Create oxen are come aboute me, fatt bulles of Balan close me in on euery syde.

They gape vpon me with theyr mouthes as it were a rampynge and roarynge lyon. I am powred out lyke water, & all my bones are out of ioynt: my hert also in the myddest of my bodye is euen lyke meltynge ware. My strength is dreyed vpo lyke a potsherde, & my tonge cleueth to my gumes: and thou shalt bypunge me into the dust of death.

For many dogges are come aboute me, & the colicell of the wycked laye seage agaynst me. They pearced my handes and my fete, I maye tell all my bones, they stonde starynge and lokynge vpon me.

They parte my garments amonge the, and cast lottes vpon my vesture. But be not y farre fro me, O Lorde: thou art my succoure, haste the to helpe me. Deliuere my soule from the swearde, my dearynge fro the power of the dogge. Haue me from the lyons mouth: thou hast hearde me also from amonge the hornes of the vnicornes. DOMINVS ILLUMINATIO.

Of Dauid.

uacyon: whom then shall I feare: the Lorde is the strength of my lyfe: of whom then shall I be afrayed? When the wicked (euen myne enemyes and my foes) came vpon me, to eate vp my fleshe, they shdbled & fell. Though an host of men were layed agaynst me, yet shall not my hert be afrayed: and though there rose vp warre a-gaynst me, yet wyl I put my trust in this.

* One thynge haue I despised of the Lorde, which I wyl requyre: euen that I maye dwell in the house of the Lorde all the dayes of my lyfe: to beholde the fayre bewtie of the Lorde, and to vset his temple. For in the tyme of trouble he shall hyde me in his tabernacle, pee in the secretes place of his dwellynge shall he hyde me, and set me vpon a rocke of stone. And now shall he lyft vp my head aboue myne enemyes rounde aboute me. Therfore wyl I offre in hys dwellyng, an oblacyon with great glad-nesse: I wyl synge and speake prayes vnto the Lorde. Herken vnto my voyce, O Lorde, when I crye vnto the: haue mercy vpon me, and heare me. My hert hath talked of the: Seke ye my face: thy face Lorde wyl I seke. O hyde not thou thy face fro me, ner cast thy seruant awaye in displeasure. Thou hast bene my succoure, leaue me not, nether forsake me, O God of my sal-uacyon. When my father and my mother forsake me, O Lorde take me vp. Teache me thy waye O Lorde, & leade me the ryght waye, because of myne enemyes: Delyuer me not ouer into the will of myne aduersa-ryes, for there are false wytnesses ryse vp agaynst me, and soch as speake wronge.

I shulde vterlye haue saynted: but that I beleue verely to se the goodnesse of the Lorde in the lande of the lyvinge. O tary thou to their dedes, and accordynge to p wyked-nesse of their awne inuencions. Recompense them after the worke of their handes: paye them that they haue deserued. For they regarde not in their mynde the workes of the Lorde, ner the operacion of his handes: therfore shall he breake them downe, & not buylde them vp. Praised be the Lorde, for he hath hearde p voyce of myne humble petitions. * The Lorde is my strength & my shylde: my hert hath trusted in him, & I am helped: therfore my hert daunteth for ioye, and in my songe wyl I prayse him. The Lorde is their strength: and he is p wholsome defence of his anoynted. O haue thy people, & geue thy blessinge vnto thyne enchatance: fede them, & sett them vp for euer.

AFFERTE DOMINO.

A psalme of Dauid. (at the pefourmyng of the Tabernacle.)

Bryng vnto the Lorde (O ye myghtie) I vnto the Lorde worshyppe & strengthe.
Geue the Lorde the honoure due vnto his name: worshyppe the Lorde with holy wor-shyppe. * It is the Lorde that commaundeth the waters: It is the glorious God that maketh the thonder: * it is the Lorde that ruleth the see. The voyce of the Lorde is myghtie in operacion, the voyce of the Lorde is a glorious voyce. The voyce of the Lorde breaketh the Cedre trees: yee, the Lorde breaketh the Ceders of Libanus.
He made them also so shyppe lyke a Calfe: Libanus also, and Syron lyke a posse vnycone. The voyce of the Lorde deuoureth the flames of fyre: the voyce of the

Of the Lorde, shaketh the wilderness, & the Lorde shaketh the wilderness of Cadiz. The voyce of the Lorde maketh the hynde to bring forth younge & discovereth the thicke bushes: in his temple doth euery man speake of his honoure. The Lorde spitteth aboue the water floude, & the Lorde remaineth a kynge for euer. The Lorde shall geue strenght vnto his people, the Lorde shall geue his people the blessing of peace.

EXALTABO TE DOMINE.

A Psalme and songe of the dedicacion of the house of Dauid.

I will magnifye þe, O Lorde, for thou hast set me vp, & not made my foes to triumphe ouer me. O Lorde my God, I cryed vnto the, and thou hast healed me. Thou Lorde hast brought my soule out of hell: thou hast kepte my lyfe, fro them that go downe to the pytte. Synge prayse vnto the Lorde (O ye saintes of his) and geue thanks vnto him for a remembraunce of his holynesse. * For hys wrath endureth but the twinklinge of an eye, and in hys pleasure is lyfe: heynesse maye endure for a nyght, but hope commeth in the mornynge. And in my prosperite, I sayde: I shall neuer be remoued: thou Lorde of thy goodnesse hadest made my hill so stronge. Thou dydest turne thy face (fro me) and I was troubled. Then cryed I vnto the, O Lorde, & gat me to my Lorde ryght humbly. What profyt is there in my bloude, whan I go downe to the pytte? Shall the dust geue thanks vnto the? O shall it declare thy trueth? Heare, O Lorde, and haue mercy vpon me: Lorde be thou my helper. Thou hast turned my heynesse in to hope: thou hast put of my sacke cloth, and gyrded me with gladnesse. Therefore shall (euery good man) synge of thy prayse without ceasinge: O my God, I will geue thanks vnto the for euer.

The. xxxi. Psalme.

IN TE DOMINE SPERAVI.

O the chaunter a Psalme of Dauid.

I the, O Lord, haue I put my trust: let me neuer be put to confusyon: deliuer me in thy ryghteousnesse. Bowe downe thine eare to me, make haste to deliuer me. And be thou my stronge rocke, and a house of defence, that thou mayest saue me. For þart my stronge rocke, & my castell: Be thou also my guyde, & leade me for thy names sake. Draw me out of the net that they haue layed pryncely for me, for thou art my strength. * Into thy hand I commend my sperte: for thou hast redeemed me, O Lorde thou God of truth. I haue hated them that holpe of superstitious vanytes, & my trust hath bene in þe.

Lorde. I will be glad and reioyse in thy mercy: for thou hast conspyred my trouble, & hast knowen my soule in aduersytes.

Thou hast not put me vp into the hande of the enemye, but hast set my fete in a large rowme. Haue mercy vpon me, O Lorde, for I am in trouble, & myne eye is consumed for very heynesse, yee my soule & my body.

It is my lyfe is waken olde with heynesse, & my yeares with mounynge. My strenght fayleth me because of myne iniquite, and my bones are corrupte. I became a reprove amonge all myne enemyes, but specially amonge my neryghbours, and they of myne acquaintance were asayed of me: & they that dyd se me without, conueyed them selues from me. I am cleane forgotten, as a deed man oute of mynde: I am be come lyke a broken vessel.

For I haue herde þe blasphemie of the multitude: and feare is on euery syde whyle they conspire together agaynst me, & take ther counsell to take awaye my lyfe. But my hope hath bene in the, O Lorde, I haue sayde: thou art my God. My tyme is in thy hande: deliuer me fro the hande of myne enemyes, and fro them that persecute me. Shewe thy seruant the light of thy countenance, and saue me for thy mercyes sake. Let me not be confounded, O Lorde, for I haue called vpon the: let the vngodly be put to confusion, and be put to sylce in the grane. Let the lyenge lypes be put to sylce, which cruelly, disoninfully, & despitely, speake agaynst the ryghteous.

O howe plentyfull is thy goodnesse, which thou hast layed vp, for them þe feare the: and that thou hast prepared for them, þe put their trust in the, euen before the sonnes of men. Thou shalt hyde them pryncely by thine awne presence fro þe prouokinges of all men: þe shalt kepe them secretly in thy tabernacle, fro the styfe of tonges. Thakkes be to the Lorde, for he hath shewed me maruelous greates kyndnesse in a stronge citie. And when I made hast, I sayde: I am cast out of thy syght. Neuertheles, thou herdest the voyce of my prayer, when I cryed vnto the. O loue the Lorde, all ye his saintes, for þe Lorde preferueth the that are faythfull, and plenteously rewardeth be the proude doer.

* Be stronge & he shall stablyshe poure hart, all ye that put your trust in the Lorde.

The. xxxii. Psalme.

BEATI QVORVM.

An instructyon of Dauid.

Blessed is he, whose vnyghteousnesse is forgiven, and whose synne is couered. * Blessed is the man, vnto whose the Lorde imputeth no synne, and in whose sperte there is no guyle. For whyle I helde my tounge, my bones consumed a waye: thou rowe my daye & complaynynge. For thy Lande Hande is heyn vpon me daye and nyght, and my mofsture is lyke the drouth in Sommer. Sela. I will knowlege my synne vnto the, and myne vnyghteousnesse haue I not hyd. I sayde: * I will confesse my synnes vnto the Lorde, & so thou forgavest the wickednesse of my synne. Sela. For this shall euery one that is godly, make his prayer vnto the, in a tyme when thou mayest be founde, but in the great water floudes they shall not come nye hym. Thou art a place to hyde me in, thou shalt preserue me from trouble: thou shalt compasse me about with longes of deliuerance. Sela. I will enforme the, & teache the in the waye wherein thou shalt go: and I will guyde the with myne eye. Be not ye lyke horse and mule, which haue no vnderstandynge. Whole mouthes must be holden with byt & byddle, lest they fall vpon the. Grete plagyes remaine for the vngodly, but who so putteth hys trust in the Lorde, mercy embraceth him on euery syde. Be glad, O ye ryghteous and reioyse in the Lorde: and be ioyfull all ye that are true of herte.

EXULTATE IVSTI IN DOMINO.

Reioyse * in þe Lorde, O ye ryghteous, for it becommeth well the iust to be thankfull. * Prayse the Lord with harpe: synge psalmes vnto hym with the lute and instrument of ten stringes. Synge vnto the Lorde a newe songe, synge prayles lustely (vnto hym) with a good corage. For the worde of the Lorde is true, and all hys wordes are faythfull. He loueth ryghteousnesse and ingement: the earth is full of the goodnesse of the Lorde. * By the worde of the Lorde were the heauens made, and all the hostes of them by the bryth of his mouth. He gathereth the waters of the see together as it were vpon a heape, & layeth vp the depe as in a tresure house. Let all the earth feare the Lorde: stande in awe of hym, all ye that dwell in the worlde. * For he spake, and it was done: he commaunded, and it stode fast. The Lorde byngeth the * counsell of the heithen to naught, and maketh the deuyces of the people, to be of none effecte. * (and casteth out the counceils of prynces.)

The counsell of the Lorde shall endure for euer, and the thoughtes of hys herte from generacion to generacion. Blessed are the people whose God is the Lorde Ichonah, & blessed are the folke that haue chosen hym to be theyr inheritaunce. The Lorde looked downe from heauen, and behelde all the chyldren of men: from the habitacion of his dwellynge, he conspyred all them that dwell in the erth. He hath yoneth all the hertes of them, and vnderstandeth all theyr wordes. There is no kynge that can be saued by the myltitude of an host, nether is any myghtie man deliuered by moche strenght.

A horse is counted but a vayne thyng to saue a man, nether shall he deliuer any man by hys greates strenght. Behold, the eye of the Lorde is vpon them that feare hym, and vpon them that put theyr trust in his mercy.

To deliuer theyr soules from death, ad to fede them in the tyme of dearth. Dure soule hath paciently tarped for the Lorde for he is oure helpe and oure shyld.

For oure herte shall reioyse in hym, because we haue hoped in hys holy name. Let thy mercyfull kyndnesse, O Lorde be vpon vs, lyke as we haue put oure trust in the.

BENEDICAM DOMINVM.

O David, when he chaunged his speche before Abimelech. which droue hym awaye and he departed.

I will allwaye geue thanks vnto the Lorde, hys prayse shall euer be in my mouth. My soule shall make her boast in the Lord the humble shall heare thereof, and be glad. O prayse the Lorde with me, and let vs magnifye hys name together.

* I sought þe Lorde & he hearde me, yee he deliuered me out of all my feare. They had an eye vnto him, and were lyghtened, & their faces were not ashamed. Lo, the poore cryeth, & the Lorde heareth hym, yee and saueh hym out of all hys troubles. * The Angell of the Lorde tarpethe rounde about them that feare hym, and deliuereth them.

O taste and se, howe gracious the Lord is, * blessed is the man that trusteth in hym.

* Feare þe Lorde, ye that be hys sayntes for they that feare hym, lacke nothyng.

The Lyons do lacke, & suffre hunger: but they which seke the Lorde: shall want no manner of thyng that is good. Come ye chyldren & herke vnto me, I will teach you þe feare of the Lorde. * What man is he þe lysteth to lyue, & wold sayne se good dayes? kepe thy tounge from euell, & thy lypes, þe they speake no gyle. Eschue euell, & do good. seke peace and ensue it. The eyes of þe Lorde are ouer the ryghteous, & his eares are open vnto their prayers. The countenance of the Lorde is agaynst them þe do euell, to rote out þe remembrance of the fro of the earth. The ryghteous crye, & the Lorde heareth the, & deliuereth them out of all theyr troubles. The Lorde is nye vnto the þe are of a cōtryte hert, & will saue soche as be of an humble sperte.

* Grete are þe troubles of the ryghteous but the Lorde deliuereth hym out of all.

He kepeth all hys bones, so that not one of them is broken. But my fortune shall slaye the vngodly, and they that hate the ryghteous, shall be desolate. The Lorde deliuereth deliuereth the soules of hys seruantes: and all they that put theyr trust in hym shall not be destitute.

The xxxv. Psalme:

IVDICA DOMINE NOCENTES.

Of Dauid.

Rede thou my cause, O Lord, with them that stryue with me: and syght thou agaynst the that syght agaynst me. Laye hande vpon the shilde & buckler, and stande vpon to helpe me. Brynge forth the speare, & stoppe the waye agaynst them & persecute me: laye vnto my soule: I am thy saluacyon. Let them be confounded and put to shame, that seke after my soule: let the be turned backe, and brought to confusyon, that ymagyne myschefe for me.

* 191. lxxxvi. c.

* Let the be as the dust before y wynde, and the angell of the Lorde scatterynge the.

Let theyr waye be darcke and slippery, and let the angell of the Lorde persecute the.

For they haue pryncely layed theyr net to destrope me without a cause, yee euen without a cause haue they made a pytte for my soule.

Let a soden destruction come vpon him vnawares: & hys net that he hath layed pryncely, catch hym selfe, that he maye fall into hys awne myschefe. And my soule be ioyfull in the Lorde: it shall reioyce in his saluacyon.

All my bones shall saye: Lorde, who is lyke vnto the? which deliuerest the poore from hym that is to stronge for hym, yee the poore and hym that is in misery, from hym that spyleth hym. False witness dyd ryse vp: they layed to my charge, theynges that I knowe not. They rewarded me euell for good, to the greate dyscomforte of my soule. Neuerthelesse, when they were sycke, I put on a sacke clothe: and humbled my soule with fastynge, and my prayer shall turne into myne awne bolome.

I behaued my selfe as though it had bene my frende or my brother, I wente heuely, as one that mourneth for hys mother.

But in myne aduersyte they reioyled, and gathered them together: yee the very abiectes came together agaynst me: vnawares, makynge mooves at me, and ceased not.

With the flatterers were busy mockers, which gnashed vpon me with theyr teeth.

Lorde, howe longe wilt thou loke vpon thys? O deliuer my soule from the calamities which they byynge on me, and my dearynge from the lyons.

So will I geue the thanks in the greate congregacyon I will prayse the amonge moche people.

O let not them that are myne enemyes triumphe ouer me vngodlye nether: let the wyneke with theyr eyes, & hate me without a cause. And why? theyr comynge is not for peace, but theyr ymagyne disceatfull wordes agaynst them that are quyet in the lande. They gaped vpon me with theyr mouthes, and sayde: eye on the, eye on the: we dyd se it with oure eyes.

This thou hast sene, O Lord: holde not thy tonge then, go not farre frome, O Lord. A wake and stande vp to iudge my quarrell auenge thou my cause, my God, and my Lorde. Judge me, O Lord my God, accordynge to thy ryghteousnesse, and let them not triumphe ouer me.

Let them not saye in their hertes: there, there, so wolde we haue it: nether lett them saye: we haue deuoured hym. Let them be put to confusyon and shame together that reioyce at my trouble: let them be clothed with rebuke and dishonoure that boast them selues agaynst me. Let them be glad and reioyce, that fauoure my ryghteous dealinge: yee let the saye allwaye blessed be the Lorde, which hath pleasure in the prosperite of hys seruant.

And as for my tonge, it shall talke of thy ryghteousnes and of thy prayse, all the daye longe.

The xxxvi. Psalme.

DIXIT INIVSTVS.

To the Chaunter, of Dauid the seruant of the Lorde.

My hert seeth me the wyckednesse of the vngodly, that * there is no feare of God before hys eyes. For he flattereth hym selfe in hys owne syght, tyll hys abhominable synne be founde out. The wordes of hys mouth are vnyghteous, and full of disceate: he hath left of to behaue hym selfe wysely and to do good. He ymagyneth myschefe vpon hys bedd, and hath set hym selfe in no good waye, nether doth he abhoze any thyng that is euell. Thy mercy, O Lord reacheth vnto the heauen, and thy faythfulnesse vnto the cloudes.

Thy ryghteousnesse standeth lyke the stronge mountaynes: thy iudgements are lyke the greate depe. Thou Lorde shalt saue both man and beast. Howe excellent is thy mercy, O God: and the chyldren of me shall put theyr trust vnder the shadowe of thy wynges. They shall be satisfied with the plenteousnesse of thy house, and thou shalt geue them dryncke of thy pleasures, as out of the ryuer. For with the is the well of lyfe, and in thy lyght, shall we se lyght.

O contynue forth thy louynge kyndnesse vnto them that knowe the, and thy ryghteousnesse vnto them that are true of hert.

O let not the rote of pryde come agaynst me: and let not the hande of the vngodly cast me downe. For there are they fallen downe, and shall not be able to stande.

The xxxvii. Psalme.

NOLI TEMVLARI.

A Psalme of Dauid.

Ret not thy selfe because of the vngodly: nether be y enuyous agaynst y euell doers. For they shall soone be cut downe lyke y grasse, & be wythered euen as y grene herbe. Put y thy trust in the Lorde, & he doynge good: dwell in the lande, and verely thou shalt be fedd. Delite thou in the Lorde, & he shall geue the thy hertes desire. Commytte thy waye vnto y Lorde, & put thy trust in hym, & he shall byynge it to passe. He shall make thy rightuousnesse as cleare as y light, & thy iust dealing as y noone daye. Holde the styll in y Lorde, & abyde paciently vpon hym: but geue not thy selfe at hym, whose waye doth prospeere agens y man y doth after euell counceils. Leane of fro wrath, & let go displeasure, frett not thy self, els shalt thou be moued to do euell. Wycked doers shall be roted out: & they y patiently abyde y Lorde, those shall inheret y lande.

Yet a lytle whyle, & the vngodly shall be clene gone: thou shalt loke after hys place, & he shall be awaye. But the meke spreted shall possesse the earth, & shall be refreshed in the multitude of peace. The vngodly seeketh counsell agaynst y iust, & gnasheth vpo hym with his tethe. The Lord shall laughe hym to scorne, for he hath sene, y his daye is comynge. The vngodly haue drawn out the swerde, and haue bended their bowe, to cast downe y poore and nedye, and to slaye soch as be of a ryght conuerfaction. Their swerde shall go thorow their awne herte, & their bowe shall be broken.

A small thinge that the ryghtuous hath, is better then greate ryches of y vngodly. For the armes of the vngodly shall be broken, and y Lorde vpholdeth the ryghtuous. The Lord knoweth y dayes of the godly, & their inheritaunce shall endure for euer. They shall not be confounded in y perelous tyme, and in the dayes of derth they shall haue ynough. As for the vngodly, they shall perishe: & the enemyes of the Lorde shall consume, as the fette of lambes: yee, euen as y smoke shall they consume awaye. The vngodly borroweth and payeth not agayne, but y rightuous is mercifull & lyberall. Soch as be blessed of God, shall possesse the lande, & they that be cursed of hym, shall be roted out.

The Lord ordreth a good mans goynge, & maketh his waye acceptable to him self. Though he fall, he shall not be cast awaye, for y Lord vpholdeth him with his hande. I haue bene yonge, and nowe am olde: & yet sawe I neuer y rightuous forsaken, nor his seide beggynge theyr bread.

* 191. lxxxviii. c.

* The ryghtuous is euer mercifull, and lendeth, and his seide is blessed. He from euell, and do the thyng that is good, and dwell for euer. For the Lorde loueth the thyng that is ryght, he forsaketh not hys y be godly, but they are preserued for euer: more: * (The vnyghteous shall be punished.) as for the seide of the vngodly, it shall be roted out.

The ryghtuous shall inherett the lande, and dwell therein for euer. * The mouth of the ryghtuous is exercised in wysdome and his tonge wilbe talkynge of iudgement.

The lawe of his God is in his hert, and his goynge shall not slide. The vngodly seeth the ryghtuous, & seeketh occasyon to slaye hym. The Lorde wyll not leaue hym in hys hande, ner cōdempne him when he is iudged. Hope thou in the Lord, and kepe his waye, & he shall promote the, that thou shalt possesse the lande: when the vngodly shall perishe, thou shalt se it. I my selfe haue sene y vngodly in great power, & flourishyng lyke a grene baye tree: & he vanished awaye, & lo, he was gone: I sought hi, but * (hys place,) coude no where be found.

Kepe innocency, and take hede vnto the thyng that is ryght, for that shall byynge a man peace at the last. As for the trasgressours, they shall perishe together, and the ende of the vngodly is, they shall be roted out at the last. But the saluacyon of the ryghtuous cometh of the Lorde, which is also their strength in the tyme of trouble.

And the Lorde shall stande by them, and saue them: he shall deliuer them from the vngodly, and shall saue them, because they put theyr trust in hym.

The xxxviii. Psalme.

DOMINE NE IN FVRORE.

A Psalme of Dauid for remembraunce.

Not me not * to rebuke (O Lord) in thy anger: nether chasten me in thy heuyn displeasure. For thyne arrowes styck fast in me, and thy hande presseth me sore.

There is no health in my flesch, because of thy displeasure: nether is there anye rest in my bones, by reason of my synne. For my wyckednesse are gone ouer my heade, and are lyke a sore burthen, to heuy for me to beare. My woundes syncke and are corrupt, thorow my folyshnesse. I am brought in to so greate trouble & misery, that I go mournynge all the daye longe.

For my loynes are fylled with a sore disease, & there is no whole parte in my body. I am feble & sore syncten, I haue roared for the very dysquyetnes of my hert.

Lorde, y knowest all my desire, and my gromynge is not hyd fro y. My hert pateth, my strength hath fayled me, & y lyght of myne eyes is gone fro me. * My louers & my neyghbours dyd stude lokynge vpon my my trouble, & my kynsmen stode a farre of. They also sought after my life, layed snares for me: & they that went aboute to do me euell, talked of wickednesse, & ymagined disceate all y daye longe. As for me, I was lyke a deafe man & herde not: & as one y is dōme, which doth not ope his mouth.

I became eue as a man that heareth not: and in whole mouth are no reproches. For in the, O Lorde, haue I put my trust, thou shalt answer for me, O Lorde my God. I haue required, & they * (euen my enemies) shuld not triumphe ouer me: for whā my fete slipp- te, they reioysed greatly against me. And I truly am set in the plage, & my heuynesse is euer in my syght. For I wyll confesse my wickednesse, and be sorow for my synne.

But myne enemies lye, & are myghtie: & they that hate me wrongfully, are many in nōbre. They also y rewarde euell for good are agaynst me, because I folowe the thyng that good is. For sake me not (O Lorde my God.) Be not y farre fro me. Haste the to helpe me, O Lorde * (God) my saluacion.

The. xxxix. Psalm.

DIXI, CVSTODIAM VIAS.

To the chaunter Jeduthun, a Psalm of David.

I sayde: I will take hede to my wayes, & I offend not in my tonge. I will kepe my mouth (as it were w a brile) while y vngodly is in my sight. I helde my tōge, & spake nothig, I kepte my lippes, & eue fro good wordes, but it was payne & grete to me. My hert was hote within me, & while I was thus musyng, the fyre kyndled: and (at the last) I spake wyth my tonge: * Lorde, let me knowe myne ende, and the nōbre of my dayes: that I maye be certyfyed howe lōge I haue to lyue. * Beholde, thou hast made my dayes as it were a spāne lōge, and myne age is euen as no- thing in respecte of the: & verely euery man lyuig is all together vanite. Selah. For man walketh in a vayne shadowe, and disquieteth him self in vayne: he heapeth vp riches, & cannot tell who shall gather the.

And now Lorde, what is my hope? trulye my hope is euen in the. Delyuer me from all myne offences, & make me not a rebuke vnto the foolish. I became domme, & opened not my mouth, for it was thy doyng. Take thy plage awaye fro me: I am eue consumed by the meanes of thy heuyn hand. When y wyth rebukes dost chasten man for sinne, y makest his bewte to consume awaye, like as it were a mothe frettinge a garment. Euery man therfore is but vanite. Selah. Heare my prayer, O Lorde, & w thyne eares cōsydre my callinge: holde straunger w y, & a sojournour, as all my fa- thers were. Oh spare me a lytle, that I maye recouer my strength, before I goo hē- ce, and be nomore sene.

EXPECTANS EXPECTAVI.

To the chaunter, a Psalm of David.

I wayted patiently for the Lorde, & he enclyned vnto me: and hearde my calling. He brought me al- so out of the horrible pitte, out of the myer and clape, and sett my fete vpon the rocke, and ordred my goynges. And he hath put a new lōge in my mouth, euen a thankesgeuyng vnto oure God. Many shall se it, and feare, and shall put their trust in the Lorde. * Blessed is the man, y hath sette hys hope in the Lorde, and turned not vnto y proude, and to soch as go aboute with lyes. O Lorde my God, greate are thy wonderous workes, which thou hast done: like as be also thy thoughtes which are to vs ward: and yet there is no man that cōsydred them vnto the. If I wolde declare them, and speake of them, they shulde be moo then I am able to ex- presse. * Sacrifice and meat offeringe thou woldest not haue, but myne cares hast thou opened: burnt offeringes and sacrifice for synne hast y not required.

Then sayd I: Lo, I come. In y volu- me of y boke it is writen of me, y I shulde fulfyll thy will, O my God: I am content to do it: yee, thy lawe is wythin my hert. I haue declared thy ryghtuousnesse in y great cōgregation: Lo, I will not refrayne my lippes, O Lorde, & y y knowest. I haue not hyd thy ryghtuousnes within my hert: my talkyng hath bene of thy truth and of thy saluacion. I haue not kept backe thy louig mercy, & truth fro y greate cōgrega- tion. Withdraue not y thy mercy fro me O Lorde, let thy louig kyndnesse and thy truth alwaye preferue me. For innume- rable troubles are come aboute me: my synnes haue taken soche holde vpon me, y I am not able to loke vp: yee, they are mo in nōbre then y heeres of my head, and my hert hath fayled me. O Lorde, let it be thy pleasure to deliuer me, make haste (O Lorde) to helpe me. Let the be ashamed & cōfounded together, y seke after my soule to destrope it: let the be dypuē backward & be put to rebuke, y with me euell. Let the be desolate & rewarded w shame, y saye vnto me: yee vps y, yee vps y. Let all tho- se that seke y, be ioyfull and glad in the: & let soch as loue thy saluacion, saye allwaye the Lorde be prayled. As for me, I am poore & neadye, but y Lorde careth for me. Thou art my helper and redemer: make

BEATVS QVI INTELLIGIT.

Blessed is he y cōsydred y poore (and neadye) y Lorde shall delyuer hym in the tyme of trouble. The Lorde preferue hym, & kepe him aliue: y he maye be blessed vpon earth, & delyuer not thou hym in to the wyll of hys enemies. The Lorde comforte hym, when he lyeth syck vpon hys bedd: make thou all his bedd in his sicknesse. I sayde: Lorde be mercyfull vnto me, heale my soule, for I haue synned agaynst the.

Myne enemies speake euell of me: when shall he dye, & hys name perith? And yf he come to se me, he speakech vanite, & his hart conceaucth falshode within him selfe: & whā he cometh forth, he telleth it. All myne enemies whisper together agaynst me: euen agaynst me do they ymagin this euell. Let the sentence of gyltynesse procede agaynst him: & now that he lyeth, let him ryle vp no- more. Yee, euen mine awne famillier frend whō I trusted * (whych dyd also eate of my bred) hath * layed greate wayte for me.

But be thou mercyfull vnto me (O Lorde) rayse y me vp agayne, and I shall rewarde them. Yp this I know thou fauourest me, that my enemye doth not triumphe agaynst me. And whā I am in my health, y vpholdest me, and shalt set me before thy face for euer. Blessed be the Lorde God of Israel, worlde wythout ende, Amen, and Amen.

QVEMADMODVM.

To the chaunter, a monicyon of the sonnes of Corah.

Ike as y hert delyreth y water broo- kes, so longeth my soule after the (O God.) My soule is a thurst for God, yee, euen for the lyuyng God: whē shall I come, to appeare before y presence of God? * My teares haue bene my meate daye & night, while they daylie saye vnto me: whe- re is now thy God? Now when I thinke there vps * I powze out my hert by my self: for I went with y multitude, & brought the forth vnto the house of God, in the voyce of prayse and thankesgeuyng, among soch as kepe holy daye. * Why art thou so full of heuynesse (O my soule) and why art thou so vngyete within me? Put thy trust in God, for I wyll yet geue hym thākes, for the help of hys countenance. My God, my soule is vexed wythin me: therfore will I remem- bre the cōcernyng the * land of Iordane, and the lytle hyll of Hermonim. One depe cal- leth another because of the noyle of thy wa- ter pipes: all thy wanes & stormes are gone ouer me. The Lorde hath graunted his louig kyndnesse on y daye tyme, & in the night season dyd I syng of him, & made my prayer vnto the God of my lyfe. I wyll saye vnto y God of my strength why hast y forgotten me: why go I thus heuely, while the enemye op- presseth me? My bones are smytten asunder, while mine enemyes * (that trouble me) cast me in y tethe. Namely, while they saye day- lie vnto me: where is now thy God? Why art y so vexed (O my soule) and why art y so disquieted wythin me? Put thy trust in God, for I wyll yet thanke hym whych is y helpe of my countenance, and my God.

The. xlii. Psalm.

IVDICA ME DEVS, ET.

Eue sentēce w me (O God) & defe- de my cause agaynst y vngodly peo- ple: Oh delyuer me from the disceat full & wycked man. For yart the God of my strength: why hast y put me from the? And why go I so heuely, while y ene- mye oppreseth me? Oh send out thy lyght & thy trueth y they maye leade me & byyng me vnto thy holy hyll, & to thy dwelllyng. And that I maye go vnto the altar of God, euen vnto the God of my ioye & gladnesse, & vpo the harpe wyll I geue thanks vnto the (O God) my God. * Why art y so heuely (O my soule) & why art y so disquieted wyth- in me? Put thy trust in God, for I will yet geue hym thanks whych is the helpe of my countenance, and my God.

The. xliii. Psalm.

DEVS AVRIBVS NOSTRIS.

To the chaunter an instruccyon of the sonnes of Corah.

I haue herd w oure eares (O God) * oure fathers haue tolde vs, what thou hast done in theyr tyme of old. How thou hast dypuē out y hei- then w thy hande, & planted the in: how thou hast destroyed the nacions, & cast them out.

* For thy gat not the lande in possession: thozowe they a wne swerde, nether was it they a wne arme y helped them. But thy ryght hād, and thyn arme, and the lyght of thy countenance, because thou haddest a fa- uoure vnto the. * Thou art my kyng (O God) sende helpe vnto Jacob. Thozow the, wyll we ouerthrowe our enemyes, & in thy name wyll we tread the vnder that ryle vpagaynst vs. For I wyll not trust in my bowe, it is not my swerde that shall help me. But it is thou that sauest vs from oure enemye, and putttest them to confusyon that hate vs. We make oure boast of God all the daye lōge, and wyll prayse thy name for euer. Selah. But now thou art farre of, and putttest vs to confusyon, and * goest not forth wyth oure armyes.

Thou makest vs to turne oure backs vpon oure enemy, so that they wyche hate vs, spoyle oure goodes.

Thou

Thou lettest vs be eaten vp lyke shepe, & hast scattered vs among the heithen. Thou sellest thy people for naught, & takest no moneye for the. Thou makest vs to be rebuked of oure neyghbours, to be laughed to scorn & had in derisyon, of them þare rold about vs. * Thou makest vs to be a by worde amog the heithen, & that the people shalke their heades at vs. My confusion is daylye before me, & þ shame of my face hath couered me. For the voyce of the sclaunderer & blasphemur, for the enemye & auenger. And though all this be come vpon vs, yet do we not forgette þ, ner behaue oure selues frowardly in thy couenaunt. Oure hert is not turned backe, nether oure steppes gone out of thy waye. No not whan thou hast smytten vs in to the place of dragons, & d conered vs wth the shadow of deeth. If we haue forgotten the name of oure God, & holde vp our hādes to eny straung God. Shall not God search it out: for he knoweth þ verp secretes of the hert. * For thy sake also are we kylled all the daye longe, and are cousted as shepe apoynted to be slayne. Up Lorde why slepest þ? A wake, & be not absent from vs for euer. Wherefore bydest thou thy face, & forgettest oure mysery & trouble? * For our soule is brought lowe euē vnto the dust: oure hely cleueth vnto the ground. Arple & helpe vs, & delyuer vs for thy mercy sake.

The. xlv. Psalm.

ERVCTAVIT COR MEVM.

To hym that excelleth amonge the lykes, an instruccyon of the chyldre of Cozab, a songe of loue.

M I hert is endyptng of a good matter. I speake of the thynges, whych I haue made vnto the kyng: My tong is the penne of a ready wyrtcr. * Thou art fayrer then the chyldren of men, full of grace are thy lypes, because God hath blessed the for euer. Gyde the wth thy swerde vpon thy thygh (thou most myghtye) accordyng to thy worthe & renoune. Good lucke haue thou wthine honour, ryde on because of the word of treuth, of mekenesse & rightheousnes: and thy ryght hande shall teach the terrible thynges. Thy arrowes are very sharpe, & the people shalbe subdued vnto the, euen in the myddest amonge the kynges enemyes. * Thy seate (God) endureth for euer: the scepter of thy kyngdome is a ryght scepter. Thou hast loued rightheousnes, and hated iniquite: wherefore God (euē thy God) hath anoynted the wth the oyle of gladnes aboue thy felowes. All thy garmentes smell of myrrour, Aloes and Cassia, out of the puerpe palaces, wher by they haue made the glad. Kynges daughters were among thy honorable wemē: vpon thy ryght hande dyd stande þ quene in a vesture of gold (brought about wth byuerse colours.) Herke (Daughter) and confydre: enclpne thyne eare: forget also thine awne people, & thy fathers house. So shall the kyng haue pleasure in thy bewte, for he is thy Lorde (God) & worthepe thou hym. And þ daughter of Tyre shall be there w a gyfte, lyke as the ryche also amonge the people shal make the supplicacyon before the. The kynges daughter is all glorious wthyn, her clothyng is of wrought golde. She shalbe brought vnto the kyng in rayment of nedle worke: the virgins þ be þy felowes, shall beare hir company, and shalbe brought vnto the. Wthiope & gladnesse shall they be brought, & shall entre into the kynges palace. In steade of thy fathers þ shal haue chyldren, whom thou mayest make prynces in all landes. I wyll remembre thy name from one generacyon to another: therfore shall the people geue thanks vnto the, worlde wythout ende.

The. xlvj. Psalm.

DEVS NOSTER REFVGIVM.

To the chaunter, a songe for the chyldren of Cozab vpon Alamoth.

God is our hope & strength: a very present helpe in trouble. Therfore wyll we feare, though the erth be moued, & though the hylls be carryed in þ myddest of the see. * Though the waters therof rage & swell, & though the mountaynes shalke at þ tēpest of þ same. Sela. The ryuers of the floude therof shall make glad þ cytie of God, þ holy place of þ tabernacles of þ most byest. God is in þ myddest of her, therfore shall he not be remoued: God shall help her, & þ ryght early. The heathē make moch a doo, & the kyngdomes are moued: but God hath shewed his voyce, & the earth shall melt awaye. The Lord of hostes is w vs, þ God of Jacob is oure refuge. Sela. Come hyther, & beholde the workes of the Lorde, what destruccyōs he hath brought vpo the earth. * He maketh warres to cease in all þ worlde: he breaketh the bowe & knappeth the speare in sonder, & burneth the charettes in þ fyre. We styll then & knowe that I am God: I wil be exalted among the heithen, and I wyll be exalted in þ earth. The Lorde of hostes is wth vs, þ God of Jacob is oure defence. Sela.

The. xlvij. Psalm.

OMNES GENTES PLAUDITE.

To the chaunter, a Psalm for the chyldren of Cozab.

Clappe youre handes together (all ye people) & syng vnto God wth the voyce of melodye. For the Lord is hye and * to be feared, he is the great kyng vpo all þ earth. He shall subdue the people vnder vs, and the nacions vnder oure fete. He shall he shall chose out an heritage for vs: euē the worthepe of Jacob whom he loued. Sela. God is gone vp wth a mery noise, & the Lord wth the sounde of the troye. O syng prayles, syng prayles vnto (oure) God: O syng prayles, syng prayles vnto oure kyng. For God is kyng of all þ earth syng ye prayles wth vnderstandyng. God raygneth ouer the heithē, God sytteth vpo his holy seate. The prynces of the people are loyued vnto þ people of þ God of Abraham: for God (which is very hye exalted) doth defende the earth, as it were wth a hyde. The. xlviii. Psalm.

MAGNVS DOMINVS.

A songe of a Psalm of the chyldre of Cozab (in the seconde daye of oure Sabbath.)

Greate is the Lorde, & hyelp to be prayled, in the cytie of oure God, euē vpon his holy hyll. The hyll of Sion is a fayre place, & the ioye of the whole earth: vpo the north syde lyeth the cytie of the great kyng. God is well knowne in her palaces, as a sure refuge. For lo, the kynges (of the earth) are gathered, & gone by together. They marueled, to se such thynges: they were astonied, and sobely cast downe. Feare came there vpon them, & sorowe, as vpon a woman in her trauayle. Thou shalt breake the thynges of þ see, thou shalt breake the wyndes. Lyke as we haue herd, so haue we sene in the cytie of the Lord of hostes, in the cytie of oure God. God vpholdeth þ same for euer. Sela. We wayte for thy louyng kyndnesse (God) in þ myddest of thy tēple. (God) accordyng vnto thy name, so is thy prayse vnto the worlde: ende: thy ryght hand is full of rightheousnes. Let the mount Sion reioyse, and the daughters of Iuda be glad because of thy iudgementes. Walke about Sion, and go round about her, and tell the towres therof. Marche well her bulworkes, set vp her houses, that ye maye tell them that come after: For thys God is oure God for euer & euer, he shall be oure gyde vnto deeth.

The. xlix. Psalm.

AVDITE HAEC GENTES.

Hear this, all ye people: pondre it with your eares, all ye that dwell in the worlde. Hye and lowe, ryche and poore, one wth another: My mouth shall speake of wysdome, and my hert shall muse of vnderstandyng. I wyll enclpne myne eare to the parable, and shew my darcke speech vpo the harpe. Wherefore shulde I feare in the dayes of wychednesse, and whē the wyched-nesse of my heles cōpalet me round about? * There be some that put theyr trust in their goodes, & boast the selues in the multitude of theyr ryches. But nomā maye delyuer his brother, ner make agrement vnto God for hym. * For it costeth more to redeme theyr soules, so that he must let þ alone for euer. Yee, though he lyue longe, and se nat the graue. * For he seeth, that wyse men also dye, and perthe together, as well as the ignoraunt & folp, and * leaue theyr ryches for other: And yet they thynke, that theyr houses shall cōtinue for euer, and that theyr dwelling places shall endure from one generacyon to another, & call the landes after theyr awne names. Neuerthelesse, man wyll not abyde in honour, sepyng he maye be compared vnto the beastes that perthe: this is the waye of them. Thys is their folpnesse, and their posterite prayse their sayeng. Sela. They lye in þ hell lyke shepe, death gnaweth vpo them, and the ryghteous shall haue dominacyon of them in the moynge: theyr bewte shall consume in the sepulchre out of theyr dwellinge. But God shall delyuer my soule from the place of hell, for he shall receaue me. Sela. Be not thou afrayed though one be made ryche, or þ the glozp of his house be increased. * For he shall carry nothyng awaye with hym when he dyeth, nether shall his pompe folowe hym: For whyle he lyued, he counted hymselfe an happye man: and * so lōge as thou doest well vnto thy selfe, men wyll speake good of the. He shall folowe the generacyons of his fathers, and shall neuer se lyght. Man bepyng in honoure hath no vnderstandyng, but is cōpared vnto the beastes, that perthe.

The. l. Psalm.

DEVS DEORVM DOMINVS.

A Psalm of Asaph.

The Lorde enen the most myghtye God hath spoken, and called the worlde from the rysyng vp of the sonne vnto the goyng downe thereof. * Out of Syon hath God appeared in perfecte bewte. Oure God shall come, and shall not kepe sylence: there shall go before hym a consuming fyre, and a myghtye tempest shalbe stered vp rounde aboute hym. He shall call the heauen from aboue, and the earth, that he maye iudge his people. Gather my sayntes together vnto me, those that haue made a couenaunt with me, wth sacrificy. And the heauens shall declare his rightheousnesse, for God is iudge hym selfe. Sela. Heare, O my people: and I wyll speake, I wyll shew my selfe my selfe will testifie agaynst the, O Israel, for I am God, enē thy God. I wyl not reprove the because of thy sacryfices, or for thy burnt offerynges, because they were not all waye before me. * I wyl take no bullock out of thy house, ner he goates out of thy foldes. For all the bestes of the forest are myne, & so are the catell vpon a thousande hylls. I knowe all the foules vpon the mountaynes, & the wyld beasts of the feld are in my spght. If I be hongrye I wyl not tell the: for the whole worlde is myne, and all that therein is. Thinkest thou, that I wyl eat bulles flesh and drinke the bloud of goates? Offre vnto God thankefge- upnge, and paye thy vowes vnto the most hyest. And call vpon me in tyme of trouble, so wyl I heare the, and thou shalt prayse me. But vnto the vngodly sayed God, Why doest thou preach my lawes, & takest my couenaunt in thy mouth? Where as I hatest to be reformed, & hast cast my wordes behynd the? Whan thou sawest a thefe, thou consentedest vnto hym, and hast bene partaker wyth y aduouterers. Thou hast let thy mouth speake wickednesse, and with thy tong thou hast set forth disceat. Thou fastest and spakest agaynst thy brother, yee, & hast slaūdred thine awne mothers sonne. These thynges hast thou done, & I helde my tounge: & thou thoughtest, (wychedly) that I am enē such a one as thy selfe: but I wyl reprove the, and set before the, the thynges that thou hast done. O cōfyde this, ye that for- get God: lest I plucke you awaye, and there be none to delpuey you. Who so offreth me thāckes and prayse, he honoureth me: and to hym that ordreth hys conuersacyon ryght wyl I shewe the saluacyon of God.

C The. li. Psalme.
MISEREKE MEI DEVS.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid, whē p̄ prophet Nathan came vnto him, after he was gone in to Bethsabe.

Aue mercy vpon me (O God) after thy (grete) goodnes: accordyng vnto p̄ multitude of thy mercyes, do awaye myne offences. Wash me thorowly fro my wickednesse, & cleanse me fro my synne. For I knowledg my fautes, & my synne is euer before me. Agaynst the onely haue I syn- ned, and done this euell in thy syght: y thou myghtest be iustified in thy sayinge, & cleare when art iudged. Beholde, I was cha- pen in wychednesse, & in synne hath my mo- ther conceaued me. But lo, thou requir- est treuth in the inward partes, and shalt make me to vnderstode wyl dome secretly. Thou shalt pouge me with * hope, and I shall be cleane: thou shalt wash me, & I shall be why- ter then snowe. Thou shalt make me heare of ioye and gladnesse, that the bones whych thou hast broken, maye reioyse. Turne thy face fro my synnes, & put out all my mysde- des. * Make me a cleane hert (O God) ad- renue a ryght spete wythin me. Cast me not awaye from thy p̄sence, & take not thy holy spete fro me. Geue me the comferte of thy helpe agayne, & stablysh me wyth thy fre spete. Then shall I teach thy wayes vnto the wicked, and synners shall be con- uerted vnto the. Delpuey me from bloud gyl- tynesse (O God) thou that art p̄ God of my health, and my tounge shall syng of thy ryght- teousnesse. Thou shalt open my lippes (O Lord) & my mouth shall shewe thy prayse. For thou despyrest no sacryfice, els wolde I geue it p̄: but thou delystest not in burnt- offerynge. The sacryfice of God is a trou- bled spete, & a broken and a contrite hert (O God) shalt thou not despyse. O be fauora- ble & gracyous vnto Syon, buylde thou the walles of Jerusalem. Then shalt thou be pleased with p̄ sacryfice of ryghteousnesse, wyth the burnt offerynges & oblacions: then shall they offre ponge bullockes vpon thyne autler.

C The. lii. Psalme.

QVID GLORIAS IN MALITIA.

To the chaunter, an exortacyō of Da- uid, when Dauid the Edompte came to Saul, and he wed him, sayinge: Dauid is come to the house A hymelech.

Why boastest thou thy self, thou Ty- raunt, that thou canst do myschefe? Where as p̄ goodnesse of God en- dureth yet daylye. Thy tōge yma- ginech wychednesse, & wyth lyes thou cut- test lyke a tharpe rasoure. Thou hast lo- ued vngacyousnesse more then goodnes, & to talke of lyes more then ryghteousnesse. Sela. Thou hast loued to speake all wor- des that maye do hurt, O thou false tonge. Therefore shall God destroye the for euer: he shall take p̄ & plucke p̄ out of thy dwellig, & rote the out of the lād of the lyuing. Sela. The ryghteous also shall se this, & feare, & shall laugh him to scoorne. Lo, this is p̄ mā, that toke not God for hys strength, but * trust- ed vnto the multitude of his ryches, & stre- gthed hym selfe in his wickednesse. As for me, I am lyke a grene olyue tre i the house of God: my trust is in the tender mercy of God for euer & euer. I wyl alwaye geue than- kes vnto the, for p̄ hast done: & I wyl hope in thy name, for thy sayntes lyke it well.

C The. liii. Psalme.

DIXIT INCIPIENS.

To the chaunter vpon * Mahalath, an instruccyō of Dauid.

He * foolysh bodye hath sayed in hys hert: there is no God. Corrupte are they, & become abhomyable in theyr wickednesse: * there is none that doth good. God

God looked downe from heauen vpon the chyldren of men, to se yf there were eny that wolde vnderstande, and seke after God.

But they are all gone oute of the waye, they are all together become abhomyable: there is also none that doth good, no not one. Are not they without vnderstandynge that worcke wickednes, eating vpon my people as yf they wolde eate bread: they haue not cal- led vpon God. They were afrated, where no feare was: for God hath broke the bones of hym that be seged the: thou hast put them to confusyon, because God hath despyed the. O that the saluacyon were geuen vnto Israel out of Sion: O that the Lord would delpuey hys people out of captiuyte. Then shulde Jacob reioyse, and Israell shulde be ryght glad.

C The. liii. Psalme.

DEVS IN NOMINE TVO.

To the chaunter in melodyes, an instruc- cyō of Dauid, when the zephites came and sayde vnto Saul: hath not Dauid byd hym selfe amongest vs?

Aue me, O God, for thy names sa- ke, and anēge me in thy strength. Heare my prayer, O God, & her- ken vnto p̄ wordes of my mouth. For strangers are rylen vp agaynst me, and tyrautes (whyche haue not God before their eyes) like after my soule. Sela. Beholde, God is my helper, the Lord is with them that vpholde my soule.

* He shall rewarde euell vnto myne ene- myes: destroye thou them in thy treuth.

An offeryng of a fre hert wyl I geue the, and prayse thy name (O Lord) because it is so cōfortable. For he hath delpueyed me out of all my trouble, and myne eye hat sene his desyre vpon myne enemyes.

C The. lb. Psalme.

EXAUDI DEVS.

To the chaunter in melodyes, an in- struccyō of Dauid.

Hear my prayer (O God) and hide not thy selfe fro my peticion. Take heede vnto me, ad heare me, how I mourne in my prayer, & am ve- red. The enemy cryeth so, and the vngod- ly cometh on so fast: for they are mynded to do me some myschefe, so maliciously are they sett agaynst me. My herte is dysquyeted within me, and the feare of death is fallen vpon me. Fearfulness and trembling are come vpon me, and an horryble drede hath ouerwhelmed me. And I sayd: O that I had winges like a doue, for then wold I fle awaye, and be at reste. Lo, then wolde I gett me awaye farre of, and remaine in the wilderness. Sela. I wolde make hast to escape, because of the stormy wynd and tem- pte. Destroye theyr tonges (O Lord) and * deuide them, for I haue spyed vnrygh- teousnes and stryfe in the cyte. Daye and night go they about within the walles ther- of: myschefe also, and sorow are in the myd- dest of it. Wychednes is therein, dysceate, and gyle go not out of her stretes. For it is not an opē enemye that hath done me thys dishonoure: for then I coulde haue borne it: nether was it myne aduersary, that did ma- gnifye hym selfe agaynst me: for then (par- adventure) I wolde haue byd my selfe fro hym.

We toke swete counsell together, & wal- ked in the house of God as frendes. Lett death come hastely vpon them, and let them go downe quych into hell, for wychednes is in theyr dwellynge, and amonge them.

As for me, I will call vnto God, and the Lord shall saue me. In the euening, and moynge and at noone daye wyl I praye, (and that instansly) and he shall heare my voyce. It is he p̄ hath delpueyed my soule in peace, from the barayll that was agaynst me: for there were many with me. Yee, euen God that endureth for euer, shall heare me, and byng them downe. Sela. For they wyl not turne, ner feare God. He layed hys handes vpon such as be at peace w hym, and he brake hys couenaunt. The wordes of hys mouth were softer then but- ter, hauynge warre in his hert: hys wordes were smother then oyle, and yet be they very sweardes. * O cast thy burthen, vpon the Lord and he shall norp̄ the, and not suffre the ryghteous to fall for euer. And as for them, thou (O God) shalt byng them into the pyt of destruccyō. The bloude thyn- sty and disceatful mē shall not lyue out halfe theyr dayes. Reuerthelesse, my trust shal- be in the (O Lord).

C The. lvi. Psalme.

MISEREKE MEI DEVS QVONIAM.

To the chaunter vpon the doue of him that was domme in a farre countrey: the badg (or armes) of Dauid, when the Phi- listines toke hym in Geth.

Mercyfull vnto me (O God) for I am goeth about to deuoure me: he is dayly fyghtynge and troublynge me. Myne enemyes are dayly in hande to swalowe me vp: for they be many that fyght agaynst me, o thou moost hyest. Reuerthelesse, though I am some tyme a frayed yet put I my trust in the. I wyl prayse God, because of hys worde, I haue put my trust in God, & wyl not feare, what flesh can do vnto me. They dayly mistake my wordes: all that they ymagyne is to do me euell. They holde all together, & kepe the selues close: & marche my steppes, whan they laye wayte for my soule.

BB lii. Shall

Shall they escape for theyr wyckednes? thou (O God) in thy dyspleasure shalt cast the downe. Thou tellest my synnes, put my teares in thy botell: are not these thynges noted in thy booke? When soeuer I call vpon the, then shall myne enemies be put to flight: thys I knowe, for God is on my syde. In Gods wordes wyll I reioyse, in the Lordes worde wyll I comforte me.

*Jo. viii. a

God sheweth me his goodnesse plenteously, and God shall lett me se my desyre vpon myne enemyes. Slaye them not, lest my people forgett it: but scatre them abroade among thy people, and put them downe (O Lord) our defence. For the synne of their mouth, and for the wordes of theyr lippes they shall be taken in theyr pryde, and why? theyr preachynge is of cursynge and lyes.

Consume them in thy wyath, consume them that them that they maye perishe, and knowe that it is God, which ruleth in Jacob and vnto y endes of the world. Sela. And in the euenynge they will retorne: grenne lyke a dogg and wyll go aboute the cytie. They wyll runne here and there for meate, and grudge yf they be not satysfied. As for me, I will synge of thy power, and will prayse thy mercy by tymes in the mozyng: for thou hast bene my defence ad refuge in the daye of my trouble. Vnto the, O my strength, will I synge, for thou, O God, art my refyge and my mercifull God.

To the chaunter, For Jeduthun:

a psalme of Dauid.

My soule truly wayteth styll vpon y God, for of him cometh my saluacion. He verely is my strength, and my saluacion: he is my defence, so that I shall not greatly fall.

How longe will ye ymagin mischefe agaynst euery man: ye shall be slayne all y sorte of you: pee, as a tottring wall shall ye be, and lyke a broken hedge. Their deuyce is onely how to put him out whom God wyll exalte: their deuyce is in lyes: they geue good wordes w their mouth, but curse w their hert. Sela.

EXAVDI DEVS ORATIONEM.

To the chaunter, a psalme of Dauid.

I Care my voyce (O God) i my prayer preferre my lyfe fro feare of the enemye. Hyde me from the gathering together of the froward, & from the insurrection of wicked doers. Which haue whett their tonge lyke a swerde, & shote out theyr sodenly shote at them with a swift arowe, þ they shall be wounded. Yee, their awne toges shall make them fall, in so moch that who so seeth them, shall laugh them to scozne.

And all me that se it, shall saye: this hath God done, for they shall perceaue that it is hys wozeke. The righteous shall reioyse mercifull vnto our synnes. Blessed is the man whom thou cholest and receauest vnto the: he shall dwell in thy court: and shall be satisfied with the pleasures of thy house, euen of thy holy temple. Thou shalt shewe vs wonderfull thynges in ryghteousnesse (O of al the endes of the earth, and of them that remayne in the broade see. Which in hys strength setteth fast the mountaynes, and is gyrded about with power. Which stilleth the ragyn of the see, & the noyse of hys waues, and the madness of the people. They also that dwel in þ uttermost partes (of the earth) shall be afrayed at thy tokens, thou þ makest the outgoinges of the mozynge

To the chaunter, The songe of a psalme.

I Be ioyfull in God, all ye landes, synge prayles vnto the ho-noure of hys name, make hys praysle to be glorious. Saye vnto God: O how wonderfull art thou in thy wozeke: thow the great-nes of thy power shall thyne enemies be fodidelers vnto the. For all the worlde shall worship the, synge of the, & prayse thy name.

kes of God, how wonderfull he is in his doynge towarde the chyldren of men. * He turned the see into drye land, & so þ they wete thorow the water on fote: there did we reio-yse therof. He ruleth with hys power for will not beleue, shall not be able to exalte the selues. Sela. O prayse our God (ye people) and make the voyce of hys prayse to be heard. Which holdeth our soule in lyfe, & suffreth not our fete to slipp. For thou (O God) hast proueh vs: þ also hast tryed vs like as siluer is tryed. Thou broughtest vs into the snare, and layed trouble vpon oure loynes. Thou suffrest men to ryde ouer our heades, * we went thorow fyre & water and thou broughtest vs out into a welthye place. I wyll go into thy house with brett offrynges, and wyll * paye the my vowes, which I prompled with my lypes, & spake with my mouth, when I was in trouble.

I will offere vnto the, fat brent sacrificys with the incense of rammes, I will offere bullockes and goates. Sela. Come hyther and herken, all ye that feare God: & I wyll tell you, what he hath done for my soule.

I called vnto him w my mouth, and gaue him prayles w my toge. If I enclyne vnto wickednes with my hert, the Lord wyll

EXVREGAT DEVS.

To the chaunter, a psalme and songe of Dauid.

I O God arple, ad let his enemies be scattered: let them also that hate him, flye before him. Like as the smoke vanysheth, so shall þ dyue the awaye: and lyke as waxe melteth at the fyre: so let the vngodly perishe at the presence of God. But let the ryghteous be glad & reioyse before God: let the also be merry and ioyfull. Oh synge vnto God, and synge prayles vnto his name: magnifie him that rydeth vpon the heauens as it were vpon a horse: prayse ye him in his name. * I reioyse before him. * He is a father of fatherlesse, and defendeth the cause of wyddowes: euen God in his holy habitation. He is the God that maketh men to be of one mynde in a house, and byngeth the prisoners out of captiuite, but letteth the rennagates conty-nue in scarcenesse. O God, when * thou wentest forth before the people, when thou wentest thorow the wyldernes. Sela.

The earth shoke, and the heauens dropped at the presence of God, euen as Sinai also was moued at þ presence of God, which is the God of Israel. Thou O God send-dest a gracious rayne vpon thyne inheritaunce, and refrefhest it, whet it was wee-rye. Thy congregacyon shall dwell therein: for thou (O God) hast of thy goodnesse prepared for the poore. The Lord gaue þ worde: & greate was the company of the preachers. * Kynges with the armyes byd fyre, and were discomfited, and they of þ household deuoyded the spoyle. * Though ye haue lye amonge þ pottes, yet shall ye be as þ wynges of a doue that is couered with syuer wynges, and his fethers lyke golde.

When the Almyghty scattered kynges for their sake, the were they as white as snowe in zalmō. As þ hyll of Basan so is Gods hyll: euen a hye hill, as the hyll of Basan.

Why hoppe ye so? ye hye hylls?

Thys is Gods hill, in the which it pleaseth him to dwell: yee, the Lord will abyde in it for euer. 17 The charettes of God are twetie thousande, euen thousandes of angels, ad the Lord is amonge them as in the holy place of Sinai. 18 * Thou art gone vpon hye, thou hast led captiuite captiue, and recea-ued gyftes for men. Yee, euen for thyne enemies, that the Lord God myght dwell amonge the. 19 Prayled be the Lord dayly, euen the God which helpeth vs, and poureth his benefytes vpon vs. Sela. He is oure God, euen the God of who commeth salua-cion: God is the Lord by whom we escape death. God shall woude the heade of his enemies, and the hearie scalpe of soch one as goeth on still in his wickednes. The Lord hath sayde: I will bringe my people agayne as I byd from Basan: myne owne wyll I byynge agayne as I byd somtyme from the depe of the see. That thy fete maye be dipped in the bloude of thyne enemyes, ad that the tog of thy dogges maye be redd thorow the same. It is well sene, O God, how thou goest, how þ my God and kyng goest in the Sanctuary. The syngers go before, the mynstrels folow after: in þ myddes are the damosels playeng with þ tymbrels.

Geue thakes O Israel, vnto God þ Lord de in the congregacions from the grounde of the hart. There is lytle Beniamin their ruler: and the Princes of Iuda, their coun-cell: the Princes of Zabulon, and the Princes of Nephtali. Thy God hath sent forth strength for the, stablysh the thing, O God, that thou hast wrought in vs. For thy temples sake at Jerusalem: so shall kynges byynge presentes vnto the. * When the company of the speare men and myltitude of the myghtye are scattered abroad amonge the beastes of the people (so that they humbly bring peces of syluer) and whā he hath scattered þ people that delyte i warre. Then shall the Princes come out of Egypte, the Assyrians land shall soone stretch out her hades vnto God. Synge vnto God, O ye kyngdomes of þ earth: O synge prayles vnto the Lord. Sela. Which lytteth in the heauens ouer all from the begynnyng: Lo, he doth sende out hys voyce, yee, and that a myghtie voyce. Ascrib ye þ power vnto God, ouer Israel: his myghty & strength thou in thy holy places: euen the God of Israel, he will geue strength and power vnto his people. Blessed be God.

SALVVM ME FAC DEVS.

To the chaunter vpon the Solanum of Dauid.

Aueme, O God, for the waters are come in euē vnto my soule I sticke fast i f depe myze, where no ground is: I am come to depe waters, so that the floudes renne ouer me. I am wery of crying, my throte is due, my sight faileth me, for waytinge so long vpo my God. They þ hate me with out a cause, are mo then þ heeres of my head:
they that are myne enemies & wolde destroe me gilelesse are mightie: & I payed them the thinges that I neuer toke. God, thou knowest my simplenesse, and my fautes are not hid from the. Let not the that trust in þ, O Lord God of hostes, be ashamed for my cause: let not those that seke the, be confounded thowowe me, O God of Israell.

And why: for thy sake haue I suffered reprofe, shame hath couered my face. I am become a strainger vnto my brethren: euē an a-leatit vnto my mothers children. For þ zele of thyne house hath euē eaten me, and the rebukes of the that rebuked the are fallen vpon me. I wepte and chastened my selfe with fastynge, and that was turned to my reprofe. I put on a sacke cloth also, & they icsted vpon me. They that sitte in þ gate, speake agaynst me, and the dronkar-des make songes vpon me. But Lorde I make my prayer vnto the in an acceptable tyme. Heare me, O God, in þ multitude of thy mercy, euē in the trueth of thy salua-cion.

Take me out of the myze, & I sincke not. Oh let me be deliuered from them that hate me, and out of the depe waters. Let not the water floud drowne me: nether let þ depe swalowe me vp, and let not the pytte shut her mouth vpon me. Heare me, O Lorde, for thy louyng kyndnesse is cōforta-ble: turne the vnto me accordynge vnto the multitude of thy mercies. And hyde not thy face from thy seruāit, for I am in trouble: O haste the, and here me. Drawe nye vnto my soule, and saue it: Oh deliuer me because of myne enemies. Thou hast knowen my reprofe, my shame and my dysho-nour: myne aduersaries are all in thy syght.

The rebuke hath broken my herte, I am full of heynesse: I looked for some to haue pi-tye vpon me, but there was no man: nether founde I anye to cōforte me. * They gaue me gall to eate, & when I was thyrsty, they gaue me vineger to drinke. + Let their table be made a share to take them selues with all, and let the thinges that shuld haue bene for their welth be vnto them an occasion of fallinge. Let their eyes be blinded, & they se not: and euer bowe þ downe theire backs.

Powre out thyne indignacion vpon the,
and let thy wrathfull displeasure take holde of them. * Let their habitation be voyde and no man to dwell in their tentes. For they persecute hym whom thou hast synpē, & they talke how they maye vexe the whom thou hast wounded. Let them fall fro one wyckednesse to another, and not come into thy ryghteousnesse. * Let them be wyped out of the boke of the lyuynge, & not be wyrt-ten amōg the ryghteous. As for me, whā I am pooze and in heynesse, thy helpe (O God) shall lyfte me vp. I wyll prayse the name of God with a songe, and magnifye it w thankesgeuyng. This also shall please the Lorde better then a bullocke, that hath hories and hooffes. The humble shal con-fyde this, and be glad: seke ye after God, ad poure soule shall lyue. For the Lord heareth the pooze, and despyseth not þ his pre-soners. Let heaue and earth prayse hym, the see & all that moueth therein. For God will saue Syon, and buyde the cyties of Juda, that men may dwell there, and haue it in possession. The posterite also of his ser-uautes shall inheret it: & they that loue hys name, shall dwell therein.

ke haste to helpe me, O Lorde.
* Let them be shamed and confounded that seke after my soule: let them be turned backwarde, & put to confusion, that wyshe me euyl. Let them (for teousnesse: encline thyne eare vnto me, and saue me. Be thou my strong holde (where vnto I maye all waye resorte) thou hast pro-myled to helpe me: for thou art my house of defence ad my castell. Deliuer me, O my God, out of the hand of the vngodly, out of the hande of the vnrighteous and cruell mā.

For thou, O Lorde God, art the thyng that I longe for, thou art my hope euē fro

Cast me not awaye in the tyme of age, for sake me not whē my strength fayleth me.

For myne enemies speake agaynst me: & they that laye wayte for my soule, take their councell together, sayenge: God hath forsāken hym, persecute hym, and take hym, for there is none to deliuer him. So not farre frome, O God: my God, haste the to helpe that are agaynst my soule: let them be coue-red with shame and dyshonoure, that seke to do me euell. As for me, I wyll patiently abyde all waye, and will prayse the more ad more. My mouth shall daylie speake of thy righteousnesse & saluacion, for I knowe no ende therof. I will go forth i þ strength of the Lord God, & will make mencion of thy righteousnesse onely. Thou, O God, hast taught me fro my youth vntill now, therfore will I tell of thy wonderous workes.

For sake me not, O God, in myne olde age, when I am gray headed: vntill I haue shewed thy * strength vnto this generaciō, and thy power to all them that are yet for to come. Thy righteousnes (O God) is very hye, and great thynges are they þ thou hast done: O God, who is lyke vnto the?
What greates troubles and aduersyties hast thou shewed me: ad yet didest thou turne and refreche me: yee, and broughtest me from the depe of the earth * (agayne)

Thou hast brought me * to great honour and comforted me on euery syde. Therfore will I prayse the and thy faythfulnesse, O God, playinge vpon an instrumēt of musick, vnto the wyll I synge vpon the harpe, O thou holy one of Israell. My lyppes wylbe sayne, whā I synge vnto the: and so will my soule whom thou hast deliuered.

My tonge also shall talke of thy rygh-teousnesse all the daye longe, for they are cō-founded and brought vnto shame, that seke to do me euell.

kynges sonne. Then shall he iudge thy people * accordynge vnto right, and defende the pooze. The mountaynes also shall bynge peace, and the lytle hilles righteousnesse vnto the people. He shall kepe the synple folke by their ryght, defende the chyldren of the pooze, and punish the wroge doer. They shall feare the as long * as þ sonne and mone endureth, from one generacion to another. He shall come downe like the rayne into a flese of wolle, euē as the wildernes shall knele before hi, & his enemies shall lick the dust. * The kynges of Charlis and of the fless shall geue presentes, the kynges of Araby and Saba shall bring gyftes. All kynges shal fall downe before him: all nacions shal do him seruice.

For he shall deliuer the pooze when he cryeth: the neady also and him that hath no helper. He shalbe fauorable to the synple and neady: and shall preserue the soules of the pooze. He shall deliuer their soules fro falshe and wroge, and deare shall they blond be in his syght. He shall lyue, & vnto him shalbe geuen of the golde of Arabia: prayer shalbe made euē vnto hi, and day-lie shall he be praysed. There shalbe an heape of cozne in the earth hye vpon the hylles, his frute shall shake lyke Libanus, and shalbe grene in þ cite, like grasle vpo þ earth.

His name shall endure for euē, * his name shall remayne vnder the sunne amōge the posterites, which shalbe blessed thowow

QVAM BONVS ISRAEL.

A Psalme of Asaph.

Ruly God is louing vnto Israell: cūe vnto such as are of a cleane hert?
Neuerthelesse, my fete were almost gone, my treadinges had well nye synpte.

And why * I was greued at þ wicked,
I do se also the vngodly in soch prosperite:

For they are in no parell of death, but are lusty and strong. They come in no misfortune like other folke, nether are they plaged like other mē. And this is the cause þ they be so holden with pride, and ouerwhelmed with cruelte. Their eyes swell for fatnesse, and they do euē what they lyst.

They corrupte other, & speake of wicked blasphemye

blasphemye: they talkynge is agaynst the most hiest. For they stretch forth they mouth vnto the heauen, & they tonge goeth thorow the world. Therefore fall the people vnto them, and there out sucke they no small aduantage. * Cuth (saye they) how shuld God perceauet: is there knowlege in the moost hiest? Lo, these are the vngodly, these prosper in the worlde, and these haue ryches in posseltyon. * (And saye.) Then haue I clenfed my herte in dayne and washed my handes in innocency. All the daye long haue I bene punished, and chastened euery moynynge. Pee, and I had almost sayde euen as they: but lo, then shuld I haue condemned the generacon of thy chyl- dren. The thought I to vnderstand this, but it was to harde for me. Untill I went into the Sanctuary of God, then vnder- stood I the ende of these me. Namely, how thou dost sett them in slipperry places, and castest them downe and destroyest them. How sodenly do they consume, peryshe, and come to a fearfull ende? * Pee, euen like as a dreame when one awaketh, so shalt thou make & they ymage to vanysh out of the cyte. Thus my hert was greued, ad it wente euen thorow my reynes. So fol- lysh was I and ignorant, euen as it were a beast before the. Neuertheless, I am all waye by the, for thou hast holden me by my right hande. Thou shalt gyde me with thy counsell, and afterwarde receaue me with glory. Whom haue I in heauen but thou? And there is none vpon earth, that I desyre in com- paryson of the. My fleashe and my hert fayleth, but God is the strength of my hert, * and my porcyon for euer. For lo, they that forsake the shall peryshe: thou hast de- stroyed all them that commytte fornicacyon agaynst the. But it is good for me, to holde me fast by God, to put my trust in the Lorde God, and to speake of all thy workes. * (in the gates of the daughter Syon)

The. lxxiii. Psalme.

VT QVID DEVS REPVLISTI.

An instruccyon of Asaph.

God, wherefore art thou absent from vs so long? why is thy wrath so hote agaynst the shepe of thy pasture?

Thynke vpon thy congregacyon, who thou hast purchased and redemed of olde: Thinke vpon the trybe of thine inheritaunce and mount Syon wherein thou hast dwelt.

Lift vp thy fete, that thou mayest utterly destroye euery enemye which hath done euell in the Sanctuary. Thyne aduersa- ryces roare in the myddes of thy congrega- tions, and set vp their banners for tokens.

He that hewed tymbre afore out of y thick trees, was knowne to byynge it to an excellent worke. But now they breake downe all y carned worcke therof w axes & hammers. * They haue set fyre vpo thy holy places, and haue despyled the dwellynge place of thy name, euen vnto the grounde.

Pee, they sayed i their hertes: let vs make haouke of them altogether: thus haue they byent vp all the houses of God in the lande.

We se not oure tokens, ther is not one Prophet more, no not one is ther among vs that vnderstandeth eny more. O God, how long shall the aduersary do this disho- noure: how longe shall the enemy blaspheme thy name: For euer? Why withdra west y hine had: why pluckest thou not thy right hande out of thy bosome, to consume y ene- mye? For God is my kynge of olde: the helpe that is done vpon earth, he doth it him selfe. * Thou dydest deuyde the see tho- rowe thy power, thou brakest the heades of the dragos in the waters. Thou smorest the heades of * Leuiathan in peeces, and geuest him to be meate for the people in the wyldecnesse. Thou broughtest out fountaynes and waters out of y harde roc- kes: thou dydest vp myghtye waters.

The daye is thine, & the nyght is thine: thou hast prepared the lyght and the sonne. Thou hast sett all the borders of y earth, thou hast made sommer ad wynter. Re- membze this, O Lorde, how the enemye hath rebuked, ad how the folyshe people hath blas- phemed thy name. O deliuer not y soule of thy turtle doue vnto the multitude of the enemies: and forget not the congregacyon of the poore for euer. Loke vpon the coue- nant, for all the earth is full of darknes, ad cruell habitaciōs. O let not the symple go awaye aslamed, but let the poore and neddy geue prayse vnto thy name. Arise, O God, maynteyne thine awne cause: remēbze how the folyshe man blasphemeth the dayly.

Forget not the voyce of thine enemyes: the presumpcyō of them that hate the increa- seth euer more and more.

The. lxxv. Psalme.

CONFITEBIMVR TIBI DEVS.

To the chaunter, Destroye not.

A Psalme and songe of Asaph.

Not y (O God) do we geue thākes y pee, vnto the do we geue thanks: thy name also is sonye, & that do thy wo- derous workes declare. Whē I receaue the congregacion, I shall iudge accordynge vnto ryght. The earth is weake and all y in habiteres therof, I beare vp y pylers of it. I sayde vnto the foles: deale not so madly, and to the vngodly: set not vp your horne. Set not vp your horne on hye, & speake not with a styfnecke. For promo- tion cometh nether from the East, ner fro the the west, ner yet from y south. And why? * God is the Judge: he putteth downe one, and letteth vp another. For in the hande of the Lorde there is * a cuppe, & y wyne is reddy, it is full mixte, & he poureth out of the same. As for the dregges therof, all y vngodly of the earth shall dryncke them, and sucke them out. But I wyll talke of the God of Jacob, and prayse hym for euer.

All the hornes of the vngodly also wyll I breake, and the hornes of the ryghteous shalbe exalted.

The. lxxvi. Psalme.

NOTVS IN IVDEA.

To the chaunter, in melodys, a Psalme, & songe of Asaph.

In Ierusalem is God knowne, his name is greate in Israel. At * Schall is his tabernacle, and * his dwellynge in Syon. There brake he the arrowes of the bowe, the shylde, the swerde, and y bat- taye. Sela. Thou art of more honour and myght then the pylles of robbers.

The proude are robbed: they haue slepte their slepe: and all the men (whose handes were myghtie) haue found nothinge. At thy rebuke (O God of Jacob) both the cha- ret and horse is fallen. Thou, euen thou art to be feared: and who may stande in thy syght, when thou art angreye. Thou dydest cause thy iudgement to be herde from heauen, the erth trembled and was styll.

When God arose to iudgement, & to helpe all the meke vpon earth. Sela. The fearcenesse of man shall turne to thy prayse: and the fearcenesse of other shalt thou re- frayne. Promyse vnto the Lorde yourre God, & * kepe it, all ye that be rounde about hym: byng presentes vnto hym that ought to be feared. He shall refrayne the spretes of Prynces, and is wonderfull amonge the kynges of the earth.

The. lxxvii. Psalme.

VOCE MEA AD DOMINVM.

To the Chaunter, for Ieduthun a Psalme of Asaph.

I will crye vnto God w my voyce, euen vnto God wyll I crye wyth my voyce, and he shall herken vnto me. In the tyme of my trouble I sought the Lorde: my soze ranne and ceased not in the nyght ceason: my soule refused comforte. When I am in heynesse, I wyll thynke vpon God: when my hert is vexed, I wyll complayne. Sela. Thou holdest myne eyes wakynge, I am so feble, that I cannot speake. I haue cōsydered the dayes of olde, and the yeares that are past. I call to re- mēbraunce my songe: and in the nyght I com- mune with myne awne hert, and search out my spretes. Wyll y Lorde absent him selfe for euer? And will he be no more intreated?

As bys mercy clene gone for euer? And is bys promyse come utterly to an ende for euermore? Hath God forgotten to be gra- cyous? And wyll he shutt vp bys lounge kyndnesse in dyspleasure? Sela. And I sayde: It is myne awne infirmyte: But I wyll remembre the yeares of the ryght hāde of the moost hiest. I wyll remembre the workes of the Lorde, and * call to mynde thy wonders of olde tyme. I will thynke also of all thy workes, and my talkynge shalbe of thy doynge. Thy waye, O God, is holy: who is so greate a God as (oure) God? Thou art the God that doth wonders, ad hast declared thy power among people. Thou hast myghtely deliuered thy people, euen the sonnes of Jacob ad Jo- seph. Sela. The waters sawe the, O God, the waters sawe the, & were afrayed: y deapthes also were troubled. The clou- des poured out water, the ayer thondered, & thynne arrowes went a broade. The voyce of thy thōder was hearde rounde aboute, the lyghtenynge shone vpon the grounde, the earth was moued and shoke wythall Thy waye is in the see, and thy pathes in the greate waters, and thy foteystepes are not knowne. Thou leddest thy people lyke shepe, by the hande of Moyses and Aaron.

The. lxxviii. Psalme.

ATTENDITE POPVLE MEVS.

An instruccyon of Asaph.

Hear my lawe, O my people, enclp- ne your eares vnto the wordes of my mouth. * I wyll open my mouth in a parable, I wyll declare hard sen- tences of olde. Whych we haue herde and knowne, and * soche as oure fathers haue tolde vs. That we shulde not hyde them from the chyl- dren of the generacions to come: but to shewe the honour of the Lorde, bys might, and wonderfull workes that he hath done. He made a couenaūt with Ja- cob, and gaue Israel a lawe * which he com- manded oure forefathers to teache their chil- dren. That their posterite myght knowe it, and the chyl- dren which were yet vnborne.

To thintent that whē they came vp, they myght shewe their chyl- dren the same. That they myght put their trust in God, and not to forget the workes of God, but to kepe his cōmaundementes. And not to be * as their forefathers: a faythlesse & stub- borne generacyon, a generacyon that set not their herte a ryght, and whose sprete cleued not stedfastly vnto God. Lyke as the chyl- dren of Ephraim, which beynge harnes- sed and carpeng bowes, turned them selues backe in the daye of batayll. They kepte not not the couenaunt of God, and wolde not walke in hys lawe. But forgot what he had done, and the wonderfull woꝝkes that he had shewed for the. Maruelous thynges dyd he in the syght of oure fathers in the lande of Egypte, euen in the felde of zoan.

* He deuoyded the see, and let the gothorow: he made y waters to stāde on a heape. * In the daye tyme also he led them wth a cloude, and all the nyght thozow w a light of fyze. He cloasue the * hard rockes in the wyldernes, and gaue them drinke therof, as it had bene out of the greate deapth.

He brought waters out of the * stony rocke, so that it gushyd out lyke the ryuers. Yet for all this they spynned more agaynst hym, and prouoked the moost byest in the wyldernes. They tempted God in theyr hertes, and requyzed meate for theyr lust.

They spake agaynst God also sayinge: Shall God prepare a * table in the wyldernes? He smote the stony rocke in dede, that the water gushyd out, and the streames flowed withall: but can he geue bred also, or prouyde flesh for his people? When y Lord heardethys, he was wroth: so the fyze was kyndled in Jacob, & ther came by heuy dyspleasure agaynst Israel. Because they beleued not in God, and put not their truste in his helpe. So he commaunded the cloudes aboue, and opened the doores of heauen.

He rayned downe Manna also vpon the, for to eate, and gaue them * foode fro heaue. So man dyd eate & angels fode, for he sent them meate ynough. He caused the East wynd to blowe vnder the heauen, and thozow his power he brought in y south west wynde. * He rayned flesh vpo them as thicke as dust, and fethered foules lyke as the lande of the see. He let it fall amonge their tentes euen rounde aboute their habytacyon. So they dyd eate, and were well fylled, for he gaue them their awne desyre.

They were not disapoynted of their lust. * But whyle the meate was yet in theyr mouthes: the heuy wroth of God came vpon them, & slewe the welthiest of them, yee, and smote downe, the cholen men that were in Israel. * But for all this they spynned yet more, ad beleued not hys wonderous woꝝkes. Therefore, their dayes dyd he consume in vanyte, and their yeares in trouble.

* When he slewe them, they sought hym, and turned them carly and enquired after God. And they remēbred that God was their strength, and that the hye God was their redemer. Neuerthelesse, they dyd but flatter hym wth their mouth, and dyssembled with hym in their tōge. For their herte was not whole wth hym, nether continued they stedfast in hys couenaunt.

But he was so mercyfull, that he forgauē theyr mysdoedes, and destroyed them not. Yee, many a tyme turned he hys wroth awaye, and wolde not suffre is whole dyspleasure to aryse. * For he cōsidered that they were but flesh: and that they were, euen a wynde that passeth awaye, and cometh not agayne. Many a tyme dyd they prouoke him in the wyldernes, and greued him in the deserte. They turned backe, & tempted God, & moued the holy one in Israel.

They thought not of hys hand, and of the daye when he deliuered them from the hāde of the enemye. How he had wrought hys myꝛacles in Egypte, and his wonderes in the felde of zoan. * He turned their waters into bloude, so that they myght not dryncke of the ryuers. * He sent lye amonge the, and deuoured them vp: and frogges to destroye them. He gaue their frutes vnto the * catz, pyller, and their labour vnto the greshopper. * He destroyed their vyynes w hayle stones, and their mulberry trees wth the frost. * He smote their catel also with hayle stones, & their flockes with hote thunder boltes. He cast vpon the the fury of hys wroth, anger, displeasure and trouble, and sent euell angels among them.

* He made a waye to his indignacion, and spared not their soule from death, but gaue their lyfe ouer to the pestilence. * And smote all the fyrst borne in Egypt, the moost principall and myghtyest: in y dwellynge of ham. But as for hys awne people, he lead them forth lyke shepe, and carped the in the wyldernes lyke a flocke. He brought the out safely, that they shulde not feare, & ouerwhelmed their enemyes with y see. And brought the within the borders of hys Sanctuary: euen to this mountayne, whych he purchased with hys ryght hande. * He cast out y heathen also before the, caused their lande to be deuoyded amonge the for an heritage, and made the trybes of Israel to dwell in their tentes. So they tēpted and displeased the most hye God, ad kepte not hys testymones. But turned their backs, and fell awaye lyke their fathers, startynge asyde lyke a broke bowe.

For they greued hym with their hyll alters, and prouoked him to displeasure wth their ymages. When God hearde this, he was wroth, and toke fore dyspleasure at Israel. So that he forsoke the Tabernacle in Silo, euen the tent that he had pitched among men. He deliuered their power into captiuyte, and their bewtye into y enemyes hande. He gaue his people ouer also into the swerde, and was wroth wth hys inheritaunce. The fyze consumed their pong men, and their maydens were not genen to mariage. Their breastes were layne w the swerde, and there were no wyddowes to make to make lamētacion. So the Lord awaked as one out of slepe, and lyke a gyaunte refreshed wth wyne. * He smote his enemyes in the hynder partes, and put them to a perpetuall shame. * He refused the tabernacle of Ioseph, and chose not the trybe of Ephraim. * But chose the trybe of Iuda, euen the hyll of Sion whych he loued.

And there he buylded hys temple on hye, and layed the foudacion of it lyke y grounde, whych he hath made continually. * He chose Dauid also his seruaunt, and toke him awaye from the shepe foldes. As he was folowinge the ewes greate with yōge ones, he toke hym, that he myght fede Jacob hys people, and Israel his inheritaunce. So he fed them with a faythfull and truc hert, & ruled them prudently withall his power.

God * the heathen are come into thy inheritaunce: thy holy tēple haue they despyled, and made Ierusalē an heape of stones. * The dede bodies of thy seruauntes haue they geuen to be meate, vnto the foules of the ayze, and the flesh of thy saynctes vnto the bestes of the lande. Their bloud haue they shed lyke water on enery syde of Ierusalem, and there was no man to burye them. * We are become an opē shame vnto oure enemyes, a very scoꝛne and derisyon vnto them that are rounde aboute vs. Lord, how longe wilt thou be angrey? Shall thy gelously burne lyke fyze for euer? * Poure out thyne indignacion vpon the heathen that haue not knowne y, and vpon the kyngdome that haue not called vpon thy name. For they haue deuoured Jacob, and layed waste his dwellinge place.

* Remembre not oure olde synnes, but haue mercy vpon vs, and that soone, for we are come to greate misery. Helpe vs, O God of oure saluacion, for the glory of thy name: O deliuer vs, and be mercyfull vnto oure synnes for thy names sake. * wherfore do the heathen saye: where is now their God? O let the vengeance of thy seruauntes bloude y is shed, be openly shewed vpon the heathen in oure syght.

O let the sorowfull syghyng of the prisoners come before the: accorpyng vnto the greatnesse of thy power, preserue thou those that are appoynted to dye. And for the blasphemy (wherwith oure neyghbours haue blasphemed the) rewarde thou them, O Lord, seuen folde into their bolome. So we, that be thy people and shepe of thy pasture, shall geue the thanckes for euer, and wyl alwaye be shewyng forth thy prayse from generacion to generacion.

The. lxxx. psalme. QVI REGIS ISRAEL.

To the chaunter & vpon Sossanin, a testymone and psalme of Asaph.

Mare O thou shepherde of Israel, thou y leadest Ioseph lyke a shepe: he we thy selfe also thou that syttest vpon the Cherubyns.

Before Ephraim, Ben Jamin, and Manasses: stre v thy strength, and come helpe vs. Turne vs agayne, O God, the we the lyght of thy countenance, and we shalbe whole. O Lord God of hostes, how lōge wilt thou be angrey wth thy people that prayeth? * Thou feddest the with y bred of teares and geuest them plectonnes of teares to dryncke. * Thou hast made vs a very stryfe vnto oure neyghbours, and oure enemyes laugh vs to scoꝛne. Turne vs agayne, thou God of hostes, the we the lyght of thy countenance, and we shalbe whole. Thou hast brought a vyne out of Egypte, thou hast cast out the heathen, and plated it. Thou madest rowme for it: and whan it had taken rote, it fylled the lande.

The hylls were couered with y shadowe of it, ad the bowes therof were lyke y goodly Cedre trees. She stretched out her bꝛanches vnto the see, and her bowes vnto the ryuer. Why hast thou then broken downe her hedge, that all they whych go by, plucke of her grapes? The wyldc boze out of the wood doth rote it vp, and the wyldc beastes of the felde deuoureth it. Turne y agayne, thou God of hostes, loke downe from heauen, beholde, and dyslet thys vyne. And the place of the vyngarde that thy ryght hande hath planted, and the bꝛauch that thou madest so stronge for thy selfe. * It is bzent wth fyze, and cut downe: & and they shall perishe at the rebuke of thy countenance. Let thy hand be vpon the man of thy ryght hande, & vpon the sonne of man whom thou madest so strong for thyne awne selfe. And so will not we go backe from the: Oh let vs lyue, & we shall call vpo thy name. Turne vs agayne, O Lord God of hostes, the we the lyght of thy countenance, & we shalbe whole.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of the sonnes of Corah.

Wide, thou art become gracious vnto thy lande, thou hast turned awaye the captiuite of Jacob. Thou hast forgiven the offence of thy people, and couered all theyr synnes. Sela. Thou hast taken awaye all thy displeasure, and turned thy selfe from thy wrathfull indignacyon. Turne vs then, O God oure Saviour, and let thyne anger cease from vs. Wilt thou be displeased at vs for euer? and wilt thou stretch out thy wrath from one generation to another? Wilt thou not turne agayne & quicken vs, that thy people maye reioyse in the? Shewe vs thy mercy O Lord and graunt vs thy saluacyon. I wyll hearken what the Lorde God will saye: (concernynge me) for he shall speake peace vnto his people and to his sayntes, that they turne not agayne. For his saluacyon is nye the that feare him, that glozy maye dwell in oure lande. Mercy and trouth are met together, ryghtuousnesse and peace haue kyssed eche other. Trouth shall flourish out of the earth, & ryghtuousnesse hath looked downe fro heauen. Pee, the Lorde shall shewe lounge kyndnesse, and oure lande shall geue her increase. Ryghtuousnesse shall go before hym, and he shall directe his goynge in the waye.

C The. lxxxvi. Psalme.
INCLINA DOMINE AVREM.
A prayer of Dauid.

Wheare me, O Lorde, & heare me, for I am poore & in misery. Preserue thou my soule, for I am holy: my God saue thy seruauit, that putteth his trust in the. Be mercyfull vnto me (O Lorde) for I wyll call dayly vpon the. Comforte the soule of thy seruauit, for vnto the (O Lorde) do I lyft vp my soule. For thou Lord art good and gracious, and of greate mercy vnto all them that call vpon the. Geue eare O Lord vnto my prayer, and ponde the voyce of my humble desyres. In the tyme of my trouble I wyll call vpon the, for thou hearest me. Amonge the Goddes there is none lyke vnto the (O Lord) there is not one that can do as thou doest. All nacyns whom thou hast made, shall come and worshippe the (O Lord) and shall glozifye thy name. For thou art great, and doest wondrous thynges, thou art God alone. Teach me thy waye, (O Lord) and I will walke in thy trouth: O my hert vnto the, that it maye feare thy name. I wyll thanke the, O Lorde my God with all my hart, and wyll prayse thy name for euer.

For great is thy mercy towarde me and thou hast deliuered my soule from the nerthermost hell. O God, the proude are risen agaynst me, and the congregacions of naughtye men haue sought after my soule, and haue not set the before theyr eyes.

But thou, O Lorde God, art full of compassyon, and mercy, longe suffrynge, pleuous in goodnes and trouth. Turne the then vnto me and haue mercy vpon me: geue thy strength vnto thy seruauit, and helpe the sonne of thyne handmayde.

Shewe some token vpon me for good, that they whych hate me, maye se it, and be ashamed, because thou Lord hast helped me, and comforted me.

FVNDA MENTA EIVS.
A Psalme and songe of the sonnes of Corah.

Wer foundacions are vpon the holy byles: the Lorde louth the gates of Sion more then all the dwellynge of Jacob. Very excellent thynges are spoken of the, thou cyte of God. Sela. I wyll thynke vpon Rahab and Babylon, wyth them that knowe me. Beholde, pee the Philistynes also, and they of Tyre with the Moziars. Lo, there was he bozne. And of Syon it shalbe reported, that he was bozne in her, and the moost hyest shall stablish her. The Lorde shall rehearse it, whan he wyrteth vpon the people, that he was bozne there. Sela. The spyngers also and trompetters shall rehearse. All my frethe spynges shalbe in the.

DOMINE DEVS SALVTIS.
A song and Psalme of the sonnes of Corah, to the chaunter vpon Mahelath, to geue thankes: an instructio of the man the Ezrabyte.

O Lord God of my saluacion, I haue cryed daye and nyght before the: O let my prayer entre into thy presence, incline thyne eare vnto my callynge.

For my soule is full of trouble, and my lyfe draweth nye vnto hell. I am counted as one of the ygo downe vnto the pytte, and I haue bene euil as a man y bath no strength.

Rec amonge the deed, lyke vnto the that be wounded yre in the grane, whych be out of remembrance, and are cut awaye fro thy hande. Thou hast layed me in the lowest pytte pytt, in a place of darknesse and in the depe.

Thyne indignacyon lyeth harde vpon me, and thou hast vexed me wth all thy tormes. Selah. Thou hast put away my acquaintance farre from me, and made me to be abhorred of the. I am so fast in prison, that I can not get forth. My syght sayleth for very trouble: Lorde I haue called wonders amonge the deed? Shall the deed clyp vpon agayne, and prayse the?

Shall thy loupnge kyndnes be shewed in the graue, or thy saythfulnesse in destruccio?
Shall thy wonderous workes be knowen in the darcke, and thy ryghteousnes in the lande? where all thynges are forgotten? Vnto the haue I cryed O Lorde, and early shall my prayer come before the.

Lorde, why abhorrest thou my soule? and hydest thou thy face fro me? I am in my-sery, & lyke vnto hym that is at the popyt to dye (euen from my yowth vpon) thy terrors haue I suffered with a troubled mynde.

Thy wrathfull displeasure goeth ouer me, and the feare of the hath vndone me.

They came round about me daylye lyke water, and compassed me together on euery the Ezrahite.

* 10 sal. ci. a. My songe shall be all waye of the loupnge kyndnesse of the Lorde, wth my mouth wyl I euer be shewyng thy trueth from one generacyon to another.

For I haue sayde: mercy shall be set vpon for euer, thy trueth shall thou stablysh in the heauens. * I haue made a couenaunt wth my chosen, I haue sowne vnto Da-uid my seruaunt. * Thy seide wyl I sta-blysh for euer, and set vpon thy throne from one generacyon to another. Selah. O Lorde

* the very heauens shall prayse thy wonderous workes, & thy trueth in the congrega-cyon of the sayntes. For who is he amonge the cloudes, that shall be compared vnto the Lorde? And * what is he amonge the god-des, that shall be lyke vnto the Lorde?

God is very greatly to be feared in the councell of the sayntes, and to be had in reue-rence of all them that are aboute hym.

O Lord God of hostes, who is lyke vnto the? thy trueth (most myghtie lord) is on euery syde. * Thou rulest the ragynge of the see, thou stillest the waues therof, when they arise. Thou hast subdued Egypte and destroyed it, thou hast scattered thyne enemyes abroad wth thy myghtie arme. The hea-uens are thyne, the earth also is thyne: thou hast layed the foundacyon of the rounde worl-de, and all that therein is. Thou hast made the north and the south, Tabor and Hermon

The xc. psalme.
DOMINE REFUGIUM.

A prayer of Moses the man of God.

Lorde, thou hast bene oure refuge from one generacyon to another.
Before the mountaynes were brought forth, or euer the earth & the worlde were made, thou art God from euerylastyng and worlde without ende.

Thou turnest man to destruccio. Agayne, thou sayest: come agayne ye chyldren of men. * For a thousande yeres in thy syght are but as yester daye, seynge that is past as a watch in the nyght. As sone as thou scatrest them, they are euen as a shepe, and fade awaye sodenly lyke the grasse,

In the moynyng it is grene and groweth up, but in the euenynge it is cut downe & withered. For we consume awaye in thy displeasure, & are afrayed at thy wrathfull indignacyon. Thou hast set oure mildedes before the, and oure secrete synnes in the lyght of thy countena-ce. For when thou art angrie, all oure dayes are gone: we bypunge our yeres to an ende, as it were a tale that is tolde.

The dayes of oure age are thye score yea-res and ten: and though men be so stronge that they come to foure score yeres, yet is they? strength then but labour ad sorowe:
so soone passeth it awaye, and we are gone.

But who regardeth the power of thy wrath, for euen thereafter as a man feareth, so is thy displeasure. * Teach vs, to no-blye oure dayes, that we maye applye oure herkes vnto wysdome. Turne the agayne (O Lorde) at the laste, and be gracious vnto thy seruantes. Satisfye vs with thy mercy, and that soone: so shall we reioy-se and be glad all the dayes of oure lyfe.

Comforte vs agayne, now after the tyme me that thou hast plagued vs, and for the yea-res wherin we haue suffered aduersyte.

Shewe thy seruantes thy worke, and they? chyldren thy glory. And the glorious maiesty of the Lorde oure God be vpon vs: prospereth thou the worke of oure handes vpon vs, O prospereth thou oure handy worke.

hym wyl I trust. For he shall deliuer the some pestilence. He shall defende the vnder his wynges, and thou shalt be safe vnder his feathers: his saythfulnesse and trueth not be afrayed for any terror by night, ner for the arrow that flyeth by daye. For the pestilence that walketh in the darknesse, ner for the sicknesse that destroyeth in the noone daye. A thousande shall fall before the & ten thousande at thy ryght hand, but it shall not come nye the. Pee, with thyne eyes thou shalt thou beholde, and se the rewarde of the vngodly. For thou Lorde arte my hope, thou hast set thyne house of defence very hye There shall no euell happen vnto the, nether shall any plage come nye thy dwelling.

* For he shall geue his angels charge ouer the, to kepe the in all thy wayes.

They shall beare the in they? handes, that thou hurt not thy fote agaynst a stone.

Thou shalt go vpon the Lyon and Adder, the yonge Lyon and the Dragon shalt liuer him: I shall set him vpon, because he hath knowne my name. * He shall call vpon satisfye hym, and shewe hym my saluacion.

To tell of thy longynge kynnesse early in the mornynge, and of thy tructh in the nyght season. Upon an instrument of ten stryn- ges, & vpo the lute: vpo a lowde instrument & vpo the harpe. For thou Lord hast made me glad thowow thy workes, and I wyll re- ioice in geuyng prayse for the operations of thy handes. O Lord, how glorious are thy workes: thy thoughtes are very depe.

An vnwysse man doth not well cōsidre this, and a foole doth not vnderstande it. Whan the vngodly are grene as the gras, & whan all the workes of wyckednes do flourish, then shall they be destroyed for euer. But y Lord art the most hyest for euermore. For lo, thyne enemyes, O Lord, lo, thyne enemyes shall perishe, and all the workes of wicked- nes shall be destroyed. But my hope shall be exalted like the hope of an Anicozne, for

I am anoynted with fresh oyle: Myne eye also shall se hys lust of myne enemyes, and myne care shall heare hys desyre of the wic- ked that ryle vp agaynst me. The rygh- trous shall flourish lyke a palme tree, and shall sprede abroade lyke a Cedre in Libanus.

Such as be planted in the house of y Lord shall flourish in y courtes: (of the house) of our God. They shall also byng forth more frute in theyr age, & shall be fat and well likynge.

That they maye shewe, how true y Lord my strength is, and that there is no vnrygh- tousnesse in hym.

The xciiij. Psalme.
DOMINVS REGNAVIT.

The Lord is kyng, and hath put on glo- rious apparell: the Lord hath put on his apparell, & gydded hym selfe with strength: he hath made the rōnde worlde so sure, that it can not be moued. Euer sens the worlde begāne hath thy seate bene prepared, thou art from euerlastynge. * The floudes are rylen (O Lord) the floudes haue lyft vp theyr noyse, the floudes lyft vp the wanes. The waues of the see are myghtie, & rage horribly: but yet the Lord that dwelleth on hye, is mightier. Thy testimonies, O Lord, are very sure, holynesse becommeth thyne house for euer.

The xciiij. Psalme.
DEVS VLTIONVM.

O Lord God* to whome vengeance be- longeth: thou God to whome vengeā- ce belongeth, shewe thy selfe. Arise thou iudge of the worlde, and rewarde the proude after theyr desernynge. Lord how longe shall the vngodly, how longe shall the vngodly triumph? Howe longe shall all wicked doers speake so disdaynfully, & ma- ke soch proude boasting? They smyte down thy people, O Lord, and trouble thyne he- ritage. They murther the wyddow and the strainger, and put y fatherlesse to death.

And yet they saye. Cusch* the Lord shall not se, neither shall y God of Jacob regard it. Take hede, ye vnwysse amonge the people, O ye foolles, whan will ye vnderstande?

He that planted the care, shall he not heare? He that made the eye, shall he not se? He y nurtureth the beathen, it is he y teacheth man knowlege, shall he not be punyssh? * The Lord knoweth the thoughtes of mā, & they are but vayne. Blessed is the man, whome thou chastenest (O Lord) & teachest hym in thy lawe. That thou mayest geue hym pa- cience in tyme of aduersitie, vntyll the pte be dygged vp for the vngodly. For the Lord will not faple hys people, neither will he for- sake his inheritaunce. Untill righteousnes turne agayne vnto iudgemēt all soch as be true of hert shall folow it. Who will ryle vp w me agaynst the wicked? O who will take my part agaynst the euell doers? If the Lord had not helpe me it had not failed, but my soule had bene put to sylence. * But whē I sayd: my fote hath slipped, thy mercy (O Lord) helde me vp. * In the multitude of the sorowes y had in my herte, thy com- fortes haue refreshed my soule. Wilt thou haue any thynge to do with y stōole of wic- kednesse, whiche ymagineth mischefe as a lawe? They gather the together agaynst the soule of the righteous, and condemne the innocēt bloude. But the Lord is my refuge, & my God is the strength of my confidēce.

He shall recompence the their wickednes and destroye them in their owne malice, yee the Lord our God shall destroye them.

The xcv. Psalme.
VENITE EXULTEMVS.

Come, let vs synge vnto y Lord, * let vs hertely reioyse in the strēth of our saluacion. Let vs come before his pre- sence w thankesgeuyng, & shewe oure selfe glad in hym w psalmes. For the Lord is a great God, & a great kyng aboue all god- des. In his hande are all the cornes of the earth, & the strēth of the bylles is his also.

The see is hys, and he made it, & his handes prepared the drye lande. Come, let vs worshyppe & fall downe, and kuele before y Lord oure maker. For he is (the Lord) oure God: and we art y people of his pasture, and y shepe of his handes. * To daye yf ye will heare his voyce, harde not your her- tes, as in y pronokaciō: as i y daye of tēpta- cion in the wilderness. Whē poure fathers tēpted me, proued me, and saw my workes. Fourty yeaeres long was I greued with y generacion, & sayd: it is a people y do erre in theyr hertes: for they haue not knowen my wayes. * Vnto whō I swaie in my wrath that they shulde not enter in to my rest.

Synge

Synge vnto the Lord a new songe, synge vnto the Lord all the whole earth. Synge vnto the Lord, and prayse his name, be tellynge of his saluaciō from daye to daye. Declare hys honoure vnto the heathen, ad his wonders vnto all people. * For the Lord is great, and can not worthely be prayed: he is more * to be feared then all goddes. As for all y god- des of the heathen, they be but Idols, but it is the Lord that made the heauens.

Glorie and worshyppe are before hym, power & honoure are in hys Sanctuary. Ascribē vnto the Lord, (O ye kynredes of the people) ascribē vnto the Lord wor- shipe and power. * Ascribē vnto y Lord the honoure due vnto his name, byngge pre- sentes, & come into hys courtes. O wor- shipe the Lord in the beutye of holynesse, lett the whole earth stande in awe of hym.

Tell it out amonge the heathen, that the Lord is kyng: and that it is he which hath made the rōunde worlde so fast, that it can not be moued, and how that he shall iudge the people ryghteously. Let the heauens reioyse, and let the earth be glad: let the see make a noyse, and all that therein is.

Let the felde be ioyfull and all that is in it, shall all the trees of the wodd reioyce. before the Lord, for he commeth: for he commeth to iudge the earth: and with righ- teousnesse to iudge the worlde, and the peo- ple with his tructh.

The xcviij. Psalme.
DOMINVS REGNAVIT.

The Lord is kyng, the earth maye be glad therof: yee the multitude of the fles maye be glad therof. Clou- des and darcknesse are rōunde aboute hym, ryghteousnesse and iudgment are the habi- tacyon of his seate. There shall go a fyre before hym, and burne vp hys enemyes on euery syde. His lightenynges gaue synne vnto the worlde, the earth sawe it and was afrayed. * The bylles melted lyke waxe at the presence of the Lord, at the presence of y Lord of the whole earth. * The hea- uens haue declared his ryghteousnes, & all the people haue sene hys glory. * Con- founded be all they y worshipped carnely yma- ges, and that deuyte in vayne goddes: wor- shipe hym & all ye goddes. Sion heard of it and reioysed: and the daughters of Ju- da were glad because of thy iudgementes, O Lord. For thou Lord art hyer then all that are in the earth, thou art exalted farre aboue all goddes. O ye that loue the Lord, se that ye hate the thynge whych is euell: the Lord preserveth the soules of hys sayntes, he shall deliuer them from the hande of the vngodly. There is spōge up a lyght for the ryghteous, and a ioyfull gladnesse for soch as be true herted. * Reioyse in the Lord, ye ryghteous: * and geue thankes for a remembraunce of his holynesse.

CANTATE DOMINO.

A Psalme. * (of David).

Synge vnto y Lord a new songe, for he hath done maruelous thyn- ges. With hys awne ryght hande and wth his holy arme hath he gotten hym selfe the victory. The Lord declared hys saluacyon, his ryghteousnes hath he openly shewed in the syght of the heathen. He hath remembred hys mercie and tructh to- warde the house of Israel: & and all the en- des of the worlde haue sene the saluacyon of oure God. Shewe poure selues ioy- full vnto the Lord all ye landes, synge, re- ioyse, and geue thankes. * Prayse y Lord vpon the harpe, synge to the harpe wth a psalme of thankesgeuyng. With trom- pettes also and shawmes: shewe poure selues ioyfull before the Lord the kyng.

Let the see make a noyse and all y therein is, the rōunde worlde, and they that dwell therein. Let the floudes clappe their han- des, and let the bylles be ioyfull together.

Before the Lord, for he is come to iudge the earth. Wth ryghteousnes shall he iudge the worlde, & the people with equite.

The xcix. Psalme. * (of David.)
DOMINVS REGNAVIT.

The Lord is kyng, be the people ne- uer so vnpatient: he sytteth betwene the Cherubins, be the earth neuer so vnquiet. The Lord is greete in Sion, and hye aboue all people. They shall geue thākes vnto thy name, which is great, wo- derfull & holy. The kynges power lounth iudgemēt, y hast prepared equyte, thou hast executed iudgment ad ryghteousnes in Ja- cob. O magnifye the Lord oure God, and fall downe before his fote stole, for he is holy. Moses and Aaron among his prea- stes, and Samuel amonge soche as call vpo hys name: these called vpon the Lord, and he hearde them. He spake vnto them * out of the cloudy pyller, for they kepte hys te- stimonies, and the lawe that he gaue them. Thou heardest them (O Lord oure God) thou forgavest them (O God, and puny- shedst theyr awne inuencionys. O ma- gnifye the Lord oure God, and worshyppe him vpon his holy byll, for the Lord oure God is holy.

The c. Psalme.

A * Beioyfull in the Lorde (all ye landes) serue the Lorde with gladnes, and come before hys presence with a songe. We purre, that the Lorde he is God: It is he that hath made vs, and not we oure selues: we are his people, and the shepe of his pasture. O go youre waye into hys gates with thanckelgeuyng, ad into his courtes wyth prayse: be thankfull vnto hym, and speake good of hys name. For the Lorde is gracious, * hys mercy is euertlastinge, and his treuth endureth from generation to generation.

MISERICORDIAM ET

A Psalme of David.

M * songe shalbe of mercy and iudgment: vnto y (O Lord) will I synge. O let me haue vnderstandynge in the waye of godlynesse: Whan wilt thou come vnto me: I wyll walcke in my house with a perfecte herte. I wyll take no wicked thinge in hand. I hate the synnes of vnfaithfulnesse, there shall no soch cleue vnto me. A frowarde herte shall departe from me, I wyll not knowe a wycked personne. Who so pryncely slaundreth hys neyghboure, hym will I destroye: Who so hath also a proude lorde and an hys stomach, I wyll not suffre hym. Myne eyes loke vnto soch as be faithfull in the lande, that they maye dwell with me: who so leade the godly lye, he shalbe my seruauant. There shall no disceatfull personne dwell in my house: he that telleth lyes, shall not tary in my syght. I shall soone destroye all the vngodly that are in the lande, that I maye rote out all wycked doers from the cytie of the Lorde.

DOMINE EXAUDI ORATIONEM.

A prayer of the afflyct, when he hath an heuy hart, and powereth out hys complaynte before the Lorde.

C * Care my prayer, O Lorde, ad lett my cryenge come in vnto the. Hyde not thy face fro me in the tyme of my trouble: eclipse thyn eares vnto me when I call, O heare me, and pryght soone. For my dayes are consumed awaye lyke smoke, ad my bones are brent by, as it were a fyre brande. My hert is smytten downe and wythered lyke grasse, so that I forget to eate my bred. For the voyce of my gromynge, my bone wyll scarle cleue to my flesh. I am become lyke a bellycane of y wilderness, ad lyke an owle y is in y desert. I haue watched, & am euē as it were a sparrow, that sitteth alone vpon the house toppe. Myne enemyes reuyle me all the daye longe: & they that are madd vpo me, are sworne together agaynst me. For I haue eaten ashes as at vntere bred, and megled my drynck with wepyng. And that because of thyn indignacyon & wrath, for thou hast taken me vpo, & cast me downe. My dayes are gone lyke a shadowe, and I am wythered lyke grasse. But thou, O Lorde, shalt endure for euer, and thy remembraunce thou row out all generacyons. Thou shalt aryse, & haue mercy vpo Sion, for it is tyme that thou haue mercy vpo her, pee the tyme is come. And why: thy seruantes thinck vpon her stones, and it pitieth them to se her in the dust. The heathen shall feare thy name, O Lorde, & all the kynges of the earth thy maiesty. Whan the Lorde shall buyde vpo Sion, and whan his glory shal apere:

Whan he turneth him vnto the prayer of the poore destitute, & despyseth not theyr desyre. This shalbe wyrtten for those that come after: * y people which shalbe bozne, shall prayse the Lorde. For he hath looked downe from his Sanctuary, out of the heauen vpo the Lorde beholde y earth. That he might heare the mournynge of soch as be in captiuite, and delyuer the chyldren appoynted vnto death. That they maye declare the name of the Lorde in Sion, ad his worshippe at Jerusalem: Whē the people are gathered together, & y kyngdomes also to serue the Lorde. He brought downe my strength in my iourney, and shortened my dayes. But I sayed: O my God, take me not awaye in the myddest of myne age: as for thy peares, they endure thowow out all generacions. * Thou Lorde in the begynnyng hast layed the foundacyon of the earth, and the heauens are the worcke of thy handes. They shall perishe, but thou shalt endure: they all shall were olde as doth a garment, and as a vesture shalt thou chaunge them, and they shalbe chaūged. But thou art y same, and thy peares shall not fayle. The chylde of thy seruantes shall cotynue, & their seide shall stonde fast in thy syght.

De David.

D * Rayse the Lorde, O my soule, and all that is win me prayse his holy name. Prayse the Lorde, O my soule, and forget not all hys benefytes. Whych fougeueth all thy synne, & healeth all thy infirmities. Which saue thy lyfe from destruccyon, and crowneth the with mercy ad louynge kyndnesse. Whych satisfyeth thy mouth wyth good thynges, makynge the ponge and lusty as an Aegle. The Lorde executeth ryghteousnesse and iudgment, for all them that are oppressed with wronge. He sheweth he sheweth hys wayes vnto Moyses, hys worches vnto the chyldren of Israel. * The Lorde is full of compassion & mercy, longe sufferynge, and of great goodnesse. He will not allwaye be chydynge, nether kepeth he his anger for euer. He hath not dealt with vs after oure synnes, ner rewarded vs according to oure wyckednesse.

* For loke how hys the heauen is in comparison of the earth, so greates is hys mercy also towarde the y feare him. Loke how wyde also the east is from the west, so farre hath he set oure synnes from vs. Pee like as a father pitieth his awne chyldren, euē so is the Lorde merciful vnto the y feare him. For he knoweth wherof we be made, * he remembreth y we are but dust. The dayes of man are but as grasse, for he flourisheth as a floure of the felde. For as soone as the wynde goeth ouer it, it is gone, and y place therof shall knowe it nomore. But the merciful goodnesse of y Lorde endureth for euer & euer, vpon them that feare him, & hys ryghteousnesse vpon chylders chyldren. Euē vpon soch as kepe his couenant, & thincke vpon hys commaundementes to do them. The Lorde hath prepared hys seate in heauen, ad his kyngdome ruleth ouer all. O prayse the Lorde ye angels of his, ye y excell in strength: ye that fulfyll his commaundement, & herken vnto the voyce of his wordes. O prayse the Lorde all ye his hostes, ye seruantes of his, that do his pleasure. O speake good of y Lorde all ye workes of his, in all places of his dominion: prayse thou the Lorde, O my soule.

C The.cij. Psalme. * (for David.)

BENEDIC ANIMA.

R * Rayse y Lorde O my soule: O Lorde my God, thou art become excedynge glorious, thou art clothed with maiesty and honoure: Thou deckest thy selfe with lyght, as it were with a garment, and spreddest out the heauens lyke a curtayne. Which layeth the beames of his chambers in the waters, & maketh the cloudes his charret, & walketh vpo the wynges of y wynde. * He maketh his angels spretes, and his mynisters a flaminge fyre. He layed the foundacyon of the earth, that it neuer shulde moue at any tyme. Thou coueredst it w the depe lyke as wyth a garnēt: the waters stande in the hylls. * At thy rebuke they flye, at the voyce of thy thonder they are afrayed. They go vpo as hye as the hylls, and downe to the valleyes beneth: euē vnto the place, which thou hast appoynted for them. * Thou hast set them their boundes, which they shall not passe: nether turne agayne to couer the earth. He sendeth the springes into the ryuers, which rūne amōg the hylls. All bestes of y felde dryncke therof: and the wyld asses quench theyr thyrste. Belyde them shall the foules of y ayre haue theyr habitacyon, & synge amōge the braūches. He wattereth the hylls from aboue, the earth is fylled wyth the frute of thy workes. He dryngeth forth grasse for the cattell, ad grene herbe for the seruice of men: that he maye * drynke fode out of the earth: and wyne that maketh glad the herte of man, and oyle to make him a chearfull countenance, and bred to strength mā's herte. The trees of the Lorde also are full of sappe, euē the Cedres of Libanus which he hath planted. Wherin the byrdes make their nestes, and the fyre trees are a dwelling for the storkes. The hye hylls are a refuge for the wilde goates, and so are the stony rocks for the conyes. He appoynted the Moone for certayne seasons, and the Sunne knoweth hys goynge downe.

Thou makest darcknesse, that it maye be night, wherin all the bestes of the forest do myge. The lyos roaring after their praye to seke theyr meate at God. The sunne aryleth, and they get them awape together, and lye the downe in their denes. * An goeth forth to his worcke, ad to hys labour vntyll the euenynge. * O Lorde, how manifolde are thy workes: in wysdome hast y made them all: the earth is full of thy ryches. So is this greates ad wyde see also, wherin are thynges crepyng innumerable, both small and greates bestes. There go the shippes, and there is that * Leuia: thā, whom thou hast made, to take hys pasture therin. * These wayte all vpo the, that thou mayest geue them meate in due season. When thou geuest it them, they gather it: and when thou openest thyn had, they are fylled with good. Whē thou hydest thy face, they are troubled: whan thou takest awaye their breath, they dye, and are turned agayne to their dust. Whan thou lettest thy breath goo forth, they shalbe mad, and thou shalt renue the face of the earth.

The glorious maiesty of the Lorde shall endure for euer, the Lorde shall reioyse in hys workes. The earth shall tremble at the loke of hym: yf he do but touch the hylls, they shall smoke. I wyll synge vnto the Lorde as long as I lyue, I will prayse my God whyle I haue my beyng. And so shall my wordes please hi: my ioye shalbe in the Lorde. As for synners, they shalbe consumed out of the earth, and the vngodly shall come to an ende: * prayse thou the Lorde, O my soule. Prayse the Lorde.

Blessed * are those that be vndefyled in the waye: and walke in the lawe of the Lorde. Blessed are they that kepe his testimonies, and seke hym wth theyr whole herte. For they whych do no wyckednes, walke in his wayes. Thou hast charged that we shal diligently kepe thy commaundementes. O that my wayes were made so directe, that I myght kepe thy statutes.

So shall I not be confounded, whyle I haue respecte vnto al thy commaundementes. I will thanke a wth an vnlayned herte, whan I shall haue learned the iudgementes of thy ryghteousnesse. I will kepe thy ceremonies, O forsake me not vterly.

Where wth all shall a ponge man cleanse his waye? Euen by rulyngge hymselfe after thy worde. Wth my whole herte haue I sought the. O let me not go wronge out of thy commaundementes. * Thy wordes haue I byd wth my herte, that I shulde not synne agaynst the. Blessed art thou O Lorde, O teach me thy statutes. Wth my lippes haue I bene tellynge of all the iudgementes of thy mouth. I haue hadde as great delpte in the waye of thy testimonies, as in all maner of ryches. I will talke of thy commaundementes, and haue respect vnto thy wayes. My delpte shalbe in thy statutes, and I will not forget thy worde.

O do wel vnto thy seruaunt, that I may lyue and kepe thy worde. Open thou mine eyes, that I maye se the wonderous thynges of thy lawe. * I am a straunger vnto earth, O hyde not thy commaundementes from me.

My soule breaketh out, for the very feruent desyre that it hath alway vnto thy iudgementes. Thou hast rebuked the proud, and curled are they that do erre from thy commaundementes. O turne fro me shame and rebuke, for I haue kept thy testimonies.

Wynnes also vnto a lyte & speake agaynst me, but thy seruaunt is occupied in thy statutes. For thy testimonies are my delpte, and my counclers. * My soule cleaueth to the dust, O quyen thou me accordynge to thy worde. I haue knowledged my wayes, and thou berdest me, O teach me thy statutes. Make me to vnderstande the waye of thy commaundementes, and so shall I talke of thy wonderous workes.

My soule melteth awaye for very heynesse, comforte thou me accordynge vnto thy worde. Take from me the waye of lyeng, & cause thou me to make much of thy lawe.

I haue chosen the waye of truth, and thy iudgementes haue I layed before me.

I haue spoken vnto thy testimonies, O Lorde confounde me not. I will runne the waye of thy commaundementes, when thou hast set my herte at lybertie. Teach me O Lorde the waye of thy statutes, and I shall kepe it vnto the ende. Geue me vnderstandynge, and I shall kepe thy lawe, yee I shall kepe it wth my whole herte. Make me to go in the path of thy commaundementes, for therein is my desyre. Enclpne my herte vnto thy testimonies, and not to couetousnesse. O turne awaye myne eyes, lest they beholde vanitie: and quyen thou me in thy waye. O stablysh thy worde in thy seruaunt that I maye feare the. Take awaye therebuke that I am afrayed of, for thy iudgementes are good. Beholde, my delpte is in thy commaundementes, O quyen me in thy ryghteousnesse. Let thy louynge mercy come also vnto me, O Lorde, euen thy saluacion accordynge vnto thy word. So shall I make answere vnto my blasphemers phers, for my trust is in thy worde.

Take not the worde of treuth vtterly oute of my mouth, for my hope is in thy iudgements. So shall I alway kepe thy lawe, yee for euer & euer. And I will walke at liberty, for I feke thy commaundementis. I will speake of thy testimonies also, euen before kynges, & will not be ashamed. O, thinke vpon thy seruaut as concernynge thy worde, wherein thou hast caused me to put my trust.

The same is my comforte in my trouble, for thy worde hath quickened me. The proude haue had me excedyngly in derision yet haue I not synked from thy lawe.

For I remembred thyne euerlastynge iudgements, O Lorde, and receaued comforte: I am horriblely afrayed for the vngodly, that forsake thy lawe. * Gen. i. b. Job. f. a.

dementis: They that feare the, will be glad whē they se me, because I haue put my trust in thy worde. I knowe, O Lorde, that thy iudgements are ryght, & that thou of very faythfulnesse haste caused me to be troubled.

O Let thy mercifull kyndnesse be my comforte, accordynge to thy worde vnto thy seruante. O let thy lounge mercyes come vnto me, that I may lyue, for thy lawe is my delyte. Let the proude be confounded, for they go wyckedly aboute to destroye me: but I will be occupied in thy commaundementis.

Let such as feare the, and haue knowen thy testimonies, be turned vnto me. O let myne herte be sounde in thy statutes, that I be not ashamed. My soule hath longed for thy saluacion: and I haue a good hope because of thy worde.

Myne eyes longe soze for thy worde, sayenge. O when wylt thou comforte me.

For I am become lyke a bottell in the smoke, yet do not I forget thy statutes. How many are the dayes of thy seruaut: when wylt thou be aueraged of them that persecute me? The proude haue dygged pyt-tes for me, whyche are not after thy lawe.

All thy commaundementis are true, they persecute me falsly, O be thou my helpe.

They had almost made an ende of me vpon earth, but I forsake not thy commaundementis. O quicken me after thy lounge kyndnes, & so shall I kepe thy testimonies of thy mouth.

O Lorde, thy worde endureth for euer in heauen. * Thy truth also remaineth fro one generacion to another: thou haste layed the foundation of the earth, and it abydest.

They continue thys daye accordynge to thyne ordinaunce, for all thynges serue the. If my delyte had not bene in thy lawe, I shulde haue perished in my trouble. I wyl neuer forget thy commaundementis, for with them thou hast quickened me. I am thyne, O saue me, for I haue sought thy commaundementis. The vngodly layed wayte for me to destroye me, but I wyl consider thy testimonies. I se that all thynges come to an ende, but thy commaundement is excedyngly broode.

* (Lorde) What loue haue I vnto thy lawe: all the daye longe is my stude in it. Thou thowow thy commaundementis hast made me wylser than myne enemyes, for they are euer with me. I haue more vnderstandynge than my teachers, for thy testimonies are my studie. I am wylser then the aged, bycause I kepte thy commaundementis. I haue refrayned my fete from euery euell way, that I may kepe thy worde.

I haue not synked from thy iudgements, for thou teachest me. O how swete are thy wordes vnto my throte? Yee sweter than honny vnto my mouth.

Thowow thy commaundementis I get vnderstandynge.

O vnderstandynge, therefore I hate all wycked wayes. * Thy worde is a lantern vnto my fete, and a lyght vnto my pathes. I haue sworne and am stedfastly purposed, to kepe thy righteous iudgements. I am troubled aboute measure: quicken me, O Lorde, accordynge vnto thy worde. Let the freewill offerynge of my mouth please the, O Lorde, and teache me thy iudgements.

* My soule is alway in my hande, yet do not I forget thy lawe. The vngodly haue layed a snare for me, but yet swarued not I from thy commaundementis. Thy testimonies haue I claymed as myne heritage for euer: and why? they are the very tope of my hert. I haue applied myne herte to fulfyll thy statutes alwaye, euen vnto the ende. I hate them ymagineuall thyn- ges, but thy lawe do I loue. Thou art my defence and shyld, and my trust is in thy worde. I awaye fro me ye wycked, I will kepe the commaundementis of my God.

O stablish me accordynge vnto thy worde, that I may lyue, and let me not be disappointed of my hope. Holde thou me vp, and I shall be safe: yee my delite shall euer be in thy statutes. Thou hast troden downe all them that departe from thy statutes, for they ymagin, but disceate. Thou puttest awaye all the vngodly of y earth lyke drosse therefore I loue thy testimonies. My flethe trembleth for feare of the, and I am afrayed of thy iudgements. I deale with y thyng that is lawfull & ryght, O geue me not ouer vnto myne oppressours. Make thou thy seruaut to delyte in that which is good, that the proude do me no wronge. Myne eyes are wasted awaye with lokinge for thy health, and for y worde of thy ryghteousnesse.

O deale wyth thy seruaut accordynge vnto thy lounge mercy, and teache me thy statutes. I am thy seruaut, O graunte me vnderstandynge, that I maye knowe thy testimonies. It is tyme for the Lorde to laye to thyne hande, for they haue destroyed thy lawe. For I loue thy commaundementis aboute gold & precious stone. Therefore holde I streyght all thy commaundementis and all false wayes I vtterly abhorre.

LAVDATE NOMEN DOMINI,

Behold, * prayse the Lorde laude ye the name of the Lorde, prayse it Oye seruantes of the Lorde. Ye that stande in the house of the Lorde, in the courtes of the house of our God. O prayse the Lorde, for p Lord is gracious: O synge prayles vnto his name, for it is louely. * For why? p Lorde hath chosen Jacob vnto hym selfe, & Israel for hys awne possessyon. For I knowe p the Lorde is greate, and that oure Lorde is aboue all goddes. Whatsoeuer the Lorde pleased, that byd he in heauen and in earth, in the see, & in all deape places: * he byn-geth forth the cloudes from the endes of the worlde, & sendeth forth the lychteninges with the rayne, brynginge the wyndes out of hys treasuries. He * smote the fyrst borne of Egypte, both of man & of beast: * he hath sent tokens and wonders into the myddest of the, O thou lande of Egypte, vpon Pharao and all hys seruantes. * he smote diuerse nacyns, and slewe myghtye kynges: * he smote the kynge of the Amorytes, and Og the kynge of Basan, & all p kingdomes of Canaan. * And gaue theyr lande to be an heritage, eue an heritage vnto Israel his people. Thy name, O Lorde, endureth for euer, so doth thy memoriall, O Lorde, from one generacyō to another. * For the Lorde wyll auenge hys people, & he gracyns vnto to his seruantes. * As for the pimages of the heathen, they are but syluer and golde, the worcke of mens handes. They haue mouthes, & speake not: eyes haue they, but they se not. They haue eares, and yet they heare not, nether is there any bryth in theyr mouthes. They that make them, are lyke vnto them, and so are all they that put theyr trust in them. Prayse the Lorde ye house of Israel, prayse the Lorde ye house of Iuda.

Prayse the Lorde ye house of Levi, ye that feare the Lorde, prayse the Lorde.
Praysed be p Lord out of Sid, which dwelleth at Ierusalem. Hallelulah.

CONFITEMINI DOMINO.

O geue thanks vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious, and hys mercy endureth for euer. O geue thanks vnto the God of all goddes, for hys mercy endureth for euer. O take the Lord of all Lordes, for hys mercy endureth for euer. * Whych only doth greate wonders, for his mercy endureth for euer. Which by his excellent wylsome made the heauens, for hys mercy endureth for euer. Whych layed out the earth aboue the waters, for hys mercy endureth for euer. * Whych hath made greate lychtes, for hys mercy endureth for euer. The sunne to rule the daye, for hys mercy endureth for euer. The Moone and the starres to gouerne the nyght, for his mercy endureth for euer. * Whych smote Egypt wth theyr fyrst borne, for hys mercy endureth for euer. And brought out Israel from amonge them, for hys mercy endureth for euer. Wth a myghtye hande and stretched out arme, for hys mercy endu-reth for euer. Whych deuyned the reed see into partes, for hys mercy endureth for euer.
* And made Israel to go thozowe the myddest of it, for hys mercy endureth for euer. But as for Pharao and hys host, he ouerthrewe them in the reed see, for hys mercy endureth for euer.

* Whych

* Which led his people thozowe the wil-dernesse, for hys mercy endureth for euer.
* Which smote great kinges: for his mercy endureth for euer. Pee, & lye myghtye

* he smote the Amorytes: for hys mercy endureth for euer. And Og p kynge of Basan: for hys mercy endureth for euer.
And gaue a waye theyr lande for an heritage: for his mercy endureth for euer. Euen for an heritage vnto Israel hys seruait: for hys mercy endureth for euer. Which remembered vs, whē we were i trouble: for his mercy endureth for euer. And hath deliuered vs frō oure enemyes: for his mercy endureth for euer. * Whych geueth fode vnto all vs one of the songes of Sion. Howe shall we synge the Lordes songe in a straige lan-de. If I forget the, O Ierusalem, let my ryght hande forget her conynge. If I do not remembre the, let my tong cleue to the rofe of my mouth: pee, yf I preferre not Ierusalem in my myrth. Remembre the chyldren of * Edom, O Lorde, in the daye of Ierusalem, how they sayde: downe w it, downe with it: euen to the grounde. O daughter of Babylon, wasted with miserie: pee, hap-pye shall be he, that rewardeth the, as thou hast serued vs. * Blessed shall he be, that taketh thy chyldren, and throweth the agaynst the stones.

CONFITEBOR TIBI,

Of David.

I will geue thanks vnto p, O Lord, with my whole hert, euen & before the goddes, wyll I synge prayse vnto
the. * I wyll worshyppe towarde thy holy temple, and prayse thy name, because of thy louynge kyndnesse and trueth: for thou hast magnified thy name and thy worde aboue all thynges. When I called vpo the, thou hardest me, and enderdest my soule w moch strength. * All the kynge of the earth shall prayse p, O Lorde, for they haue heard the wordes of thy mouth. Pee, they shall synge in the wayes of the Lorde, that great is the glory of the Lorde. * For though p

Lorde be hye, yet hath he respecte vnto the lowly: as for the proude, he beholdeth him a farre of. Though I walke in the myddest of trouble: yet shalt p refresh me: thou shalt stretch forth thyne hand vpo the furiousnes of myne enemyes, & thy ryght had shall saue me. The Lorde shall make good his louynge kyndnesse towarde me: pee, thy mercy, O Lorde, endureth for euer, * despyse not then the wordes of thyne awne handes.

DOMINE PROBASTI.

To the chaunter, a psalme of Dauid.

Lorde, thou hast searched me out, and known me. Thou knowest my downe syttinge and myne bypyling: thou vnderstandest my thoughtes longe before. Thou art about my path, and about my bedd: & spyest out all my wayes. For lo, there is not a worde in my tōge, but p, O Lorde knowest it all together. Thou hast fastyned me behynde and before, and layed thyne hande vpon me. Soch knowledge is to wonderfull & excellent for me: I can not attayne vnto it. * Whyther shall I go then frō thy spere? or whither shall I go then frō thy presence? If I clyme vpo into heauen, thou art ther: yf I go downe to hell thou art there also. If I take the wynges of the mornyng, & remayne in the vtermost partes of the see. Euen ther also shall thy hande lead me: and thy right hande shall holde me. If I scape: peradventure the darcknesse shall couer me, then shall my nyght be turned to daye. Pee, the darcknes is no darcknes with the: but the night is all cleare as the daye, the darcknes & lycht (to the) are both a lyke.

For my repnes are thine, thou hast coue-red me in my mothers wōbe. I will geue thanks vnto the: for I am fearfully & won-derously made: maruelous are thy workes, & p my soule knoweth right well. My bones

To the chaunter, a psalme of Dauid.

Elypue me, O Lorde, from the euell man, and pserue me from the wycked mā. Which ymagin myschefe in their hertes: and steepe vpon strife all the dape loge. They haue sharpened theyr toges like a serpet: *adders popson is vnder their lpppes. Selā. Hepe me, O Lorde, from the handes of the vngodly: pserue me from the wyckedmen, which are purposed to ouerthrowe my goynges. The proude haue layed a snare for me: and spred a net abroad with coardes: yee, & set trappes in my waye Selā. I sayde vnto the Lorde: thou art my God, heare the voyce of my prayers, O Lorde. O Lorde God, thou strenght of my health, thou hast couered my heed in the day of battayll. Let not the vngodly haue his desyre, O Lorde, let not hys mischeuous y-maginacyon prosper: lest they be to proude.
Selā. * Let the mischefe of their awne lippes fall vpon the heed of them, that compasse me about. Let hote burninge coales fall vpon them: let them be cast into the fyre and into ppyt: & they neuer ryse vp agayne.

A mā full of wordes shal not prosper vpon the erth: euell shall hunte the wycked person, to ouerthrowe hym. Sure I am, that the Lorde wyl auenge the pooze, and maintene the cause of p helpeles. The righteous also shal geue thanks vnto thy name, and the iust shal contynue in thy syght.

DOMINE CLAMAVI.

A psalme of Dauid.

Lorde, I call vpon the: haste the vnto me, & consider my voyce, when I crye vnto the. Let my prayer be set forth in thy sight: as the incense: & let the lyftyng vpon of my handes be an eueninge sacrifice.

* Set a watch, O Lorde, before my mouth & kepe the doze of my lippes. Let not myne herte be inclyned to any euell thyng: let me not be occupied in vngodly workes, with p men p workes wyckednesse, & lest I cate of soch thynges as please the. Let the ryghteous rather synne me frendly & reprove me.

But let not ther pious balmes: breake myne heed: yee, I wyl praye yet agaynst theyr wyckednesse. Lett theyr iudges be ouerthrowen in stony places: that they may heare my wordes: for they are swete. Our bones lye scatered before the pit, lyke as whe one breaketh and heweth wood vpon p erth.

But myne eyes looke vnto the, O Lorde God: in the is my trust, Oh cast not out my soule. Hepe me fro p snare which they haue layed for me: & fro the trappes of p wicked doers. Let p vngodly fall into their awne nettes together: and let me euerscape them.

VOCE MEA AD DOMINVM.

The instruccyon of Dauid, a prayer whan he was in the caue.

Cryed vnto the Lorde w my voyce: I crye, euen vnto the Lorde byd I make my supplicacyon. I powzed out my complayntes before hym, and shewed hym of my trouble. Whe my sprete was in heuynesse, thou knewest my path: in the waye wherin I walked haue they preuely layed a snare for me. I looked also vpon my right hande, and se, there was no man that wolde knowe me. I had no place to flee vnto, and no man cared for my soule. I cryed vnto the, O Lorde, and sayde: thou arte my hope, and my portyon in the lande of the lpyng.
Consyde my cōplaynte: for I am brought very lowe. O delyuer me fro my persecutors: for they are to strōge for me. Wrynge my soule out of pson, & I maye geue thankes vnto thy name: which thyng p thou wylt graunte me, then shall the ryghteous resorte vnto my company.

DOMINE EXAUDI.

A psalme of Dauid, &c. (whan hys awne sonne persecuted hym.)

Care my prater, O Lorde, and considre my desyre: herke vnto me for thy treuth and righteounes sake. And entre not into iudgement with thy seruant:
for * in thy sight shal. no man lpyunge be iustified. For the enemy hath persecuted my soule: he hath synne my lyte dworne to p grounde: he hath layed me in the darcknes, as p men that haue bene longe deed. Therefore is my sprete vexed within me: and my herte within me is desolate. * Yet do I remembre the tyme past, I muse vpon all thy wor-kes: yee, I excercise my selfe in the workes of thy handes. I stretch forth myne hādes vnto the: my soule gaspet, vnto p as a thyr-stydde. Selā. * I am me, O Lorde, & p soone: for my sprete waxeth saynte, hid not thy face fro me, lest I be lyke vnto them that go downe into the pytt. O let me * heare thy louing kindnes by tymes in p morninge for in the is my trust: shewe p me the waye p I shuld walke in, for I lyft vp my soule vnto the. Delyuer me, O Lorde, from myne enemies: for I flye vnto the to hyde me.

Teach me to do the thyng p pleasest the,
for p art my God, let thy louinge sprete leade me forthe vnto the lande of ryghteounes.
Duycken me, O Lorde, for thy names sake, & for thy ryghteounes sake bringe my soule out of trouble. And of thy goodnes slaye myne enemies, and destroye all them that vexe my soule, for I am thy seruant.

BENEDICTVS DOMINVS.

Of Dauid.

Blessed be the Lorde my strenght, which teacheth * my handes to warre, & my fingers to fyght. My hope and my fortresse, my castell, and delyuerer, my defender in whd I trust, whych subdueth my people that is vnder me. * Lorde, what is mā, that thou hast soch respect vnto him? O the sonne of man, that thou so regardest hym?

* Man is lyke a thyng of naught, his tyme passeth awaye lyke a shadowe. Bowe thy heuens, O Lorde, & come downe, touche the mountaynes, & they shal smoke.

Cast forth the lychtyng, & teare the,
scote out thynne arrowes, and consume the.
Send downe thynne hande fro above, dely-uer me, & take me out of the great waters, from the bande of straunge chyldzen.

Whose mouth talketh of vanite, & theyr ryght hande is a ryght hande of wyckednes.
I wyl synge a newe songe vnto the, O God, & synge prayles vnto the vpon a ten-strynged lute. Thou that gnest victory vnto kinges, and hast delyuered Dauid thy seruant from the parell of the swerde.

Saue me, and delyuer me from the hāde of straunge chyldzen, whose mouth talketh of vanite, and theyr ryght hande is a ryght hande of iniquite. That oure sonnes maye growe vp as the ponge plantes, & that oure daughters maye be as the polshed cornes of the temple. * That oure garners may be full and plenteous with all maner of stoare: that oure shepe maye byynge forth thousand, and ten thousandes in oure stetes.

That oure oxen maye be stronge to laboure, that there be no decaye, no ledyng in to captiuitie, & no complaynyng in our stes.
Happye are the people that be in soche a case: yee blessed are the people, whych haue the Lorde for their God.

EXALTA BO TE DEVS.

A thankesgeuyng of Dauid.

Iwyl magnifye the, O God my kyng, and I wyl praye thy name for euer and euer. Euery dape wyl I geue thackes vnto the, and praye thy name for euer & euer. Greate is the Lorde, & maruelous worthy to be praysed, there is no ende of hys greatnesse. One generacyon shal praye thy workes vnto another, and declare thy power. As for me I wyl be talkyng of thy worship, thy glory, thy prayle, & wonderous workes. So that me shal speake of the myght of thy mar-uelous actes, and I wyl also tell of thy gre-atnes. The memorall of thynne aboundant kyndnes shal be the wdd, and men shal synge of thy ryghteounes. * The Lorde is gracious and mercifull, long sufferynge, and of greate goodnesse. The Lorde is louyng vnto euery mā, and hys mercy is ouer all hys workes. All thy workes prayse the, O Lorde, and thy sayntes geue thackes vnto the. They shewe p glory of thy kingdome, and talke of thy power. That thy power, thy glory & mightnesse of thy kyngdome, myght be knowne vnto me. * Thy kyngdome is an euerslastyng kyngdome, & thy dominio endureth thoroowe out all ages.

The Lorde vpholdeth all soche as fall, & lyfteth vp all those that be downe. * The eyes of all wayte vpon the, & thou genest them theyr meate in due season.

Thou openest thynne hāde, and fyllest all thynges lpyunge wyth plenteousnesse.

The Lorde is ryghteous in all hys wayes, and holy in all hys workes. The Lorde is nye vnto all them that * call vpon hym, yee all soche as call vpon hym faythfully.

He wyl fulfyll the desyre of the that feare hym, he also wyl heare theyr crye, & will helpe them. The Lorde pserueth all the that loue hym, but scattereth abroad all the vngodly. My mouth shal spake p pray-se of the Lorde, and let all flesh geue thanks vnto hys holy name for euer and euer.

Hallelulah.

Raple p Lorde, O my soule: why-le I lye will I praye the Lorde: I yee as long as * I haue any beyngge, I will synge prayles vnto my God. * O put not poure trust in p rinces, nor in any chyld of man, for there is no helpe in them. For when the byeth of mā goeth forth * he shal turne agayne to his carth, and then all his thoughtes perperthe. Blef-sed is he that hath the God of Jacob for hys help, & whose hope is in the Lorde hys God. Which made heauen and earth, the see, and all that therin is, whych kepeth hys promyse for euer. Whych helpeth them to ryght that suffre wronge, whych fedeth the hongrye. The Lorde loseth me out of p-son, the Lorde geureth syght to the blynde.

The Lorde helpeth them vp that are falle, the Lorde careth for the ryghteous. The Lorde careth for the straungers, he defendeth the fatherlesse & wyddowe: as for the waye of the vngodly, he turneth it vpside downe.

The Lorde thy God, O Sion: shal be kyng for euermore, and thoroowe out all generacyons. Hallelulah.

The proverbes of Salomon. Fo. xxvii.

The proverbes of Salomon.

The first Chapter.

The prayse of wysdome. We may not herken vnto the voluptuous prouocation and incengins of synners. Wysdome complayneth her to be despyed of all men, and prophesyeth destruccyon vnto her despyers.

The proverbes of Salomon, the sonne of dauid kynge of Israel: to learne wysdome, & to perceau the instruccyon, and to perceau the wordes of vnderstandynge: & thereby to receaue prudence, ryghteousnes, iudgement and equite. That the very simple myght haue wyt, and y the ponge me myght haue knowledg and true vnderstandynge. By hearing the wise ma shall come by more wysdome: and he y is endewed w vnderstandynge shall optayn wit to perceau a parable, & the interpretacyon therof, y wor-des of the wyle, & the darcke speaches of the same. * The feare of the Lorde is the begyn-nyng of wysdome. But foolles despyse wysdome & instruccyon. My sonne, heare thy fathers doctrine: & forsake not the lawe of thy mother: for that shall bringe grace vnto thy herd, and shall be as a cheyne about thy neck.

My sonne, consente not vnto synners, yf they entise the, & saye: come with vs, we will laye wayte for bloude, & lurke piously for the innocent without a cause: we shall swallowe then vp lyke the hell, & deuoure them quicke and hole, as those y go downe into the pyt.
So shall we fynde all maner of costelye ryches, & fill our houses w spoyles. Cast in thy lot among vs: & let vs haue all one purse. My sonne, walke not thou with the: refrayne thy fote fro their waye. For their fete runne to cuell: & are hasty to shed bloud. But in vayne is y net lased forth before y byrdes eyes: yee they the selues laye wayte one for anothers bloud & one of the wold slepe another. These are y wayes of all soch as be couetous, yone wold rauyn anothers lyfe. * Wysdome cryeth wout, & putteth forth her voyce in y stre-tes. She calleth before the congregacyon in the open gates, & she weth her wordes thowow y citty, saying: O ye chyldre, how longe wyll ye loue chyldeishnes: how longe wyll y scoyners depyte in scoynynge, & the vnwyle be enemyes vnto knowledg? Turne you vnto my correccon: lo, I wyll expresse my mynde vnto you, & make you vnderstande my wordes.

* I haue called, & ye refused it: I haue stretched out my hande: & no ma regarded it: but ye haue despysed my wordes, & set my correccon at naught. Therefore shall I also laugh in your destruccyon, & mocke you, when that thyng that ye feare cometh vpon you: euen when the thyng that ye be afrayed of, falleth in sodenly lyke a storme, & your misery lyke a tresp: yee, when trouble & benynes cometh vpon you. Then shall they call vpon me, but I wyll not heare: they shall seke me early, but they shall not fynde me. And that because they hated knowledg, & receaued not the feare of the Lorde: but abhorred my counsell, and despyed all my correccon. Therefore shall they eate the frutes of theyr awoe waye, & be filled with their awoe inuencos: for the turnynge a waye of the vnwyle shall slepe the, and the prosperite of foolles shall be their awoe destruccyon. * But whoso harkneth vnto me, shall dwell safely, and be sure from any feare of euill.

The. ii. Chapter.

Wysdome is to be embraced and set by. And an adourous woman is to be eschued.

My sonne, yf thou wilt receaue my wor-des, & kepe my commandmentes by the, that thou wylt enclyne thyne eare vnto wysdome, applye thyne hert then to vnderstandynge. For yf thou cryest after wysdome, and callest for knowledg: yf thou sekest after her as after money, and byggest for her as for treasure, then shalt thou vnderstande the feare of the Lorde, & fynde the knowledge of God. * For it is the Lorde y geueth wysdome, out of his mouth cometh knowledg and vnderstandynge. He hydeth by healthe for the ryghteous. He preserueth the welfare of the ryghteous, and defendeth them that walke spicerely: he kepeth them in the ryght pathe, and preserueth the waye of soche as serue hym with godlynesse. Then shalt thou vnderstande ryghteousnesse, iud-gement, and equyte: yee, and euery good path.
Yf wysdome entre into thyne herte, and thy soule depyte in knowledg: then shall coun-cell preserue the, and vnderstandynge shall kepe the. That thou mayest be deliuered fro the cuell waye, and from the man that speaketh frowarde thynges. From soche as leaue the hye strete, & walke in the wayes of darkenesse: which reioyse in doyng euell: and depyte in wycked thynges: whose wayes are croked, and they frowarde in theyr pathes.

That thou mayest be deliuered also fro the straunge womā, and fro her that is not thyne a wne: which geueth swete wordes, forsaketh the husbāde of her yowth, & forgetteth the conuenaunt of her God. For her house is enclined vnto death, & her pathes vnto hell.
All they y go vnto her come not agayn, nether take they holde of y waye of lyfe. Therefore, walke y in the waye of soch as be verteous, and kepe the pathes of the ryghteous.
For the iust shall dwell in the lāde: and thy that be perfecte shall remayne in it: but the vngodly shall be toied out of the lande: and y wycked doers shall be rased out of it.

The commandementes of God must be diligent:
if regarded and observed.

My sonne, * forget not thou my lawe, but se þy thynge hert kepe my comaundementes. For they shall prolonge the dayes & yerres of thy lyfe, and bringe þy peace.
Let mercy and faythfulnes neuer go fro the:
bynde them about thy necke, and wyte the faueur & good vnderstanding, in the syght of God and men. But thy trust in God withall witte. In all thy wayes haue respecte vnto hym: & he shall order thy goynges. * Be not wyle in thyne awne conceite: but feare the Lorde, and departe from euell: so shall thy nauell be whole, and thy bones stronge.

Honoure the Lorde wth thy substance:
and with thy firstlinges of all thyne increase. * (geue vnto the poore:) so shall thy barnes be fylled with plenteousnesse: and thy presses shall flowe ouer with swete wyne. My sonne, despyse not the chastenynge of the Lorde, nether saynte whē thou art rebuked of hym.
* For whom the Lorde loueth, hym he chastenth, and yet delieth in him, euen as a father in his awne sonne. Well is him that fin-deth wysdome, and opteyneth vnderstanding: for the getting of it is better then any marchaundise of syluer, and the profet of it is better then golde. * Wysdome is more worth then precious stones: and all the thin-ges that thou canst desire are not to be compared vnto her. Upon her ryght hande is longe lyfe, and vpon her left hande is riches and honour. Her wayes are pleasaunt wayes and all her pathes are peaceable. She is a * tree of lyfe to them that laye hold vpon her, and blessed is he that kepeth her fast.

With wysdome hath the Lorde layed the foundacion of the erth: and thowowe vnderstandinge hath he stablyshed the heauens.
Thowowe his wysdome the deapthes breake vp, and the cloudes droppe downe the dew.
My sonne, let not these thynges departe, from thyne eyes: but kepe my lawe and my councell, that thou mayest haue the pleasure of longe lyfe and vnderstandinge: for they shall be lyfe vnto my soule, & grace vnto my mouth. Then shalt thou walke safely in thy waye: and thy fote shall not stumbe. * If þy sleepest, thou shalt nott be afrayed: but shalt take thy rest, and slepe sweetely. Thou nedest not to be afrayed of any soden feare, nether for the vyolent rushynge in of the vngodly when it cometh. For the Lorde shall stode by thy syde, and kepe thy fote, that thou be not taken. Withdrawe no good thinge from them that haue nede, so longe as thyne hand is able to do it. Saye not vnto thy neygh-boure: go thy waye, & come agayne, to mo-rowe wyl I geue the: where as thou haste nowe to geue hym. Intende no hurte vnto thy neyghboure, seynge he dothe dwell in rest by the. Strype not lyghtely wth hanpe man without cause, where as he hath done the no harme. * Followe not a wicked mā, and chouse none of hys wayes: for the Lorde abhoreth the frowarde: but hys councell is amonge þy ryghteous. The curse of the Lorde is in the house of the vngodly: but he blesseth the dwellinges of the ryghteous. As for the scornefull dothe not he laugh them to scone: but he geueth grace vnto the lowly. The wise shall haue honour in possession: but the meane is the promocioun that foloweth haue.

The .iiij. Chapter.

Wysdome and her frutes ought to be searched.

Heare, O ye chyldren, the fatherly exhortacyon, and take good heade, that ye may lerne wysdome. For I haue geuen you a good doctryne, forsake nott ye my lawe. For when I my selfe was my fathers deare sonne, and tenderly beloued of my mother: he taught me also, and sayde vnto me: * Lett thyne herte receaue my wordes, kepe my commandementes, and thou shalt lyue. Set the wysdome: and get the vnder-standing: forget not þy wordes of my mouth, and shynke not from them. Forsake her not and she shall preserue the: loue her, and she shall kepe the. The chiefe poynte of wysdome is, that thou be wyllynge to optayne wysdome: and befoze all thy goodes to gett the vnderstandinge. * Make moche of her and she shall promote the: Pee, yf thou embrace her, she shall byynge the vnto honoure.

She shall make the a gracious heed, and garnyshe the with a crowne of gloze. Heare my sonne, and receaue my wordes and the yeares of thy lyfe shall be many. I haue prepared the, the waye of wysdome, and ledde the into the ryght pathes. So that yf thou goest therin, there shall no straytnesse hynder the:
and when thou runnest, thou shalt not fall.
Take fast holde of doctryne, and let her nott go: kepe her, for she is thy lyfe. * Come nott in the pathe of the vngodly: and walke nott in the waye of the wycked. Abhorre it, and go not therin: departe asyde, and passe ouer by it. For they cannot slepe, excepte they haue fyrst done some myschefe: nether take they anyeste, excepte they haue fyrst done some harme. For they eate the breade of wyckednesse, and dryncke the wyne of robberye.
The pathe of the ryghteous shyneth as the lyght, that is euer brighte and brighte vnto the perfect daie. But the waye of the vngodly is as the darcknesse: they knowe nott wher they fall. * My sonne, marcke my wordes, and encline thyne eare vnto my saynges. Let the not departe from thyne eyes: but kepe them euen in the myddell of thyne herte.

Of Salomon,

Jo. xxi.

herte. For they are lyfe vnto all those that fynde the, and healeth vnto all theyr bodyes.
Kepe thyne herte with all diligēce, for there vpon hangeth lyfe. Put awaye from the a frowarde mouth, & let the lippes of sclauder be farre from the. Let thyne eyes beholde the thyng þy is ryght, and let thyne eye lyd-des loke strayght befoze the. Wode the path of thy fete, and let all thy wayes be ordred a ryght. * Turne not asyde, nether to þy ryght hande ner to the lefte, but withholde thy fote from euell. * (For the Lorde knoweth the wayes that are on the ryght hande. As for the wayes that be on the lefte hande, they be frowarde. For he shall direct thy goynges, and thy wayes shall be gyde in peace.

The .v. Chapter.

The warneth to eschue and flee whozome. He forbyddeth prodigallite and wastfull spending. He wylleth be to liue of oure awne laboures. Men must loue theyr wyues.

My sonne, geue hede vnto my wysdome, and bowe thyne eare vnto my prudence: that thou mayest re-garde good counsel, and that thy lippes maye kepe knowledge. * (Applye not thou thy selfe to the discreetnesse of a woman) * For þy lyp-pes of an harlot are a droppingg honny combe and her throte is moze glisterynge then oyle.

But at the last she is as bytter as worm-wod, and * (her tonge) as sharpe as a twoedged swerde. Her fete go downe vnto death and her steppes pearle thowowe vnto hell.

Darchaule thou dwellynge with her wylt ponder the path of lyfe: so vntedfast are her wayes, þy thou canst not knowe the. Heare me nowe therfoze (O my sonnes) & departe not fro the wordes of my mouth. Kepe thy waye farre from her, and come not nye the dozes of her house. That thou geue not thy strength vnto other, & thy yeares to þy cruell.

That other men be not fylled with thy goo-des, and that thy laboures come not in a straunge house. Pee that thou mourne not at the last (when thou hast spent thy body and lusty greane yowth) and the laye: Alas, why hated I noutroure: why did my herte despyse correccion? Wherfoze was not I obedient vnto the voyce of my teachers, and hekened not vnto them that infourmed me? I am come almost into all misfortune, in the myddell of the multitude and cōgregacion. * Drincke of the water, of thyne awne well and of þy ryuers that runne out of thyne awne springes. * Let thy welles flowe out a broade, that there may be ryuers of water in the stre-tes: but let the be onely thyne awne, and not strangers with the. Let thy well be blessed and be glad with the wyfe of thy yowth. Lo-uinge is the hynde, and frendly is the Roo: let her blesse al waye satisfye the, and holde the euer contē with her lone. My sonne, why wylt thou haue pleasure in an harlot, & embrace the bolome, of another woman? * For euery mans wayes are ope in the syght of the Lorde, and he pondreth all theyr goynges:

The wyckednesse of the vngodly shall catch hym selfe, and with the snares of hys awne synnes shall he be trapped. He shall dye without amendement, and for hys greate folysh-nesse he shall go astraye.

The .vi. Chapter.

The flouthfull and slough is pycked and stry-red to wycke. The crymathe is reproued. Aduou-tyre ought to be earnestly auoyded.

My sonne * yf þy be suertye for thy neyghboure, and hast fastened thyne had for another man, thou art bounde wth thyne awne wordes, and taken with thine awne speache. Therfoze, my sonne, do thys & thou shalt be discharged: whē thou art come into thy neighbours dainger. Soo thy wayes then soone, hūble thy selfe, and with thy fren-des intreate thy creditour: let not thyne eyes sleepe, ner thyne eye lyddes slomber. Saue thy selfe as a doo from the hande of the hun-tre, & as a byrde from the hande of the fouler. Go to the Emmet (thou slougarde) conlydre her wayes & lerne to be wyle. She hath no gypde, no ouerfear nor ruler: yet in þy sō-mer she prouideth her meate, and gathereth her fode to gether in the haruest. * Howe longe wylt thou slepe, thou sloughy man?

When wylt thou aryse out of thy slepe? Pee sleepe on styll a lytle, slōber a lytle, fould thy-ne handes together yet a lytle, that þy mayest sleepe: so shall pouertye come vnto the as on that traunyleth by the waye, & necessyte = ke a weakened man. * (But yf thou benot slou-ghfull, thy haruest shall come as a springynge well, & pouer-tye shall flye farre from the.) An vngodly person, a wycked mā goeth with a frowarde mouth he wycketh with his eyes, he tokeneth with hys fete, he poynteth with hys fyngers, he is euer ymagynynge myschefe, and froward-nesse in hys herte, & causeth discorde. Ther-foze shall hys destruccyon come hastily vpon him, sodenly shall he be all to broken, and not be healed. * These syxe thynges doth the Lorde hate, and the seuenth he vterly abhorreth: A proude looke a lyngge tōge, handes þy shed innocent bloude, an herte that goeth a-boute wth wycked ymaginacyons * fete that be swyfte in rennyng to do myschefe, a falle wytnesse that bringeth vp lyes, and so-che one as soweth discorde amonge brethzen.

My sonne, kepe thy fathers commaunde-ment, and forsake not the lawe of thy mother.
Put the vp together in thyne herte, and byn-de the aboute thy neck. That they may leade the where thou goest, preserue the whē thou art a slepe, and that when þy awakest, thou mayest talke of them. For * the commaun-dement is a lanterne, and the lawe a lyght: pee chastenynge and noutroure is the waye of lyfe that they may kepe the from * the euell woman, and from the flatterynge tonge of þy harlot:

harlot: that thou lust not after her beauty in thine herte, and lest thou be taken with her fayre looks. An harlot wyl make a man to begge his bread, and a woman wyl hunt for the precious lyfe. Have a man take fyze in his bolome, and his clothes not be brent? D Can one go upon hote coales, and his fete not be hurte? Euen so, who soeuer goeth into his neyghbours wyfe, and toucheth her, shall be vngilty. * When ho not betterly doth a thete that stealeth to satisfye his soule, when he is hungry: but yf he maye be gotten, he restozeth agayne seuen tymes as moche, or els he maketh recompense with all the good of his house. But who so com-mitted aduoutry with a womā, he is a foole and bryngeth his lyfe to destruction. He getteth hym selfe also shame and dishonour, soche as shall neuer be put out. For the gelousy and vrozath of the man wyl not be intreated, no though thou woldest offre him great gyftes to make amendes, he will not receaue thy.

The vii. Chapter.

God ought to feared and honoured. His commaundmentes ought to be kept, vnto all appetites and desires ought to be bound.

M y sonne, * kepe my wordes, & laye vp my commaundmentes by the. Kepe my commaundmentes and my lawe, euē as the apple of thine eye, as thou shalt lyue. Bynde them vpon thy fyngers, and wyte them in the table of thine herte. Saye vnto wysdome: thou art my syster, and call vnderstandynge thy kynswomā: that they maye kepe the from the straunge woman, and fro the harlot which geueth swete wordes. For out of the wyndowe of my house I looked thowme the latysse, & behelde the symple people: and amonge other ponge folkes I spyed one ponge foole, goinge ouer the stretes, by the corner in the waye towarde the harlots house, in the twylight of the euenynge, when it beganne nowe to be nyght & darcke.

And beholde, there mett hym a woman wā hyde, she was full of loude wordes, & rebdy to daly: whose fete coude not abyde in the house, nowe is she without, now in the stretes, and layeth abayn in euery corner, she caught the pongeman, kylled hym, and was not ashamed, sayinge: I had a bowe of peace offerynge to paye, & and thys daye I persoume it. Therfore came I forth to mete the, that I myght seke thy face, and so I haue founde the. I haue deckte my bed with couerynges and clothes of Egipte. My bed haue I made to smell of Myrre, Aloes, and Cynamon. Come lett vs ly together, and take oure pleasure tyll it be daye lyght: and we wyl enioye the pleasures of loue. For the good man is not at home, he is gone farre of. He hath taken the bagge of moneye with hym: And will retourne home at the appoynted solempne fester. Thus with many swete wordes she ouercame him, and with her flatterynge lyppes she entyled hym spdehlye to folowe her: as it were an ore led to the slaughter, & lyke as it were a foole that laugheth whē he goeth to the stocks, to be punished, so lōge tyll she had wounded his lyuer with her dart: lyke as yf a byrde hasted to the snare, not knowynge that the parell of his lyfe lyeth ther vpon. Heare me nowe therfore, O my chyldren, and marcke the wordes of my mouth. Let not thine herte wandze in her wayes, and be not thou discaued in her pathes. For many one hath she wounded and cast downe, yee many a strōge man hath bene slayne by the meanes of her. Her houses are the waye vnto hell, and byynge men downe into the chambers of death.

The prayse of the wysdome of God.

D oth not * wysdome crye: doth not I vnderstandynge put forth her voyce: Standeth she not in the hye places in the stretes and wayes: doth she not crye before the whole cytie, and in the gates where men go out and in: It is you, O ye men (sayeth she) whom I call: vnto (the chyldren of men) do I lyft vp my voyce. Take hede vnto knowledg O ye ignorant be wylse in herte, O ye folles. Geue care, for I wyl speake of greute matters, and open my lyppes to tell thynges that be ryght. For my throte shalbe talkynge of the trueth and my lyppes shalbe vngodlynesse. All the wordes of my mouth are righteous, there is no frowardnesse nor falshe theerin. They are all playne to loche as wyl vnderstande, and ryght to them that fynde knowledg. Receaue my doctryne, and not syluer: and my knowledg, more then fyne golde. For * wysdome is more worth then precious stones, yee all thynges that thou canst desyre, maye not be copared vnto it. I wysdome haue my dwellynge with knowledg, and prudent counsell is myne awne. The feare of the Lorde abhorreth wyckednesse, pryde, dydayne, and the euell waye: and a mouth that speaketh wycked thynges, I vtterly abhorre. I can geue counsell, and I conferre thynges: I haue vnderstanding, I haue strength. * Thowme me, kynge reygne: thowme me counsellars make iust lawes. Thowme me, do pynces beare rule, and all iudges of the earth execute iudgement. I am lounge vnto those that loue me: and * they that seke me early, shall fynde me. Ryches and honoure are with me, yee excellent goodes and ryghteousnes. My seute is better then golde and precious stone, and myne encrease more worth then fyne syluer. I wyl gyde gyde the in the waye of ryghteousnes, and in the strete of iudgement. That I maye sende prosperite to those that loue me, and to encrease their treasure. * The Lorde him selfe had me in possession: in the begynnynge of his wayes, or euer he beganne his workes a fore tyme. * I haue bene ordered from euerlastynge, and fro the begynnynge or euer the earth was made. When I was bozne, there were neither depthes nor springes of water. Before the foundacyons of the moztaynes were layed, yee before all hylls was I bozne. The earth and all that is vpon the earth was not yet made, no not the grounde it selfe. * For when he made the beaueys, I was present: when he sett vp the depthes in ordze, whē he hanged the cloude aboue: whē he fastened the springes of the depe: When he shut the see within * certayne bowndes, that the waters shulde not go ouer their marches the commaunded.

When he layed the foundacyons of the earth I was with him, ordzynge all thynges: delitynge dayly, and retyngynge allwaye before him. As for the rounde copase of thys worlde, I make it ioyfull: for my delyte is to be amonge the chyldren of men. Therfore herken vnto me, O ye chyldren, blessed are they that kepe my wayes. O geue care vnto nourtoure, be wylse, and refuse it not. Blessed is the man that heareth me, watchynge dayly at my gates, and geuyng attendaunce at the postes of my doores. For who so fyndeth me, fyndeth lyfe, and shall obtayne fauour of the Lorde. But who so offendeth agaynst me, hurteth his awne soule. All they that hate me, are the louners of death.

Wysdome moueth all men to embrace her. The propertie of a wyse.

W ysdome hath buylded her selfe an house, & hewen out seuen pylles: she hath kylled her vi-tayles, powred out her wyne, & prepared her table. She hath sent forth her maydens to crye vpon the best place of the cytie: Who so is ignorant, let hym come hyther. And to the vnwyse she sayde: Come on your waye, cate my bread, and drinke my wyne, which I haue poured out for you. For sake ignorance, and ye shall lyue: and se that ye go in the waye of vnderstandynge. Who so reproveth a scoz-nessfull personne, getteth him selfe dishonour: and he that rebuketh the vngodly, scayneth him selfe. Reproue not a scozner lest he owe the euell wyl: but rebuke a wyse man, and he wyl loue the. Geue a discrete man but an occasyon, and he wyl be thy wyser: teach a ryghteous mā, and he wyl increase in knowledg. * The feare of the Lorde is the begynnynge of wysdome, & the knowledg of holy thynges is vnderstandynge. For thowme me thy dayes shalbe prologed, and the yeares of thy lyfe shalbe many. If thou be wylse, thy wysdome shal do thy selfe good but yf thou thynkest scozne therof, it shalbe thyn awne harme. A folye the restless wo-man, full of wordes, and socha one as hath no knowledg, fytteth at the doore of her house, and in the hye places of the cyte, to call soch as go by, and that walke streyght in the wayes. Who so is ignorant (sayth she) let hym come hyther, and to the vnwyse she sayeth: stollen waters are swete, and the bread that is preyely eaten, hath a good taste.

And he doth not consyde, that they are but deed which be there, and that her gestes are in the depe of hell. * For he that wyl be ioyned vnto her, shall go downe to hell: but he that auoydeth from her, shalbe saued.

The x. Chapter.

In thys Chapter and in all that folowe vnto the thyrtye, the wyse man sheweth by dyuers sentences whych he calleth parables, to folowe bet-tes and fle byes: And sheweth also what proce cometh of wysdome, and what hēd: aunce proce cometh of folye.

Proverbes of Salomon.

A wyse * sone maketh a glad father, but an vndiscrete sone is an heynesse vnto his mother. * Treasures yare wyckedly gotten, profyte no thyng: but ryghteousnesse deliuereth fro death.

* The Lorde wyl not let the soule of the righteous suffre hōger, but he taketh a waye the ryches of the vngodlye: An ydle hande maketh poore, but a quyk labouringe hāde maketh ryche. * (who so regardeth letynge, sedeth & wynde, and doth but folowe byes that haue taken the syght.) * Who so gathereth in Sommer, is wyse: but he that is slougysh in haruest, bryngeth him selfe to confusyon. Blessynge are vpon the heade of the ryghteous, and the mouth of the vngodly kepeth myschefe in secrete. * The memoypall of the iust shal haue a good repote, but the name of the vngodly shal stynke. A wyse mā will receaue warnynge, but a pratinge sole shall be punished. * He that leadeh an innocent lyfe, walketh surely: but who so goeth a wronge waye shalbe knowne. * He yf wycketh with his eye, wyl do some harme: but he that hath a foolyshe mouth, shalbe beaten. The mouth of a ryghteous man is a well of lyfe, but yf mouth of the vngodly kepeth myschefe in secrete. Euill wyl stereth vpon stryfe, * but the loue couereth y multitude of synnes. In lyppes of him yf hath vnderstandynge, a man shal fynde wysdome, but yf rod belongeth to yf backe of the folye. Wyse mā laye vp knowledg, but yf mouth of yf folye is ripe destruccō. The ryche mā goodes are his stronge holde, but the awne pouer-tye feareth yf poore. The ryghteous labour-eth to rect to do good, but the vngodly vseth hys encrease vnto synne. To take hede vnto chastenynge of nourtoure, is the waye of lyfe: but he that refuseth to be reformed disceaueth him selfe. * Dissemblynge lypyes kepe hatred secretly, and he that speaketh any slander, is a foole. Where moch bablynge is, there must nedes be offence: and he that refrayneth his lypyes, is wyle. An innocent tonge is a noble treasure, but the herte of the vngodly is nothyng worth. The lypyes of the ryghteous fede a whole multitude, but foles shall dye in their awne folye.

The blessing of the Lorde maketh ryche men * as for carefull traualle, it doth nothyng therto. A foole doth wyckedly and maketh but a spoete of it, but wysdome ruleth the man that hath vnderstandynge.

The thyng that the vngodly are afrayed of, shall come vpon them, but the ryghteous shall haue their desyre. The vngodly passeth when the tempest cometh: but the ryght-wyle remaineth sure for ever. As vynerger is to the teth, and as smoke is vnto the eyes, even so is a sloughy personne to them that sende hym forth. The feare of the Lorde maketh a longe lyfe, but the yeares of the vngodly shall be shortned. The patient abydynge of ryghteous shall be turned to gladnesse, but the hope of the vngodly shall perishe. The waye of the Lorde geueth a courage vnto the godly, but it is a feare for wycked doers. * The ryghteous shall neuer be ouerthrowne, but the vngodly, shall not remaine in the lande. * The mouth of the iust wylbe talkynge of wysdome, but the tonge of the frowarde shall perishe.

The lypyes of ryghteous are occupied in acceptable thynges, but the mouth of the vngodly taketh them to the worst.

The. xj. Chapter.

A false balace is an abhominacyon vnto the Lorde, but a true weight pleaseh him. Where pryde is, there is shame also and confusyon: but where as is lowyness, there is wysdome. The innocent dealynge of the iust shall leade them, but the wyckednes of such as dissemble, shall be their awne destruccyon. * Riches helpe not in the daye of vengeance, but ryghteousnesse deliuereth fro death. The ryghteousnesse of the innocent ozdeth his waye, but the vngodly shall fall in his awne wyckednesse.

The ryghteousnesse of the iust shall deliuereth, but the wycked shall be taken in theyr awne vngodlynesse. * When an vngodly man dyeth, his hope is gone, the confydence of riches shall perishe. The ryghteous shall be deliuered out of trouble, and the vngodly shall come in his steade. Thowowe y mouth of y dissembler is his neyghboure destroyed, but thowowe knowledge shall the iust be deliuered. * When it goeth well with the ryghteous, the cytie is merry: and when y vngodly perishe, there is gladnesse. When the iust are in wealth, the cytie prospereth: but when the vngodly haue the rule, it decayeth. A foole bringeth vpon a slander of his neyghboure, but a wyle man wyl kepe it secret. * A dissemblynge person wyl discover prey thynges, but he that is of a faithful herte, wyl kepe counsell. * Where no good counsell is, there the people decaye: but where as many are that can geue counsell, there is wealth. * He that is suertye for a strainger, hurteth him selfe: and he that medleth not wth suertys, is sure. A gracious woman maynteyneth honestye, as for the wycked, they maynteyne ryches. * He that is mercifull doth hym selfe a benefyte, but who so hurteth his neyghboure, is a tyrant. The labour of the vngodly prospereth not, but he that soweth ryghteousnesse, shall receaue a sure rewarde. Lyke as ryghteousnesse byngeth lyfe: even so to cleue vnto euell, byngeth death. The Lorde abhorreth the that be of a fawned hert, but he hath pleasure in them that are of an vndeyled conuersacyon. The wycked amendeth not for plage vpon plage, but the fede of the ryghteous shall be preserued. A fawne woman without discrete maners, is lyke a ryng of gold in a swynes snoute. The desyre of the ryghteous is acceptable, but the hope of the vngodly is indignacyon. * Somemā geueth out his goodes, and is the rycher, but the nygard (haupnge ynough) wyl departe from nothyng, and yet is euer in pouertye.

* He that is liberrall in geuyng, shall haue plenty, and he that watereth, shall be watered also him selfe. Who so hoordeth vpon his corne, shall be cursed amonge the people: but blessing shall lyght vpon his head that geueth foode. He that laboureth for honestye, fyndeth his desyre: but who so seeketh after myschefe, it shall happen vnto hym. He that trusteth in his ryches, shall haue a fall, but the ryghteous shall floreye as the grene leafe. Who so maketh dysquetyes in his awne house, he shall haue wynde for his heritage, and the foole shall be seruauant to the wyle. The frute of the ryghteous is a tree of lyfe: and he that endeuoureth him selfe to wyne mens soules is wyle. * If ryghteous be recouered vpon earth, howe moch moze then the vngodly and the synner?

The. xij. Chapter.

Who so loveth wysdome, wyl be chastyt to be reformed: but he y hateth to be reformed, is a foole. * A good man is acceptable vnto the Lorde, but the wycked ymagines wyl be cōdemne. A man cannot endure in vngodlynesse, but the rote the rote of the ryghteous shall not be moued. * A huswylly womā is as a crowne vnto her husbāde: but she that behaueth her selfe vnhonestly, is a corrupcion in hys bones. The thoughtes of the ryghteous are ryght, but the ymaginacion of the vngodly are disceatfull. The talkynge of the vngodly is howe they maye laye wayte for bloud, but y mouth of the ryghteous wyl deliuer them. * God ouerturneth the estate of the wycked & they stande not: but the house of y ryghteous shall stande steadfaste. A man shall be commended for hys wysdome, but a foole shall be despyed. * A symple man which laboureth and worketh, is better then one that is gorgyous and lacketh bread. A ryghteous mā regardeth the lyfe of hys catell, but the vngodly haue cruel hertes. * He that sylleth his lande, shall haue plenteousnesse of bread: but he y foloweth ydolnes: is a very foole.

A diligent hande shall beare rule, but the ydle shall be vnder tribute. * Heuyneesse discorageth the herte of man, but a good worde maketh it glad agayne. The ryghteous excelleth hys neyghboure, but the waye of the vngodly wyl disceau them selues. The dysceyfull man shall not roste, that he toke in hūtyng, but the riches of the iust man is of great valewe. In the waye of ryghteousnesse there is lyfe, and in the same waye there is no death.

The. xiii. Chapter.

A wyle sonne wyl herken to hys fathers warnynge, but he that is scofnell, will not heare whe he is reproved. A good man shall entoepe y frute of his mouth but he that hath a frowarde mynde, shall be spoyled. He that kepeth hys mouth kepeth hys lyfe: but who so openeth hys lypyes to euell, destroyeth hym selfe. The slogarde wolde sayne haue, & cannot get hys desyre: but the soule of the diligent shall haue plenty.

A ryghteous man abhorreth lyces, but the vngodly shameth both other and hym selfe. Ryghteousnesse kepeth the innocent in the waye, but vngodlynesse doth ouerthrowe the synner. * Some men are ryche, though they haue nothyng, agayne some men are poore, hauing greater ryches. With goodes euery man deliuereth his lyfe, and the poore wyl not be reproved: The lyght of the ryghteous maketh ioyfull, but the candle of the vngodly shall be put out. Amonge the proude there is euer stryfe, but amonge those that do all thynges with a buisement, there is wysdome. Clapnet gotten goddes are soone spent: but they that be gathered to gether with the hande, shall increase. Longe tarpenge for a thyng that is differred, greuethe the herte: but whe the desyre cometh: it is a tree of lyfe. * Whoso despyseth anye thinge, shall be hurt for the same: but he y feareth the commaundement, shall haue the rewarde. * A disceatfull sonne shall haue no good: but a discrete seruauant shall do full well, and hys waye shall prosper. The lawe is a well of lyfe vnto y wyle, that it maye kepe hym from the snares of death: Good vnderstandynge geueth fauour, but harde is y waye of the despylers. A wyle man doth all thynges with discrecion, but a foole wyl declare hys folie. An vngodly messaiger falleth into myschefe, but a faythfull ambassadour is wholsome. He y thynketh scofnell to be reformed, cometh to pouertie & shame: but whoso regardeth correccion shall come to honoure. When a desyre is brought to passe, it deliyeth y soule: but foolles counte it abhominacyon to departe from euell. He that goeth in the cōpany of wyle men, shall be wyle: but whoso is a company of foolles, shall be hurte. Myschefe foloweth vpon synners, but the ryghteous shall haue a good rewarde. He that is vertuous, leaucth an enheritaunce vnto hys chylders chyldren: and y ryches of the synner is layed vpon for the iust. There is plenteousnesse of fode in the felde of the poore, but y felde not well ozded is without frute. * He y spareth the rodde, hateth hys sonne: but whoso lo- ueth hym, chastiseth hym by tymes.

* The ryghteous cateth, and is satisfied, but y hely of y vngodly hath neuer ynough.

The. xiiii. Chapter.

wyle

Wise women upholde theyr house, but a folysh wyfe plu-cketh it downe. He y walketh in the ryght path of the Lorde feareth him: but he y turneth him selfe awaye fro his wayes, dyspyleth hym.

In the mouth of the foolys is the rodd of pyrde, but the lypes of the wyse wyll preserue them. Where no ox are, there y cryb-be is emptye: but where the ox labour there is moche frute. A faythfull wytnesse wyll not dissemble, but a false recorde wyll make a lye. A scornfull body seketh wyldome, and fyndeth it not: but * knowledge is easy to come by, vnto hym that wyll vnderstande. Se that thou medle not with a fool, in whō thou perceuest to be no knowledge. The wysdome of hym that hath vnderstanding is, to take hede vnto his waye but the folyshnesse of the vnwyse disceaueth.

Foles make but a spoote of synne, but there is fauorable loue amōge the ryghteous.

The herte feleth hys owne lyues bytternesse: nether shall straunger be partaker of his ioye. The house of the vngodly shall be o-uertrowne, but the tabernacle of the ryghteous shall flozpe.

* There is a waye which some men thynke to be ryght, but the ende therof leadeth vnto death. The herte is sorowfull euen in laughter, and the ende of myrth is heynnes.

A backly-dunge hert shall be fylled wth a wne wayes, but a good mā shall lyue of his frutes. An ignoraunt body beleueth all thynges: but who so hath vnderstandinge, loketh well to his go-ynges. (A discreatfull soune shall haue no good, but a di-recte seruante shall do fullwell, & hys waye shall prosper.)

A wyse man feareth, and departeth fro euell, but a furiose foole goeth on presumpuously: An vnpatient man dealeth folyshly: but he that is well aduysed, is hated of the foole.

The ignoraunt haue folyshnes in possesat the doores of the ryghteous. The poore the ryche hath many frendes. Whoso despyleth his neyghbour doth a mysse: but * blef-sed is he y hath pytie of y poore. (He that put-teth hys trust in the Lorde, loueth to be mercifull.) Without doute they erre that ymagyne wycked-nes, but they that muse vpon good thynges, vnto soche shall happen mercy and faythfulnesse. In euery labour there is some profecte. But only lippe labour, byngeth forth penurpe. Ryches are as a crowne vnto the wyse, but the ignoraunce of foolis is very folyshnesse. A faythfull wytnesse devnierned. Ryghteousnesse setteth vp the people, but the sacrifyce of the bethen is syn-

The xv. Chapter.

Softe answer putteth do-wne displeasure, but frowarde wordes prouoke vnto anger.

The tonge of suche as be wyse, vseth knowledge a right, as for a folysh mouth it blabbereth out nothyng, but folyshnesse. The eyes of the Lorde loke on euery place, beholdyng both the good & badd A wholsome tonge is a tree of lyfe, but he that abuseth it, hath a broken mynde.

A fool deppyleth hys fathers correcyon, but he that taketh hede whan he is repproued shall haue the more vnderstandinge. (where ryghteousnes is plentyfull, there is very greute power: but the ymaginacions of the vngodly shall be voted out.) The house of the ryghteous is full of ryches, but the increase of y vngodly are nye destrucciō.

A wyse mouth poureth oute knowledge but the herte of the folysh doth not so. The Lorde abhorreth the sacrifyce of the vngodly, but the prayer of the ryghteous is acceptable vnto hym. The waye of the vngodly is an abhominacyō vnto the Lorde: but whoso foloweth ryghteousnesse, hym he loueth.

He that forsaketh the ryght strete, shall be soze punyshed: and who so hateth correc-cyon, shall dye. The hell with her payne is knowne vnto the Lorde, howe moche more then the hertes of men. A scornfull body loueth not one that rebuketh hym nether will he come vnto the wyse. A mery her-te maketh a chearfull countenance, but an heuy herte compelleth a man to sygeth.

Better is a dyre morsell wpeh quyetness, then a house full of fatt offering with stryfe. * A discrete seruaunt shall haue more rule the the somes þ haue no wysdome, and shall haue lyke heritage with the byethzen. * A pke as syluer is tryed in fyre, and golde in the forname, euē so doth the Lorde proue the hertes. A wycked body gyueth audiece to false lypyes, & a frowarde personne geueth eare to a disceatfull tonge.
Who so laugheth the poore to scozne, blasphemeth his maker: and he þ is glad of another mans hurte, shall not be unpunished.
Chyldeys chyliden are a worshyppe vnto the elders, and the fathers are the honoure of the chyliden. Spceach of auctorytie becometh not a foole, moche lesse a lypinge mouth then be semeth a pynce. A rewarde is as a precious stone vnto him þ hath it: but vnto who foruer it turneth it maketh him vnwise.
Who so couereth another mā's offence, se-keth loue: but he þ discloseth the faute, setteth þ pynce agaynst him selfe. One reprofe one-ly doth more good to hym that hath vnderstandynge, then an. C. stryppes vnto a foole.
* A sedycious personne seketh myschefe, & therfore is a cruell messaūger sent agaynst him. It were better to come agaynst a the-bare robbed of her whelpes, then agaynst a foole. * (trustynge) in his foolishnes. * Who so rewardeth euell for good, the plage shall not departe from his house. The begynnyng of stryfe is as when a man maketh an issue for water, therfore of the metynge be leaue of cōtencyon. The Lorde hateth as well him that iustifieth the vngodly, as him that con-demneth the innocent. What helpeth it to geue a foole treasure in hys hande, where as he hath no mynde to bye wysdome?
* (who so buydeth his house to hys, seketh destruccyon: and he that refuseth to lerne, shall fall into myschefe.) He is a frēde that all waye loueth, and in aduersitye a man shall knowe who is hys brother.
* Who so promyseth by the hande, and is suertye for his neyghboure, he is a foole.
He that delyteth in synne loueth stryfe:
and who so setteth his doze to hys, seketh after a fall. Who so hath a frowarde herte, opreyneth no good: and he þ hath an ouerthwarre tonge, shall fall into myschefe. He that begettith a sole begettith his sorowe, & þ father of a foole can haue no ioye. * A mery herte maketh a lusty age, but a sorowfull mynde dzyppeth vpp bones. The vngodly taketh gyftes out of the bosome, to wzeſte þ wayes of iudgement. * Wysdome shyneth in the face of him that hath vnderstandynge, but the eyes of foolles wandze thozowe out all landes. * An vndiscrete sonne is a grese vnto hys father, and an heynesse vnto hys mother. To punyſhe the innocent, and to smite the pynces that geue true iudgement, are both euell. * A wyle man, blyth se we wordes, and he is a man of vnderstandynge, that maketh moche of hys sprete. * Deceit is a very foole (when he holdeth hys tonge) is counted wyle, and to haue vnderstandynge, when he shutteth hys lypyes.

The. xviij. Chapter.

Hacōpanieth hym selfe with all steadfast & helth some doctryne, þ hath a feruēt desyre to it and is sequestrate from companie. A foole hath no delyte in vnderstan-dinge, but onely in those thynges wherin his herte reioyseth. When the vngodly commeth, them cometh also dysdayne, and with the dishonest person cometh shame and di-shonour. The wordes of a wyle mans mouth are lyke depe waters, and the well of wysdome is lyke a full streame. * It is not good to reſgarde the persone of the vngodly, or to putt backe the ryghteous in iud-gement. A foolles lypyes are euē bza wellynge, and his mouth prouoketh vnto battayll.

A foolles mouth is hys awne destruccyon, and hys lypyes are the snare for hys awne soule. The wordes of a sleaunderer are very woundes, and go thozowe vnto the pynnost partes of the body. * (fearc talseth do-tore hym that is slouthfull: and the soules of such as lyue in voluptuousnes shall hunger.) Who so is slouth-full and slacke in hys laboure, is the brother of him that is a waster. The name of the Lorde is a stronge castell, & ryghteous flyeth vnto it, and is in sauegarde. But the ryche mans goodes are his stronge holde, ye he taketh the for an hys wall roude aboute him.

After pyrde cometh destruccyon, and honour a fer lowlynnes. * He þ geueth sentēce in a matter befoze he heare it, is a foole, and worthy to be chfounded. A good stomacke dzyppeth a waye a mans discale, but whē the sprete is vexed, who maye byde it? A wyle herte laboureth for knowledge and a pruden-eare seketh vnderstandynge. A lyberallite bryngeth a mā to honoure and worshyppe, and setteth him amonge great men. The ryghteous declareth his awne cause first hym selfe, þ hys neyghbour come, he shall finde hys.
The lott pacifyeth the variatice, & parteth þ myghtye a sūder. A brother though he be grieved w offēce, yet is he more worth then a very strōge castell: and they þ holde together are lyke þ barre of a palace. A mā's bely shall be satysfied w the frute of his awne mouth, and with the increase of hys lypyes shall he be tyllid. Death and lyfe are in the instrument of the tonge: and they that loue it, shall enioye the frute therof. * Who so synbeth a good synbeth a good thyng, and receaueth an wholsome benefyte of the Lorde.

(He that putteth alwaye a good wyman, putteth alwaye a good thyng: but he that kepeth an harlot, is a foole and vnwysse.) The poore maketh supplicacyon & prayeth

prayeth mekely: but the riche geueth a rough answere. A mā that loueth his frendes wyll be compynable with them: and some frende sticketh faster to a man then his brother.

The. xix. Chapter.

Better is the poze that lyueth godly, then þ blasphemour that is but a sole.
There no discrecyon is, there þ soule is inclined to the thyng that is not good, and is swyft on fote, and offendeth. A folyshenes maketh a man to go out of hys waye, & then is hys herte vnpacient agaynst the Lorde.

Ryches make many frendes: but the poze is forsaken of hys neyghboure. * A false witnes shall not remayne unpunished: and he þ speaketh lyes shall not escape. The multitude hangeth vpon great men: and euery man faouureth hym that geueth rewardes. As for the poore, he is hated amonge all his brethren: yee, hys awne frendes withdraue fro him: and þf he aske them the cause, they dysdayne to answer hym. He that is wyle, lo-ueth hys awne soule: and kepeth vnderstan-dinge, that he maye prospere. A false witnes shall not remayne unpunished: and he that speaketh lyes shall perishe. Pleasure becommeth not a foole, moche more vnsemply is it, a bonde man to haue the rule of pynces.

A wyle man can put of displeasure: and it is hys honoure to lett some fautes passe.

* The kynges dysfaoure is lyke the roa-rynge of a Lyon, but þ hys frendshyppe is lyke the dewe vpon the grasle. * An vndyscrete sonne is the heynnes of his father: & a bza-lyng wyle is lyke the top of an house, where thozowe it is euē dzyppynge. House and rycheſſe maye a man haue by the heritage of hys elders: but a dyscrete womā is the gyft of the Lorde. Slouthfulness bryngeth slepe:
and a soule accustomed with craſte shall suffer hunger. Whoso kepeth the cōmaundmēt, kepeth his awne soule: but he that regardeth not hys waye, shall dye. He that hath pitye vpon the poore, lendeth vnto the Lorde: and loke what he layeth out, it shall be payed hym agayne. Chasten thy sonne whyle there is hope: but let not thy soule be moued to slaye hym. A mā of great wrath beareth a payne: and though thou once deliuer him, thou must agayne do almosch for hym. Dgeue eare vnto good counsell, and be content to be refozmed, that thou mayest be wyle in thy latter dayes. * There are many deuyces in a mans herte: neuertheles, the counsell of the Lorde shall stande. * (for euē.) It is a mans worship to do good: & better it is to be a poze mā then a dissembler. The feare of the Lorde bryngeth a man to lyfe: and he shall rest the hole night in plenteousnes, without vilitacyon of anpe plage. * A slouthfull man shutteth his hādes into his bosom, as into the pot: and wyll not take paylie to put it to hys mouth. * If thou shuttest a scoznefull persone, the ignoraunce shall take better heed: and þf thou reprouest one that hath vnderstandynge, he wyll be the wyle. He that hurteþ his father or shutteth out hys mother, is a shamefull and an vnworthy sonne. My sonne, heare nomore the doctryne that leadeþ the vnto errours from the wordes of vnderstandynge. A false witnes laugheth iudgement to scozne: and the mouth of the vngodly eateth wickednesse.

Punishments are ordeyned for the scoznefull: and stryppes for foolles backes.

The. xx. Chapter.

One maketh a mā to be scoznefull:
and stronge dzycke causeth a mā to be vnquyte: who so delyteth therin, shall neuer be wyle. * The kyng ought to be feared as the roaryng of a Lion: who so prouoketh him vnto anger offen-deth agaynst his awne soule. It is a mans honour to kepe him selfe fro strife: but they that haue pleasure in bzaulyng are foolles euery one. A slouthfull body wyll not go to plowe for colde of the wynter: therfore shall he go a beggyng in sommer, & haue nothyng. Wyle counsell in the herte of man is lyke a water in the depe of the earth: and a man that hath vnderstandynge bryngeth it forth. Many there be that wolde be called good doers: but where shall one fynde a true saythfull man.

* Whoso leadeþ a godly and an innocent life: is righteous and happy shall hys chylde be whom he leaueth behynde him. A kyng that sitteth in the throne of iudgment, and loketh well about hym, dzyppeth a waye all euell.
* Who can saye, my hert is cleane, I am innocent from synne? Co vse two maner of weyghtes, or two maner of measures, both these are abhomyable vnto the Lorde.

A childe is knowne by his cōuerſacion, whether his workes be pure & ryght. The care to heare, the eye to se: the Lorde hath made the both. Delyte not thou in slepe, lest thou come vnto pouertye: but open thyne eyes, þ thou mayst haue bzed ynough. It is naught it is naught (sayeth he that byeth any thyng) ge: but when he cometh to his awne house, then he boasteth of hys peny worth. A man that hath a mouth of vnderstandynge hath many precyous stones and costly Jewels.

* Take hys garment that is suretye for a straunger: and take a pledge of hym for the vnknowne mā's sake. Euery man lyketh the bzed that is gotten with disceate: but at the last hys mouth shall be fylled with grauell.

Thozowe counsell, the thynges that men deuyle go forwarde: and w discrecyon ought warres to be taken in hande. The craſty di-ſceatfull bewzayth secret coucell: and to him that custometh flaterynge lypyes ioyne note thy selfe. * Whoso curseth hys father & mother: his lyght shall be put out in the myddest of daye.

of darkness. * The heritage that cometh to hastily at the first, shall not be praped at the ende. * Saye not thou: I will recompense euell: but put thy trust in the Lorde, and he shall defende the. * The Lorde abhorreth two maner of weyghtes, and a false balace is an euell thinge. * The Lorde ozdyeth euery mans goynges: howe maye a mā then vnderstande hys awne waye? It is a snare for a mā to deuoure that which is holy: and after the vowe to turne to thynne awne wile, the thynge thou hast vowed. * A wyse king destroyeth the vngodly, and byngeth the whole ouer them. The lanterne of the Lorde is the byeth of mā: and goth thorowe all the inwarde partes of the body. * Mercye and fapthfulnes preferre the kinge: and with loynge kyndnes hys seate is holden vp. The strength of yonge men is theyr worthyppe, and a gray heed is an honour vnto the aged. Woundes byng awaye euell, & so do stryppes the inwarde partes of the body.

The xxj. Chapter.

In the hande of the Lorde, lyke as are the ryuers of water: he maye turne it whitherso- cur he wyll. Euery man thynketh hys awne waye to be ryght: but the Lorde iudgeth the hertes. * To do ryghteousnesse and iudgement is more acceptable to the Lorde then sacrifice. A ptesumptuous loke, a proude stomache: and the plowynge of the vngodly is synne. The deuyces of one that is diligent bynne plenteousnes: but he that is vnaduised cometh vnto pouertie. Whoso hoodeth vpryche with the dysceatfulness of hys tonge, he is vayne and a foole, and lyke vnto the that seke theyr awne deeth. The robberes of the vngodly shalbe theyr awne destruccyon: for they wyll not do the thynge that is ryght. The wayes of the frowarde are strange: but the workes of hym that is cleane are ryght. * It is better to dwell in a corner vnder the house toppe, then with a braulynge woman in a wyde house. The soule of the vngodly wysheth euell: and hath no pitye vpon hys neyghboure. * When the scoonefull is punished, the ignoraunt take the better heade: and when he seyth the wyse men prospere, he wyll receaue the more vnderstandynge. The ryghteous man wysely considereth the house of the wicked: and for theyr wickednes God ouerthroweth the vngodly. * Whoso stoppeth hys eares at the cryenge of the poore: he shall crye hym selfe, and not be hearde. A meyrewarder payeth displeasure, and a gyfte in the bolome, stylieth furiousnesse. The iuste delpyteth in doyng the thynge that is ryght: but ouer the workes of wyckednesse bageth destruccyon. The mā that wandreth out of the waye of wysdome, shall remayne in the cogre-gare of the deed. * He that hath pleasure in banquettes, shalbe a poore man. Whoso de- lyteth in wyne and belycates, shall not be ryche. The vngodly shalbe geuen for the ryghte wyes: and the wycked for the iuste.

* It is better to dwell in a wilderness then with a chydynge & an angrey woman. In a wyse mannes house, there is greete treasure and oyle: but a foolys body spendeth vp all. Whoso foloweth ryghteousnesse and mer- cy, fyndeth bothe lyfe, ryghteousnesse, and honoure. A wyse man wynteth the cite of the myghtye: and as so, he strength that they trust in, he byngeth it downe. * Whoso kepeth hys mouth and hys tonge: the same kepeth hys soule from troubles. He that is proude and presumptuous, is called a scoonefull man, which in wrath darre worcke malicypouslye. The voluptuousnesse of the slouthfull is hys awne deeth: for his handes wyll not labour. He coueteth and despyeth all the daye longe: but the ryghteous is all- waye geuyng, and kepeth nothynge backe. The sacrifice of the vngodly is abhominacyon: howe moche more when they offre the thynge that is gotten with wyckednesse.

* A false wytnes shall perishe: but he that is a true man boldly speaketh that he hath heard. An vngodly man goeth forth rashly: but the iust reformeth hys awne waye.

* There is no wysdome, there is no vnderstandynge, there is no counsell agaynst the Lorde. * The horse is prepared agaynst the daye of battayll: but the Lorde geueth the victorie.

The xxij. Chapter.

Good name is more worth then greater ryche, and a louynge fauoure is better then siluer and golde. The ryche and poore are together: the Lorde is the maker of them all. A wyse man seeth the plage, and bydeth hym selfe: but the folys go on styll and are punished. The ende of lowlynes and the feare of God is ryches, honoure, prosperite, and health. Thoznes and snares are in the waye of the frowarde: but he that doeth kepe hys soule, wyll fle from soche. Teache a chylde in hys yowth what waye he shulde go: for he shall not leaue it, when he is olde. The ryche ruleth the poore: & the borrower is seruante to the lender. He that soweth wyckednesse shall reape sorowe: and the rodde of hys crueltye shall perishe. * He that hath a lounge eye shalbe blessed: for he geueth of his breed vnto the poore. * Whoso geueth vnto the poore, shall optayne honoure: but he taketh awaye the soule of such as receaue them. Cast out the scoonefull man, and so shall stryfe go out of hym: yee, variatice & sleaunders shall cease. Whoso delpyteth to be of a cleane herte and of gracious lippes, the kyng shall be his frende. The eyes of the Lorde, preferre knowledge, but as for the wordes of the despytfull, he byngeth the to naught. The slouthfull body sayeth: there is a Lyon without, I myght be slayn in the strete. * The mouth of an harlot is a depe pyt, wherin he falleth that the Lorde is angrie wyth all. Holy shynes stycketh in the herte of the lad, & the rodde of correccion shall byng it awaye. Whoso doth a poore man wydge to increse his awne riches, & geueth vnto the ryche to please hi, at the last cometh to pouerte hym selfe. * My sonne, bowe downe thynne eare, and herken vnto the wordes of wysdome, applye thy mynde vnto my doctrine: for thou shalt be excellent of the herte, & practise it in thy mouth: that thou mayest put thy trust in the Lorde. I haue shewed the this daye the thynge that thou knowest. Haue not I warned the very oft with counsel & learning? I might shew the the truth, ad that thou with the verite myghtest and were the that sende vnto the: He that thou robbe not the poore, because he is weake, & oppresse not the simple in iudgement: for the Lorde him selfe will defende their cause, & do violence vnto them that haue used violence. Make no frendshyppe with an angrey wilfull mā, & kepe no company with a furious: lest thou learne his wayes, & receaue hurte in thy soule. * Be not the one of the that bynde theyr hande vpon promysse, & are swertie for wayghty causes: for yf thou hast nothynge to paye, they shall take awaye thy bed from vnder the. * Thou shalt not remoue the lande marcke, which thy fore elders haue sett. Seest thou not, the which be diligent in theyr bypnes, stande before kynges and not amonge the symple people?

The xxiii. Chapter.

When thou sittest at the table to eate with the Lorde, ordre thy selfe manerly with the thynge that is set before the. Measure thynne appetite: & yf thou wilt rule thynne awne selfe, be not ouer greedy of hys meate, for meate begyleth & disceaueth. * Take not ouer greete trauayle & labour to be ryche, beware of soch a purpose. * Why wilt thou set thynne eye vpon the thynge, which sodenly vanissheth awaye? For riches make the felues wynges, & take theyr flyght lyke an eagle in to payre. Eate not with the enuyous, & despyre not his meate, for he doth as a mā that prescribeth a mesure to himselfe. He sayth vnto the: eate & dryncke, where as his herte is not with the. Yee, the morsels that thou hast eate shal be perbake & lese the of a foole, for he wyll despyse the wysdome of thy wordes. * Remoue not the olde lande marke, & come not within the felde of the fatherlesse: for he that delpyereth the, is myghtye, eue he shall defende theyr cause against the. Applye thynne herte vnto correccion, & thynne eare to the wordes of knowledge.

* Witholde not correccion from the childe, for yf thou beatest hi with the rodde, he shall not dye therof. Yf thou smyte hi with the rodde, he shall be liuer his soule from hell. * My sonne, yf thy herte receaue wysdome, my herte also shall reioyce: yee, my reynes shalbe very glad: yf thy lippes speke the thynge that is ryght. * Let not thynne herte be gelous to folowe synners, but kepe the styll in the feare of the Lorde. * All the daye longe: for the ende is not yet come, & thy paciēt abydynge shall not be in vayne. * My sonne, geue care & be wyse, ad let strayte thynne herte in the waye of the Lorde.

* Kepe no company with wyne bybbers & riotous eaters of flesch: for soch as be dyckardes & riotous shal come to pouerte, & he that is geuen to moch slepe, shall go with a ragged coate. Geue care vnto thy father & thy mother, & despyse not thy mother when she is olde. Labour for to get the truthe: tell yt not awaye, & so do by wysdome, nourtour & vnderstandynge: for a ryghteous father is maruelous glad of a wyse sonne, ad he that begetteth a wyse chylde shal haue gret pleasure of hi. Do so that thy father & mother may be glad of the, & yf thou bare the may reioyse. * My sonne, geue me thynne herte, & lett thynne eyes haue pleasure in my wayes. * For an whoze is a depe graue, ad an harlot is a narrow pytt. She lurketh lyke a thefe, and bygeth vnto her such me as be full of vyce. Whoso hath wo: who hath sorow: who hath strife: who hath byaulig: & who hath woundes without cause? Who hath reced eyes? Euen they that be euer at the wyne, & seke excess. Loke not thou vpon the wyne, howe red it is, & what a colour it geueth in the glasse. It goeth downe softly, but at the last it byteth lyke a serpent, & styngeth as an adder. So shall thynne eyes loke vnto strange wemen, & thynne herte shall muse vpon frowarde thynnges. Yee, thou shalt be as though thou layest in the myddest of the see, or slepest vpon the toppe of a myll of a shippe. They wounded me (thalt thou saye) but it hath not hurte me: they haue all to broke me, but I felt it not. Whā I am well wakened, I will go to the dycke againe.

The xxiiii. Chapter.

Not thou gelous ouer wycked men, and despyre not to be amonge the. For ther herte ymagyneth to do hurte, ad theyr lippes talke of myschefe. Thozow wysdome is an house buyled, and wyth vnderstandynge is it sett vp. Thozow discrecion shal the chibers be fylled with all costly ad pleasaunt ryches. A wyse mā is euer stronge, yee, a mā of vnderstanding encreaseth of strength. For with discrecion must warres be kept. * Ken in ken in hāde, & where as are many that can geue coucell, there is the victorie. Wylsom is to bye a thinge for a sole, for he darre not open his mouth in the gate. He that pma- gnyeth myschefe, maye welbe called an vn- gracious personne. The thought of the foolys is synne, & the scornfull is an ab- hominacion vnto men. If thou be ouersene and negligent in tyme of neede, then is thy strength but smal. Deliuere the & go vnto death, & are led awaye to be slayne, & be not neglyget therin yf & be able to do the good. If & wilt save: I knewe not of it. Thinkest thou & he which made the hertes, doth not cōsidre it? & & he which regardeth thy soule, seeth it not? Shall not he recōpence euery man according to his worckes? My sonne, & eatest hony & the swete hony cōbe, becau- se it is good & swete in thy mouth. Cūe so shall & knowledge of wylsōme be vnto thy soule, allone as & hast gotten it. And thou shalt haue longe dayes, yee, thy hope shall not be in vayne. Laye no pryuy waye (o wicket mā) vpo the house of the ryghteous & disquiete not his restyng place. * For a iust man falleth leue tynes, & ryseth vp a- gayne, but & vngodly fall ito wyckednes.

handes together yet a lytle: so shall pouer- te come vnto the as one that trauayleth by the waye, & neede lyke a weapened man.

The. xxv. Chapter.
These also are the parables of Salomō, which the men of Ezechiah kynge of Iuda copied out.

It is & honour of God to kepe a thinge secreete, but & kynges ho- nour is to search out a thyng.

The heauen is hye, the earth is depe, & the kynges herte is vnse- archeable. Take & drosse fro & syluer, & the- re shall be a cleane vessel therof. Take awaye vngodlynesse fro & kige, & his seate shall be stablished w ryghteousnes. But not forth thy selfe in the presēce of & kig, & prea- ce not ito & place of greute mē. * Better is it that it be layde vnto &: come vp hyther, then & to be put lower in the presēce of the pynce who & seyst w thyne eyes. * We not hastie to go to the lawe, lest happlye & do some offēce after & strife be eded wherby thy neyghbour put the to shame. Handle thy matter w thy neyghbour him selfe, & ad- discouer not another mā's secreete: lest when mē heare therof, it turne to thy dishonou- re, and least thyne euell name do not cease.

* Grace and frendshipp doth deliuer: wch se that thou kepe for thy selfe, lest thou be reproued. A worde spo- ken in due seaso, is lyke apples of golde in a graued worke of syluer. The correcciō of & wyle is to an obediēt eare, a golde chaine & a Jewell of golde. Lyke as the witer coole i the haruest, so is a saythfull messainger to the & send hi: for he refresyth his masters mynde. Whoso maketh greute boast, & geueth nothyng, is lyke cloudes & wynde without rayne. With paciēce is a pīce pa- cified, & * w a soft tōg is rygourousnes bro- ken. If & fidest hony, eate so moch as is suf- ficiēt for &: lest & be ouerfull, & perbake it out agayne. Withdraw thy foote from thy neyghbours house least he be wery of &, & so abhorre &. Who so beareth false wytnesse agāst his neyghboure, he is a very clubb, a swearde, & a sharpe arowe. The hope & is put in a false mā i tyme of neade, is lyke a rottē toth & a sylpperi foote. Who so taketh awaye a mā's garment i the colde wether, is lyke vnyger vpo chalck, or lyke hi & syn- geth soges to an heule hart.

* (Lyke as the moch hurteth a garment, and a wome the tree, so doth the heuines of a man hurt the hart) * If thyne enemye hōger, feade him: yf he thyrst, geue him drinke: for so shalt thou heape coales of fyre vpon hys head, and the Lord shall rewarde the. The North wynde dryueth awaye the rayne, cūe so doth an earnest sober countenance a ba- ckbyters tonge. * It is better to syt in a corner vnder the rose, then with a brawlig woman in a wyde house: A good repo- te out te out

te out of a farre costre, is lyke coulde wa- ter to a thyrstie soule. Ryghteous man & fallynge downe before the vngodly, is lyke a troubled well & a springe that is de- stroyed. Lyke as it is not good to cate to moch hony, * cūe so be that will search out hye thynges, it shall be to heuy for hym. He & cannot rule hym selfe, is lyke a cyte which is broken downe, & hath no walles.

The. xxvi. Chapter.

As as snowe is not mete in somer, ner rayne in haruest, euen so is wo- rde vnsemyly for a foole. Lyke as the byrde & the swalowe take theyr flyght & fle here & there, so the curse & is geuen in vayne, shall not lyght vpo a mā. * Vnto the hoyle belogeth a whypppe, to the alle a byrde, & a rodde to the foolys backe. Geue not the foole an answer after his foolys- nesse, lest & become lyke vnto hi: but make the foole an answer to his foolysnesse, lest he be wyle in his awne cōceate. He is la- me of his fete, yee dracken is he i vayne, & comitteth eny message to a foole. Lyke as in a lame mā his legges ar not equall, euen so is a parable i the foolys mouth. He that setteth a foole i hie dignite, & is cūe as yf a mā put a stone in a syngge. A parable in a foolys mouth is lyke a thorne & ppycketh a dracken mā in the hāde. * (Set is he & hath for- med all thynges: he rewardeth & sole & re: compeneth & trans- gressors.) A mā of experiecc discerneth all thi- ges wel: but he & putteth & sole to silēce en- deth the stryfe. * Lyke as the dogg turneth agayne to his vomyte, cūe so a foole begi- neth hys folysnesse agayne a fresh. If & seest a man & is wyle in his awne conceate, there is more hope in a foole then in hym.

* The slouthfull sayeth: there is a lyon in the waye, & a lyon in the myddest of & stre- tes. Lyke as the doze turneth aboute vpo the hēges, euen so doth the slouthfull wel- ter him selfe in his bedd. * The slouthfull body thrusteth his hāde into hys bosome, and it greueth hym to put it agayne to his mouth. The flogarde thinketh hi selfe wy- ler, then & seue men & sytt & teach. Who so goeth by & medleth w other mens stryfe he is lyke one & taketh a dogge by & eares. Lyke as a madd mā that castith fyre bran- des, and shoteth deadly arowes and darts cūe so doth a dissembler w his neyghboure. And then sayth he: * (When he is taken) I dyd it but in sporte. Where no wodd is, there the fyre goeth out: Euen so where the tale be- trayer is take awaye, there & strife ceaseth. * Coles kyndle heate, & wodd the fyre: cūe so doth a brawling felowe stire vp variaū- ce. A taleberrars wordes are lyke men & stryke with hāmers, but they pearse the in warde partes of the body. Vnynuous lyp- pes and a wycked herte, are lyke a potshetde couered with syluer drosse. An enemye shall be knowē by his talkyng, & i the mea- ne season he ymagyneth myschefe, but whē he speaketh fayre, beleue him not, for there are leue abhominacions in his herte. Who so kepeth enell will, secretly to do hurte, his malyce shall be shewed before the whole co- gregacyon. * Who so dyggeth vp a pytt, shall fall therin: & he that weltreth a stone, shall stōmble vpon it him selfe. A dyssem- blinge tōge hateth one & rebuketh hym, & ad a flatterynge mouth wycketh myschefe.

The. xxvii. Chapter.

Not thy boost of tomozowe * for & knowest not what maye happē to daye. Let another mā prayse the, and not thyne awne mouth: yee other folkes lyppes, and not thyne. The stone is heuy and the sande weyghty: but a foolys wrath is heuyer then them both. Wrath is a cruell thyng and furiousnesse is a very tēpest: but who is able to abyde enuye? An open rebuke is better then a secreete loue. Saythfull are the woundes of a louer, but the kysses of an enemye are cruell. He that is full, abhor- eth an hony combe: but vnto him that is hongry, euery sowre thyng is swete. He that oft tymes flytteth, is lyke a byrde & forsaketh her nest. * Salme and swete en- cense make the hert mery: so is the swete counsell of a mans frende that agreeth to his purpose. Thyne awne frende and thy fathers frende se thou forsake not: but go not into thy brothers house in tyme of thy trouble. For better is a frende at hand then a brother farre of. My sonne, be wyle, and thou shalt make me a glad herte so that I shall make answer vnto my re- bukers. A wyle man seynge the plage, wyl hyde hym selfe, as for foolys they go on styll, and suffer harme. * Take hys garment & is suertye for a straunger, and take a pledge of hi for the vknownen mā's sake. He that is to hasty to prayse hys neyghboure aboute measure, shall be taken as one that geueth hym an euell reposte. * A brawlynge woman and the rote of the house droppynge in a raynye daye, maye well be compared together. He that re- frayneth her, refrayneth the wynde, & hol- deth oyle fast in hys hande. Lyke as one pzon whetteth another, so doth one mā cō- forte another. Who so kepeth hys syngge tre, shall enioye the frutes therof: euen so, he that wayteth vpon his master, shall co- me to honoure. Lyke as in one water the- re apere dyuerse faces, euen so diuerse mē haue diuerse hertes. Lyke as & bell and destruccyō are neuer full, euen so * the eyes of men can neuer be satisfied. Syluer is tryed in

tryed in the moule, and golde in the forna-ce, and so is a man, when he is openly praysed to his face. (The hart of a wicked man seeketh after mischance, but a true hart seeketh for knowledge.)

Though thou shouldest buy a fool for a pestell in a mortar like frumentye corne, yet will not his folly shynelle go from hym. Se þ þ knowe the nobze of thy catell thy selfe, & loke well to thy flockes. For ryches abyde not alwaye, & the crowne endureth not for ever. The hye groweth, the grasse chmeth vp, & herbes are gathered in the mos-taynes. The lammes shall clothe the and for þ goates thou shalt haue money to thy husbandry. Thou shalt haue goates mylch ynough to fede the, to vpholde thy housholde, and to susteyne thy maydens.

The. xxviii. Chapter.

Angodly flyeth whā no man chasteth hym, but the ryghteous standeth styf as a lyon. * Because of synne, þ lande doth oft chā-ge her prince: but thozow men of vnderstādyng and wysdome a realme endureth longe. One pooze man oppresyn-ge another by violence, is lyke a continuall rayne that destroyeth the frute.

They that forsake the lawe, prayse the ungodly: but loch as kepe þ lawe, abhorre
the. * Wicked men discern not the thyn-ge that is ryght, but they that seke after þ Lorde, discusse all thynge. * A pooze man leadyng a godly lyfe, is better then the ryche that goeth in frowarde wayes.

Who so kepeth the lawe, is a chyld of vnderstandyng: but he that is a cōpanyō of ryotous men, shameth his father. He that by vsurpe and vniuste gaynes gathe-rith ryches: he shall lape them in store for a man that will ppyte the poze. * He that turneth awaye his eare from hearing the lawe, his prayer shall be abhominable.

Who so ledeth the ryghteous into an euell waye, shall fall into his awne pytt, but the iust shall haue the good i possesio. The ryche mā thyncketh him self to be wysse, but the pooze þ hath vnderstandyng, can perceaue him well ynough. * When ryghteous men are in prosperite, then doth honoure flozpy but when þ vngodly come vp, þ state of mē chaungeth. He that bydeth his synnes, shall not prospere: but * whoso knowledgeth the and forsaketh them, shall haue mercy. Well is him that standeth alwaye in awe: as for him that hardeneth his herte, he shall fall i to myschance. Lyke as a roaryng lyon and an hōgre beare, euē so is an vngodly prynce ouer the pooze people. Where the prince is without vnderstādyng, there is greate oppresyon and wronge: but þ he be loch one as hateth couetousnesse, he shall longe raygne. * He that by violence sheddeth eny mans bloude, shall be a rennagate vnto his graue, and no man shall be able to souccoure hym. * Who so leadeþ a godly & an innocent lyfe, shall be saued: but he that goeth frowarde wayes, shall once haue a fall.

* He that fylleth his land, shall haue ple-teousnesse of bread: but he þ foloweth vbylnesse, shall haue pouerte ynough. A man þ dealeth fapthfully, shall be fylled with bletsynges: * he that maketh to moch haste for to be ryche, shall not be vngyltpe. To haue respecte of personnes in iudgemēt is not good: And why? A mā will do wronge, yee, euen for a pece of bread. He þ will be ryche all to soone, hath an euell eye, and consydereth not, þ pouerte shall come vpon hym.

He that folowynge my precepts rebuketh a man: shall fynde more fauoure at the last, then he that flatreth hym. * Whoso rob-beth his father and mother, and sayeth it is no synne: the same is lyke vnto a destroyer.

He that is of a proude stomacke & without feare, stereth vp styfe: but he that putteth his trust in the Lorde, shall be well fedd.

He that trusteth in his awne herte, is a foole: but he þ dealeth wylly, shall be safe.

* He that geueth vnto the pooze, shall not lacke: but he that turneth awaye his eyes fro loch as be in necessity, shall suffre greate pouerte hym selfe. * When the vngod-ly are come vp, men are sayne to hyde them selues: but when they perissh, the ryghteous increase.

The. xxx. Chapter.

He that is styfnecked, & will not be reformed, shall sodenly be destroyed without eny help. * Whē the ryghteous haue the ouerhande, the people are i prosperite: but when the vngodly beareth rule, there the people mourne. Who so loneth wysdome maketh his father a glad mā: * but he that kepeth company with harlottes, spendeth awaye that he hath. With true iudgemēt the kynge setteth vp the lande, but þ he be a man þ oppresyth the people with gathe-ringes, he turneth it vp syde downe. Who so flatreth his neyghbour, layeth a nette for his fete. * The synne of þ wicked is his awne snare, but the ryghteous doth syng & reioyse. The ryghteous considreth þ cause of þ pooze: but the vngodly regardeth no vnderstādyng. Wicked people brige a cytie in decaye, but wysse mē set it vp agayne. If a wysse man go to laue w a foole (whether he deale w him frendly or roughly) he getteth no rest. The bloude thyrsteth hate the ryghteous: but þ iust & seke his soule. A foole powreth out his sperte altogether but a wysse mā kepeth it in tyll afterwarde.

If a price delyte i lyes, all his seruantes are vngodly. The pooze and the lender mete together,

together, & the Lorde lyghtheneth both theyr eyes. * The scate of the kynge that faithfully iudgeth the pooze, shall continue sure for euermore. The rodde and correccyon ministre wysdome, but þ a chyld be not loked vnto, he byngeth his mother to shame. When the vngodly come vp, wycked-nes increaseth: but the ryghteous shall se theyr fall. Hurtoure thy sonne w correccion, and thou shalt be at rest, yee, he shall do the good at thyne herte. When the worde of god is not preached, the people peryshe, but well is hym that kepeth þ lawe.
A seruaunt will not be the better for wodes, for though he vnderstande, yet will he not regarde them. If thou seest a man þ is hasty to speake vndupled, thou mayest trust a foole more then hym. He that delycately byngeth vp his seruaunt from a chyld, shall make hi his master at length.

An angry man stereth vp styfe, and he that beareth euell will in his mynde, doth moch euell. After pryde commeth a fall,
* but a lowely sperte byngeth greate worth. Who so kepeth company wth a these, hateth his awne soule: he heareth blas-phemyes, and telleth it not forth. He that seareth mē, shall haue a fall: but who so put-teth his trust i the Lorde is with out danger. Many there be that seke the princes fauoure, but euery mans iudgement cōmeth from the Lorde. The ryghteous ab-horreth the vngodly: but as for those that be in the ryght waye, the wicked hate the.

(A chyld þ kepeth þ worde, shall be with out destruction).

The. xxx. Chapter.

The purenes of the worde of God: and what we ought to require of God, with certen wonderfull thynges that are in the worlde.

The wordes of Agur the sonne of Jakei, and the prophecie that the same man spake vnto Ithiel, euen vnto Ithiel, and Uchal: I am more foolysch then any man, ad haue no mans vnderstandyng I neuer lerned wysdome, ner had knowledge of holy thynge. Who hath clymed vp into heauen? Who hath come doune from thence? Who hath holden the wynd fast in his hand? Who hath comprehended the waters in a garment? Who hath sett all the endes of the worlde? What is his name, or his sonnes name? Canst thou tell
* all the wordes of God are pure and clea-ne, for he is a chyld vnto all the, that put theyr trust in hym. * But thou nothyng vnto his wordes, lest he reprove the, and thou be founde a lyar. Two thynge haue I requyred of the, that thou wilt not de-nye me before I dye. Remoue fro me va-nite and lyes: geue me nether pouerte nor ryches, onely graunte me a necessary lyuynge. Lest þ I be to full, I denye the, and saye: * Who is the Lorde? And lest I beinge constrayned thozow pouerte, fall vnto stealynge, and take the name of my God in vayne. Accuse not a seruaunt vnto his master, lest he speake euell of the, and thou be hurte. There is a generacyon that cur-seth theyr father, and doth not blesse theyr mother. There is a generacion that thyn-ke them selues cleane, and yet is not clesed from theyr fylthynesse. There is a generacyon that hath a proude loke, & doth cast vp theyr eye lyddes. There is a generacion whose teth are swerdes, & with theyr chaw bones they cosume & deuoure þ symple of the earth, and the pooze from amōge men. The hozelleche hath two daughters cryeng: byng hyther, byng hyther.

There be thre thynge that are neuer satyfied, yee, fowze thynge sayeth neuer hoo. The graue: a womans wombe closed: and the earth that hath neuer water þnough. As for fyre, it sayeth neuer hoo.

* Who so laugheth his father to scoorne, and setteth his mothers commaundement at naught: the rauens pycke out his eyes i the valleye, and deuoured be he of the yonge Eagles. There be thre thynge to hye for me, yea foure that passeth my knowlege. The waye of an Agyle in þ ayre, þ waye of a serpet ouer a stone, the waye of a wyf in the see, and the waye of a man wth a ponge woman. Soch is the waye also of a wyf that breaketh wedlocke, which wy-peth her mouth lyke as when she hath eatē and sayeth: As for me, I haue done no har-me. Thozow thre thynge the earth is dysquieted, & the fourth may it not beare: Thozow a seruaunt þ beareth rule. Tho-row a foole þ hath to moche bred, thozow a wife wothyf hated w he is maryed, and thozow an hand mayden that is heyre to her mastres. These be foure thynge i the earth, the which are very lytle: but in wysdome they excede the wysse. The emmettes are but weake people * yet gather they theyr meate together in the haruest.

The Conyes are but a feble folke, yet make they theyr couches amonge the rockes.
The grethoppers haue not a gyde, yet go they forth together by heapes. The spy-der laboureth with her handes, & is in kynges places. There be thre thynge that go styfly, yea fowze ar comlye in goinge. A Lyon, which is strongest amōg beastes, ad geueth place to no mā: A grehounde strōge i the hynder partes: A rāme also & a kynge, agaynst whom no mā aryleth vp. If thou hast done foolyschly whan thou wast in hye estate, or if thou hast taken euell counsell: then laye thyne hande vpon thy mouth.

The proverbes

Who so chymeth mylke, maketh butter: and he that rubbeth hye nose, maketh it blede: Eue so he that causeth wrath byngeth forth stryfe.

The xxxi. Chapter.

The wordes of

Kyng Lamuel, & the lesson that hye mother taught hym.

My sone (why do ye so) sone of my body: O my deare beloued sone, geue not ouer thi strengthe & waies vnto weime, which are þe destructione of kynges. O Lamuel, yt is not for kynges, it is not (I saye) for kynges to drike wyne, nor þe stronge dryncke: for there is no secret where drynckennesse reigneth) lest they beyng d[ri]cken forgett the lawe, and peruerete the iudgement of all poore m[en]s children. Geue stronge dryncke vnto such as are condemned to death, and wyne vnto those that mourne: that they maye drike it, and forgett theyr myserye & aduersyte.

Be thou an aduocate, for the d[ro]me and stande in iudgement thy selfe, to speake for all such as be socourles in this transitorye worlde. Ope thy mouth, defende the thyngge that is lawfull and ryght, and the cause of the poore and helpelesse.

Who so fyndeth an honest saythfull woman, she is moche more worth then perles. The heart of her husband maye safelye trust in her, so that he shall fall in no pouerthe.

She will do hym good and not euell, all the dayes of her lyfe. She occuppeth woll and flaxe, & laboureth gladly with her handes. She is lyke a marchaunte wypppe, that byngeth her bytayles from a farre.

She is vp in the nyght season, to prouyde meate for her houtholde, and fode for her maydens. She consydreth lande, & byeth it, and with the frute of her handes she planteth a vyneyarde. She gyrdeth her loynes with strength, & courageth her armes. And yf she perceaue that her houtholde doth good, her candle goeth not out by nyght. She layeth her fyngers to the spynnell, and her hande taketh holde of þe distaffe. She openeth her hande to the poore, yee she stretcheth forth her handes to such as haue nede. She feareth not that the colde of wynter shall hurte her house, for all her houtholde folkes are clothed with skarlett. She maketh her selfe fayne orname[n]tes, her clothynge is whyte sylke & purple.

Her husband is moche let by in the gates, when he sitteth amonge the rulers of the land. She maketh cloth of sylke and sellet it, & deliuereth gyrdles vnto the marchaunt. Strength and honoure is her clothynge, & in the latter daye she shall reioyse. She openeth her mouth with wysdome, and in her tonge is the lawe of grace.

She loketh well to the wayes of her houtholde: & eateth not her bred with wydnes. Her children shall arysse, and call her blessed: & her houtholde shall make moche of her.

Many daughters there be that gather riches together, but thou goest aboue them all. As for fauoure, it is disceitfull, and bentie is a vayne thyngge: but a woman that feareth þe Lorde, she is worthy to be praysed. Geue her of þe frute of her handes and let her adorne her wyfdomes prayse her in the gates.

Of the preacher,

Ho. xxxvii.

The ii. Chapter.

The booke of the

Preacher, otherwyle called ecclesiastes.

The fyrst Chapter.

¶ That is in this wyse is vayne.

These are the wordes of the Preacher, sonne of Dauid, kyng of Ierusalem. * All is but moche vayne (sayeth þe Preacher) & al is moche vayne (I saye) & but plaine vante. For what els hath a man, of all þe labour þe taketh vnder þe Sunne? One generacyon passeth awaye, another cometh, but þe earth abyedeth styll. The Sunne arysseth, & sunne goeth downe, & returneth to hye place, & he maye there rise vp againe. The wynde goeth toward þe South, & turneth vnto the north, feryth his compasse, whirleth aboute, & goth forth, & his circuite returneth agayne to him selfe. * All floudes rune into the see, & yet þe see yt selfe is not fylled: for loke vnto what place þe waters rune, thence they come to floue agayne. All thynges are so harde to be knowen, y no man can expresse the. * The eye is not satisfied w[ith] syght, the eare is not fylled w[ith] hearyng. * The thyng þe hath bene, cometh to passe agayne: & þe thyng þe hath bene done, shall be done agayne, there is no new thyng vnder þe Sunne. Is there eny thyng wherof it maye be sayde: lo, this is new: for it was longe agoon in þe tymes þe haue bene before vs. The thyng þe is past, is out of remembraunce: Euen so the thynges þe are for to come, shall no more be thought vpon amonge them þe come after. I my selfe þe Preacher, was kyng of Irael at Ierusalem, & dyd applye my mynde to seke out & search for þe knowledge of all thynges that are done vnder heau[n]. Soch trouaile and labour hath God geue vnto þe children of men, to exerceple them selues therin.

¶ Thus I haue consydred all the thynges þe come to passe vnder the Sunne, and lo, they are all but vayne, & veraciō of minde. The croked canot be made strayght, nor þe thynge þe is vnperfecte, canot be acōpted w[ith] thynges þe are perfecte. I comōed w[ith] mine awne herte, sayinge: lo, I am come to a great estate, & haue gottē moze wysdome, the all they þe haue bene before me in Ierusalem. Yee my herte had greate experyēce of wysdome & knowledg, for there vnto I applied my mynde: þe I myght knowe what were wysdome & vnderstanding, what were errour & folishnes: & I perceaued, þe this also was but a veracyō of minde: for where moche wysdome is, there is al so greate trouaile & disquietnes: & þe moze knowledge a man hath, þe moze is hye care.

Ihe sayd I thus in my herte: Now go I to, I wil take mine ease & haue good dayes. But lo, þe is vayne: also in so moche þe I sayd vnto þe mā gūe to laughter: þe arte madd, & to myrth: what doest thou? So I thought i my herte, to geue my selfe vnto wyne and agayne to applye my mynde vnto wysdome, and to comprehend folishnes vntill the tyme þe (amonge all þe thynges whych are vnder the Sunne) I myght le what were best for men to do, so longe as they lyue vnder heauen.

* I made gorgeous fayne wyfdomes. I buylded me houses, and planted vyneyardes. I made me orchardes and gardēs of pleasure, and planted trees in them of al maner frutes. * I made poles of water, to water þe grene and fruteful trees withall. I bought seruantes and maydens, and had a grete houtholde. As for catell and shepe, I had moze substaunce of them, then all they that were before me in Ierusalem. I gathered syluer & golde together, euē a treasure of kynges and landes.

I prouyded me fyngers & women, which coulde playe of instrumentes, to make me myrth and pastime. I gat me psalteries & songes of musike. And I was greater and in moze wyfdom, the all my predecessours in Ierusalem. For wysdome remained with me: & loke whatsoeuer myne eyes desyred, I let the haue it: and wherin soeuer my herte desyred, or had eny pleasure, I with helde it: not fro it. Thus my herte reioysed in all that I dyd, and this was my porcion of all my trouaile. But when I consydred all the wyfdomes that my handes had wrought, and all þe labour that I had takē therein: lo, all was but vayne and veracion of mynde, and nothing of eny valur vnder þe Sunne. The turned I me to confidre wysdome, erreure, and folishnesse (for what is he among men that myght be compared to me the kyng in soch wyfdomes?) and I sawe: that wysdome excelleth foolishnesse, as farre as light doth darchnesse. For a wyse man hath his eyes in his head, but the foole goeth in the darchnesse: I perceaued also, þe they both had one ende. The thought I i my mynde, If it happen vnto the foole as it doth vnto me, what nedeth me then to labour eny moze for wysdome? So I confessed within my herte, that this also was but vayne. For the wyse are ener as lytle in remembraunce as the folish, for þe dayes shall come whē all shall be forgotten, yee þe wyse man dieth as well as þe foole. Thus beganne I to be weery of my lyfe, in so moche that I coulde awaye w[ith] nothing that is done vnder the Sunne, for all was but vayne & veracion of minde: Yee I was weerye weary of all my labour, which I had taken under the Sunne, because I shulde be sayne to leaue them vnto another man that cometh after me: And who knoweth, whether he shal be a wyse mā or a folle? And yet shall he be lord of all my labours, which I with soch wysdome haue taken under the Sunne. This is also a vayne thyng.

So I turned me to refrayne my mynde from all soch trauayle, as I toke vnder the Sunne: for so moch as a man shulde weery hym selfe with wysdome, with vnderstanding and oportunitie, & yet be sayne to leaue his labours vnto another that neuer stetteth for the. This is also a vayne thing & greate misery. For what getteth a mā of all the labour and trauayle of his mynde, that he taketh vnder the Sunne, but heynesse, sorrowe and desquyetyng all the dayes of his lyfe? In so moch that his hert cannot rest in the nyght, this is also a vayne thing. * Is it not better then for a mā to eate & dyncke, & his soule to be mery in his labour? Pse I sawe that thys also was a gyfte of God: For who will eat or go more lustely to his worke then I? And why? God gyueth to the man that is good before him, wysdome, vnderstanding, & gladnesse. But vnto the synner he geueth weerynesse. * (and superfluous care) that he maye gather and heape together the thynges, that afterwarde shal be geuen vnto him, whom it pleasech God. This is now a vayne thing, yee a very dysquytenesse and veracyon of mynde.

The.iii. Chapter.

All thynges come in their tyme, and passe awaye in their tyme.

Every thinge hath a tyme, yee all y is vnder the heauen, hath his couenient season. There is a tyme to be borne, and a tyme to dye.

There is a tyme to plante and a tyme to plecte vp the thing, that is planted. A tyme to slaye, and a tyme to make whole. A tyme to breake downe, & a tyme to build vp. A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laugh: A tyme to mourne, and a tyme to daunce. A tyme to cast awaye stones, and a tyme to gather stones together. A tyme to embrace, and a tyme to refrayne from embracing. A tyme to wyne, and a tyme to lese. A tyme to spare, and a tyme to speede. A tyme to cut in peces, and a tyme to sowe together. * A tyme to kepe sylvence, & a tyme to speake. A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate. A tyme of warre, and a tyme of peace.

* Eccl. ix. a FFLD. p. 111 a

What hath a man els (y doth any thing) but weerynesse & labour? For as touching the trauayle and carefulnesse which God hath geuen vnto men, I se y he hath geuen it them, to be exercised in it. All thys hath he ordered maruelous goodly, to euery thig his due tyme. He hath planted ignorance also in the hertes of me, that they shuld not comprehend the ground of hys worckes, which he doth from the begynning to y ende. So I perceaued, y in these thynges there is nothing better for a man, then to be mery and to do well so longe as he lyueth. For all that a mā eateth & dynceth, yee what soeuer a mā enioyeth of all his labour, that same is a gyfte of God. I considered also y what soeuer God doth, it continueth for euer and that nothing can be put vnto it, nor taken from it, and that God doth it to the intent, that me shuld feare hym. * The thing that hath bene, is now: and the thyng that is for so come, hath bene afore tyme, for God restoreth agayne the thyng that was past. * Moreover, I sawe vnder the Sunne vngodlynesse in the steade of iudgement, and iniquyte in steade of ryghteousnesse. Then thought I in my minde: God shal separate the ryghteous from the vngodly, and then shal be the tyme and iudgement of all counceils and worckes. I commened with myne awne hert also, concerninge the children of men: how God hath chosen them, & yet letteth them aspre: as though they were beastes: for it happeneth vnto men as it doth vnto beastes, and as the one dyeth, so dyeth the other: yee they haue both one maner of bryeth: so y (in this) a man hath no preeminence aboue a beast, but all are subdued vnto vanytie. They go all vnto one place, for as they be all of dust, so shall they all turne vnto dust agayne. * Who knoweth y sprete of mā that goeth vwarde, and the bryeth of the beast that goeth downe into y earth? * Wherefore I perceaued, that there is nothing better for a man, the to be ioyfull in hys labour, for that is hys porcyon. But who wyll byngne him to se the thinge that shall come after hym?

The.iiii. Chapter.

The myseries of the innocent. The superfluous labours of men. The chyldre that is poore, and wyse, &c.

I turned me, & considered all y violent wrong that is done vnder the sunne, & beholde, the teares of soch as were oppressed, & there was no man to conforthe the, or y wolde deliuer & defende the from the violence of their oppressours. Wherefore I iudged those that are deed, to be more happye then soch as be alpye: yee, him that is yet vnborne to be better at ease then they both, because he seyth not the miserable worckes that are done vnder the sunne.

Agayne, I sawe that all trauayle, & dysgience of labour, y every man taketh in hande, was done of enuy agaynst his neybour. This

This is also a vaine thinge, and a veracyon of mynde. The foole foldeth his handes together, and eateth vp hys awne fleshe. One haue full (sayeth he) is better with rest, then both the handes full with labour & trauayle of minde. * Moreover, I turned me, & beholde yet another vanyte vnder the Sunne.

There is one man, no mo but hym selfe alone, haupng nether chyldre ner brother: yet is there no ende of his careful trauayle, his eyes can not be satysfied with riches. * (yet doth he not remembre hym selfe, and saye.) For whom do I take soch trauayle? For whose pleasure do I thus consume awaye my lyfe? This is also a vayne & myserable thinge. * Wherefore, two are better then one, for they maye well enioye the profyt of theyr labour.

For if one of them fall, his copanyon helpeyth him vp agayne: But wo is him that is alone, for yf he fall, he hath not another to helpe him vp. Agayne, when two slepe together, they are warme: but how ca a body be warme alone? One maye be ouertome, but two maye make resistauce: A thre fold cable is not lyghtly broken. A poore chyldre byngne wyse, is better then an olde kyng, y doth, and cannot beware in tyme to come.

Some one cometh out of prison, and is made a kyng: and another which is borne in the kyngdome, cometh vnto pouerte. And I perceaued, that all men lyuynge vnder the sonne, go with y seconde chyldre, that shall stonde vp in the steade of the other.

As for the people y haue bene before him, and y come after hym, they are innumerable: And they y come after him shall not reioyse of him. This is also a vayne thyng & a veracyon of mynde. When y comest in to y house of God, kepe thy fote & draw nye y God which is at hande may heare: * y thou gyue not the offeringes of fooles, for they knowe nowght, but to do euell.

The.v. Chapter.

A monition to beware of rashe communicacion: the ought not to meruell at the oppressyon of the poore. The courteous is not satysfied with his ryches.

Not hastye with thy mouth, and let not thine hert speake eny thing rashly before God. For God is in heauen, and y vpon earth, therfore let thy wordes be few. For where moch carefulnesse is, there are many dreames: and where many wordes are, there men maye heare fooles. * If thou make a vowe vnto God, be not slacke to performe it. As for folysch voves, he hath no pleasure in the: If thou promysse eny thinge, paye it: for better it is that thou make no vowe, the that thou shuldest promysse, and not paye. * Suffre not thy mouth to cause thy flesh for to synne, nether saye thou before the angell, y it is thy ignorance. For then God wil be angrie at thy voyce, & destroie all the worckes of thyne handes. And why? where as are many dreames and many wordes, there are also diuerse vanytes: but loke that thou feare God. * If thou seyst the poore to be oppressed and wrongeously dealt withall, so that equite & the ryght of the lawe is wasted in the lade: maruell not thou at soch a thyng, for one greate man kepeth touch with another, & y myghtie men are in auctozite ouer the poore. The encrease of y erth vpholdeth all thinge, yea the kyng himselfe is maintained by husbādrye. He that loueth money, wyll neuer be satysfied w money: & who so deliteth i riches, shal haue no profyt therof. This is also a vayne thinge. Where as moche ryches is, there are many also that spende them awaye. And what pleasure moze hath he that possesseth the, sayunge that he maye loke vpon them with his eyes? A labouringe mā slepeth sweetly, whether it be lytle or moch that he eateth: but the abundance of the ryche will not suffre him to slepe. Yet is there a soze plage, which I haue sene vnder the sunne (namely) ryches kepeth to the hurte of him that hath the in possession. For oft tymes they perishe with his greate misery & trouble: & yf he haue a chyldre, it getteth nothyng. * A yke as he came naked out of hys mothers wombe, so goeth he thither agayne, & carryeth nothing awaye with hym of all his labour. This is a miserable plage, that he shall go awaye euen as he came. What helpeyth it hym then, that he hath laboured in the wynde? All the dayes of his lyfe also he dyd cate in y darcke, with greate carefulnesse, synnesse and sorrow.

Therefore me thinke it a better & a fayrer thyng, a man to eate and dyncke, and to be refreshed of all hys labour, y he taketh vnder the Sunne all y dayes of his lyfe which God geueth hym, for this is hys porcyon.

For vnto whosoever God geueth riches goodes and power, he geueth it hym to enioye it, to take it for hys porcyon, and to be refreshed of hys labour: thys is y gyfte of God. For he thinketh not moch howe longe he shall lyue, for so moch as God fylleth his herte with gladnesse.

The.vi. Chapter.

The myserie of the ryche and couetous. The difference of a folle and a wyse man.

There is yet a plage vnder the sunne, & it is a generall thing among men: when God geueth a man ryches, goodes and honoure, so that he wanteth nothyng of all that hys herte ca desyre: and yet God geueth him not leaue to enioye y same, but another man spendeth them them. This is a vayne thinge & a miserable plage. If a mā begett an hundred children, & lyue many yeres, so þ his dayes are many in nombre, and yet can not enioye his good, nether be buried: as for him I saye, þ an vn-tymely byrth is better then he. For he commeth to naught, & spedyth his tyme in darknes, & his name is forgotte. Moreover, he seeth not þ sonne, & knoweth not of it: & yet hath he more rest then the other. Yee though he lyued two thousande yeres, yet hath he no good lyfe. Come not all to one place: All the labour þ a man taketh, is for him selfe, & yet his desire is neuer fylled after his min-

de. For what hath þ wyle more then þ foole?
What helpeth it the poore, þ he knoweth to walke w̄ fooles before the lyuig? The clea-re syght of the eyes is better, then þ the soule shulde walke after desires of þ luste. Howbeit, this is also a vayne thinge & a dysquietnelle of mynde. The thinge þ hath bene: is named already, & knowen þ it is euen mā him selfe: nether maye he go to lawe w̄ hym þ is myghtier then he. Many thinges ther be þ increase vanite, & what hath a man els. For who knoweth what is good for mā lyuig, i the dayes of hys vayne lyfe, which is but a shadowe? O who wyl tell a mā, what shal happen after him vnder the Sunne?

The vii. Chapter.

That to hych passeth our strengthes and wylles ought we not to seke after.

A Good name is more worth then a precious oymnt, and the daye of death is better then the daye of byrth.
It is better to go into an house of mourning, then into a baketinge house. For there is the ende of all men, & he þ is liuig, taketh it to hert: grauntie is better then to laugh: for when the countenance is heuy, the herte is reformed. The hert of the wyle is in the mournyng house, but the hert of the folp is in the house of myrth. * It is better to geue care to the chastenynge of a wyle man then to heare the songe of fooles. For the laughinge of foles is lyke the crackynge of thornes vnder a pot. And that is but a vayne thyng.

* 19. 10. p. 11. a

The wyle man hateth wronge deluge: & abhorreth the harte þ couetith rewardes.
Better it is to cōspyre, the ende of a thinge then the begynnynge. The paciēt of sprete is better then the hye mynded. Be not haste-ly angrie in thy mynde, for wrath resteth in the bolome of fooles. Saye not þ: What is the cause, þ the dayes of the olde tyme were better, then they þ be nowe: for þ were no wyl-se questio. Wylsome w̄ enheritaunce is good pet better is it w̄ them þ without care may beholde the sonne. For wylsome defendeth as well as moneye, & the excellēt knowledge & wylsome geueth lyfe vnto him þ hath it in possession. Considre the worke of God how þ no man can make the thinge straight which he maketh croked. Use wel the tyme of prosperite, & remēbre the tyme of myssfor-tune: for God maketh the one by the other. so þ a man cā fynde nothing els. All thinges haue I considred in the tyme of my vanite: þ the iust mā perissheth for his righteousnes take, & the vngodly lyueth in hys wyckednesse. Therefore * be þ nether to ryghteous ner ouer wyle, þ thou perishe not: be nether to vnyghteous also ner to folp, lest thou dye before thy tyme. It is good for the to take holde of this, & not to let that go out of thy hand. For he that feareth God, commeth forth with them all.

Wylsome geueth more corage vnto the wyle, then myghtie mē of the cite: * for there is not one iust vpon earth, þ doth good, and synneth not. Take not hede vnto euery worde that is spokē, lest thou heare thy seruant curse þ: for thine a wne hert knoweth that þ thy selfe also hast oft tymes spoken euell by other mē. All these thinges haue I proued i wylsome: for I thought to be wyse * but the wēt farther from me then the was before, pec & so depe that I might not reach vnto her. I applyed my mynde also vnto knowledge, & to seke & searche oute science, wylsome & vnderstāding: to knowe the foolyshnesse of the vngodly, & the errour of do-tinge fooles. And I founde, þ a woman is bytterer then death: for she hath cast abyode, her herte as a nett that men fische with, and her handes are cheynes. Who so pleaseth God, shal escape from her: but the synner will be taken with her.

Beholde (sayeth the preacher) thys haue I diligently searched oute & proued. One thinge must be considred with another, that a man may come by knowledge: whych as pet I seke, & fynde it not. Among a thousande mē I haue founde one, but not one womā amonge all. Lo, this onely haue I founde, þ * God made man iust and ryght, but they sought many inuencions.

nether maye vngodlynes deliuer them that medle with all.

All these thinges haue I considered, and applyed my mynde vnto euery worke that is vnder the sonne: howe one mā hath lord-shype vpon another to his a wne harne. For
* I haue seane often þ vngodly brought to ther graues: and yet they haue retorned in to the cite ageyne, and came from the place of holy men, which in the cite were gro-wen out of memory as were those also that lyued well. Thys is also a vayne thyng.
Because now that euell workes are not hastely punished, the hert of man geueth hym selfe ouer vnto wyckednesse. But though an euell person offendeth an hundred tymes, & God differ gyuinge him lōge lyfe: pet am I sure, þ it shal go well w̄ them that feare God, because they haue hi before their eyes. Agayne, as for þ vngodly, it shal not be well w̄ him, nether shal he prolonge his dayes: but euen as a shadowe, so shal he be that feareth not God.

Pet is there a vanyte vpon earth: There be iust men, vnto whom it happeneth, as though they had the workes of the vngod-ly: Agayne, there be vngodly, with whom it goeth as though they had the workes of the ryghteous. Thys haue I called also a vayne thyng. Therefore I commende glad-nesse, because a mā hath no better thing vnder the Sunne, then to eate and dryncke, & to be merry: for þ shal be haue of his labour all the dayes of his lyfe, which God geueth him vnder the sunne. And so I applyed my mynde to learne wylsome, & to knowe the traynle that is i the worlde (and þ of such a fastyon, þ I suffred not myne eyes to slepe nether daye ner nyght) I vnderstode of all the workes of God, but it is not possible for a mā, to attayne vnto the workes þ are done vnder the Sunne: and though he bestowe his labour to seke them out, yet can he not reach vnto them: yee though a wyle man wolde vntertake to knowe them, yet shal he not fynde them.

The ix. Chapter.

A mā wotteth not, by þ wylsome of hys a wne wylles, whether he be wylsome of loue or hate: & mā ought to lye mētel with his wylse, & praye of wylsome

E all these thinges purposed, I in my mynde to seke out. The ryghteous and wyle, pec and they: letuauntes also, are in þ shade of God:
and * there is no man þ knoweth ether loue or hate, but all thynges are before the.
It happeneth vnto one as vnto another: it goeth with þ ryghteous as with þ the vngodly: * with the good and cleane as with the vncleane: with hym that offereth as with him that offereth not: lyke as it goeth with þ vertuous, so goeth it also with the synner: As it happeneth vnto the periured, so happeneth it also vnto him that is afrayed to be forsworne. Amonge all thynges that come to passe vnder the Sunne, thys is a misery þ it happeneth vnto all a lyke.
This is the cause also that the hertes of mē are full of wyckednesse, & madd foolishnesse is in their hertes as longe as they lyue, vntyll they dye.

* Job. 1. 2. c

* 19. 10. p. 11. a

And why? As lōge as a mā lyueth, he hath a hope: for a quyk dogg (saye they) is better then a deed liō: for they þ be lyuig, knowe þ they shal dye: but they þ be deed: knowe nothing, nether deserue they eny more. For their memorial is forgotte, so that they be nether loued, hated ner enuyed: nether haue they eny more parte in the worlde, i all that is done vnder þ Sunne. So thou thy waye then, eate thy bred with ioye, and dryncke thy wyne with a glad hart, for thy workes please God. Let thy garmentes be all wape whyte, & * let thy head lack none oymnt.
* Alle thy self to liue ioyfully with thy wife whom thou louest, all the dayes of thy lyfe which is but vayne, þ God geueth tye vnder the Sunne, all the dayes of thy vanite: for that is thy porcion in this lyfe, of al thy laboure and trauple that thou takest vnder the Sunne. What soeuer thou takest in hande to do, that do with all thy power, for in the graue that þ goest vnto, there is nether worke, counsell, knowledge ner wyl-some.

* 19. 10. p. 11. a

* 19. 10. p. 11. a

* 19. 10. p. 11. a

So I turned me vnto other thinges vnder the Sunne, & I sawe, that in ruinynge, it helpeth not to be wyff: in batayle, it hel-peth not to be strōge: to fedynge, it helpeth not to be wyle, to riches, it helpeth not to be suttell: to be had i fauoure, it helpeth not to be cōpyng: but that all lyeth in tyme & fortune. For * a man knoweth not hys tyme, but lyke as the fysh are takē with the angle, and as the byrdes are catched with the inare: Euen so are men takē in the perlous tyme, when it cometh sodenly vpon them.

Thys wylsome haue I seene also vnder the Sunne, & me thought, it a greate thig.
There was a lytle cite, & a fewe mē with it: so there came a greate kynge and beseged it, and made greate bulwarkes agaynst it.
And

And in this there was founde a poore mā, (but he was wylle) which with his wyldome deliuered the cite: yet was there no body that had any respect vnto such a simple man. Then sayde I: wylldome is better the strength. Neuertheless, a simple mans wyl-ldome is despised, & his wordes are not hered. A wylle mans counsell that is folowed in silence, is farre above the crenge of a captayne amonge fooles. * For wylldome is better the hardnesse: but one vnto hyt alone detropeth moch good.

The .x. Chapter.

The difference betwixt a foole and a wylle man.
Fortunate and happye is that realme which hath a wylle prince.

A Deed dye doth corrupt swete opyment & maketh it to stynk: & euen so oft tymes he that is made for wylldome & honour, is abhorred because of a lytle foolishnes. * A wylle mā's herte is vpo f ryght hāde, but a fooles herte vpo f left. A foole will shewe him self whē he goeth by f way, yet thiketh he puey mā doth as foolysly as hi selfe. If a pncipal spete be geue f to beare rule, * he not negligēt thē in thine office: for he f can take cure of him selfe, auoydeth great offences. Another plage is there, which I haue se-ne vnder the sonne: namely, f ignorance f is comenly amonge pncipes: in that a foole sytteth in greate dignite, & the ryche are sett downe beneth: I haue sene seruantes ryde vpon horses, and pncipes goyng vpon their fete as it were seruantes. * But he f dyggeth vpo a ppt, shal fall therein him selfe: and who so breaketh downe the hedge, a serpet shal bite hym. Who so remoueth stones, shal haue trauaple withall: & he f he weth wood, shal be hurt therewith.

When an yd is blont, and the poynt not sharpened, it must be whet agayne, and f w myght: & eue so doth wylldome folowe diligence. A babler of hyt toge is no better, thē a serpent that styngeth wythout hyssyng.
The wordes out of a wylle mā's mouth are gracious, but the lypyes of a foole wyll de-trope him selfe. The begynnyng of his tal-kyng is foolysnes, & the last worde of his mouth is sharke madnesse. A foole is full of wordes, & a man cannot tell what shal come to passe: who wyll then warne him of it that shal folow after him? The labour of the folyth is greuous vnto thē, whyle they knowe not howe to go into the cite.

Who be vnto the (& thou lande) whose kynges is but a child, and whose pncipes are early at their bunckettes: But well is the (& thou lande) whose kyng is come of nobles, & whose pncipes eate in due season: for necessyte & not for lust. Thozow flourish-nesse the balches fall downe, & thozow yde-hādes it rayneth in at the house. Meate ma-keth men to laugh, and wyne maketh the mery: but vnto money are all thinges obedient. With f sayng no euell in thy thought & speake no hurte of the ryche in thy ptey-chāre: for a byrd of the ayre shal betraye thy voyce, and with his fetters shal he bewraye thy wordes.

The .xi. Chapter.

Wylldome ought to be distribute vnto the needy.

so shalt thou fynde after many dayes. Geue parte. vii. dayes, and not what misery shal come vpo earth. Wi-hen f cloudes are full, they pōwe out rayne vpon the earth. And when the tre falleth (whether it be toward f South or North) in what place soeuer it fall, there it lyeth.

He that regardeth the wide, shal not lose and he that hath respecte vnto the cloudes, shal not reape. Now lyke as f knowest not the waye of f spirite howe he entred into f body beinge yet in a mothers wōbe: & eue so f knowest not the workes of God, whych is the workemaster of all.

Cease not thou therfore with thy handes to loke thy sede, whether it be in the moninge or in the euenyng: for thou knowest not whether this or that shal prospere, and yf they both take, it is f better. The lyght is swete, & a pleasaunt thyng is it for the eyes to loke vpon the Sūne. If a man lyue many yeres, and be glad in thē all, let him remembre the dayes of darkenesse, whych shal be many: and that foloweth, all thynges shal be but vanyte. Be glad then (& thou younge mā) in thy youth, and let thyne hert be mery in thy yong dayes, folowe f wayes of thyne a wne herte, & the lust of thine eyes but be thou sure, that God shal bypunge the into iudgement for all these thynges.

vanyte. The Preacher was yet more wylle, and taught the people knowledge: he gaue good hede, sought out the groude, and set forth many parables. Hys diligence was to fynde out acceptable wordes, ryght scripture, and the wordes of trueth. For * the wordes of f wylle are lyke pyches and nay-les that goo thozow, wher with f stiffe gathered is holden vpo: for they are geuen of one shepherde onely. Therfore beware (my sonne) of that doctrine that is besyde thy: for to make many booke it is an endles worke:
and to loude cryng wepeth the bodye.

þ daughters sawe her, they sayde, she was blessed. See the Quenes and wyues praysed her. What is the this, þ loketh forth as the moonyng: fayre as the moone, clea-re as the sunne, and fearful as an armye of men wth their baners. I mente downe ito þ nutt garde, to se what grewe by þ brokes, & to loke yf the vyneparoe flourished, or yf þ pomgranates were shot forth. I knewe not þ my soule had made me þ charpote of the people that be vnder tribute. Turne againc, turne agayne. O thou perfecte one turne ageyne, turne agayne, & we will loke vpon the. What wil ye se in the Sulamyte / She is lyke men of warre singynge in a compaignye.

The seventh Chapter.

How pleasant are thy treadynges with the shoes, thou princes daughter: Thy thighes are like a fayre iewel, which is wrought by a connyng worcke master.

Thy nauell is lyke a rōūde goblet, which is neuer without drynke. Thy wōbe is lyke a hepe of wheat that is sett aboute wth roses.
* Thy two brestes are lyke two twyns of ponge roes. Thy neck is as it were a tower of pūery: thine eyes also are lyke the water poles þ are in Heschō, belyde þ porte of Ba-thrabbin: thy nose is lyke the tower of Li-banus, which loketh toward Damascus.
That head þ standeth vpon the, is lyke Carmel & the bearre of thy heade is lyke purple and lyke a kynge goynge forth wth his garde aboute hym. O how fayre & louely art þ my dearlynge, i pleasures! Thy stature is lyke a Palme tree & thy brestes lyke the grapes. I sayde I will clyme vp to þ Palme tree, & take holde of his hye braūches.
Thy brestes also shalbe as þ vyne clustres þ smell of thy nostrels lyke is the smell of apples, and thy laves lyke the beste wyne. Whiche goeth straye vnto my beloued and brusteth forth by sylppes of the Auncient eldres. There wyl I turne me vnto my loue & he shall turne hym vnto me. Come on my loue, we will go forth into the felde, & take oure lodgyng in the villages. In the mornyng we will go se þ vnygarde: we will se þ the vyne be spronge forth, þ the grapes be growne, and þ the þogranates be shot out. There wyl I geue þ my brestes: þ Wandragoras geue the þ sweate smell: and besyde oure doores are all manner of pleasaunt frutes: both newe, & olde: whych I haue kepte for the, o my beloued.

The viii. Chapter.

That I myght fynde the wythout, and kysse the, whom I loue as my brother whych suckte my mothers brestes: and that thou shalt not be despised I will leade the, and byng the in to my mothers house: that thou myghtest teach me, & that I myght geue the drynke of spiced wyne, & of the swete sappe of my pogrannates. * His left hande shall be vnder my head & his ryght hande shall embrace me. I charge you, O ye daughters of Ierusalem, þ ye wake not vp my loue, ner touch her, tyll she be content her selfe. What is the this, that cometh vp from the wilderness, and leaneth vpon her loue? I waked the vp amonge the apple trees, where thy mother conceived the, where thy mother laye (brought the into the worlde. O set me as a seale vpon thine herte, and as a seale vpon thine arme: for loue is myghtie as the death, & gelousy as the hel. Her coales are of fyre, & a very flāme of the Lorde: so þ many waters are not able to quēche loue, nerther maye the streames drowne it. Yee, yf a man wolde geue all the good of his house for loue, he shuld counte it nothyng, Our syster is but ponge, & hath no brestes: what shall we do for our syster, when she shall be spoken for? Yf she be a wall, we shall buyde a syluer bolwercke ther vpo: yf she be an open doore, we shall fasten her with borders of Cedre tree. I am a wall, and my brestes lyke towres, then was I as one that hath founde fauoure in his syght. Salomon hath a vnygarde at Baal Hamon, & this vnygarde deliuered he vnto the keepers: þ euey one for the frute therof shulde geue hym a thousande peces of syluer. My vnygarde is in my syght: thou (O Salomon) must haue a thousande, and the keepers two hundred wigh the frute. Thou that dwellest in the gardens, O let me heare thy voyce, that my companyons maye herken to the same. O get the awaye, my loue, and be as a roo or a pong hert vpo the swete smellynge mountaynes.

The booke of the prophete Esay

The fyrst Chapter.

Esay propheseth that the angell of God shall come vpon Ierusalem because of the synnes.

The vision of Esay þ sonne of Amos which he sawe vpon Iuda and Ierusalem: in the dayes of Azia and Ioahaz, Ahaz & Jeheziah kynges of Iuda. Heare, O heauen, & herken O earth: for the Lorde hath spoken: I haue nourished & promoted children, but they haue done wyckedly agaynst me. The ore hath knowne his owner & þ alle his masters cribb: but Irael hath receaued no knowledge, my people hath no vnderstandyng. Alas for this synfull nacion, a people of great iniquitie: a seed of vngacious people corruptinge ther wayes. They haue forsaken the Lorde, they haue prouoked the holy one of Irael vnto anger, and are gone backward. Wherby shulde þe be plagued any more: for þe are euer fallige awaye. The whole head is synck, & þ hert is heuy. Fro the sole of the fote vnto þ head, there is no whole parte in all your body: but all are woundes, botches, sores, & stryppes, whych cā nether be helped, bounde vp, molified, ner eased w any opment. Your land lyeth waste, your cyties are brent vp, your enemyes deuoure youre lāde, & þe must be sayne to skāde, & loke vpo it: & it is desolate, as they were subuerted þ were alienate fro þ Lorde. Moreover, the daughter of Syon ys left alone lyke a cottage in a vineyard, lyke a lodge in a garde of cucumbers, lyke a wasted cytie. And excepte þ Lorde of hostes had left vs a fewe alyue: we shuld haue bene as Sodoma, and lyke vnto Gomorra. Heare þ worde of the Lorde þe Lordes of Sodoma: & herke vnto þ lawe of our God, þ people of Gomorra. Why offere þe so many sacrifices vnto me saith Lorde? I am full of þ brent offrynges of wethers, ad of þ fatnesse of fedbeastes. I haue no pleasure in þ bloud of bullokes, lābes and goates. When þe come to appeare before me, who requireth this of you to treade within my porches? Therefore offere me no mo oblaciōs, for it is but lost labour. Incense is an abhominable thinge vnto me. I haue not awaye with youre newe moones, your Sabbathes & gatherige together at þ solēne dayes. I hate your newe mone dayes & solēne feastes, eue from my very hert. I can not awaye w suche vanitie & holdinge in of the people. They lye vpon me as a burthen, and I am wery of beryng the. When þe holde out your handes, I will turne myne eyes from you. And though þe make many prayers, yet wil I heare nothyng at all, seying your handes are full of bloude. Wash you therfore, and make you cleane, put awaye your euell entetes out of my syght, cease from doyng of euell. Lerne to do ryght, applye your selues to equite, deliuer þ oppressed, helpe þ fatherles to his ryght, let the widowes cōplainte come before you. Come I praye þe (sayeth þ Lorde) let vs reaso oure matter together. Though youre synnes be as read as scarlet, they shalbe as white as snowe. And though they were lyke purple, they shalbe as whit as wolle. If þe belouynge & obediēt, þe shal enioye þ best thyng þ groweth i þ lād. But yf þe be obstinate & rebellious, þe shalbe deuoured w þ swerde: for thus þ Lorde hath promised w his awne mouth. How happeneth it then þ þ ryghteous cytie (which was full of equite) is become vnfaythfull as an whore: ryghtuousnes dwelt i it, but now murtherers. Thy syluer is turned to dross, & thy wyne myrte with water. Thy prizes are wicked & companyōs of theues. They loue gyftes altogether, and gape for rewarde. As for þ fatherles, they helpe hi not to his ryght, nerther wyl they lett the wydowes causes come before the. Therefore, sayeth þ Lorde God of hostes, þ myghty gouernour of Irael, Oute vpon þe, I will ease me of myne enemyes, & I will avenge me of myne aduersaryes, I shall lāue my hād vpon þ, & burne out thy drosse fro þ synnest & purest, & put out all thy synne, & set thy iudges agayne as they were som tyme & thy Senatours as they were fro þ begynnyng. Then shalt þ be called þ ryghteous cytie, þ faythfull cytie. So shalbe redeemed w equite, & they shal turne againe vnto her i ryghteousnesse. For þ trasgressours & vngodly, and such as are become vnfaythfull vnto the Lord, must altogether be vtterly destroyed. For they shall be ashamed of the goddes þ þe longed for. And þe shall be put to shame for þ Idols groue gardes þe haue chosen: þe shalbe as a tree whose leaues are fallen awaye, & as a garden þ hath no moystnesse. And as for the glory of þe your graued Images, it shalbe turned to dyme strawe, and he þ made them to a sparke. And they shal both burne together, so that no man shalbe able to quench them.

The second Chapter.

Of the comynge and deeth of Christ, and of the callinge of the heathen.

Thys is the worde þ was opened vnto Esay the sonne of Amos, vpon Iuda & Ierusalem. It wilbe also in the last dayes þ þ yll where þ house of þ Lorde is builded, shall be þ chese amonge ylles, and exalted aboue all lyile ylles. And all nacyns shall pzeace vnto hym, and the multytude of people shal go speakyng thus one to another: vp, * let vs go to the hyll of the Lord, & to the house of the God of Jacob: that he maye shewe vs his waye, and p we maye walcke in his pathes. For the lawe shall come out of Sion, and the word of the Lorde from Ierusalem, and shall geue sentece amonge the heathen, and shall reforme the multitude of people: They shall breake theyr swerdes also i to mattocks, and theyr speares to make sythes. And one people shall not lyft vp weapen agaynst another, neither shal they learne to fyght from this forth. Come ye (O house of Jacob) let vs walcke i the lyght of the Lorde. But thou hast forsaken thy people the house of Jacob, because they go farre beyonde the east cōtreys i Sodomites (who they haue as i Philistines had) and in straunge chyldren they thinke them selues to haue ynough. Theyr land is full of siluer and gold, neither is there any ende of theyr treasure: Theyr land is also full of horses, & no ede is there of theyr charrets. Theyr lande is also full of bayne goddesses, and before the worcke of theyr awne handes haue they bowed the selues, yee, euē before the thinge that theyr awne fyngers haue made. There kneleth the man, there falleth the man downe before the, but the (O Lorde) wilt not leaue them unpunished.

And therfore get the in to some rock, and hyde the in the grounde for feare of the Lorde, and for the glory of his magesty: Which casteth downe the high lookes of presumptuous persones, and bringeth lowe the pryde of man, and the Lorde only shall be exalted in that daye. For the daye of the Lorde of hostes shall go ouer al pryde and presumptio, vpon all them that exalte them selues, and shall bypunge the all downe: vpon all the hygh and stoute Cedre trees of Libanus, & vpon all the okes of Basan, vpon all the hygh hylles, and vpon all stoute mountaynes, vpon all costly towres, & vpon all stronge walles, vpon all hyppes of Charis, and vpon euery thyng that is glorious and pleasaunt to loke vpon. And it shall bypunge downe the pryde of man, and laye mans presumptuousnesse full lowe, and the Lorde shall only haue the vitory in that daye. But the Idols shall utterly be rote out. When shall crepe in to holes of stone, and into caues of the earth, for feare of the Lorde, and for the glory of his magesty: what tyme as he shall aryse vp to condemne the earth. Then shall man cast awaye his goddesses of syluer, and his goddesses of gold (which he neuertheles had made to honour them) vnto Molles & Backes: And they shall crepe in to the caues and rockes, & into the clyftes of hard stones, for feare of God, and for the glory of his magesty, when he shall ryleth to condemne the earth. Feare not ye then any man, whose breth is in hyss nostrils. For what is he of reputacion?

The thyrde Chapter.
The prophete sayeth that at the comyng of Christ all strength and powre shall be put forth of Iherusalem.

In that daye, the Lorde God of hostes and Iuda, all possessions & power al meat and bypunge, the captayne and the souldyar, the iudge and prophete, the wyse and the aged man, the prince of syccie peare olde, and the honorable: the Senatours, and men of vnderstandinge: the master of craftes and oratours. And I shall geue the chyldren to be theyr princes, & babes shall haue the rule of you. The people also shall be pylled and polled, and one shall euer be doyng violence and wronge to another. The bope shall presume agaynst the elder, and the vyle persone agaynst the honorable. Yee, one shall take a frede of his awne kynred by the bolome, and saye: thou hast clothynge, thou shalt be our head, for thou mayest kepe vs fro this fall & parell. Then shall he sweare & saye: I cannot helpe you. Moreover, there is neither meat nor clothynge in my house, make me no ruler of the people. For Ierusalem is ouerthrowne & Iuda must fall to the grounde, because that both theyr wordes & counsels are agaynst the Lorde, to prouoke the presence of his magesty vnto anger. The chaungynge of theyr countenance bewa-peth them, yee, they declare theyr awne synnes, the selues, as the Sodomites, & hyde the not. Wo be vnto theyr soules for they haue retourned euill vnto the selues. Byd the ryghteous do well, for they shall enioye the frutes of theyr studies. But wo be to the vngodly and vnyghteous, for they shall be rewarded after theyr workes. Chyldren are extorcioners of my people, and women haue rule of them.

O my people, those that call the blessed decaue the, and depraue the waye of thy foteystepes. The Lorde is rysen vp to comen of the matter, and standeth vp (I saye) to geue iudgement of the people. The Lorde shall come forth to reason with the Senatours and princes of his people. It is ye that haue burnt vp my vineyard, the extorcion done to the poore is i your houses. Wherefore do ye oppresse my people, & marre the faces of the poore? sayeth the Lorde God of hostes. Moreover, they sayth the Lorde: Seing the daughters of Sion are become so proude, and come in wretched out neckes and with bayne wanton eyes: seynge they come i tryppynge so nyccly with theyr fete: Therfore shall the Lorde haue the heades of the daughters of Sion, and shal discover theyr theyr shame. In that daye shall the Lorde take awaye the gorgiounes of theyr apparell, and spanges, cheynes, partelettes, and colarres, braceletes and booues, & goodly floured, wyde and bordered rayment, brooches, and headbandes, rynges and garlandes, holy daye clothes and vales, kercheffes and pinnes, glasses and cypresses, bonettes and taches.

And in steade of good smell, there shall be stynck amonge the. And for theyr gyddles there shall be lowse bades. And for well sett heare there shall be baldenelle. In steade of a stomacher, a sack cloth, and for theyr bewty witherdnesse, and sonne burnyng. Pourre housbandes and myghtie men shall perishe with the swerde in batayle.

At that tyme shal the gates mourne and complayne, and they shal sytt as desolate folck vpon the earth.

The fourth Chapter.

For want of men, seuen women desyre to haue one man.

When shall seuen wyues take holde of one man, and saye: we will laye all our meate and clothynge together in comen, only that we may be called thy wyues, & that this shamesfull reproche maye be taken fro vs. After that tyme shall the braunche of the Lorde be bewtyfull and myghty, and the frute of the earth shall be fayre and pleasaunt for those Israelytes that shall lyue therof. Then shall the remnaunt in Sion & the remnaunt at Ierusalem be called holy: Namely all such as are wytted among the lypynge at Ierusalem: what tyme as the Lorde shall washe awaye the fylthynes of the daughters of Sion, and pource the bloude out from Ierusalem with the wynde of his iudgemente and with fyre. Moreover, vpon all the dwellynge of the hyll of Sion and vpon theyr whole congregacion, shall the Lorde proude a cloude and smoke by daye, & the bypunge of a flammynge fyre by nyght: for all theyr glory shall be prelerued. And Ierusalem shall be a tabernacle for a shadowe because of hete in the daye tyme a place and refuge where a man maye kepe hym from wether & rayne.

The v. Chapter.

Of Christ and his vineyard, with an excecration of couetousnes and dycknes.

Now will I syng my beloued frede a songe of my fredes, because of his vineyard. My beloued frende hath a vineyard in a very frutefull plenteous grounde.

This he hedged, this he walled rounde aboute, and plated it with goodly grapes. In the myddest of it buylded he a towre, and made a wyne presse therein. And afterwarde when he looked that it shulde bypunge his grapes, it brought forth thornes. Now therfore (O ye Cyprians of Ierusalem and whole Iuda:) Iudge I praye you betwixte me, and my vineyard. What more could haue bene done for it that I haue not done? Wherefore then hath it geue thornes, where I looked to haue had grapes of it?

Well, now I shall tell you how I will do with my vineyard: I will take the hedg from it, that it maye perishe, and breake downe the wall, that it maye be trode vnder fote. I will laye it waste, that it shall neither be digged nor cut, but beare thornes and briers. I will also forbyd the cloudes that they shall not rayne vpon it. As for the vineyard of the Lorde of hostes it is the house of Israel, and whole Iuda his fayre planting. Of these he looked for equite, but se there is wrong: for ryghteousnesse, lo, it is but mysery.

Wo vnto the that toyne one house to another, & bying one lande so nygh vnto another, that the poore can get no more grounde, & the poore maye dwel vpon the earth alone. These thynges are i the ears of the Lorde of hostes: shall not many greater & more gorguous houses be so waste, that no man shall dwell in the? And ten akers of vynges shal geue but a Quarte, and xxx. buishels of sode shal geue but an Ephah.

Wo be vnto them, that ryle vp early to folowe dyckennes, and to them that continue so, vntill nyght, & tye they be sett on fyre with wyne. In those copanyes are harpes and lutes, tabzettes & pipes, and wyne. But they regarde not the worcke of the Lorde, and colpde not the operacyon of his hades. Therfore commeth my folk also in to captiuite, because they haue no vnderstandynge. Theyr glory is famished with hunger, and theyr pryde is marred for theyr ste. Therfore gapeth hell, and openeth her mouth maruelous wyde: that theyr pryde, boastyng and welth, with such as reioyse therein, maye descende into it.

Thus hath man a fall, and is brought lowe, and the hygh lode of the proude shal be layde downe. But the Lorde of hostes is exalted in iudgement, and God that is holy, is prayled in ryghteousnes: Then shall the shepe eate in ordre, and the ryche mens landes that were layde waste, shall straungers deuoure. Wo be vnto the, that drawe wyckednes vnto them with coardes of vanite and synne, as it were with a cart rope.

Which vse to speake on this maner: let hym make haste now, & go forth with his worcke, that we maye se it. Lett the counsell of the holy one of Israel come, and drawe nye, that we maye knowe it.

Wo be vnto them that call euell good, and good euell, which make darchnesse lyght, & lyght darchnesse, that make lowre swete, & swete lowre. Who be vnto them that are wylle in theyr awne lyght, and thynke the felices to haue vnderstandyng. Who be vnto them, that are strong to suppe out wyne and experte men to sett vp dyonchenesse. These geue sentece with the vngodly for rewardes, but comdemne the iust cause of the ryghteous.

Therefore, lyke as fyre lycketh vp the strawe, and as the flame consumeth the stubble: Euen so theyr rote shalbe as corruption: and theyr blossom shal vanysh awaye lyke dust: for they haue cast awaye the lawe of the Lord of hostes, & blasphemied the word of the holy maker of Israel. Therefore is the wrath of the Lord kindled also agaynst hys people, and he shaketh his hande at them: pee, he hath smyten, so that the hylls dyd treble. And theyr carcasses dyd lye i the opē streates, lyke myre. And i all thys, the wrath of God hath not ceased, but hys hande is stretched out styll. And he shall geue a token vnto a straunge people: and call vnto the in a farre countre: and beholde, they shall come hastely with spede. There shall not be one faynt nor feble amonge the, no not a sleggy nor sleper person. There shall not one of the put of the gyrdle from his loynes, nor lowse theyr lachet of his shooe. Hys arrowes are sharpe, & al his bowes bent. His horse hooves are lyke flint, & his cartwheles lyke a storme wynde. His crye is as it were of a lyon, and he roareth lyke lyons whelpes. They shall roare, & hantch vp the praye, & no man shall recouer it or get it from the. In that daye they shalbe so scarce vpon them, as the see. And yf we looke vnto the lade, beholde, it shalbe all darchnesse & sorowe. If we loke toward heauen: beholde, it shalbe darcke.

The vi. Chapter.

Esay sawe the glory of the Lord, and was sent to prophete the desolacion of Ieruse.

In the same yere that kynge Oziah dyed, I sawe the Lord sittynge vpon an hygh and glorious seate, & his trayne fylled the temple. And aboute hym stode the Seraphims, wherof euery one had sixe wyges. With twayne eche couered his face, w twayne hys fete, and with twayne dyd he flye. They cried also eche one to ather on thys maner: holy, holy, holy, is the Lord of hostes. The whole worlde is full of his glory. Pee, & geastes and dozechetes moued at his cryng, and the house was full of smoke. Then I sayde, Who is me for I am lost in almost as I am a man of vncleane lippes, & dwell amonge people phath vncleane lippes also: for myne eyes haue sene the kynge and Lord of hoostes.

Then flew one of the Seraphims vnto me, haupnge a hote cole in his hande, which he had taken from the auter with the tonges, and touched my mouth, and sayde, lo: this hath touched thy lippes, & thy synne vnghtcousnes is taken awaye, & thy synne forgiven. Also, I herd the voyce of the Lord sayge on this maner: Whom shall I send, and who wylle oure messainger? Then I sayde: here am I, sende me. And he sayde, go, and tell this people: * ye shall heare in dede, but ye shall not vnderstande: ye shall playnely se, and not perceaue. Harden the harte of this people, stoppe theyr eares, ad shut theyr eyes, that they se not with theyr eyes, heare not with theyr eares, and vnderstand not with theyr hertes, and conuerter and be healed.

Then spake I: Lord, how longe he answered: vntill the cyties be utterly wasted without inhabitours, & the houses without men, tyll the lande be also desolate, and lye vnbuylded. For the Lord shall take the men farre awaye, so that the lade shal lye waste a longe season, yet in yt shall succede x. kinges, and the lande shall retozne and be layde waste. And as the terebint tre and oke in winter cast ther leaues, and yet haue ther sappe in them so shall the holy lead continue in theyr substance.

The vii. Chapter.

The Syrians moue batayle agaynst Ierusalem. A byrgyn shall beare a chyld.

It happened in the tyme of Ahaz the sonne of Iotham, which was the sonne of Oziah kynge of Iuda: & Razin the kynge of Syria, and Bechah sonne of Romelpah, kynge of Israel: went vnto Ierusalem to besage it, but Razin was not able to winne ye. Now when the house of Dauid (that is Ahaz) herde worde therof, Syria & Ephraim were confederate together: his herte quaked (pee and the hertes also of his people) lyke as whan a tree in the felde is moued with the wynde.

Then sayde God vnto Esay: go mete Ahaz (thou and thy sonne Sear Jasub) at the head of the ouer pole, in the fote path by the fullers grounde, & saye vnto hym, take hede to thy selfe & be styll, but feare not, nether be faynt harted, for these two tayles: y is: for these two smokynge fyre brandes, the wrath and furiosnes of Razin the Syrian and Romelies sonne: because that the kynge of Syria Ephraim and Romelies sonne haue wickedly cōspyrred agaynst the sayng: We wyl goo vp agaynst Iuda, bere them, and bypunge them vnder vs, and set a kynge there: euen the sonne of Tabeel. For thus

For thus sayeth the Lord God therto, It shal not so goo forth, nether come so to passe: for the head cytie of Syria is Damascus, but the head of Damascus is Razin. And after fyue & threscore yere, shall Ephraim be no more a people. And the chefe cytie of Ephraim is Samaria, but the head of Samaria is Romelies sonne. Yf ye beleue not: it cometh of thys: that ye are vnfaythfull to God. Moreover, God spake once agayne vnto Ahaz, sayinge, requyre a token of the Lord thy God, whether it be toward the depth beneth, or toward the heygth aboue. Then sayd Ahaz: I will requyre none, nether wyl I tempte the Lord. The Lord answered: Then heare to, ye of the house of Dauid: Is it not ynough for you yf ye be greuous vnto men, but ye must greue my God also? And therefore the Lord shall geue you a token: Behold, a byrgyn shall conceaue and beare a sonne, and (y hys mother) shal cal his name Emanuel. But ter ad hony shall he eate, y he maye knowe to refuse the euell, and chose the good. For oz euer the chylde come to knowledge, to eschue the euell and chose the good. The lande (that thou so abhorrest) shalbe desolate of both her kynges. The Lord also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, & vpon thy fathers house (soch as neuer came sence the tyme that Ephraim departed fro Iuda) thozowe the kynge of the Assyrians. For at the same tyme shall the Lord whytyle for the flies that are aboute the water of Egypt, and for the Bees in the Assyrians lade. These shall come, and shall lyght all in the desolate vales, in the holes of stones, vpon all thozyme and bushy places.

At the same tyme shall the Lord shadue the heare of the head and the fete and the beerd cleane of, with the rasoure that he shall hyper beyode the water: namely, with the kynge of the Assyrians. At the same tyme shall a man lyue with a howe, and two shepe. Then, because of the aboundance of mylke, he shall make butter & eate it. So that euery one which remayneth in the lade, shall eate butter and hony. At the same tyme all vyneyardes (though there be a thousande vynes in one, & were solde for a thousande syluerlynges) shalbe turned to briers & thornes. Lyke as they shall come in to the lande w arrowes & bowes, so shall all the lande be come briers and thornes. And as for al hylls that are hewe downe, ther shall not come vpon the anye feare of briers & thornes. But y catell shal be dryuen thither, and the shepe shal fede there.

The viii. Chapter.

The despuerance of the lande by Emanuel. A done of offence, at whych many shal stumbe.

Moreover, the lord sayd vnto me: Take y a greate leaf, & write in it, as men dow a penne, make hastye spede to robbe, & haste to y spoyler. And I called vnto me saythfull witness to recorde. Uryah the prest, & zachariah the sonne of Barachiah. After that wet I vnto the Prophetisse, y had conceaued & borne a sonne. Then sayde the Lord to me: geue him this name: a spede robber: an hastie spoyler. For why, oz ouer y chylde shal haue knowledge to crye father, & mother: shall the ryches of Damascus & y substaunce of Samaria be taken awaye by y spoyler, before the kynge of the Assyrians.

The Lord spake also vnto me, sayinge: For so moch as thys people refuseth the still rennyng water of Sylo, and put theyr delpte in Razin & Romelies sonne: Behold, the Lord shall bypunge myghtie & greate floudes of water vpon them: namely, the kynge of the Assyrians with all his power: Which shall clyme vp vpo all his floudes, and renne ouer all theyr banckes. And shal breake in vpon Iuda, flowinge & increasig in power, tyll he gett hy by y neck. He shall fylle also the widenesse of thy lande with hys brode winges, Emanuel. Breake downe (o ye peple of Assur) and ye shall be, broke downe: herken to all ye of farre countrees. Muster you, and you shalbe broken downe, prepare you to batell and you shall be tozme in pecces: take your counsell together, yet must your coucel come to naught: go in hande withall, yet shall it not proce: for God is with vs. For the Lord spake thus to me in the powre of his hande, & warned me, sayinge vnto me: that I shulde not walcke in the waye of this people.

He sayde moreover: rounde with none of the, whosoeuer saye: ponder people are bounde together: feare them not, nether be a frayd of them, but sanctifie the Lord of hostes, lett hym be your feare and dyede. For he shall be the holy place to flye to, and ston to stumbe at: the rock to fall vpon: a snare and net to both the houses of Israel, and the inhabitours of Ierusalem.

And many shall stumbe, fall, and be broke vpon hym: pee, they shalbe snared & taken. Now laye the witness together & scale the lawe w my disciples. Thus wil I wayte vpon the Lord that hath turned his face from the house of Jacob, and I will loke for him. But lo, as for me, and the children which the lord hath geuen me: we are a token and a wonder in Israel, for the Lord of hostes sake, which dwelleth vpon the hyll of Sion.

And yf they saye vnto you: aske counsell at the sothelayers, witches, charmers and conurers, then make them thys answer.

Is there

 Luk. xxi.* Is there a people any where, that hath not consell at his God?  Shulde me reme vnto the dead for I luynges.* If eny mā want lyght, leet hym loke vpon the lawe, and the testimony, whether they speake not after this meanyng. If he do not thys, he stoblety and suffreth hunger. And yf he suffre hunger he is out of pacience, and blasphemeth his kyng & his God. Then loketh he vpon warde, & downwarde to y earth, & beholde, there is trouble and darkenesse, veraciō is rounde aboute hym, and the cloude of erreure. And out of such aduersite, shal he not escape. Euen lyke as in tyme past, it hath bene well sene, that the lande of zabulon and the lande of Nephtaly (where thozow y see wawe goeth ouer Iordane into the lande of Galilee) was at the fyrst in lytle trouble: but afterwarde soze vered.

The ix. Chapter.

The prophete of the natyue & domynge.

 Isa. xlii.* The people that walke in darkenes haue sene a greate lyght. As for them that dwell in the lande of the shadowe of death, vpon them hath y lyght shyned. Thou hast multiplyed the people, & not increased theyr toye.  They reioyce before the,* euen as men make mery in haruett, and as men that haue gotten y victoery, whe they deale the spoyle. For thou hast broken the yoke of y peoples burthen: the staff of hys shoul- der and the rod of hys opprelloure, as in the dayes of Madiān.

 And trulie enery batayll y the warry- ure accomplissheth, is done w cōfused nople & despylinge ther garmentes w bloude:* But this batayle shal be w burnynge & consumynge of fyre. For vnto vs a chyld is borne, & vnto vs a sonne is geuen. Vpon hys shoul- der doth the kyngdome lye, and he is called w hys awne name: wonderfull. The geuer of coucell, y myghty God, y euera- llyng father, the pryce of peace, he shal make no ende to encrease y kyngdome & peace, & shal lye vpon the seate of Dauid & in his kyngdome, to set vp the same, & to stabllysh it w equyte and ryghteousnesse, from hence forth for euermore. Thys shal the gelousy of the Lorde of hostes byynge to passe.

The Lorde sent a worde into Jacob, the same is come into Israel. And all the people of Ephraim shal knowe, and they that dwell in Samaria, y can saue with pryde and hys stomackes, on this maner. The ty- le worcke is fallē downe, but we will buylde it w squared stones. The Wolbery tym- bre is broke, but we shal sett it vp agayne with Cedre. Neuertheles, y Lorde shal pre- pare Razin the enemye agaynst them, and so orde theyr aduersaries, that the Sirc- ans shal laye holde vpon them before, and the Philistynes behynde, and so deuoure Israel with open mouth.

After all thys is not the wrath of y Lorde ceased, but yet hys hande stretched out styll. For the people turneth not vnto hym that chastyleth them, nether do they seke the Lorde of hostes. Therefore hath y Lorde roted oute of Israel both head and tay- le, byaunche and twygge in one daye.

By the head, is vnderstande the Sena- toure and honorable man, and by the tayle the Prophet that preached lyes. For all they which enfourme the people that they be in a ryght case, soch be disceauers. Soch as men thynke also to be perfecte among these, are but cast awayes.

Therefore shal the Lorde haue no pleasu- re in theyr ydage men, nether fauoure theyr fatherlesse & wyddowes. For they are all together yprocrytes and wycked, and all theyr mouthes speake foly. After all thys is not y Lordes wrath ceased, but yet hys hande is stretched out styll. For vngodly- nesse burneth, as a fyre in the byers and thornes. And as it were out of a fyre in a wood or a rede bush, so ascendeth the smo- ke of theyr pryde.

For cause of the wrath of the Lorde of hostes, is the lande full of darkenesse, and the people be consumed, as it were with fy- re, no mā doth spare his brother, but he rob- byth on y ryght hand: & doth famishe, he eateth on the left hande, and he shal not haue ynough. Euery man shal eate the flesh of his awne arme. Manasses shal eate Ephraim, and Ephraim, Manasses, and they both shal eate Iuda. After all thys is not the Lordes wrath ceased, but yet is hys hande stretched out styll.

The x. Chapter.

The threatneth the opprellours of the poore, and prophete agaynst Sennacherib.

Whe vnto the y make vneygh- teous lawes, & deuyse thinges, which be to harde for to kepe: wher thozow the poore are op- pressed, on euery syde, and y in- nocentes of my people robbed of iudgemēt: that wyddowes maye be theyr praye, and that they maye robbe y fatherlesse. What will ye do in tyme of the visitacon, and whan destruction shal come fro farre? To whom wyll ye runne for helpe? and to who wyll ye geue your honoure, that he maye kepe it? that when I with drawe my hāde ye come not amonge the presoners, or lye amonge the dead? After all this doth not the wrath of the Lorde cease, but yet is his hande stretched out styll.

Who be also vnto Assur, which is a staf of my wrath, in whose hande is the rod of my punysshment. I shal sende hym amonge tho- se ypocritish people, amonge the people that haue deserued my dysfauours shal I sende hym: that he may utterly robbe the, spoyle the, and treade them downe lyke the myze in y strete. Howbeit, his meanyng is not so nether thynketh his hert of thys falschyon. But he ymagineth onely, how he may rote out and destroye moch people, for he sayeth are not my wynces all kynges? Is not Calno as easye to wyne, as Charcha- mis? Is it harder to conuere Hamath then Arphad? Or is it lyghter to ouercome Damascus then Samaria? As who say: I were able to wyne the kyngdome of the Idolaters and their goddes: but not Jeru- salem & Samaria. Shal I not do vnto Je- rusalem & their ymages, as I dyd vnto Sa- maria and their ydoles?

Wherefore y Lorde sayeth: Alas as I ha- ue perfourmed my whole worcke vpon the hyll of Syon and Jerusalem, then wyll I vylet the noble and stoute hart of the kyng of Assyria, with hys proude lookes. For he standeth thus in his awne conceate: This do I thozowe y powder of myne awne hāde, and thozow my wyldome: For I am wysse, I am he that remoue the lādes of the people: I robbe their treasures: and (lyke one of the worthyes) I dyue them fro their hye scates. My hande hath founde out the strength of the people, as it were a nest. And lyke as egges, that were layde here and the- re, are gathered together: So do I gather all countrees. And there is no man, y darre be so bolde, as to touch a fether, that darre open his mouth, or once whysper.

Shal the are boast it selfe, agaynst him that he weth therwith? or doth y lawe ma- ke eny braggig agaynst him that ruleth it? That were eue lyke, as yf the rod dyd exal- te it selfe agaynst him that beareth it: or as though the staff shulde magnifye it selfe, as who saye: it were no wood. Therefore shal y Lorde of hostes sende hi amonge his fatlinges leanes, & burne vp his glory, as it were w a fyre. But the lyght of Israel shal be that fyre, and his Sanctuary shal be the flamme and it shal kyndle, and burne vp his thoz- nes and byers in one daye, pec all the glory of his woddes and felde shal be con- sumed with body & soule: And they shal be as an hoost of men, whose standerd bearer fayleth. The trees also of hys felde which remaine, shal be of soch a nobre, that a chil- de maye tell them.

After that daye shal the remnaūt of Is- rael, & soch as are escaped out of the house of Jacob, seke nomore conforste at him that smote the, but with saythfulness & treuth shal they trust vnto the Lorde, the holy one of Israel. The remnaunt, euen the Poste- ritye of Jacob, shal conuerte vnto God the myghty one. For though thy people (O Is- rael) be as y sande of the see, yet shal y rem- naunt of them conuerte in hym. Perferte is the iudgement of him that floweth in rygh- teousnesse, and therefore the Lorde of hostes shal perfectly fulfyll the thyng, y he hath determined in y myddest of y whole worlde. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God of ho- stes: Thou my people, y dwellest in Syon, be not afrayed, for y kyng of the Assyrians: he shal smyte the with a rodd, & shal wagg his staff at the, as the Egypciāns dyd some tyme: But soone after, shal my wrath and myne indignaciō be fulfyllled i the destruc- tion of them.

Whereouer, the Lorde of hostes shal pre- pare a scourge for hi, lyke as was y slaugh- ter of Madiā vpon the rock of Oreb. And he shal lyft vp his rodd ouer the see, as he dyd somtyme ouer the Egypciāns. Then shal hys burthen be taken from thy shoul- ders, and his yock from thy neck, yee, the sa- me yock shal be corrupte for very fatnesse. He shal come to Aiath, and go thozow to- ward Mygdon: at Mychmas shal he laye vp his harnesse, and go ouer the soorde. Sy- bea shal be their resting place, Rhamah shal be a frayed, Sybea Saul shal lye a- waye. The voyce of y noyes of thy horses (O daughter Gallim) shal be herde vnto Lays & to Anathoth, which also shal be in trouble. Madmena shal tremble for feare, but y citelins of Sabin are manly, yet shal he remayne at Rob y daye. After that, shal he lyft vp hys hāde agaynst the mount of y daughter Syō, the hyll of Jerusalem. But se, the Lorde God of hostes shal take awaye the proude from thence, with feare. He shal hewe downe the proude, & fel the hys myn- ded. The bysshes also of y wood shal be ro- te out with yron, and Lybanus shal haue a myghty fall.

The xi. Chapter.

The prophete of the natyue of Christ and of hys people: of the remnaunt of Israel, and of the sayth of the Heathen or gentyles.

And there shal come a rodd forth of the kyndred of Isai, and a blof- some shal flourish out of hys rote. The spyete of y Lorde shal lyght vpon hym: the spyete of wyldome, and vnderstandyng: y spyete of counsell, & strength the spyete of knowledge, and of the feare of the Lorde: and shal make hym feruent in the feare of God.

For he shal not geue sentence, after the thyng that shal be brought before his eyes, nether reproue a matter at y fyrst hearing: but w ryghteousnesse shal he iudge y poore, and with and with holynes that he reforme the simple of the worlde.

He shall smyte the worlde with the rodd of hys mouth, & wth the breath of hys mouth shall he slaye the vngodly. Rychtconesse shall be the gyde of his loynes, & trueneth & faythfulnesse, the gydyngge vpon hys ray-nes. The wolfe shall dwell with the lambe, and the Leopard shall lye downe by the goate. Bullockes, Lyes & catell shall kepe company together, so that a lytle chyld shall rule them. The kowe & the Bere shall fede together, & their yonge ones shall lye together.
The Lye shall eat strawe lyke the oxe, or the kowe. The chyld whyle he sucketh, shall haue a desire to the serpentes nest, and when he is weaned, he shall put hys hande into the Cockatrice denne. No man shall do euill to another, no man shall destroye another, in all the hyl of my holynes. For the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, euē as the see floweth ouer with water.

And in that daye shall the gentyles enquire after that rote of Jesse which shall be set vpon a token vnto the people, & hys dwellinge shall be glorious. At that same time shall the Lord take in hande agayne, to conquere the remnant of his people (which shall be left alyue)
From the Assyrians, Egyptians, Arabians, Moziars, Elamites, Caldees, Antiochians and from the Ilandes of the see. And he shall set vpon a token amonge the Gentyles, and gather together the dispersed of Israel, pec-c^{ers} & the out castes of Iuda from the foure corners of the worlde. The hatred of Ephraim also and enemyes of Iuda shall be cleane roted oute. Ephraim shall beare no euill will to Iuda, and Iuda shall not hate Ephraim: but they both together shall lye vpon the shoulders of Philistines toward the west, and spyle the together that dwell toward the East. The Idumites and the Moabites shall lett their handes fall, & the Am-monites shall be obedient vnto them.

The Lord also shall cleue the tungenes of the Egyptians see, & with a myghtie wynde shall he lyft vpon his hande ouer Nilus, and shall smyte hys leuen streames, and make men go ouer drye shod. And thus shall there be a waye for his people, & remayne from the Assyrians, lyke as it happened to the Israelites, what tyme they departed out of the land of Egypt.

The. xii. Chapter.

The songe of the Church for the obtayninge of the victorye and ouercomynge of the worlde.

That then shall saye: O Lord,
I will thanke the, for thou wast displeased at me, but refrayne thou from thy wrath, and comforte me. Behold, God is my saluacion in whom I will trust, and not be afrayde. For the Lord God is my strength, & my songe, he also is become my saluacion. Therefore with lope shall ye drawe water out of the welles of the Sauoure, & then shall ye saye: geue thanc-es vnto the Lord, call vpon his name, declare his counsels amonge the people, kepe them in remembrance, for his name is excellent. O syng prayes vnto the Lord, for he hath done greates thynges, as it is knowne in all the worlde. Crye out, and syng thou dwellest in Syon, for great is the holy one of Israel in the myddes of the.

The. xiii. Chapter.

The prophete the destruction of Babylon, the ca-pituite, and the cominge agayne of the people.

This is the heuy burthen of Babylon, which shall saye the sonne of Amos dyd se. Lyst vpon the banner vpon the hie hyl, call vnto the, holde vpon your hande that the wyndes maye go in at the doore. I haue sent for my debytes & my gyautes (sayth the Lord) which shall execute wrath, I will call for such, as trumphe in my glory.

There is a noyse of a multitude in the mountaynes, like as of a great people, a rushyng, as though the kyngdomes of na-cions came together. (And the Lord of hostes, mustreth his armie to bataile.) They come out of a farre countree, from the ende of heauen: Euen the Lord hym selfe wth the ministers of his wrath, to destroye the whole lande. Mourne ye, for that daye of the Lord is at hande, and shall come as a destroyer from the almyghtie. Therefore shall all han-des be letten downe, & all mens hertes shall melt awaye, they shall stande in feare, care-fulnesse and sorow shall come vpon them, & they shall haue payne, as a woman that tra-uaileth with childe. One shall be abashed of another, and their faces shall burne lyke the flame of fyre.

Beholde, the daye of the Lord shall come, terrible, full of indignacion, furoure & wrath to make the lande waste, & to roote out the synners therof. For the starres & planetes of heauen shall not geue their lycht, the sun-ne shall be darkened in the rylsinge, and the moone shall not shyne with his lycht. And I will punyssh the wyckednesse of the worl-de, and the synnes of the vngodly, sayeth the Lord. The hie stomakes of the prou-de will I take awaye, and will laye downe the boastinge of tyrantes. I will make a man dearer than fyne golde, and a man to be more worth than a golde wedge of Ophir.
Therefore, I will shake the heauen, and the earth shall remoue out of her place: in the wrath of the Lord of hostes, and in the daye of hys fearfull indignacion. And Babylon shall be as an hunted or chased doo, and as a shepe

there shall no man taketh vpon. Every man shall turne to hys awne people, and syle eche one into his awne lande. Who so is founde alone, shall be shot thorow. And who so gather together, shall be destroyed with the swerde.
* Their chyldren shall be slayne before their eyes, their houses spoyled, and their wyues rauisht. For lo, I shall byngge vpon the Me-des agaynst them, which shall not regarde siluer, nor be desirous of gold. With bowes shall they destroye the yong chyldren, & haue no pitye vpon women with chyldre, & their faces shall not spare the chyldren. And Babylon (that glorye of kyngdomes and be-type of the Caldees honour) shall be destroyed euē as God destroyed Sodome and Go-more. It shall not endure for euer, nether shall there be any more dwellinge there, fro generacyon to generacyon.

The Arabians shall pitch no tentes there, nether shall they shepheardes make their foldes there any more: but fearfull wild beastes shall lye there, & houses shall be full of greace Oules. Estriches shall dwell there, & Ayes shall daunce there wild cattes shall crie in the palaces, and Dragons shall be in pleasant houses. And as for Babylons tyme it is at hand, & her dayes shall not be prologged.

The. xlii. Chapter.

The returne of the people from captiuite. The prosperite of the people of God, and a synge of their enemyes. The pyrd of Babylon.

At the Lord shall be mercifull vnto Jacob, and wil yet chose Israel agayne, and set them in their awne lande. Strangers shall cleane vnto them, & get them to the house of Jacob.
The people shall take them, & cary them home to their awne lade. And make the to enderite the house of Israel in the lande of the Lord the people maye be seruautes & hand maydes of the Lord. They shall take those prisoners whose captiues they had bene a fore: & rule those that had oppressed them. When the Lord now shall bringe the to rest, fro the trauayle, feare, & harde bondage that thou wast laden wth all: the shall thou vse thy mockage vpon the kyng of Babylon, & saye: how happe-neth it that the oppressour leaueth of? Is the golden tribute come to an ende? The Lord hath broke the sceptre of the vngodly & the rodd of the lordly. Which when he is wroth smyteth the people wth continual strokes, & tyrannouselye reigne the ouer the hethen whom he persecuted without compassion. And therefore the whole worlde is now at rest & quyetnes and men synge for ioye.

Pe, euē that fyre trees & Cedres of Libanus reioyse at thy fall saye: Howe that thou art layd downe, there come no more vnto he we downe vs. Hell also beneth trebleth to mete that thy comynge, & for thy sake hath ray-sed his deade, & all myghtie me & princes of the earth. All kynges of the earth shall be their seates, & they may all answere & speake vnto the. Art thou become weake also as we?

Art thou become lyke vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pryde is layde downe into the pyt, and so is the melodye of thy instrumentes.
Woymes be layde vnder the, & woymes are thy couerynge.

How art thou fallen from heauē (O Lucifer) thou faire moornyng childe: how hast thou gotten a fall euen to the grounde, and art become weaker than the people? For thou saydest in thine herte: I will clyme vpon heauen, & exalte my throne aboue the byde of starres of God, I will syt also vpon the holy mount toward the North, I will clyme vpon the cloude, and wylbe lyke the hyghst of al. Yet thou shalt be brought do-wne to the depe of hell. They that se the, shall narrowly loke vpon the, and thynke in themselues, sayenge: Is this the man, that brought all lades in feare, and made the kyngdomes afrayde? Is this he that made the worlde a maner waste, and layde the cytyes to the grounde, which let not his prisoners go out?

The kynges of the nacions lye euery one in his awne house with wythpye, and art cast out of thy graue lyke a filthy abhominable braych, lyke as dead mens raynēt that are shot thorow with the swerde, & go do-wne to the stones of the depe: as a dead coarse that is troden vnder fete: and art not buried with them. Euen because that thou hast wasted thy lande, and destroyed thy people the generacyon of the wycked shall be without honour, for euer. Let there a waye be sought to destroye their chyldren, that be in their fathers wyckednes, & they come not vpon agayne to possesse the lande, and fyll the worlde full of enemyes.

I will stande vpon agaynst the (sayeth the Lord of hostes) & roote out thy name & remant sonne, & sonnes sonne of Babylon (sayeth the Lord) & will geue it to the Otters, & will make water podels of it. And I will swepe the out wth the besome of destruccion, sayeth the Lord of hostes. The Lord of hostes hath sworne an othe, sayenge: It shall come to passe as I haue determyned, and shall be ful-fylled as I haue deuysed. So that Assyria shall I destroye in my lande, & vpon my moutaynes will I treade hi vnder foote. Where thorow his yock shall come from them, and his burthen shall be taken fro their shoulder.
Thys daye hath God taken thorow the whole worlde, and thys is hys hande stretched out ouer all people. For yf the Lord of hostes determyneth a thyng, who is able to dysanulle it? And yf he stretch forth his hande, who maye holde it in agayne?

The same peare that kyng Ahas dyed, god threatened on this maner: Reioyse not thou

(thou whole Palestyna) because the rod of hym p beatech the is broken: for out of the scrpetes rote, there shall come an adder, & p frute shall be a fyrie flynge worme. But the fyre fyre bove of p poore shall be fed, & p symple shall dwell in safete. Thy rote also will I destroye wth hunger, & it shall slaye thy remnant. Mourne p porte, wepe p cite, for the whole land of Palestyna p art layde waste for there shall come fro p North, a smoke that not one alone may abyde in his place. Who shall then answer p messengers of p Getyles? For p Lord hath stablyshed spō, & the poore of his people p be therein, do put theyr trust in him.

The. xv. Chapter.

A prophete agaynst Moab.

Ihis is the heuy burthen vpon Moab: Ar of Moab was destroyed & overthrowen in p nyght season: Kir also in Moab was destroyed & perished in the nyght. They wente vpon to the ydols house, euen to Dibō to the hye places, to wepe for Nebo, and Moab dyd mourne for Medba: All theyr heades, were balde & all theyr beardes shauen. In theyr stretes are they gyrded aboute with sack cloth. In all p topes of their houses & stretes shall be nothynge but mournynge & weppynge. Hesebon & Eleale shall crye, p theyr voyce shall be heard vnto Jahaz. The worthyes also of Moab shall bleare out and crye for very sorow of their wyndes: Who shall my herte be for Moabs sake. They shall flye vnto p cpte of Zoar, which is lyke a fayre yong bullock of thre pere olde, for they shall all go vpon to Luth, wepyng. Eue so by p waye toward Hozonaim they shall make lamentacion for ther vtter destruccio. For p waters of Rini ri shall be dried vp, by reason wherof p grasle is withzed, p herbes destroyed, & the grene thynges gone. For the residue p he hath done, they are sorow. As for theyr substaunce, p enemyes haue caried the to the broke of p wyllyes. For p crye wēt ouer p whole lande of Moab: vnto Eglaim & vnto Beer Elim was there nothing but mournynge, because the waters of Dimō were full of bloude: for the Lord shall sende moze bloude vpon Dimon, & lpon vpon the remnaunt of the lande, & on them that are escaped from Moab.

The. xvi. Chapter.

The destruccio of Moab.

Ende p Lord of the world a lā be, fro the rocke p lyeth toward p deserte, vnto p hil of the daughter spō. For as for the daughters of Moab, they shall be as atreblpyng byrde, p is put out of her nest, for they shall carpe them vnto Arnon: gather your coucel, come together in iudgemēt, couer vs w your shadowe in the myddaye, as the nyght doth hyde the chased, and be wyape not them that are fled: let my persecuted people dwell amonge you. Moab, be thou their refuge against the destroyer: for the aduersary is brought to naught, p robber is vndone, the tpyaunt is waysted out of the land. And in mercy shall the scate be prepared, and he shall syt vpon it in the trueth, i the tabernacle of Dauid iudgyng and sekynge iudgemēt, & making hast vnto ryghteousnes. We haue heard of the pryde of Moab, he is very proude, presumptuous, arrogant, and full of indignacyon, & vayne are hys lyes. Therfore shall Moab make lamentacio because of the Moabites (that shall be slayne) pee they shall wayle all together. Because of the foundacyōs of the cite that is made of brick, shall pe complayne: eue p lame people that are left onely behinde.

For the bynes of Hesbon are cut downe: As for the vyne of Sibma, the Lordes of the heithen haue broken downe hys principall braiches: they are come euen vnto Jazer, they wēt on wādering vnto p wilderness. Hys goodly braunches were thowen downe, as they wēt ouer the see. Therfore will I mourne for Jazer, & for the vyne of Sibma. I will poure my teares vpon the, O Hesbon and Eleale, for the crye of thyne enemyes is fallen vpon thy sommer frutes, and vpon thyne haruest. The Myrth and chere is taken awaye out of the plentifull felde, and in the vyneyardes there shall be no ioye ner gladnesse.

The treader shall treade out no wyne in the presses, p song of theyr mery chere haue I layde downe. Wherefore, my bowels shall romble lyke an harpe for Moabs sake, and myne inwarde partes for the ctyes sake p is made of brick. And it shall come to passe, that whā it is sene that Moab shall be made wepyng of hys hyll chapels, he shall come to his tēple to praye, but he shall not be able. So then, thys is the sayeg p the Lord hath spoken concernynge Moab lens that tyme. But now the Lord hath spoken sayeng. In thre yeares which shall be as the yeares of an hyred seruaunt: shall the glorie of Moab be turned into cōfusiō, thowō out al his multitude, which is very great. And that whych remapneth, shall be very small and feble.

The. xvii. Chapter.

A prophete agaynst Damascus.

Ihs is the heuy burthen vpon Damascus: Beholde, Damascus is taken awaye, to be nomore a cite, but shall be an heape of broken stones. The waste ctyes of Aroer shall be foldest for catel which shall lye there, and there shall be none to feare them awaye. Ephraim also shall nomore be strong, strong, & Damascus shall nomore be a kyng dome, & the remnaunt of Syria shall be as p glorie of p childre of Israel, sayeth p Lord of hostes. And in p dape it shall come to passe p Jacob shall be made very poore, & p fanelle of hys fleshe shall waxe leane. And he shall be as one p gathereth vp corne in harvest, eue lyke him whole arme reapeth p eares of corne. He shall be also lyke hym p gathereth eares of corne in the valley of Rephaim. Some gathering in dede shall there be left in it, eue as in the thakynge of an olyue tre there remayne two or thre berpes in the toppe of the vppermost bowe, & four or fyue in p brode frutefull braunches therof, sayeth the Lord God of Israel.

Then shall mā turne agayne to his maker, & his eyes shall haue respecte to p holy one of Israel. As for the altares which are his awne handp worke, he shall not regarde them, & the thynges p his fyngers haue made (as groues & pynges) those shall he not cast his eye vnto. In p dape shall their strong ctyes be as the forsaken shrubbes & braunches, which they left because of the childre of Israel, & the lande shall be desolate. Because thou hast forgotten God thy saluacion, and hast not bene myndefull of thy strong rock, therfore shalt thou set pleasant plantes, & shalt graffe the braiche of another mans vyne. In the dape shalt thou make thy plāt to growe, & early in the morning shalt thou make thy seide to flourish. The haruest shall be gone in the dape of inheritaunce, & there shall be sorow without hope of cōforte. Mo shall be to the multitude of moche people, which shall make a founde lyke the noyle of p see: And the violence of p nacyōs, which shall rage lyke the rushyng in of many waters: Eue lyke many waters shall the people rage. God shall rebuke him, and he shall flye farre of. He shall be chased awaye lyke as dyce strawe vpon the mountaynes before the wynde, and lyke a thing that turneth before the storme. At euen beholde, there is trouble: & oz euer it be morning, lo, he is gone. This is p porcyon of them that oppresse vs, and the lott of them that robbe vs.

The. xviii. Chapter.

A prophete agaynst Egypte.

That lande that trusteth vnder the shadowe of wynges, that lande which is beyonde the waters of Ethiopia: Sending messengers by the see, euen in vessels of reedes ouer the water. Get you hence (ye spedye messengers) to a nacyō that is scatred a brode & robbed of that they had: a fearfull people from their begynning herterto: a nacyō troden downe by lytle and lytle, whose lader the floudes haue spoy-

led. All ye inhabitors of the world and indwellers of p earth, loke vp whā he setteth a token in the mountaynes, and harken whā he blōweth wth the trompe. For so p Lord sayde vnto me, as for me, I will take my rest, & loke vpon the matter in my habitacio, lyke a fayre heate after p rayne, & lyke a cloude of dew in p heat of harvest. For afore the haruest, whā the braunche is growne, there shall come ripe frute out of the floure, & he shall cut downe the increace wth sythes, & the braunches shall be take awaye wth hokes. Thus shall they be left together vnto the foules of p mountaynes, and to the bestes of the erth: for in sommer the byrdes shall remayne vpon it, and eue ry best of p lande shall be vpon it in p wynter. In p tyme shall there a presēt be brought vnto the Lord of hostes: eue a people that is scatred abrode, and robbed of that they had, that same people which hath bene fearfull from theyr begynnyng herterto: a nacyō troden downe by lytle and lytle whose lande the floudes haue spoyled: To the place of the name of p Lord of hostes, euen to the mount Sion.

The. xix. Chapter.

The prophete agaynst Egypte.

Ihe heuy burthen of Egypte: Beholde, the Lord rydeth vpon a swyfte cloude, and shall come in to Egypte, & the ydols of Egypte shall tremble at the presence of hym, & the hert of Egypte shall quake in the myddes of her. And I wyll set the Egyptians one agaynst another, so that one brother shall fyght agaynst another, & one neyghboure agaynst another, cite agaynst cite, & realme agaynst realme. The mynde also of Egypte shall be cleane without coucell withui it selfe, & the deuyce that they take, wyll I destroye, so that they shall seke counsell at ydols & at sorcerers, at workers wth sythes & at sothsayers. And the Egyptians will I geue ouer into the hande of a maruelous cruell Lord, & a myghtie kyng shall haue dominion ouer them, sayeth the Lord God of hostes. The waters of the see shall fayle, & the ryuer shall decreace and be dyed vp. The waters shall be drawen out: the ryuers of Egypte shall be emptyed & dyed vp, the reedes and flagges shall be cut downe. The grasle in the ryuer & by the ryuers banck, & all that groweth by the ryuer shall wither awaye, and be brought to naught. The fyshers also shall mourne and all they that cast angle into the water, shall make lamentacion, and they that laye forth theyr nett besyde p waters, shall be rotd out. How rouer, they p worke in flaxe, and make fyne workes, shall be confounded, and so shall they p weaue open workes. For theyr dyen workes workes shall be euen destroyed, and all they that make pontes and strewes for fish shall come to naught.

But ye foolish prynces of zoan, ye wyse counsellours of Pharaon, whose wit is turned to foolishnes, how saye ye vnto Pharaon: I am come of wyse men & of auncient kynghes: What ar they? where are they? (I saye) thy wyse men: Let the tell yf they can what y lord of hostes hath deuyled vpon Egypte.

The prynces of zoan are become fooles, the prynces of Noph are disceaued, they haue disceaued Egypte, eue they that were taken for the chiefe kynred therof. In the myddes of it hath the lord powred the spere of wyckednes, ad they haue disceaued Egypt in euery worke therof, euen as a droncken man stakereth in his vompte. Nether shall the heade of taylor, the braunch of rede be able to do anye worke i Egypte. In y dape shall Egypte be lyke vnto women: It shall be afrayed and stode in feare at the morcyon of the hand of the Lord of hostes, which he shaketh ouer it. And Egypt shall be afrayed of y land of Iuda: so y enery one which maketh mēcyon of it, shall be afrayed therat, because of the counsell of the Lord of hostes which he deuyseth for it.

In that dape shall spue cities in the land of Egypte speake the langage of Canaan, & swere by the Lord of hostes: The citie of desolacio shall be called one of them. In y dape shall the altare of the Lord be in y myddes of the land of Egypt, & thys tittle besyde it: VNTO THE LORDE. And it shall be a token and witness vnto the Lord of hostes in the lande of Egypte. For they shall crye vnto y Lord because of such as trouble them, & he shall send the a Saviour & a great man to deliuer them.

And the Lord shall be knowne in Egypte, and the Egyptians shall knowe y Lord in that dape, and do sacrifice and oblatio: pee they shall vowe a vowe vnto the Lord, and performe it. The lord also shall smyte Egypte soze, & heale them agayne, & they shall be conuerted vnto the Lord, and he shall be intreated of them, & shall heale them. In that dape shall there be a comē waye out of Egypte into Assyria, and Assyria shall come in to Egypte, & Egypte in to Assyria, so that the Egyptians and the Assyrians shall serue the Lord together. In y dape shall y nacio of Israel be the thyrde wyth Egypte & Assyria, and they shall be blessed in the myddes of the lande, which lade the Lord of hostes hath blessed, sayeng: blessed is my people of Egypte, Assur also is the worke of myne handes, and Israel is myne inheritaunce.

The xx. Chapter.

Agaynst Egypte and Ethiopia.

In the yere that Charthā came vnto Alchod (whan y Sargon y kyng of Assyria had sent him) and had foughte agaynst Alchod and taken it. At the same tyme spake the Lord by the hāde of Esay the sonne of Amos, sayeng: Go and take of the sacke clothe from thy lopnes, & put of thy shooe from thy foote. And he dyd so, walkynge naked and bare foote. And the Lord sayde: lyke as my seruauit Esay hath walked naked, and bare foote for a signe and wonder thre yeaeres vpon Egypte, and Ethiopia: Euen so shall the kyng of Assyria take a waye out of Egypte and out of Ethiopia, chyliden and olde men, naked and bare foote wyth their lopnes vncouered, to the greateshame of Egypte.

They shall be brought in feare also, & ashamed one of another: Ethiopia of Egypte, and Egypte of Ethiopia, considerynge what gloze they were in a fore. And they y dwell in y same yle, shall saye in that dape: Beholde, thus are we regarded. Whither shall we flye for helpe, that we maye be deliuered fro the kyng of Assyria? And howe shall we escape?

The xxi. Chapter.

Agaynst Babylon, Iudaea, and Arabia.

The burthen of the wayst see: Euen as the stormy wether y passeth thowrow at the noone dape, to come from the wyldernesse, from that horrible lande. A greuous visio was shewed vnto me: Let one dysceatfull offender come agaynst another, & one destroyer agaynst another. Up Elam, laye sege thou of Media: All their gronyngs haue I layed downe. Therefore are my lopnes fylled with sorow, heynnes, hath taken holde vpon me, as the pages of a woman that is traueyng. It made me stoupe when I herde it, & it vexed me whan I sawe it. My hart pated, fearfulness came vpo me. The nyght of my volupuousnes hath he turned agaynst me into feare.

Whyle they garnished the table, y watchman looked: And while I was eatynge and drynkynge (it was sayde:) vp ye captaynes, take you to your wyllde. For thus hath the Lord sayd vnto me: Go and set a watchman, to tell what he seyth. And he sawe a charret, which two horsmen sat vpon, with the cariage of an Asse, and the cariage of a camell. So he looked & toke very diligēt heed. And y lyon cried, Lord, I stode wayting all the whole dape, & am appoynted to kepe my watch euery nyght. And beholde, here cometh a charret of men, with two horsmen. And he answered & sayde: Babylon is fallen, it is fallen, & all the ymages of hyr goddes hath he smytte downe vnto the grounde. Thou art he whom I must thershe, and thou and thou belogest to my corne flooze. This that I herde of the Lord of hostes y God of Israel haue I shewed vnto you.

The burthen of Duma: he calleth vnto me out of Seir: Watchman, what hast thou espyed by nyght? Watchman, what hast thou espyed by nyght? The watchman sayde: The moynynge cometh, & so doth the nyght. If ye wyll aske anye question, then aske it, retourne and come agayne.

The burthen concernyng Arabia: In the pleasaunt grounde of Arabia shall ye tary all nyght, euen in the stretes of Dedanin. The inhabitours of the lade of Thema brought forth water to him that was thyrstie, they presented him with their bred that was fled awaye. For because of swerdes are they become fugitiue, euen for the drawn swerde, and for the bent bowe, & because of the greuousnes of warre. For thus hath the lord sayde vnto me: There is yet a ycare accordynge to the yeaeres of an hyrd seruauit, & all the gloze of Cedar shall fayle. And the nombze of them that shall escape from the bowes, shall be mynished by the myghtye chyliden of Cedar, for so the Lord God of Israel hath spoken.

The xxii. Chapter.

A prophesye agaynst Ierusalem.

The burthen of the valley of vision: What hast thou to do here, that thou clymest vnto the house toppes? Thou that art full of occupieng, thou sedicious & proude citie: thy slayne men are nether put to death wyth swerde, ner deed in batell. All thy captaynes are fugitiue together, the archers haue taken them prisoners: All they y are founde in the, are in captiuite together, because they fled farre of. Therefore sayd I: let me alone & I wyll make lamētacion. Ye shall not be able to comforte me, because of the destruccyon of the daughter of my people. For thys is a dape of trouble, of ruyne, & of destruccyon y the Lord wyll byng to passe in the valley of vision, breakyng downe the citie, & cryeng vnto mountaynes.

Elam bare the quyer to a charret of fote men and of horsmen, and the cytye of Ierusalem was the shylde of the cytye of David. The chiefe valley also was full of charetes, and the horsmen set the y faces directly towarde the gate. And in y dape dyd the enemye take a waye y betwye of Iuda, and the dydest thou loke towarde the armour of the house of the foeste. Pee haue sene also y broken places of y citie of David, how that they are many, & ye gathered together the waters of the lower pole. As for the houses of Ierusalem haue ye broke downe to make y wall strong. A pytt also haue ye made betwene the two walles, for the waters of the olde pole, and haue not regarded the maker therof, nether had respecte vnto him that toke it in hāde.

And in that dape dyd the Lord God of hostes call men vnto wepyng and mourning, to baldnesse & dryndyng aboute wyth sack cloth. And Behold, they haue ioye and gladnesse, sayeng oren & kyllyng thepe eatynge flesch & drynkynge wyne: * Let vs eate and drynke: for tomoze we shall dye. And it came to the eares of the Lord of hostes: This iniquite shall not be poureded fro you till ye dye, sayeth y lord God of hostes.

Thus sayeth the Lord God of hostes: Go, get the into poulder treasurer, euen vnto Sebna, which is y ruler of y house. What hast thou to do here? and whom hast thou here, that thou shuldest here heve the out a sepulcre, as it were one that heweth hym out a sepulcre an hys, or y graue an habitation for him self in a hard rock?

Beholde, O thou man, the Lord shall carye the awaye into captiuite, & shall surely couer the wyth confusion. The Lord shall turne the ouer lyke a ball wyth hys handes (and shall sende the) into a farre contre: There shalt thou dye, & there (in steade of the charrettes of thy pōpe) shall y house of thy lord haue confusion. I wil dryue the fro thy place, & out of thy dwellyng shall he ouerthrow the. And in that dape shall I call my seruauit Eliakim the sonne of helkia. And with thy garmentes will I clothe him, and wyth thy gyrdle will I strength hym: thy power also will I comitte into his hāde & he shall be a father of such as dwel in Ierusalem, and in the house of Iuda.

* And the keye of the house of David will I laye vpon his shoulder, so y he shall open and no man shall shut. He shall shut, and no man shall open. And I wyll fasten hym as a nayle in a sure place, and he shall be the glorious seate of hys fathers house. Moreover, all generacions and posterites shall hang vpo him, all the gloze of their fathers house, all vessels both great and small, and all instrumētes of measure and murek. In that dape (sayeth the Lord of hostes) shall the nayle that is fastened i the sure place departe, be broken and fall, and the burthen y was vpo it, shall be plucked awaye, for so the lord hath spoken.

The xxiii. Chapter.

A prophesye agaynst Tyrus, and a pmoies that it shall be restoyed agayne.

The burthen of Tyre: Dourne ye wyppes of Charlis, for there cometh such destruccyon that ye shall not haue an house to entre into: Out of the lande of Cytium haue they knowledge of thys place. Be still, ye that dwell in y Ile, the marchaunces chaufes of zidon, and such as passe ouer the see, haue made y plenteous. The corne that groweth by the great waters of Eilus, and the frutes of the ryuer were by vitayles, so that it became a comen marce of y nacions. ¶ Be ashamed thou zidon, for the see (eue the strenght of the see) hath spokē, saye: I haue not trauayled, ner broughte forth chil dren, ner nourished vp young me, or brought vp virgins.

¶ And in that daye shall Tyre be forgotten seuētye peares (acordinge to the peares of one kyng) and after the ende of the seuētye peares shall Tyre syng as doth an harlot. Take an harpe, & go aboute the citie (thou harlot that hast bene forgotte) make swete melody, sing moosonges, that thou mayest be had in remembraunce. And after the ende of the seuētye peares shall the lord visyt Tyre, & he shall conuerte vnto her rewarde, and shall committe fornicaciō with all the kyngdomes of the earth y are in the worlde. Their occupieng also and their rewarde shall be holp vnto y lord. Their gaynes shall not be layde vp ner kepte i store, but it shall be theys that dwell before the lord, that they maye eate ynough, & haue clothyng sufficient.

The. xxiii. Chapter.

A prophetic of tribulation to come vpon the worlde because of synne.

¶ Holde the lord maketh the earth wayst and empye: he turneth it vpon lyde downe, & scatred abrode y inhabitours therof: And y prest shall be as the people, & the master as the ser uant, y maitresse lyke y mayd, y seller lyke the byer: he that lendeth vpon vsury, lyke hym that borroweth vpon vsury: the credi four as the better. The worlde shall be cleane wasted & utterly spoyled, for so the lord hath spokē. The earth is soz & consumeth awaye, the worlde is feble & periseth, the proude people of y erth are come to naught. The earth also is become vnprofitable vnder the inhabitours therof, which haue tras gressed the lawes, chaūged the ordinaunce, broken the euerlasting couenaunt.

Therefore hath y curse consumed y earth, and they that dwell therein, are fallen into trespase. Wherefore, the inhabitours of the earth are perished, with drouth, ad some me are left behynde. The wyne faileth, the wyne hath no myght, all they y haue bene mery of hart, are come to mournyng. The myrth of tabrettes is layed downe, y noyse of such as haue made mery, is ceased, y ioye at y herpe is at an ende. They shall drynke nomoze wyne w myrth, strong drynke shall be bytter to them that drynke it. The citie of vanite is broken downe, euery house is shut vp, y noman maye come in. In y stre tes is there a cryng because of wyne, all che re is vanished awaye, y myrth of the worl de is gone, in the citie is left desolacyō and the gate is smytten with destruccion.

For in the myddes of the worlde, euen a monge the people, it shall come to passe, as at the shakynge of Olpues, and as the grapes are whā y wyne haruest is done. They shall lyft vp theys voyce: and make a mery noyse, and in magnifyng of the Lord shall they crye out of the west. Wherefore, prayse ye the lord in the valleys, euen the name of the lord God of Israel in the fles of the see. From y vttemost parte of y earth haue we heard prayles and myrth because of the ry ghteous. And I sayd: ¶ I knowe a thyng in secrete, I knowe a thyng i secrete, wo is me, the trasgressours haue offēded, the tras gressours haue greuously offēded. Fearful nesse, the pytt and the snare are vpo the, O thou that dwellest i the earth. It will come to passe, that whoso escapeth the fearfull noyle, shall fall in to the pytt. And he that cometh vp out of the pytt, shall be taken wyth the snare. For the wyndowes from an hye are open, and the foundations of the earth are moued.

The earth is utterly broken downe, the earth hath a sore ruyn, the earth quaketh excedyngly. The earth shall rele to y fro lyke a bronherd, and shall be remoued lyke a tent.

like a tent (of one nyght) & the iniquitie therof shall be heuy vpo it. It shall fall, & not rise vp agayne. And in that daye shall the Lord vis it the host aboue y is on hye: & the kinges of the worlde y are vpo the erth. And they shall be gathered together, as they y be in prison: & they shall be shut vp inwarde, & after many dayes shall they be visited. The mone shall be abashed, and the sunne ashamed, whē the Lord of hostes shall raygne in mount Sio and in Jerusalem with worshyp, and in the syght of such as shall be of hys counsell.

The. xxv. Chapter.

A thankesgeuyng to God for hys workes.

¶ Thou arte the Lord my God, I wyll magnifye y, I wyll geue thakes vnto thy name. For y hast brought woderfull thinges to passe, according to thynne olde coūcels truly & saythfully. Thou hast mad of a citie an beape of stones, and brought a stronge towne into decaye. The habitation of straingers hast y made to be no citie, nether shall it be builded any more. Therefore shall y mightye people geue gloz vnto y: the citie of y valeant neither shall feare y. For thou hast bene a strenght vnto the poze, and a succour for the neady in his trouble. A refuge agaynst euell wether, & shadowe agaynst y heate. For the blast of ragynge men is lyke a storme that casteth downe a wall.

Lyke as thou byngest heate downe out of a drye place, so shalt y suppress y noyse of alaudes. The heate is in y shadow of y cloude: y brāch of y mightye shall be brought lowe. And in this moūtaine shall y Lord of hostes make vnto all people a feast of plē teous & delicate chinges, eue of most pleasaunt & deyntie dishes. And in this moūtaine shall y Lord destroie the couering, y all peo ple are wraped in, and the hanging y is spred vpon all nacys. As for death, he hath destroyed it for euer. And y Lord God shall wyne a waye teares fro all faces, and the re buke of his people shall he take awaic out of all the earth. For so the Lord hath sayde.

And in that daye it shall be sayde: Lo, this is our God, we haue wayted for hym, & he shall saue vs. Thys is the Lord, in whō we haue hoped, we wylbe mery & reioyce in the saluation that cometh of hym. For in this moūtaine shall the hande of the Lord cease and Moab shall be thershed vnder him, euen as strawe is thershed vpo y groude. And he shall stretch out hys hande in the myddes of them (as he that swymmeth, casteth out his handes) shall he byng downe their pyde. The strongholde also and fence of thy walles shall be overthrowe & cast downe, & brought them to the grounde, euen vnto dust.

The. xxvi. Chapter.

A songe of the deliuerance of the people.

¶ In y daye shall thys songe be songe in the lande of Iuda. We haue a stronge citie. Saluacion shall God appoynte in steade of walles and bulworke. Ope y gates y the righ tious people which kepe the trouth maye entre in. Their minde is set vpon the, becau se thou preseruest them in peace yee, euen in peace: because they put their trust in the. Put ye your trust all waye in the Lord: for in the Lord God there is strenght for euermore. For he hath brought downe hys mynded citelens. As for y proude citie, he hath bro ught it lowe: euen vnto the grounde shall he cast it downe, & bring it vnto dust. The fote euen the fote of the poze: and the steppes of such as be in necessitie shall treade it downe.

The path of equite wilt thou graūt vnto the iuste, & thou moost ryghteous, thou shalt order y path of him that is ryghteous. Pee, in the waye of thy iudgements, O Lord, haue we put our trust in the. Thy name also: & the remēbraunce of the, is y thyng that oure soule longeth for. As y soule hath longed for the all the night, and w my sprete (which is within me) wyll I seke the earlye in the morning. For when thy iudgements are in the erth, the inhabitours of y worlde shall learne righteousnes. Shall the yngod ly man be fauoured, which hath not learned ryghteousnes, but doth wickedly in the erth where nothyng ought to be done, but that which is ryghteous: he shall not se the glo ry of the Lord. Lord, when thy hande is lyfte vp to stryke, they se it not: but they shall se it, and be confounded with the zeile of the people, and the fyer that cosumeth thynne enemies, shall deuoure them.

Lord, vnto vs thou shalt proude peace: for thou also hast wrought all our workes in vs. O Lord our God, other lordes besy de the hath subdued vs: but we wylbe mind full only of the & of thy name. The deed will not lyue, & they y be out of lyfe, will not ryle agayne: therefore hast thou visited & ro ted them out, and destroyed all the memory of them. Thou hast increased the people (O Lord) thou hast increased the people, & thou art prayled: thou hast sent the farre of vnto all the coastes of the erth. Lord in trouble haue they visited the: they powzed out their prayer, whē thy chastenynge was vpo them. Lyke as a woman w chylde that draweth nye towarde her trauell, is soz & cryeth in her paynes, eue so haue we bene in thy sight, O Lord. We haue bene w chylde & suffred payne, as though we had brought forth winde. For there is no saluation in the erth, nether do y inhabitours of y worlde submyt the selues. Thy deed me shall lyue, euen w my body shall they rise agayne. Awake and syng ye that dwell in dust. For thy dewe is euen as the dewe of herbes, and the earth shall cast out them that be vnder her. Come my people, * enter thou into thy chambers, and shut thy doores about þe: * hyde thy selfe a lytle for a whyle, vntyll the indignatio be ouerpast. * For so, the Lorde is comyng out of his place, to viset the wickednes of suche as dwell vpon earth. The earth also shall disclose her awne bloud, and shall nomoze hid them that are slayne in her.

The xxvii. Chapter.

A prophete of the comyng of Christ, and destruction of idolatrye.

In that daye, the Lorde wth his soze, great and myghtye swerde shall viset * Leuiathan þe fugityue serpent, euē Leuiathan that crooked serpent, and he shall slaye the dragon þe is in the see. In that daye, se þe syng of the congregatyon which is the vyneyard, þe bringeth forth þe best wyne. Euē the Lorde do kepe it. In due seasons shall I water it, & lest the enemye do it any harme, I will both myght and daye preserue it. There is no displeasure in me, els (when the vyneyard bringeth in me, els) when the vyneyard bringeth in me forth beeres & thornes. I wold go thozow it by warre, & burne it vp together. Let it take holde of my strength, and it shall be at one wth me, euen at one shall it be with me.

The dayes are comyng, that Jacob shall take rote. Israel shall be grene & floryshe, and the worlde shall be fylled with frute. Hath he synnten him as soze, as he did the other that smote him? Or is he slain wth soze a slaughterer as they that slew hym? In measure doth he synre him, whyle he sedeth vnto him soch thinges, wherby he commeth to hys mynde agayne. For in the daye that the east wynde bloweth soze, it taketh a waye the frutes.

Thus therfore shall the iniquyte of Jacob be reconcyled, and here is all the frute of the takynge a waye of his synne, yf he make all the stones of þe altars of ydolles, as chalc stones that are beaten in sunder, that theye groues and ymages ryle not vp agayne.

Els, shall the stronge cite be desolate, & the habitation forsaken & left lyke a wilderness. There shall the calfe fede, & ther shall he lye, & cate vp the grasses therof. * When þe braunches of it are drie, they are broken of, & the women come, and set the on fyre. * For it is a people of no vnderstanding, & therfore he that made them, shall not fauoure the, and he þe created the, shall geue them no grace. And in that daye shall the Lorde make a thershyng from the middes of the riuer Euphrates vnto the riuer of Egypt: and ye childre of Israel shall be gathered together one to another. In þe daye shall þe great trope be blowne, so þe they which were lost in the lade of Assyria: & they that were banished into þe lande of Egypt, shall come and worshyp the Lorde in the holy mount at Jerusalem:

The xxviii. Chapter.

A prophete of the p^{ro}p^{ro} of Ephraim, & agaynst false prestes and preachers.

Whe vnto the crowne of pryde, euē * whose whole people of Ephraim whose great pope is as a flour that fadeth a waye) * vpon the head of the valleye of such as be in welth, and are ouerladen with wyne. Beholde, * ther cometh a vehemēt and soze daye fro the Lorde lyke an vmmensurable hayle and perellous tempest, euen lyke the force of myghtye and horrible waters, þe hiolelye beareth downe all thinges. The crowne of the pryde of the drunken Ephraimites shall be troden vnder fote: * so that the flour of hys sayzenes and bewty, which is in the head of the valleye of fatnes, shall fade a waye, as doth an vntimely rype fygg afoze heruest. Which whā a man spyeth, he loketh vpon it: and whyle it is yet in his hande, he eateth it vp.

In þe daye shall the Lorde of hostes be the crowne of glozy, & diademe of be wyte vnto the residue of his people. He wil be also a spirite of persyte knowledge to him þe sitereth in iudgement, & strength vnto them that turne awaye the battell to the gate of the enemies. But they are out of the waye by reason of wyne: pce, farre out of þe waye are they thozow stronge drynke. * The preste also & the prophet are gone astray by the meanes of stronge drynke, they are drunken wth wyne, they go amisse thozow stronge drynke: they fayle in pphceping & stöble in iudgment. For tables are so full of vomyte and fylthines, þe no place is cleane. Who then shall such one teach knowledge? And whom shall he make to vnderstode the thing that he heareth? For they are as ignorant as yong children, that are taken fro the mylke and are weaned.

For they that be such must haue after one lesson, another lesson: * after one comāndement, another comāndement, after one rule another rule, after one instruccyon another instruccyon, there a lytle and there a lytle. For he that spealketh vnto this people is euen as one that vseth rudenes of spech, and a straunge language. Yf any man saye vnto them: lo, this is the rest wherwith ye maye ease hym that is weerye, this is the refreshinge, they wyll not herken. * Therfore, the worde of the Lorde (lesson vpon lesson, comāndement vpon comāndement, rule vpon rule, instruccyon vpon instruccyon, there a lytle and there a lytle) shall be vnto them an occasyon of stömblyng that they maye go on, and fall backward, be bzused, tangled and snared.

Wherfore, heare the worde of the Lorde ye mockers, ye that haue rule of this people which is at Jerusalem. Because ye haue sayd: We

of Elaye,

Jo. I.

We haue made a couenaunt with death, & with hell are we at agreement. And though there go forth a soze plage, it shall not come vnto vs. For we haue made falshode our refuge, and vnder vanitie are we hid. Therfore thus sayth þe Lorde God: Beholde, I laye in Sion for a foundation a stone, euē a tryed stone, a precio^{us} corner stone, a sure foundation: * Whoso beleueth, let hym not be to hastye. Iudgment also will I laye to the rule, and righteousnes to the balaunce: so þe the hayle shall take a waye your dayne confidence as a broome, and the prey place of youre refuge shall the waters renne ouer.

And thus the couenaunt that ye made wth death, shall be disanulled: and your agreement that ye made with hell, shall not stand. Yee, when the soze plage goeth forth, ye shall be troden downe vnder it. Fro the tyme that it goeth forth, it shall take you a waye. For early in the mozyng euer daye: yee, both daye & night shall it go thozow: & when the noyse therof is perceaued, it shall gendze veneration. For the bed is narrow, and not large: & the couering so small that a man can not wynde him selfe vnder it. * For þe Lorde shall stonde as in mount + Berazim, and shall be wrothe lyke as in þe valley * Sibeo, þe he maie do his worke, & his straung worke & bying to passe his acte, his straunge acte.

Now therfore se þe ye be no mockers, lest your punishment increace: for I haue heard of the Lorde of hostes, that there shall come a short ende vpon the whole earth. Heare ye then, & herken vnto my voyce, considre & pōdie my spech. Doth not þe husbandman plowe all the daie, and openeth & breaketh the clottes of his grounde, þe he maye sowe: Whā he hath made it playn, will he not spred abzode the fitches, and sowe comyn, & cast in whete by measure, & the appoynted barlye and rye in their place? God will instructe hym to haue discretion, euen his God wyll teach hym. For fitches shall not be treshed with an harowe: nether shall a carte whele be brought thozow the comyn: but the fitches are beate out with a stafe, and comyn wth a rodd. But the seede that bread is made of, is treshed, though it be not alwaye a thershyng. And þe carte whele must be brought ouer it, lest he grynde it with his teth. This also commeth of the Lorde of hostes, which worketh wth wonderfull wysdome, and bringeth excellēt workes to passe.

The xxix. Chapter.

A prophete agaynst Jerusalem, and agaynst the daye traditons of men.

W vnto þe Ariel Ariel thou cite þe * David dwelt in Sion from yere to yere, and let the lambs be slayne. I will laye sege vnto Ariel, so that there shall be heynnes and forowe in it: and it shall be vnto me euen an altare of slaughter. I wyll besege the round about, and fight agaynst the thozow a bulwowe: and wyll reare vp ditches agaynst þe. Thou shalt be brought downe, & shalt speake out of the grounde, and thy spech shall go lowe out of the duste. Thy voyce also shall come out of the grounde lyke the voyce of a witch: and thy talkyng shall whisper out of the dust. Mozeouer, the noyse of thy straunge enemyes shall be lyke thyne dust, & the multitude of tyauntes shall be * as drye strawe, that cannot tarp: euen sodenly and in hayste shall theye blast go.

Thou shalt be visited of the Lorde of hostes wth thōdz, earthquake, and wth a great noyse: with storme and tempest and wth the flame of a colūmyng fyre. And the multitude of all nations that fyght agaynst Ariel, shall be as a dreame sene by night: * euē so shall all they be that make warre agaynst it, and stronge holdes to overcome it, and that laie eny sege vnto it. In conclusion, it shall be euē as when an hongry man dreameth that he is eating, and when he awaketh, hys soule is emptye. Or as when a thurstye man dreameth that he is dryncking: and when he awaketh, he is yet saynt: and his soule lacketh the appetite. Euen so shall be the multitude of all nations that fyght agaynst Sion.

Wondre these thynges once in your myndes, & wondre. * Blinded are they them selues and the blind guides of other. They are drunken: but not with wyne: they are vntable, but not thozow stronge drynke. For the Lorde hath couered you with a sloumberinge sprete, and hath closed your eyes. Your prophetes also & rulers that shuld se, the hath he couered. * And the visyon of all the prophetes is become vnto you, as the wordes of a boke that is sealed vp, which men deliuer to one that is learned, sayyng: Reade thou in it. And he sayth: I cannot, for it is sealed. And the boke is geuen vnto him that is not learned, sayyng: Reade thou in it, and he sayth: I am not learned. Therfore thus hath the Lorde sayde: * For somoche as this people when they be in trouble, do honour me with their mouth & wth their lippes: but their hert is far fro me, & the feare which they haue vnto me, proceedeth of a comāndment that is taught of men. Therfore wyll I do maruayls amonge this people, euē maruelous thinges (I saye) & a wonder. * For the wysdome of their wise men shall perishe, & the vnderstanding of their wittye men shall hyd it selfe.

W vnto the that kepe secrete their thoughtes, to hyde their counsell fro the Lorde, and do their workes in darknesse, sayyng: * who seeth vs? & who knoweth vs? Doubtles, your destruction is (in my handes) in re- putacyon as the potters claye. And doth the worke saye of hym that made it, he made not me: And doth an earthen vessel saye of him that fashioned it, he had no understanding: Is it not hard at hande, that Ipharus shall be turned into a lowe felde, and that the lowe felde shall be take as the wodde? And in that daye shall deasse men heare the wordes of the boke, and the eyes of y^e blinde shall se euen out of the cloude and out of darkness. The meke sprected also shall be merry in the Lorde, and the poore amonge them that be lowly, shall reioyce in the holy one of Israel. For he that dyd violence, is brought to naught, and the scozefull man is consumed: and they rote out that were hastie so soone to vnrightheousnes, & makynge a man to synne in the worde, and that toke hym in a snare which reponed them in the open place: and they that haue turned the cause of the ryghteous to naught. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde vnto the house of Jacob, eue thus sayeth he that redeemed Abraham: * Jacob shall not now be cofounded, ner his face pale. But when he seeth hys chyldren the worke of my handes in the middes of him, they shall sanctifie my name, and prayse the holy Lord of Jacob, and feare the God of Israel. They also that haue bene of an erronouse sprete, shall come to vnderstandyng: and they that haue bene scozefull, shall learne doctryne.

The xxx. Chapter.

Agaynst them that forsake the counsell of God, & cleue to the counsell of men. The prophet also threatneth the remnant of the people, that after the destruction of Iherusalem went into Egypte.

Alas, for those disobedient chyldren (sayth the Lorde) * that they wyl take counsell without me. Alas, y^e they wyl take a secret aduice, and not out of my sprete, and therfore adde they synne vnto synne. Euen they that walke to go downe into Egypte, and haue asked no question at my mouth: but seke strength in the myght of Pharaon, and trust in the shadowe of Egypt. Therfore shall the strength of Pharaon be your confusion, and the truste of the shadowe of Egypte youre shame. For his captaynes were at zoan, and his ambasadours came vnto Ihanes. * They were all ashamed of the people that could do them no good, and that might not helpe the, ner shew them any profyt, but were they confused and rebuke.

The heauy burthen of the bestes of the south in a lande of trouble and anguysh, from whence shall come the ponge and olde lion, the wyper and fyre serpent that flyeth agaynst them that vpon coltes beare theyr riches, and vpon camels their treasures, to a people that can do them no good. For vaine and nothyng worth shall the helpe of the Egyptians be. Therfore haue I cryed vnto Iherusalem. * They shall haue strength ynough, yf they wyl sette their myndes in quietnes. * Now therfore, go thy wale, and wyte this befor the in a table, & note it in a boke, that it maye finally remayne and be kept styll for euer. For it is an obstinat people, * and dissembling chyldren, chyldren that refuse to heare the lawe of the Lorde.

For they saye vnto the seers: Se not, and to the y^e be cleare of iudgement: loke not out ryght thynges for vs: but speake saye wordes vnto vs: * loke out errorres, gett you out of this waye, departe out of this path, & turne the holy one of Israel fro vs. Wherefore thus sayth the holy one of Israel: Because your hertes rise agaynst this worde, & because ye trust in wrongeous dealyng & peruerse iudgment, & put your confidence therein. Therfore shall ye haue this myschefe for y^e destruction and fall. Ilike as an hye wall that falleth, because of some ryfte or blast, whose breaking commeth sodenly. * And the hurte therof is lyke an erthen vessel, which breaketh without helpe: so that in y^e burstyng of it, there is not found one sheuer to fetch fyre in, or to take water withall out of the pyt.

For thus sayth the Lorde God, euen the holy one of Israel: * In repentance & in * rest shall ye be safe: in quietnes and sure confidence shall be your strenght. But ye haue had no lyste thereto. For ye haue sayd: No, but we will escape thozowe horsen. (Therfore shall ye flye) & we will get vs vp vpo swyft bestes. And therfore shall your persecutours be swyfter. * A. H. shall flye at the rebuke of one, & at the rebuke of v. shall ye all flye, tyll ye be left as a thyp mast vpon the topp of a mountayne, and as a beaken vpon an hyll. * Therfore doth y^e Lorde cause you to wayte, y^e he maye haue mercy vpo you: to thynke that he maye haue the preeminence, when he is gracious vnto you. For the Lorde is the God of iudgement. Blessed are all they that hope in hym.

Yf the people remayne in Syon and at Iherusalem, thou shalt not be in heuines: but at the voyce of thy complaynte shall he haue mercy vpon the. And when he heareth it he shall geue the an answer. And though the Lorde geue you the bread of trouble, and the water of aduersitie, thy rayne shall be nomore so skant, but thyne eyes shall see thy rayne. Yee, and thyne care shall heare y^e tal-kyng of hym that doeth speake behynde the. * This is y^e waye, walke ye in it. Turne not aside nether to the ryght hande ner to the lyft. Ye shall destroye also the couerynge of youre spluer ymages, and the deckyng of youre golden ydols. Euen as filthynes shall ye put them awaye. And thou shalt say vnto it. Gett the hence. Then shall God geue rayne vnto thy seeche, that thou shalt sowe the ground withall, and bred of the increace of the of the earth, which shall be fat and very plentiful. In that daye also, shall thy catell be fed in large pasture. The oxen lyke wise and the pouge asses, that eate the grounde, shall eate cleane prouider, which is pouged with the wynde and the fanne.

Finally, vpon euery hye mountaine and hyll shall ther be riuers and streames of waters, * in the daye of the greete slaughter, when the towres fall. Moreover, the lyght of the moone shall be as the light of the sunne, and the sunne lyght shall be leuen folde, and haue as much hyne as in leue dayes besyde: when the Lorde byndeth vpon the soze of hys people, and healeth the stroke of their wound. Beholde, the fame of the Lord commeth fro farre, and his pcesence is so hote, that no man is able to abyde. His lypes are full of indignation, and hys tonge is as a consuming fyre. Hys bryth is as a vehement floude of water, that reacheth vnto the necke. That he maye lyft awaye the hepythen in the spue of vanitey: And his bryth is as a byrdle of error in the chawes of the people.

And ye shall syng, lyke as in the ryghte, when the holy solempnyte beginneth. And ye shall haue gladnes of hert, lyke as when one commeth with a pyper vnto the hyll of the Lorde, and to the moost myghty one of Israel. And the Lorde shall cause his glorpyous voyce to be heard, and shall declare his stretched out arme with a terrible countenance and with the flame of a consuming fyre, with noysome lyghtenyng, with a shouer, and with hayle stone. For thozowe the voyce of the Lorde shall * Assur be destroyed, which smote other men with the rodde. And it shall come to passe, that whither soeuer he goth, y^e rodde shall cleue vnto him, which the Lorde shall laye vpon him & with tabrettes and harpes: and with greete warre shall he fyght agaynst his hoost. * For the fyre of payne is ordeyned from the begynnyng: yee, euen for kynges is it prepared. This hath y^e Lorde set in the depe, and made it wyde: the burnyng wherof is fyre and muche wodde. The bryth of the Lorde, which is a ryuer of byrmstone, doth kyndle it.

The xxxi. Chapter.

The curseth them that forsake God, and seke for the helpe of men.

Be vnto them that go downe in to Egypte for helpe, and truste in horsen, and put their confidence in charettes, because they be manye, and in horsmen, because they be lusty and strong. But they regarde not the holy one of Israel, and they aske no question at y^e Lord. Where as he neuertheles (beyng wyldest of all) plageth the wycked, and yet goeth nott from his worde, when he steppeth forth, and takeh the victorie agaynst the household of the frowarde, and agaynst the helpe of euell doers. Nowe the Egyptians are men, and not God, and their horsen flesch and not sprete. And alsoone as the Lorde stretcheth oute hys hande, then shall the helper fall, and he that shulde haue bene helped, and they shall all together be destroyed. For thus hath the Lorde spoken vnto me: Like as the * Lyon or * Lyons whelp roareth vpon the praye that he hath gotten, and is not afrayed, though the multitude of shepherdes crye out vpon hym, nether abashed for all the heape of the. So shall the Lorde of hoostes come downe to fyght for mount Syon, and defende hys hyll. Ilike as byrdes floure aboute their nestes, * so shall the Lorde of hoostes kepe, sa-ue, defende and delpyer Iherusalem.

Therfore, O ye chyldren of Israel, turne agayne, from that infydelyte, wherin you drowned your selues. * For in that daye euery man shall cast out hys ydols of syluer and hys ydols of golde, which ye haue made with youre awne handes vnto youre synne. * Assur also shall layne with the swearde, not with a mans swearde, nether shall the swearde of any man deuoure hym: And he shall fle from the slaughter: and his seruantes shall be discomfyted in their hertes. He shall go for feare to hys strongholdes, and hys prynces shall fle from hys bad-ge. This hath the Lorde spoken, whose lyght burneth in Syon, and his fyre in Iherusalem.

The xxxii. Chapter.

Beholde, a king shall gouerne after the rule of ryghtewelsse, and the princes shall rule, accordyng to the balauce of equitye. And that man shall be vnto men as a defence for the wynd, and as a refuge for the tempest: lyke as a riuer of water in a thirsty place, and the shadowe of a greete rocke in a drye lande. The eyes of the seynge shall not be dym, and the cares of them that heare, shall take diligent hede. The hert of the vnwyse shall attayne to knowledge, and the vnparfyt tong shall speake playnely and distinctly. Then shall the folyshe nygarde be nomore called getle, ner the churle liberall. But the nygarde will be niggardly minded, and his hert wyl worke euell and playe the ypocrite, and ymagyn abominations agaynst God, to make the hongry leane, and to withholde dryncke from the thirsty. These are the perlonous weapons of the churlysh, these be his shamefull coun- cels: that he maye begyle the poore with deceitfull wordes: yee, euen there as he shulde geue sentence with the poore. * But the lyberall persone ymagineth honest thynges, & commeth vpon for liberalyte vnto promotyng:

E Up (ye ryche and ydell women) herken vnto my voyce. Ye careles cities, marke my wordes. After yeaeres and dayes shall ye be brought i feare, & ye careles cities. For harvest shall be out, & the grape gatherynge shall not come. & ye ryche ydell cities ye that feare no parell. Be abashed, you that lyue in aboundaunce: tremble, you that lyue careles: cast of your rayment, make your selues bare, put sacke cloth aboute you. For as the infantes wepe when their mothers tetes are dryed: so shall you weape for your fayre fel-des and frutefull vyneyardes. & yf peoples felde shall byynge thornes and thistles: and so shall it be euen in euery house of voluptuousnesse and in euery cite that reioysyth.

D The palaces also shall be broke, & the greatly occupied cities desolate. The towres and bulwarckes shall become denues for euermore, & y pleasure of mules shall be turned to pasture for shepe: vnto the tyme that yf sprete be powred vpon vs from aboue.

Then shall the wylernes be a frutefull felde, and the plenteous felde shall be reckened for a wodde. Then shall egyptie dwell in y desert, and rightousnes in a frutefull land.

 And the rewarde of rightousnesse shall be peace, and her frute rest & quietnes for euer.

 And my people shall dwell in the pynnes of peace, and in sure dwellinges in safe places of conforste. And when the hayle falleth, it shall fall in the wodde, and the cite shall be set lowe in the valleie. Howe happy shall ye be, when ye shall safely lowe your seed besyde all waters, and dryue thyther the fete of your oxen and asses.

The xxxij. Chapter.
Threatenynge agaynst the Assyrians. A descreypon of them that shall see the Lorde.

W O to the that destroyest, whē thou wast not destroyed, thou breakest the leage, where as none hath broken it with the: for when thou shalt leaue destroying, * thou thy self shalt be destroyed. And when thou ceaseest from breakinge the leage, then shall they breake it to the. O Lorde, haue mercy vpon vs: we haue put our hole trust in the. Be an arme to suche early: and * our helth, in y tyme of trouble. At that confuse noyle, the people fledd, and at thynne exaltinge, the hepten were scattered. And the spoyle shall be gathered (which shall be poures) as are the gathering of Buzhus. And the multitude going to it, shall be as locustes runnyng to and fro.

The Lorde is exalted, for it is he y dwell-eth an hie: he hath fylled zion with iudgement and rightousnes. And a sure stablyshing of thy tymes shall be strength, health, wisdom & knowledge: and the very feare of the Lorde shall be y treasure of it. Beholde, y messengers shall crie without: & the ambalsatours of peace shall weape bitterly: The stretes are wast, ther walketh no mā therein: God hath broken the appoyntment, the cities are cast awaye, & me are nothing regar-ded y desolat erth is in heynnes. Libanus is shamed: & hewē downe. Saron is lyke a wyl-dernes: Basan & Charnel are despoiled of their frutes. And therfore sayth the Lorde: I will vponowe: now will I be auanced: now will I be exalted as a myghtye God. * Ye shall coccaue stubble, & beare strawe, & poure sprete shall be the fyer. y it maye consume you, & y people shall be burnt like lyme, & as thornes burne y are hewen of, & cast in the fyer.

Now herke to ye y are farr of, how I haue done, & conside my power, ye y be at hande.

The sinners at zion are asrayde, a soden fearfulness is come vpon y pporities. What is he amōge vs, say they, y shall dwell by y colūming fier: which of vs maye abyde that euerlasting heat? * He y ledeth a godly lyfe, say I, & speaketh the trueth. He y abhorreth gaines wōne by violence & disceyte: he y kepeth his hāde y he touch no rewarde: which stoppeth his eares, y he heare no counsell agenst y innocēt bloude: which holdeth downe his eyes, y he se none euell. He it is, y shall dwell on hie: whose sauēgarde shall be in a bulwarcke of rockes, to hym shall be geuen meate, & hys waters shall not fayle. Thynne eies shall se y king in his glōry: eue y king of y farre countreis shall they se: thine herte studi-d for feare thinkinge thus: * What shall then become of y scribe: of y recepuer of our money: what of him y taxed our fairest houses: There shalt y not se a people a strange tong to haue so diffused a language, y it may not be vnderstād: neither so strange a speech but it shall be perceaued. There shall zion be sene the heed cite of oure solempne feastes.

There shall thynne eyes se Ierusalem that glorious habitapō: y tabernacle y neuer shall remoue: whose nayles shall neuer be taken out world wout ende: whose coardes euery- chone shall neuer corrupte: for the glōryous magēstie of y Lorde shall there be present among vs: as a place, where sayre broade ry-uers & streames are, thozow the which shall nether galey rowe, ner greateshyppes sayle.

* For the Lorde is our iudge, the Lorde is our lawe geuer. The Lorde is our king, and he him selfe shall be our sauoure. There are y coardes so layde abroade, y they cannot be better. And therfore they haue not fyered their make, nor spredde abroade their sayle.

Then there is dealed great spoyle: yee, lame men rōne after the pray. There lyeth no mā that sayth: I am speck, but all euell is taken awaye from the people that dwell there.

The last destruction of the Synagoge, in which the kyngdome and priesthoode of that people was tras-lated to the church and congregation of Christ.

Come ye hepten and heare, take hede ye people. Herken thou erth & all y is therein: y round copaste and all that groweth there vpon: for the Lorde is angry w all people, and his displeasure is kindled agaynst all the multitude of them, he hath destroyed them, & deliuered them to the slaughter. So y their sayne shall be cast out, and their bodies synck: that euen the very hylls shall be wet w the bloud of the. All the starres of heauen shall waist, and the heuē shall folde together lyke a roll, and all the starres therof shall fall, lyke as y leaues fall from the vyues and fyggetrees.

For my sword shall be bathed in heauē, and shall immediatly come downe in iudgment vpon Idumea, and vpon the people which I haue cursed for my vengeance.

And the Lordes swearde shall be full of bloude, & be rusty w the fatnes and bloude of lambes and goates, with the fatnesse of the kidneys of wethers. For the Lorde shall kill a great offering in Bozra, & a great slaughter in the lande of Idumea. There shall the vnicornes fall w them, and the bulles w the gyautes: and their lande shall be thozowely soaked with bloude, & their grounde corrupt with fatnes. Vnto the also, Zion, shall come the daye of y vengeance of God, and the peare when thynne a wne iudgmentes shall be recompensed. And his floudes shall be turned to pyrch, and his earth to bymstone: & there with shall the land be kindled, so that it shall not be quenched daye ner nyght: but smoke euermore, and so forth to lye waste. And no man shall go thozowe it for euer. But pelli-canes, storkes, great oules and rauens shall haue it in possession, and dwell therein.

For God shall sprecde out the lyne of desolation vpon it, & wepe it with the stones of emptines. When kynges are called vpon there shall be none, & all prices shall be awaye.

Thornes shall growe in their palaces, net-tels and thistles in their strongholdes, that the dragons may haue their pleasure therein, and that they maye be a court for estryches. There shall straunge visures and monstrous bestes mete one another, and the wylde kepe company together. There shall the lamia lye, & haue her lodging. There shall the oule make her nest, buyde, be there at home and bying forth his yonge ones. There shall the kytes come together, echone to his lyke.

Seke thozow the scripture of the Lorde and reade it. There shall none of these thyn-ges be lefte out, there shall not one, ner loche lyke, sayle. For what his mouth commaun-deth that same doeth his sprete gather toge-ther, or fulfilleth. He hath cast y lot for the, and to those beastes hath his hādes deuyned the line: therfore those shall possesse the enbe-ryptaunce from generatyon to generatyon, and dwell therein for euer.

The xxxv. Chapter.
Of the tyme and kyngdome of Christ.

B ut the deserte and wilderness shall reioyce, the waste grounde shall be glad and flozpyth as the lylly. She shall flozpythe pleasauntlye, and be topfull, and euer be geuyng of thanks more and more. For the glōry of Libanus, the be-wtye of Charnel and Saron shall be geuen her. These shall knowe the honoure of the Lorde, and the magēstie of oure God. * And therfore strength the weake hādes, and con-forste the feble knees.

Saye vnto them that are of a fearefull hert. Be of good chere, and feare not. * Be-holde, poure God cometh to take vengeance: and you shall se the rewarde that God geueth: God commeth his awne selfe, & will delpuer you. * Then shall the eyes of y blind be lyghtened, and the eares of the deaffe opened. Then shall the lame man leape as an hert, & the * dōme mans tonge shall geue thāckes. * In the wilderness also, there it all wellcs spring, & floudes of water in y desert.

The drye grounde shall turne to riuers, and the thursty to spzynge of water. Where as dragons dwelt afore, ther shall growe sweete floures and grene rusches. There shall be fote pathes & comē stretes, this shall be called the holy waye. No vnclene person shall go thozowe it: for the Lorde him self shall go with them that waye, and the wayferer, nor ig-norant shall not erre. There shall be no lyō, & no rauishing beast shall come therein, nor be there but mē redemed shall go there fre and safe. And the redemed of the Lorde, I saye, shall conuerste and come to zion with thanc-keingening. Euerslastyng ioye shall they haue: pleasure and gladnes shall be among the. And as for all sorowe and heynnes, it all vanyshawaye.

ozelles wher to trustest þ, that þ castest thy selfe of frome: * lo, thou puttest thy trust in a broke staf of reede (I meane Egipt) which þ leanest vpon, it goeth into his hāde & shutech hym thowowe. Euen so is þ pharaon the kynge of Egipte, vnto all them that trust in hym. But þ woldest saye to me: we truste in þ Lord our God. A goodly God in deed: whose hye places and altars hezekia toke downe, and comaunded Iuda and Ierusalem to worshipp onely before the altare. Nowe therfore deliuer hostages that thou rebelle nomore agaynst my Lord the kynge of Assyrians. And I wyll geue the two thousande horses: yf thou be able to set men vpon them: how darest thou resist the power of þ smallest pryncce, þ my Lord hath: how darest thou trust in the charettes and horse men of Egipt: Moreover, thinkest thou þ I am come downe hyther to destroye this lād wout þ Lordes will? The Lord sayde vnto me: go downe into þ lād, that þ mayest destroye it. Then sayd Eliakim, Sobna and Ioah vnto Rablaketh: Speake to vs thy seruantes (we praye the) in the Syryas language: for we vnderstāde it wel. And speake not to vs in the Jewes tong, lest þ folcke heare which lyeth vpon the wall. Then answered Rablaketh: Thinke þe, þ the kynge sent me to speake this only vnto þ Lord and þ: hath he not sent me to them also, that I ly vpon the wall: that they maye be compelled to eate their awne donge, & drynck their awne scale w poue? And Rablaketh stode stif, and cryed with a loude voyce in the Jewes tong, and saide: Nowe take hede, howe the great king of the Assyrians geueth you warning. Thus sayth the king: Let not hezekias disceau you: for he shall not be able to deliuer you. Moreover let not hezekias conforte you in the Lord, when he sayth: The Lord wout doubt shall defende vs, and shal not geue ouer this cite into the handes of the kynge of the Assyrians, beleue hym not. But thus sayth the kynge of Assyria: opteyne my fauoure, enclyne to me: so maye euery man enioye his vineyardes and fygge trees, and drynke the water of his cysterne: vnto the tyme that I come my self, and brynge you into a lād that is lyke your awne: wherin is wheate and wyne, which is both sowed with seede, and planted with vineyardes. Let not hezekias disceau you, when he sayth vnto you: the Lord shall deliuer vs. * Right the Goddess of the Gentils kepe euery mans lande, from the power of the kynge of the Assyrians: Where is the God of Betharaim and Arphad? Where is the God of Sepharuaim? And who was able to defende Samaria out of my hande? Of which of all the Goddesses of these lādes hath deliuered the countrey out of my power? is the lord in dede able to deliuer Ierusalem from my hande? vnto this hezekias messenger helde they tonges, and answered not one worde: for the king had charged the, that they shulde geue hym none answer. So came Eliakim hezekias sonne the president, Sobna the scribe, and Ioah the secretary, vnto hezekias with rent clothes, and solde hym the wordes of Rablaketh.

lem from my hande: vnto this hezekias messenger helde they tonges, and answered not one worde: for the king had charged the, that they shulde geue hym none answer. So came Eliakim hezekias sonne the president, Sobna the scribe, and Ioah the secretary, vnto hezekias with rent clothes, and solde hym the wordes of Rablaketh.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

Hezekias hideth him selfe before the Lord. The army of Sennacherib is slayne of the angel of the Lord: and he him selfe is killed of his awne sonnes.

When hezekias hearde that, he rent his clothes, * and putt on a sacke cloth, and went into the temple of the Lord. But he sente Eliakim the president, Sobna the scribe, with the eldest prestes clothed in sacke, vnto the prophet Esay the sonne of Amoz, and they said vnto hym: Thus sayth hezekias: This is the daye of trouble, of plage and of blasphemie: for the children are come to the place of byrth: but there is no power to brynge them forth. The Lord thy God (no doubt) hath well considered the wordes of Rablaketh, whom his Lord the king of Assyrians hath sent to defye & blaspheme the luyng God: with soche wordes as the Lord thy God hath hearde ryght well. And therfore, lyfte vpon thy prayer for the remnaunt, that yet are left. So the seruantes of the kynge hezekias came to Esay.

And Esay gaue the thys answer: Saye thus vnto your lord: thus sayth the Lord: Be not afraid of the wordes that thou hast hearde wherwith the kynge of the Assyrians seruantes haue blasphemed me. * Beholde, I will cause a wynde to go ouer him, as sone as he heareth the rumour, he shall go again into his contrey: there wyll I destroye hym with the sworde in his awne lād. * Nowe when Rablaketh returned, he founde þ king of Assyria laying sege to Libnas: for he had vnderstande þ he was departed fro Lachis. For ther came a rumour þ Charbakas kige of Ethiopia was come forth to warre agaynst him. And whē the king of Assyria heard that, he sent other messengers to kynge hezekias w this commaundement: Saye thus to hezekias king of Iuda: Let not thy God disceau the, in whō thou hopest, and sayest: Ierusalem shall not be geuen into the hādes of the king of Assyria. For lo, thou knowest well howe the kinges of Assyria haue handled all the landes that they haue subuerted, and hopest thou to escape? Were the people of Gentyles (whom my progenitours conquered) deliuered at any tyme thowow their goddesses? * As namely, Gozan, Haran, Rezeph, and the children of Eden, which were at Chalassar. Where is the kynge of Hama, and the kynge of Arphad, and the king of the of the cylie Sepharuaim, Ena & Aua: Now when hezekias had receaued the letter of the messengers, and read it, he went vpon into þ house of the Lord, and opened the letter before the Lord. And hezekias prayed before þ Lord on this maner. O Lord of hostes, þ God of Israel, which dwellest vpon Cherubin. Thou art the God, that onely is God of all the kyngdomes of the worlde, for thou onely hast created heauen and earth. * Enclyne thine eare Lord & consydre, open thine eyes, O Lord, and se, and ponde all the wordes vpon Sennacherib, which hath sent his embassage to blaspheme the luyng God. It is true, O Lord, that the kynges of Assyria haue conquered all kyngdomes and lādes, and cast theyr goddes in the fyre. Not withstandynge those were no goddes, but þ workes of mens handes, of wood or stone, therfore haue they destroyed them. Deliuere vs then, O Lord oure God, from the hādes of Sennacherib, that all kyngdomes of the earth maye knowe, that thou onely art the Lord. Then Esay the sonne of Amoz sent vnto hezekias, sayinge: Thus sayth þ Lord God of Israel. Where as thou hast made thy prayer vnto me, as touchynge Sennacherib þ kynge of Assyria, this is the answer, that þ Lord hath geuen concernynge hym. Despised art þ, and mocked (O daughter of Syon) he hath shakē his head at the, O daughter of Ierusalem. But thou Sennacherib, * whom hast thou defyed and blasphemed? Agaynst whom hast thou lifted vpon thy voyce, and exalted thy proude lookes: euen agaynst þ holy one of Israel. Thou with thy seruantes hast blasphemed the Lord, and thus holdest thou of thy selfe. I will couer the hye mountaynes, and sydes of Libanus with my hostmen. And there wyll I cut downe the hye Cedre trees and the sayrest fyre trees. I wyll vpon into the heygth of it, and into the cheffest of his tymbre woddes. If there be no water, I wyll graue and drynke. And as for waters of defence, I shall drye the vp with the fete of myne hoost. Yee, hast thou not hearde, what I haue taken in hande, & brought to passe of olde tyme? That same wyll I do now also: waste, destroye, and brynge stronge cilies vnto heapes of stones. For theyr inhabitours shal be lyke lame men, brought in feare and confounded. They shal be lyke þ grasse & grene herbes in the felde, lyke the heu vpon house toppes, that withereth afore it be growne vp.

I knowe thy wayes, thy goynge forth and thy commynge home, yee, & thy madnesse agaynst me. Therfore thy furiousnes agaynst me, and thy pryde is come before me. I wyll put my ryng in thy nose, and my bydle vpon the chawes of the, and turne the about, eue the same waye thou camest. I wyll geue the also this token (O hezekias) thys yere shalt thou eate such as groweth of yt selfe & the seclide yere, þ which springeth agayne of the same, and in the thyrde yere, yee shall sowe & reape, yee shall plante vineyardes, and enioye the frutes therof.

And soche of the house of Iuda as are escaped, shall come together, and the remnaunt shall take rote beneth, and brynge forth frute aboue. For the escaped shall go out of Ierusalem, and the remnaunt from the mounte Syon.

And thys shall the gelousy of the Lord of hostes bryng to passe. Therfore thus sayeth the Lord, concernynge the kynge of the Assyrians. He shall not come into this cite, and shal shote no arrowe into it, there shal no shilde hurt it, nether shal they cast ditches about it. The same waye þ he came, he shal retorne, and not come at thys cite. sayeth þ Lord. And I wyll kepe and saue þ cite (sayeth he) for myne awne, and for my seruante Dauids sake.

* Thus the angel went forth, and slewe of the Assyrians hoost, an hundred fourescore and fyue thousande. And whē men arose vpon early in the mornynge. Beholde, they were slayne, and all laye full of deede bodies. So Sennacherib the kynge of the Assyrians brake vp, & dwelt at Nineue. Afterwarde it chaunced, as he prayed in the temple of Nisrah his God, that Adramalech and Sarazer his awne sonnes slewe him with the sword, and fled into the lande of Armenia. And Asarhadon his sonne raygned in his steade.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

Hezekias speke vnto the deeth, but is yet reuured by the Lord, and lyueth fyftene yeres after, for which benefyte he geueth thanks.

Net longe afore this, was hezekias sycke vnto the deeth, * & the prophete Esay þ sonne of Amoz came vnto bi, & sayd: Thus comaundeth the Lord: Set thine house in orde, for thou must dye, and shalt not escape. Then hezekias turned his face towarde the wall, and prayed vnto the Lord, and sayde: Remembre (O Lord) that I haue walched before the in treuth and a stedfast herte, & haue done the thyng that is pleasaunt to the. And hezekias wepte sore. Then sayde God vnto Esay: Go and speake vnto hezekias: the Lord God of Dauid thy father sendeth the this worde: I haue hearde thy prayer, and consydred thy feares, * beholde, I will put fyftene yeres mo vnto thy lyfe, and deliuer the and the cylie also, from the hande of the kynge of Assyria, for I wyll defende the cite. * And take the thys token of the Lord, that he will do it, as he hath spoken: Beholde, I wyll retorne the shadowe of Ahaz dial, that now is layed out with þ sunne

The Prophecye

Sunne and bringe it ten degrees backward.
* So the Sunne turned ten degrees backward, the which he was descended afore.

A thanchelgeyunge, which hezekia kynge of Iuda wrote, when he had bene sycke, and was recovered.

I thought I shulde haue gone to the gates of hell when myne age was shortned, and haue wanted the respynde of my peaces.

I spake within my selfe: I shall neuer vi-set the Lorde (the Lord I saye) in thys lyfe: I shall neuer se man among the dwellers of the worlde. Myne age is folden vp together, & taken awaye from me, lyke a shepherdes cotage: I haue hewen of my lyfe by my syn-nes, lyke as a weener cutteth of hys webbe.

He wyl with pynninge sycknesse make an ende of me: yee, he wyl make an ende of me in one daye. * I thought I wolde haue lyued vnto the morowe, but he broked my bones lyke a lyon, and in one daye thou wilt make an ende of me.

Then chatred I lyke a swalowe, and ly-ke a crane, and mourned as a done.

I lyfte vp myne eyes into the heygth: O Lorde (sayde I) my sycknes kepeth me do-wne: ease thou me. * What shall I saye?

The Lorde hath made a promise to me. Yee, and he him selfe hath perfourmed it. I shall therfore as longe as I lyue remembre thys bitternes of my lyfe. O Lorde men maye lyue beyond the yere, and I wyl declare to all men: that euē in those yeres I haue a ioyfull lyfe, and that it was thou that causedest me to scape and agayne thou hast geuen lyfe to me.

Beholde bytter as gall was my pensynesse, so sore longed I for helth. And it was thy pleasure to deliuer my lyfe, from the fylthye pytt, for thou it is (O Lorde) that hast cast all my synnes behynde thy backe. * For hell prayseth not the, death doth not magnifye the.

They that go downe into the graue pray-se not thy trueth: but the lyuinge, yee, the lyuinge a knowledge of thy lyke as I do thys daye.

The father telleth hys chyldren of thy faythfulnesse: * To heale me it is the Lorde des worke, and we wyl synge my songes in thy house, all the dayes of oure lyfe. And Esaie sayde: take a playster of fygges, and laye it vpon the soze, so shall it be whole.

Then sayd hezekia: O what a great miracle is this, that I shall go vp into the house of the Lorde?

The xxxix. Chapter.

Hezekia is reproued of Esaye, because he shewed hys treasure vnto the embassayours of Babilon.

The same tyme Merodach Baladam, Baladamus sonne kynge of Babilon, sent lettres ad presentes to hezekia. For he vnderstode howe he had bene syck, & was recovered agayne. * And hezekia was glad therof, & shewed the the comditles of his treasure, of syluer, of gold, of spices & robes, of precious oyles, all that was in his cubbozdes & treasure houses. There was not one thinge in hezekias house, and so tho-row out all his kyngdome, but he let the se it.

Then came Esaye the prophete to kynge hezekia, and sayd vnto him. What haue the men sayde, and from whete came they vnto the? hezekia answered: they came oute of a farre cowntre vnto me, out of Babilon: Esay sayde: what haue they looked vpon in thyne house? hezekia answered. All that is in myne house haue they seene: and there is nothyng in my treasure, but I shewed it them.

Then sayde Esay vnto hezekia: Under- stande the worde of the Lorde of hostes: * Be- holde, the tyme wyl come, that euery thyng which is in thyne house, and all that thy pro-genitours haue layde vp in store vnto this daye, shall be caried to Babilon, and nothing left behynde. This sayeth the Lorde. Yee, and parte of thy sonnes, that shall come of the, ad-whom I shall get, shall be caried hence, and become gelded chamberlaynes in the kynge of Babilons court. Then sayde hezekia to Esay. Now God prospere his awne counsell, which thou hast tolde me. He sayde moze ouer:
So there be peace & faithfulness in my tyme.

tell her: For her tranayle is at an ende that her offence is pardoned, that she hath re-ceaued of the Lordes hande sufficient correccion for all her synnes. * A voyce crieth in wil-dernes. Prepare the waye for the Lorde in the wildernesse, make streyght the path for oure God in the deserte. Let all valleyes be exalted, & euery moystayne & hill be layed lowe, what so is crooked, let it be made straght: & let the rough be made playne felde. * For the glory of the Lorde shall appeare, and all flesh shall at once se it, for why: the mouth of the Lorde hath spoken it.

The same voyce spake: Howe crye. And the prophet answered: what shall I crye? * that all fleshe is grasse, & that all the godlines therof, is as the floure of the felde. The grasse is wythered, the floure falleth awaye. Euē so is the people as grasse, when the breath of the Lorde bloweth vpon the. Neuertheles, whether the grasse wyther, or the floure fade awaye. * Yet the word of our God endureth for ever. So vp vnto the hye hyll (O hye) that byrgest good tydynges, lyfte vp thy voyce with power, & thou preacher Ierusalem. Lyfte it vp without feare, and saye vnto the cyties of Iuda: Beholde

Of Esaye.

Jo. liiii.

Beholde poure God, beholde the Lord God shall come with power, and beare rule with his arme. Beholde, he bringeth hys treasure with him, and his worckes go before hym.
He shall fede his flock lyke an herdman. He shall gather the lumbes together with hys arme, and carye them in his bosome, & shall kyndelp intreate those that beare yonge.

Who hath holden the waters in hys fist?
Who hath measured heauen wth his spanne, & hath comprehended all the earth of the worlde in thre measures: Who hath weyed the moystay-nes & hylles in a balauce. Who hath refourmed the mynde of the Lorde: or to who hath he shewed his counsell. * O who is of his coucell to teach him: or who hath geuen him vnderstandynge and hath taught him the path of iudgement. Who taught him cōinge and opened to him the waye of vnderstandynge.

Beholde, all people are in cōparyson of hym, as a droppe to a bocket full, & are counted as the lest thinge that the balauce weyeth. Yee & the lesse he taketh vp as a very lyttel thig. Li- banus is not sufficiēt to ministrate fyre for hys offeringe, and all the beastes therof are not ynough to one sacrifice. All people in cōpary-son of him are rekened as nothing, * yt they be cōpared with him lesse then nothyng and as it that is not. To who then wyl ye liken God: or what Similitude wyl ye set vp vnto him? Shall the caruer make him a carued ymage: & shall the goldsmith couer hym with golde, or cast him into a fourme of syluer plates: Ore ouer, shall the ymage maker (that the pooze man which is dyspoled, maye haue some thinge to sett vp also) seke out and chole a tree, & is not rotten, & carue therout an yma-ge, & moueth not: knowe ye nothing o wretches: hearde ye neuer of it: hath it not bene preached vnto you sence the begynning: ha- ue ye not bene enformmed of this, by the foudacyon of the earthe, that he sytteth vpon the circle of the worlde, and that all the inhabitours of the worlde are in comparyson of him, but as grethoppers. * That he spredeth out the heauens as a conerpyng, that he stretched them out, as a tent to dwell in. That he bringeth Princes to nothing, and the iudges of the earth to dust: so of the it may be sayde they be not planted nor sowe agayne, neither their stock roted agayne in the earth: for as soone as he bloweth vpon the, they wither & fade awaye, lyke the straw in a whyrle winde.

To who nowe wyl ye lyken me, & whom shall I be lyke, sayeth the holy one: Lyft vp your eyes on hye, & cōsyder. * who hath made those thinges, which come out by so great heapes: & be call them all by their names.
For there is nothing hid vnto the greatnesse of hys power, strength, & myght. Howe may then Iacob thincke, or how may Israel saye: My wayes are hid fro the Lorde, & my God knoweth not of my iudgementes. know- west thou not, or hast thou not hearde, that the euerlastynge God, the Lorde which made all the corners of the earth, is nether weery nor faynt: and that his wyldome can not be cōpre-hended: but that he geueth strength vnto the weery, and power vnto the faynt: Children are weery and faynt, and the strongest men fall. * But vnto them that haue the Lord before they eyes, shall strength be encreased.

Agles wynges shall growe vpon the. Whē they runne they shall not fall: and when they go, they shall not be weery.

The xli. Chapter.

Of the goodnes and mercy of God towarde the people.
Esay (ye I landes) and herke vnto me. Be stronge ye people, Come hy-ther, and shewe poure cause, we wyl go to the lawe together. Who raysed vp the iust man fro the rynginge of the Sunne, & called him to go forth: Who cast downe the people, and subdued the kynges before him: that he maye throwe them all to the groude with his swearde, and scatere the lyke stubble with his bowe: he foloweth vpon the, and goeth safely him self. And that in a waye where, be-boure, & brother, and bad him be stronge. The carpenter comforted the goldsmith, & the goldsmith the hammer mā, saying: Glue wyl do be-cart and a new flayle, that thou mayst thresh the and grinde the mountaynes, and bynge the hylls to poulder. Thou shalt fanne them and the roynde shall carpe them awaye, and the whirly wynde shall scater them. But thou shalt reioyse in the Lorde, and shalt delyste in praylinge the holy one of Israel.

¶ When the thyrst and pooze seke water & fynde none, and when theyr tonge is drye of thyrst. I geue it them sayth the Lorde. I God of Israel forsake them not. ¶ I byn- ge forth foudes in the hylls, and welles in playne felde. I turne the wyldernes to ry- uers, and the drye lande to condyttes of wa- ter. I plante in the waste grounde trees of Cedre, Bore, Myrr and Oliues. And in the drye I set ffyre trees, Olmes, & Hawtho- nestogether. All this do I, that they altoge- ther may se and marche, perceau with their hertes and cosydre, that the hande of y Lord maketh these thynges, and that the holy one of Israel byngeth them to passe. Stande at your cause (sayeth the Lorde) & bringe forth your strongest grounde, sayth the kynge of Jacob. Let the bring forth their goddes, and let ther goddes tel vs what shall chaunce here after: yee, let the shewe vs the thynges y are past, what they be: let the declare the vnto vs that we maye take them to herte, and knowe them hereafter. Ether, shewe vs thynges for to come, & tel vs what shalbe done hereafter: so shall we knowe, that you are goddes do somthing, ether good or bad: so will we both knowledge the same: and tell it out.

¶ Beholde, ye goddes are of naught, & your makynge is of naught, yee abhominable is y man that hath chosen you. Neuertheles, I haue waked vp one from the North, and he shall come. And another fro the East, which shall call vpon my name, & shall treade vpo princes as vpo claye, & as the potter treadeth downe the myrre. Who declared this from the begynning, and we wyl knowe him. Or fro the olde tymes, & we will cofesse, and saye y he is righteous. But there is none that sheweth or declareth eny thing, there is none al- so y heareth your wordes. The fyrst is he y shall saye to yon, Beholde, beholde they are present, & to Ierusalem it selfe will I geue an Euangeliste. But when I cosydre there is not a man amonge the, nor any y can geue coun- sell, nor that when I examen them that can answer one word. Lo, wicked are they & vayne, w the thynges also y they take in had: yee, their ymages are but wynde & vayne thynges.

The xlii. Chapter.

The commenge of Chyrt, and hys baptyme.

¶ Beholde, ¶ this is my ser- uante vpon whom I leane, my- ne electe, In whom my soule is pa- cified. I haue geuen hym my spre- te, that he maye shewe forth iudgement and equyte among the Gentiles. He shall not be an outcrier, nor lyfte vp his voyce. His voy- ce shall not be hearde in the stretes. And a bo- sed rede shall he not breake, and the smoking flaxe shall he not quench: but saythfully and truly shall he geue iudgement, not be pensy- ue nor carefull, that he maye restore ryghteo- usnes vnto the earth, and the Gentyles also shall kepe his lawes. ¶ For thus sayeth God the Lorde vnto hym (euen he that made the heauens, and spred them abroad, and set forth the earth w her increase: which geueth breath vnto the people that is in it, and spirite to them that dwell therin) I the Lorde haue cal- led the in ryghteousnes, and led the by the ha- de. ¶ Therefore wyl I also defende the, and geue the for a couenaunt of the people, and to be the * lyght of the Gentiles. That thou mayest open y eyes of the blynde, * let out y prisoners fro ther bondes & them that spt in darcknesse, out of the dongeon house. Euen I am the Lorde, and this is my name: ¶ And my glozy wyl I geue to none other, nether myne honoure to grauen ymages. Beholde, olde thynges are come to passe, & new thynges do I declare. And or euer they come, I tell you of them.

¶ Synge vnto the Lorde, a newe songe of thanckesgeuinge, blowe out his prayse from the ende of the worlde. They that be vpo the see, and all that is therein, prayse hym, y fies and they that dwell in them. Let the wylder- nes with the cyties like vpher voyce, y tow- nes also that they of Cedar dwell in. Let the be glad that spt vpo rockes of stone, and let them crye downe from the hye mountaynes: as cryynge glozye vnto the Lorde, and ma- gnifyinge hym amonge the Gentyles. The Lorde shall come forth as a gyaute, and take a stomack to hi lyke as a fresh ma of warre. He shall roare & crie, & overcome his enemies.

I haue longe holden my peace (sayeth the Lorde) I haue bene styll and refrayned my selfe, but nowe I wyl crye lyke a traue- lynge woma, & at once wyl I destrope, and denoure. I will make wayste both mountayne and hill, & drye vponery grene thing y grow- eth thereon. I will drye vpon the floudes of wa- ter, and drynke vpon the ryuers. I wyl bring the blinde into a strete, that they knowe not, and lede them into a fote path, that they are ignoraunt in. I shall make darcknesse lyght before them, and the thyng that is croked to be streyght. These thynges haue I done vnto them, and not forsaaken them: ¶ They are fallē backe yee, and let them be ashamed ear- nestly, that hope in y doles, & saye to fashyo- ned ymages: ye are oure goddes.

Heare, O ye deafe men, and sharpe your eares to se (O ye blinde,) ¶ Who is blinde, but my seruaut? Or so deafe, as my messa- ger, whom I sent vnto them? For who is the rule so blynde (saye they) as the perfecte man and so blynde as the Lordes seruante? Thou vn- derstondest moch, and kepest nothyng: the eares are open, & no man heareth. The Lorde is mercyfull vnto the for his ryghteousnesse sake: that his worde myght be magnified ad praysed. But the people them selues is rob- bed and trode vnder the fote chayned in don- geons and they all (I saye) be shut into pre- son houses. ¶ They be carped awaye captiue and no man doth lowse the: They be troden vnder fote, and no ma doth laboure to bring them agayne. ¶ But who is he amonge you, y pondreth this, that consydreth it, & taketh it for a warnynge in tyme to come?

¶ Who suffred Jacob to be troden vnder fote, and Israell to be spoyled? Wpd not the Lorde? Because we haue synned agaynst him & haue had no delyste to walke in his wayes, nether bene obedient vnto his lawe. Therfo- re hath he poured vpon hym hys wrathfull displeasure, and stronge battayll, which fy- reth hym on euery syde, yet wyl he not vn- derstande. He burneth hym vp, yet syncketh it not into hys herte.

The xliii. Chapter.

God promyseth to send hys chyrst, which shall deliuer hys people. He saygeueth synnes for hys awne sake.

¶ At nowe, the Lorde that made the D Jacob, and he that fashyoned the: D Israell, sayeth thus: ¶ Feare not, for I haue redeemed the. ¶ I haue called the by name: thou art myne awne. ¶ Yf thou goest thorow the water, I wil be with the, that the stronge floudes shulde not pluck the awaye. ¶ And yf thou walkest thorowe the fyre, it shall not burne the, and the flame shall not kyndle vpo the. For I am the Lord thy God the holy one of Israel, thy Sauoure. I gaue Egypte for thy deliuerance, the Moziars & the Sabees for the: because thou wast deare in my syght, and because I set by the, and lo- ued the. I wyl geue ouer all men for the, and deliuer vp all people for thy sake, feare not: for I am with the. ¶ I wyl bringe thy sede fro the East, and gather the together fro the west. I wyl saye to the North, lett go. And to the South, kepe not backe: ¶ but bring me my sonnes from farre, and my daughters fro the endes of y worlde. Namely, all those that be called after my name. For them haue I created, fashyoned, & made for myne honour.

¶ Bring forth that people, which is blin- de & yet hath eyes, which are deafe although they haue eares. ¶ If all nations come in one and be gathered together, which amonge the shall declare soche thynges, and tell vs what is to come? Let them bynge theyr witnesse so shall they be free: els, let them heare, and saye, it is truth. You are my witnesses (sayth the Lorde) and my seruaut, whom I haue chosen: therfore be certified ad geue me faith- full credence: and consydre, ¶ that I am he, ¶ before whom there was neuer any God, and that ther shalbe none after me. I am euen, I am the only Lorde: and beside me ther is no Sauoure. I gaue warninge, I made whole I taught you when there was no straunge God amonge you. And this recorde must ye beare me your selues, (sayth the Lorde) that I am God. And euen he am I from the be- gynnynge, and ¶ there is none that can take any thyng out of my hande. I do the worke and who shall be able to let it.

Thus sayeth the Lorde the holy one of Is- rael your redeemer: ¶ for your sake I haue sent to Babylon, and brought downe y stro- gest of them. All they are fugityue with the Chaldecas that boost them of theyr synnes: Euen I the Lorde your holy one which ha- ne made Israell, and am your kynge. Thus sayeth y Lorde (euen he that maketh a waye in the * see, & a footpath in the mygh- ty waters: ¶ which bringeth forth y charet- tes & hortes, the hoste & the power of warre, that they may fall and neuer ryse, and be ex- tincte, lyke as towre is quenched.

Remembre not thynges of olde, and re- garde nothyng that is past. Beholde I shall make a newe thyng, and shortly shall it ap- peare, & shall you not knowe it? I wyl ma- ke stretes in the deserte, and ryuers of water in the wyldernes: The wyld beasts shall worshyppe me: the dragons, and the yonge Estriches. ¶ For I shall geue water in the wyldernes, and streames in the desert: that may geue drynke to my people, who I cho- se. Thys people haue I made for my self, and they shall shewe forth my prayse. For thou (Jacob) woldest not call vpon me, but thou haddest an vnlust towarde me, O Israell. Thou gauest me not thy beastes for burnt offeringes nether ydest honoure me with thy sacrifices. Thou boughtest me no deare spy- ce with thy money, nether pourest the fat of thy sacrifices vpo me. ¶ howbeit I haue not bene chargeable vnto the in offeringes, nether greuous in incise. But thou hast ladē me with thy synnes, & wcreyd me with thy- ne vngodlynes.

¶ Where as I yet, eue I am he onely, that for myne awne selves sake do awaye thyne offences, and forget thy synnes: so that I will neuer thinke vpon them. But me now in re- membzaunce (for we wyl reason together) and shewe what thou hast for the, to make the ryghteous. ¶ Thy fyrst father offended fore, and thy rulers haue synned agaynst me. Therfore I ether suspēded, or slue the cheffest pynces. I dyd curse Jacob, and gaue Israell into reprofe.

The xliiii. Chapter.

Chyrt

Christ promyseth to deliuer his church.

Heare nowe, O Jacob my seruaunt, and Israel who I haue chosen. For thus sayeth the Lord, that I made the, fashyoned y, and helped the, euen from thy mothers wombe. Be not afrayed, O Jacob my seruaunt, thou ryghteous, who I haue chosen. * For I shall poure water vpon the drye grounde, & ryuers vpon the thurstye. * I shall poure my sprete vpon thy sede, and myne encrease vpon thy flock. They shall growe together, lyke as y grasse, and as the wyllowes by the waters syde. * One shall saye: I am the Lordes. Another shall call hym selfe after the name of Jacob. The thyrde shall subscribe with his hande vnto the Lorde, and geue him self vnder the name of Israel.

Thus hath the Lorde spoken: euen the kynge of Israel, and his redemer, the Lorde of hostes: * I am the fyrst and the last, and without me is there no God. If any be lyke me, let hym call forth the thynges paste and openly shewe it, and laye it playne before me what hath chaused synce I apointed y people of the worlde, and what shall be shortly or what shall come to passe, in tyme longe to come, let them shewe thes thynges. Be not abashed nor afrayde. For haue not I euer tolde you hyther to, and warned you? Ye can beare me recorde poure selues. Is there any God excepte me? or any maker, that I shulde not knowe hym?

All caruers of Images are but vayne, & the carued ymages that they loue, can do no good. They must beare recorde the selues, that (seynge they can nether se nor vnderstande) they shalbe confounded. * Who darre the make a God, or fashyon an ymage, that is profytable for nothyng? * Beholde, all the felowshyppe of them must be brought to confusyon. And truly all the worke masters of them as men, they shall all be gathered together, they shall stande, treble, and be confounded one with a nother. The smith maketh an are, and tempereth it with hoate coales, and fashyoneth it with hammers, and worketh w it with all the strength of his armes: yee, so metyme he is faynt for very hunger, and so thurstye, that he hath no more power. The carpenter (or ymage caruer) taketh measure of the tymbre: and spredeth forth his lyne: he marketh it with some coloure. he playneth it, he ruleth it, ad squareth it, and maketh it after the ymage of a man, and according to the bewty of a man: y it maye stande in the temple.

Mozzouer, he goeth oute to hewe downe Cedre trees. he byngeth home Elmes and Ques: and takynge a bolde corage, he seeketh out the best tymbre of the wodde. he him selfe hath planted a pyne tree, which the rayne hath swelled, which wodd serueth for men to burne. Of this he taketh and warmeth hym selfe withall: he maketh a fyre of it to bake breade. And afterwarde maketh a God there of, to honoure it: an Idole to knele before it. One pece he burneth in y fyre, with another he roseth flesh, that he maye eate roste his belly full: with the thyrde he warmeth hym selfe, and sayeth: Aha, I am well warmed, I haue bene at the fyre. And of the residue he maketh hi a God, & an Idole for him selfe. he kneleth before it, he worshippeth it, he prayeth vnto it, & sayeth: deliuer me, for thou art my God.

* Yet men nether cōspyre ner vnderstande, because theyr eyes are stopped, that they cannot se: and their hertes, that they cannot perceauē. They pōnde not in theyr myndes, for they haue nether knowledge ner vnderstandynge, to thincke thus. I haue bzent one pece in the fyre: I haue baked bread with the coles there of, I haue roasted flesh with all, & eaten it: shall I none of the residue make an abhominable Idole, and fall downe before a rotten pece of wood? Thus he doth but lese his labour, and his herte which is disceaued, doth turne hym asyde: so that none of them can haue a fre cōscience to thincke: maye not Jerre?

Consydre thys (O Jacob and Israel) for thou art my seruaunt. I haue made the, that thou myghtest serue me. O Israel, forget me not. * As for thyn offences, I haue dyspūen them awaye lyke the cloudes, and thy synnes as the myst. Turne the agayne vnto me, for I haue redeemed the.

Weglad ye heauens, who the Lorde hath made for the Lorde hath dealte graciously w his people, let all that is here beneth vpon y earth, be to yfull. Reioyse ye mountaynes and woddes, with all the trees therof: for y Lorde hath redeemed Jacob, and wyl shewe his glozy vpon Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde thy redemer, cū he that fashyoned the from thy mothers wombe. * I the Lorde, do all thynges my selfe alone. I only spede out the heauens and I only haue layde the foundacyō of the earth by myn awne selfe. I destroye the tokes of witches, and make the Soothsayers fooles. As for the wyle, I turne them backward, and make theyr connyng folyshnesse.

he doth set vp the purpose of his seruante, and fulfilleth the counsell of his messengers Concernynge Ierusalem, he sayeth: It shalbe inhabited. And of the cyties of Iuda: They shalbe buylded agayne, and I will repayre theyr decayed places: he sayeth to the groude: be drye. And I will drye y wader floudes. he sayeth of Egypt. he is myne herdsman: so that he shall fulfill all thynges after my will. he sayeth also of Ierusalem: It shall be buylded, and of the temple: It shalbe fast grounded.

The xlv. Chapter.

The

The deliuerance of the people by Cyrus. The comynge of christ and callynge of the Gentyles.

Thus sayeth the Lord vnto Cyrus his anoynted whom I haue taken by y ryght hāde, to subdue natiōs before hi. * I wyl lowse the gyrdle of kynges, & I wyl open y gates before his face, and not to shut their doores. I will go before the, and make the croked streygth, I shall bzeake the brasen doores, & burst the yron barres. I shall geue the y hyd treasures, & the thynges which is secretly kept: y thou mayest knowe that I am y Lorde God of Israel which haue called the by thy name: & * that for Jacob my seruaunt sake, & for Israel my chosen. For I called the by thy name, and ordeyned the or euer thou knewest me. * Cū I the Lorde before who there is none other: for without me ther is no God. * I haue prepared the or euer thou knewest me, that I myght be knowne fro the ryling of y sunne to the goynge downe of the same, that all is nothyng without me. For I am y Lorde, and there is els none. It is I y created the lyght & darcknes. * I make peace and trouble: yee, cū I the Lorde do all these thynges. * Ye heauens fro aboue droppe downe, & let the cloudes rayne ryghteousnes. The earth open it selfe, and brynge forth health, that therby righteounes maye flopph. Euen I the Lorde brynge it to passe.

* Wo be vnto him y stryueh w his maker, the pottherde with the potter. Sayeth y claye to the potter. What makest thou? or thy worke serueth for nothyng? Wo be vnto him that sayeth to his father. Why begettest thou? And to his mother: why bearest thou? Thus sayeth the Lorde, euen the holy one, & maker of Israel. Aske me of thynges for to come, cōcernynge my sonnes: and put me in remembrance, as touching the workes of my hādes: I haue made the earth, and created man vpo it. With myne handes haue I spred forth heauen, and geuen a commaundement for all the host therof. I shal wake him vp with ryghteousnes, and orde all his wayes. * he shall buylde my cytie, and let out my prisoners: & that nether for gyft nor rewardes, sayeth the Lord of hostes. Thus sayeth the Lord. The occupiers of Egypt, the marchautes of the Morians and Sabees, shall come vnto the with tribute, they shalbe thynne, they shall followe the, and go with cheynes vpo their fete. They shall fall downe before the, and make supplicacyon vnto the. For God (without whom there is none other God) shalbe with the. * O howe profounde art y God, thou God and Sauoure of Israel: Confounded are they all, and put to dishonoure: they are gone hence together with shame, euen y makers of ymages. But Israel shalbe saued in y Lorde, which is the cuerlastinge saluacyō. Ye shall not come to shame ner confusyon, worlde without ende.

For thus sayeth the Lord: * euen he that created heauē, the God that made the earth, that fashyoned it, and sett it forth. he dyd not make it for naught, but to be inhabited: Euen I the Lorde, without whom there is none other. * I haue not spokē secretly, ne ther in darcke places of the earth. It is not for naught, that I sayde vnto the sede of Jacob: seke me. I am the Lorde, which when I speake, declareth the thing that is righteous & true: gather you & come together, draw me hyther, you y are escaped of the people. * haue they eny vnderstandynge, that let vp the stocks of theyr Idols, & praye vnto a God, that cannot helpe them: draw nye, come hyther, and let the aske counsell one at another and shewe forth. What is he, that tolde thys before? or, who spake of it, euer sence the begynning: haue not I the Lorde done it? * out whom there is none other God: the true God and Sauoure, and ther is els none but I: * And therfore turne you vnto me (all ye endes of the earth) that ye maye be saued: for I am God, & there is els none. I sweare by my selfe: oute of my mouth cometh the word of ryghteousnesse, and that maye no mā turne: * but all knees shall bowe vnto me, and all tungen shall sweare by my name, saying. Verely, in the Lorde is my ryghteousnes and strength. To him shal men come: but all they that thincke scoone of him, shalbe confounded. And the whole sede of Israel shalbe iustified and make their boast in the Lorde.

The xlv. Chapter.

The Idolatrye is reproued. The health that cometh by Chyr is prophesied.

Bell is fallē, Nabo is broke downe: whose ymages were a burthen for the bestes and catell, to ouerlade them, and to make them weery. They are soucke downe, and fallen together: for they maye not ease them of theyr burthe, therfore must they go into captiuitie. hearken vnto me, O house of Jacob, and all ye that remayne yet of the housholde of Israel: whom I haue bozne from poure mothers wombe, and brought you vp fro poure byrth, tyll ye were growē. I, I, which shall beare you vnto poure last age. I haue made you, I wyl also norysh you, beate you and saue you. * Whom wyl ye make me lyke or to whom wyl ye make me equall or cōpare me that I shulde be lyke hym, in fashyon or ymage, that I maye be lyke him? * Ye fooles (no doute) wyl take out syluer & golde oute of poure purses, and weye it, & hyre a goldsmith to make a God of it, thar men maye knele downe and worshyppe it. * Yet must he be take on mennes shouldeers & bozne, and set in his place, that he maye stampe and not moue out of his place. Alas, y shuld crye vnto erie vnto him which geueth no answer: and belpuereth not the man that calleth vpon him, from hys trouble:

Consyde this well, and be ashamed. Go into yowre owne selues (O ye runnagates.) Remembre the thynges which are past, sence y begynninge of the worlde: that I am God & that there is els no God, yee: & that there is nothyng, lyke vnto me. In the begynnyng of a thyng. I shewe the ende therof: & I tell before, thynges that are not yet come to passe.
My deuice stondeth, stedfastly stablyshed, & I fulfyll all my pleasure. * I call a byrde out of the East, & the ma by whō my counsell shall be fulfyllid out of farre countreys, as soone as I thynke to deuise a thyng, I do it.

Hear me, O ye p̄ arc of an hys stomacke, but farre from ryghteousnesse, I shall bring forth my ryghteousnesse. It is not farre, & my health shall not tary longe awaye. I wyll laye health in Sion, and in Israel my glory.

The xlvii. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde Agaynst Babylon.

Babylon (O daughter, y byrgyn Babylon) syt thou downe in the dust vnto the ground, & not in a throne (O thou mayden of Caldea.) Thou shalt no more be called tender & pleasaunt. Bring forth the quene, & grinde mee, vntill she broyded heare, put of thy shoes, make bare thy knees: & wade thowre y water ryuers.

* Thy name shall be discouered and thy pryncesse shall be sene. For I wyll auenge me of the & wyll shewe no mercy to the as, I do to other men sayeth our redeemer, which is called y Lorde of hostes the holy one of Israel.

Syt syll, holde thy tunc, and get the in to some darck corner (O daughter Chaldea) for thou shalt nomore be called lady of kyng-domes. I was so wroth w my people, that I punished myne enheritaunce, and gaue them into thy power. * Neuertheles, y thewedest the no mercy, but euen the very aged men of them, dydest thou oppresse ryght soze with thy yock, and thou thoughtest thus: I shalbe lady for euer. And belyde all that, thou hast not regarded these thynges, nether remem-bred what was the ende of that cytie Jerusalem. Heare now therfore, thou wyllfull, that syttest so careles, and speakest thus in thyne herte: * I am alone, and without me is there none. I shall neuer be wydowe, ner desolate agayne. And yet both these thynges shall come to the vpon one daye in the twynclinge of an eye: & namely, wyddowhead, and desolacyn. They shall myghtely fall vpon the,
for the multitude of thy wyches, and for the greate heape of thy consurers. For thou hast trusted in thy wickednes, and hast sayd.

* I am alone and without me ther is none. Therfore shall trouble come vpon the, and thou shalt not knowe, from whence it shall aryse. My wyche shall fall vpon the, which thou shalt not be able to put of. A sodaye vnto destruction, shall come vpon the oz euer thou be aware.

Howe go to thy consurers, & to the multitude of thy wyches (with whom thou hast worted thy selfe fro thy youth) yf they maye helpe the, oz strengthen the. Thou hast by-therto had many counsellors of them, so let the heauen gasers and the beholders of starres and mone prophetes come on now and delyner the yee, and lett the shewe, when these newe thynges shall come vpon the. Beholde, they shalbe lyke strawe, which yf it be kyndled with fyre, no man maye ryde it for the vehemence of the flame. And yet it geueth no synders to warme a man by, ner cleare fyre to syt by. Thus are they with whō thou hast worted thy selfe, and thus are thy mar-chauntes that haue bene with the from thy youth. Euery one hath taken his owne waye and shall none of them defende the.

The xlviii. Chapter.

The p̄cept of the Jewes is reproued. The Lorde alone wyll worshipped, which hath chosen vs, and which socoureth vs for his owne sake.

Care this, O thou house of Jacob:
ye that are called by the name of Israel, ad are come out of one stocke with Juda: which sweare by the name of the Lorde, and beare witness by the God of Israel (but not with trueth and ryght) which are called * freemen of the holy cytie, & are groudē vpon the God of Israel, & whose name is y Lorde of hostes.

The thynges that I shewed you euer sence the begynnyng haue I not brought them to passe, immediatly as they came out of my mouth, and declared them, and they are come: howbeit, I knowe that thou art obstinate, and that thy neck hath an yron veyne, & that thy browe is of brasse. Neuertheles, I haue euer sence the begynnyng shewed the of thynges for to come, and declared the vnto the, oz euer they came to passe: that y shuldest not saye: myne Idol hath done it, my carued oz molten ymage hath shewed it. Thou her-dest it before, and beholde, It is come to passe, and whether can ye prophecie of thynges to come? But as for me, I tolde the before at the begynnyng, newe and secret thynges, that thou knowest not of. * And some done nowe, not of olde tyme, wherof thou neuer herdest before they were brought to passe: y thou canst not saye: Beholde, I knewe of them: Moreouer, there be some wherof y hast nether hearde ner knowne, nether haue they bene opened vnto thyne eares afore tyme.
For I knewe that thou wouldest maliciously offende, therfore haue I called the a trasgressoure, euen from thy mothers wombe.

Neuerthe-

Neuertheles, for my names sake, I wyll drawe my wrath: & it shalbe for myne honours sake, yf I paciently forbeare the, and do not rote y out. Beholde, I haue poured the, yet not as siluer. * I haue chosen the in y fyer of affliction: and that onely for myne awne sake yee, * eue for myne awne sake will I do this: oz els, what dishonour wolde they do to my name: herken vnto me, O Jacob, and Israel whom I haue called, I am he. I am euen he that is, I am the fyrst & the last.
My hande hath layde the foundatyon of the earth: and my right hande hath spaned ouer the heauens. Allone as I call them they are there. Gather you all together, and herken:
which of yonder goddes hath declared this?
The Lorde hath a loue vnto him, and he shall perfourme hys wyll agaynst Babel, & declare hys power agaynst the Chaldees. I my selfe alone, euen I haue told you this before yee, I dyd call hym & bringe hym forth: and he shall geue a prosperous iorney. Come nye and heare thys: haue I spoken eny thyng darckly, sence the begynnyng? when a thyng begynneth, I am there.

Wherfore, the Lorde God and hys sprete hath sent me. And thus sayth the Lorde God thy redeemer, the holy one of Israel: I am the Lorde thy God, which teach the * profitable thynges, and leade the the waye, that thou shuldest go. * That thou hadst regarded my commandementes, then had thy welth ynes bene as the water streame: and thy ryghteousnes as the waues flowynge in the see.
Thy seede also had be like as the sande in the see, and the frute of thy body lyke y granelle stones therof. His name shulde not be rote out: nor destroyed before me. * So awaye fro Babylon, fye fro the Chaldees w a mery voyce speake of this, declare it abroade, and go forth vnto the ende of the worlde, saye:
The Lorde hath redemed hys seruant Jacob, that they suffred no thirst, he lead them thorow the wilderness, and caused y waters to flowe out vnto them fro out of the rocke.
* He claue the rocke a sonder, and the water gushid out. * As for the vngodly, they haue no peace, sayth the Lorde.

The xlix. Chapter.

Thynges shall gather together all nacions, be they neuer so farre of.

Ples, herken vnto me, & take heede ye people from farre. The Lorde hath called me from my birth, and made me cyon of my name fro my mothers wombe:
he hath made my mouth like a sharpe sword: vnder the shadowe of hys hade hath he defended me, and hyd me in hys quyer as a good arrowe, & sayd vnto me. Thou art my seruant Israel, & I wilbe honoured in the. Then answerde I: I haue lost my laboure, I haue spent my strength in vayne.

Neuertheles, I will comyt my cause and my worke vnto the Lorde my God. And nowe sayth the Lorde, euen he that hath yoned me fro my mothers wombe to be his seruante, y I maye byng Jacob agayn vnto him: how beit, Israel wyll not be gathered vnto hym agayne. In whose sight I am greate, which also is my Lorde, my God and my strength.
And he sayde: It is but a small thyng that y art my seruant, to sett vp the kynredde of Jacob, and to restore the destruction of Israel. * For I haue made the the light of the Gentyls, that thou mayst be my healeth vnto the ende of the worlde.

Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde the anger and holy one of Israel: because of the abhorringe and despyllinge amonge the Gentiles, concerning the seruant of all them that beare rule. Kynges and princes shall se, and arype and worshyp, because of the Lorde that is saythfull: & because of the holy one of Israel, which hath chosen the. And thus saith y Lorde: * In the tyme accepted haue I heard the, and in the daye of saluacion haue I helped the. * I will prelerue the and make the to be the atonement of the people, that y mayst helpe vp the earth agayne: & possesse agayne the desolate herytages. * That thou mayest saye to the p̄soners: go forth, and to them that are in darcknesse: come into the lyght, & they shall fede in the hye wayes, and get their pasture in all hye places. * They shall neither hoget, ner thirst: heate nor sunne shall not hurte them. For he that fauoureth them, shall leade the, and geue them dyncke of the springe welles. I wyll make wayes vpon all my mountaynes, and my fote pathes shalbe exalted. And beholde, they shall come fro far: lo, some from the north and west, some from the lande of Sinis, which is in the south.
* Reioyse ye heauens: & syng ye prayes, thou earth. Talke of ioye ye hylls, for God hath conforted hys people, and wyll haue mercy vpon his that be in trouble.

But Sion sayde: * God hath forsaken, my Lorde hath forgotten me. Wyll a wyfe forget the childe of her wombe, and not pitie the sonne whō she hath borne? And though, they do forget, yet will not I forget y. Be-holde, I haue written the vpon my handes, thy walles are euer in my syght. * They make hast to buylde the vpon agayne. As for those that ouerthrowe the, and made the wast, they shall departe from the. * Lyst vp thyne eyes, and loke about the: all these gather the together, & come to the. As truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde) thou shalt put them all vpon the, as an apparell, & gyde them to the as a byrd doth her iewels. As for thy land that lyeth desolate wasted and destroyed: it shalbe to narowe for the that shall dwell in it. And they y wolde deuoure the, they shalbe farre

farre awaye. Then the childe who the baren shall bringe forth vnto y, shall saye in thyn care: thy place is to narrow, & gny place y I maye haue rowme. Then shalt thou thynke by thy selfe: who hath begotten me these seinge I am baren and alone, a captiue and an out cast: And who hath noysshed the vp for me? I am desolate and alone, but from whence come these?

And therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Behold, I will stretch out myne hande to y Gentylis, and set vp my token to the people. They shall bring the thy sonnes in their lap- pes: and carpe thy daughters vnto the vpon their shoulders. For kinges shall be thy nur- syng fathers, and quenes shall be thy nursing mothers. They shall fall before the w they faces flat vpon the earth: and lycke vp the dust of thy fete: that thou mayst knowe how that I am the Lorde. * And who so putterh his trust in me, shall not be cofounded. Who spoyle the gyaute of his praye: or who taketh the prisoner fro the myghtye? And ther- fore, thus sayeth the Lorde. The prisoners shall be taken from the gyaute, and the spoy- le deliuered from the violence: for I will maynteyne thy cause agaynst thyn aduer- saries, and saue thy sonnes. And will fede thyn enemyes with they awne fleshe, and make them drynke of their awne bloude, as of swete wyne. And all flesch shall knowe, O Jacob, that I am the Lorde thy sauour, thy noble redeemer.

The i. Chapter.

The Jewes are reproued, and also called.

Thus sayth y Lorde: * Where is y byll of your mothers deuorcment, that I sent her awaye: or who is y blurer, to who I solde you? * Be- holde, for your awne offences are ye solde, & because of youre transgression, is your mo- ther forsake. For why wolde no mā receaue me, when I came: and when I called, no mā gaue me answer. * Is my hande shortned that it might not helpe: or haue I not power to deliuer: lo, * at a worde I drynke vp the see: and of water floudes I make drye lāde: so that for want of water, the fyre corrupt and dye for thirst. * As for heauen, I clothe it with darknesse, and put as it were a sack vpon it.

The Lorde God hath geue me a well ler- ned tonge, * so that I can comfort the which are troubled: yee, and that in due crason. He wakeneth myne eare vp by tymes in y mo- nyng: by tymes in the morninge, I saye, he will waken myne eare, that I myght heke as to y scole masters. * The Lorde God hath opened myne eare, therfore can I nott saye, naye: ner withdrawe my selfe: * but I offe my backe vnto the smyters, & my chekes to the nippers. * I turne not my face fro shame and spitting, & the Lorde God shall helpe me: therfore shall I not be cofounded. I haue bar- dened my face like a flynt stone, for I am su- re, y I shall not come to confusio. Ipe is at hand that iustifieth me, who will then go w me to lawe: Let vs stande one against another: yf there be any y will reason with me, let hym come here forth to me. * Beholde, the Lorde God standeth by me, what is he then y can cōdempe me: lo, * they shall be all like as an olde clothe, the morhe shall eate them vp.

Therfore, who so feareth the Lorde amōg you, let him heare the voyce of his seruauit, who walketh in darknesse, and no lyght shyneth vpon him: lett hym put hys trust in the name of the Lorde, and holde him by his God. But take hede, & ye all kyndle a fyre of the wrath of God, and stere vp the coales: walke on in the glistering of your awne fyre & in y coales y ye haue kindled. This cometh vnto you fro my hāde, namely that ye shall slepe in sorowe.

The ii. Chapter.

Consolacion & comfort is promysed vnto the saythfull.

Erken vnto me, ye y holde of righ- teousnes, & ye that seke the Lorde. Take hebe vnto y stone, whereout ye are hewen, & to the graue wher- out ye are dygged. Considre * Abrahā your father, & Sara y bare you: howe y I called him alone, & blessed hym, and encreased him. Therfore shall the Lorde cōfōrt y, & re- payre all her decaye: making her deserte as a paradise, & her wilderness as y garde of the Lorde. Myrth and ioye shall be founde there, thākesgeyng & yoyce of prayse. Haue res- pect vnto me the, O my people both by ghe & lowe & lape thyn eare to me: * for a lawe & an ordinauce shall go forth frome, to lyghte the Gentils. It is hard by, that my health & my righteousnes shall go forth, and the peo- ple shall be ordred with myne arme.

The plandes, y is the Gentils, shall hope in me, and put their trust in myne arme. Lift vp your eyes toward heauen, and loke vpō the earth beneth. * For the heauens shall va- nythe awaye lyke smoke, and the earth shall waxe olde lyke a cloth, & they y dwell therein shall peryshe in lyke maner. But my saluacio shall endure for euer, and my righteousnes shall not cease. Herten vnto me, ye that haue pleasure in righteousness, y people y bearest my lawe in thyn heart. * Feare not the curse of men: be not afrayde of their blasphemys and reuyliges: * for wormes & mothes shall eate the vp lyke cloth & woll. But my rygh- teousnes shall endure for euer, & my sayunge health fro generacion to generacyon. Wake vp, wake vp: and be stronge. O thou arme of the Lorde, wake vp, lyke as in tyme past, euer and sence the worlde beganne.

Art

* Art not thou the same arme, that hast wounded the proude Egypt, and hewen the wyagyn peeces? Art not y ene he, which hast dyed by the depe of the see, which hast made playne y see grounde, y the deliuered myght goo thowow? Therfore y redeemed of y Lorde shall turne agayne, & come wyth ioye vnto Sio, there to endure for euer: * That myrth & gladnesse myght be with the: that sorowe and wo myght fle from them: * Yee I, I am euen he, that in all thynges geneth you con- solacion. What art thou then, that fearest a mortall mā, the childe of mā, which * goeth awaye as doeth the floure: And forgettest y Lorde that made the, that spred out the hea- uenes, and layde the foundation of the earth. But thou art euer afrayde for the syght of thyn oppressoure, which is ready to do har- me: where is the wrath of the oppressoure? The tyme cometh on faste whē the preso- ner shall be loseneh, and he shall not dye in the dongeon nor yet be consumed by fayne- ment. * I am the Lorde thy God (that make the see to be still, & to rage:) * whose name is the Lorde of hostes: I haue put my wordes in thy mouth, & haue defended the in the shadowe of my hande: that I maye plāte the heauens, & lepe the foundacyō of the earth, and saue vnto Sion: thou art my people.

A wake, awake, and stande vp, O Jeru- salem, thou that from the hāde of the Lorde, hast dryncken out * the cuppe of hys wrath: thou that hast supped of, and sucked out the dregges of his deadly cuppe to the botome. For amōg all the sonnes who he hath begot- ten, there is not one y maye holde it vp: & not one to leade it by the hande, of all the sonnes that he hath noysshed. Both these thynges are happened vnto the, but who is soz for it: Yee, destructyon, wastynge, hunger and swerde: but who will cōfōrt the? Thy son- nes lye comfortles at the heade of euery stre- te lyke a takē venyson, and are full of the ter- rible wrath of the Lorde, and punishment of thy God. And therfore thou miserable and dryncken (howbeit not wyth wyne) heare this: Thus sayeth thy Lorde: thy Lorde and God, the defender of hys people. Beholde, I will take the flombrynge cuppe out of thy hande, euen the cuppe wyth the dregges of my wrath: that fro hēce forth thou shalt ne- uer drynke it more, but I will putt it into their hāde y trouble y: whych haue spoken to thy soule: stoupe downe, y we maye go ouer the: & thou laydest thy body euen wyth the grounde, and as the strete to go vpon.

The liij. Chapter.

Consolacion and comforte to the people of Sod.

Sion vp, take thy strength vnto the: put on thyn honest raymēt O Jerusalem, thou holy cite. For fro thys tyme forth, there shall no uncircumcised ner vncleane pcrson come in y. Shake the fro the dust, aryle & stande vp, O Jerusalem. Plucke out thy neck fro the yoke: O captiue daughter Sio. For thus sayeth the Lorde: * ye are solde for naught, therfore shall ye be redeemed also without any mony. For thus sayeth y Lorde God: * My pro- ple wente downe afore tyme into Egypte, ther to be straungers, & and the kyngs of the Assyriās oppresed them wpythout anye cau- se. And now what profyt is it to me (sayth the Lorde) that my people is frely carped a- waye, and brought in to heuynes by their ru- lers. * & my name euer still blasphemed: say- eth y Lorde. Therfore that my people maye knowe my name, therfore I say in that daye they shall knowe it, that I am he y do spea- ke. I saye euen I. * O howe bewtifull are y fete of the Embassitoure, y byngeth y mel- sage fro y mountayne, & pclameth peace: that byngeth the good tydynges, and preacheth health, and sayeth vnto Sio: Thy God is y kyng. Thy watchmen shall lyft vp theyr voyce: with lowde voyce shall they preach of hym: for they shall * se hym present, whē the Lorde shall conuerte Sion.

* Be glad, with thankes grynge. O y desolate Jerusalem, & reioyce together: for the Lorde hath cōfōrted hys people, he hath de- liuered Jerusalem. The Lorde hath made ba- re hys holy arme, and shewed it forth in the syght of all the Gentiles, * & all the endes of the earth hath sene the sauinge health of our God. * A wake, awake, get pon out fro then- ce and touche no vncleane thyng. Go oute from amonge soche. And be cleane, that bea- re the vessell of the Lorde. For ye shall not escape by rennyng: ner by flyge awaye: but * the Lorde shall go before you, and the God of Israel shall gather you together.

Beholde, my seruauit shall deale wpylly, therfore shall he be magnified, exalted & gre- atly honoured. Lyke as the multitude shall wondre vpō hym, because hys face shall be so deformed & not as a mā's face, hys * betwepe lyke no man: Euen so shall the multitude of the Gentyles loke vnto hym, & kynges shall shut their mouthes before him. * For they y haue not bene tolde of hi, shall se hym, & they y herde nothyng of hym, shall beholde him.

The liij. Chapter.

The propherye cōfidently of the passyon of our Saignour Iesus Chyrt.

At who hath y geueneredde vnto the thyng we haue hearde: O to whom is the arme of the Lorde knowen? For he dyd growe before the Lorde lyke as a ba- unche, & as a rote in a drye grounde, * he hath nether betwepe nor sauoure. When we shall loke vpon hym, there shall be no saynesse: we shall haue no lust vnto him. * He is despysed & abhored of men, he is soch a man as is full of sorowe & as hath good experience of infirmities. We haue reckoned hym so vyle, that we hysdoure faces from hym, y^e he was despised & therefore we regarded him not. Howbeit: he only hath taken on hym all our infirmities, & borne our paynes. Yet we dyd iudge hym, as though he were plagued & cast dow-ne of God: and punished * where as he (not wytthstanding) was wounded for our offences, and smitten for our wickednes. For y^e chastylement of oure peace was layde vpon him, and wth hys stripes we are healed.

* As for vs, we haue gone all astraye (like shepe) every one hath turned his owne way.
But the Lorde hath heaped together vpon him the iniquitie of vs all. He suffered violence and was euell intreated, & dyd not yet open his mouth. * He shalbe led as a shepe to be slayne, yet shal he be as still as a labe before the shearer, and not open hys mouth. He was had awaye from prison hys cause not herde, and wthout eny iudgement: whose generacyon yet who maye nombze? he was cut of from the grounde of the lyvinge.
Whych punishment dyd go vpon hym, for the transgression of my people, whych in deade had deserued that punishment. * Hys grauie was geue hym wth the condemned, and wth the ryche man at hys deeth. *
Where as he dyd neuer violence ner vnryght, neither hath there bene eny disceatfullnesse in hys mouth.

* Yet hath it pleased the Lorde thus to byste hym wth plagues, and to smyte hys wth infirmities, that when he had made his soule an offering for synne, he myght se lōge lastyng seide. And thys deupee of the Lorde shal prosper in hys hande. With tranayle & laboure of hys soule, shal he optayne frute, and he shal be satisfied * by the knowledge of hym whych is my ryghteous seruant he shal iustifie the multitude, for he shal beare awaye theyr synnes. Therefore wyl I geue hym the multitude for hys parte, and he shal deuyde the spoyle wth the strongest because he geueth ouer hys soule to deeth, * and is reckened amonge the transgressours, whych neuertheless hath take awaye the syn-nes of the multitude, and made intercessyon for the mysdoers.

The liiiij. Chapter.

Of the grete dominion of Chyrt. The in-dignacyon of God endureth but a short space, but hys mercy is euerlastyng.

* I am glad now, * thou bar^e that bea-rest not, reioyce, synge and be mere. For thou that art not wth chyldre:
For y^e desolate hath moo chyldre, the the mared wyfe, sayeth y^e Lorde. Make thy fetters wyder, and sprede out the bagynges of thyne habitacyon: spare not, laye forth thy cordes, and make fast thy shakles: for y^e shalt be multiplied on the ryght syde & on the left, and thy seide shal haue the Gentyles in possession and dwell in the desolate cyties.

Feare not, for thou shalt not be confounded:
Be not ashamed, for thou shalt not come to confusion. For thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth, & shalt not remembre the di-shonoure of thy widowhead. For he y^e made the, shal be thy Lorde * a husbnde (whose name is the Lorde of hostes) and thy redemer.
Shal be euen the holy one of Israel, the Lorde of the whole worlde. For the Lorde hath called the, beyng as a desolate sorowfull woman, & as a younge wyfe that hath broken her wedlocke: sayeth the Lorde.

* A lytle while haue I forsake the, but wth grete mercyfullnesse shal I take the vpon me. Wth I was angry, I hysde my face fro y^e for a lytle season, but thow euerlastyng mercy haue I pardoned the, sayeth the Lorde thyne auenger. * And this is vnto me as the water of Noe: for lyke as I haue sworne y^e wyl not bringe the water of Noe eny more vpon the worlde: * so haue I sworne that I wyl neuer be angry wth the, ner reprove y^e.
The mountaynes shal remoue, and the hylles shal fall downe: but my louyng kyndnesse shal not moue, and the bonde of my peace shal not fall downe from the, sayeth the Lorde thy mercyfull Lorde. Beholde y^e pore, ouerwhelmed wth tēpest & wthout co-forte. I will make thy walles of pcyous stones, & thy foundacyon of Saphyres, thy wy-dowes of Chyrtal, thy gates of fyne cleare stone, & all thy borders of pleasaunt stones.

* Thy chyldren shal all be taught of God, & I wyl geue the plectousnes of peace. In ry-ghteousnes shalt thou be grounded, & be far re from oppressyō: for the whych thou nedest not be afrayed, neither for hynderaunce, for it shal not come nyr the. Beholde, the alcaunt that was farre from me, shal dwell wth y^e: & he that toyneth batayle agens the shal perith. Beholde, I make the smith that bloweth the coales in the fyre, & he maketh a wea-pen after hys hady worcke. I make also the waster to destroye: but all the weapons that are made agaynst the, shal not prospere. *
And as for all tūges, y^e shal respyte y^e in iud-gement, thou shalt overcome them, & cōdēne them. Chys is the heritage of the Lordes ser-uantes, and their ryghteousnes commeth of me, sayeth the Lorde.

The lv. Chapter.

A consolacyon and comferte to the people. The true and profet of the worde of God.

* Come to the waters all ye, y^e A be thursty, and ye that haue no money. Come, bye, y^e maye haue: cate. Come, bye wyne and mycke, wthout any money, or money worth. Wherfore do ye lape out

out poure money, for the thyng that sedeth not, & spende poure labour aboute y^e thyng that satisfieth you not. But herken herken rather vnto me, & ye shal eate of y^e best, and poure soule shal haue her pleasure in plenteousnes. Enclyne your eares, and come vnto me, take hede (I saye) & your soule shal lyue.
* For I will make an euerlastyng couena-unt wth you, euē y^e sure mercyes of Dauid.

Beholde, I gaue him for a wytnesse among the folke, for a wytnesse and captayne vnto the people. Lo, thou shalt call an unknowne people: & a people that had not knowledge of the, shal runne vnto the: because of the Lorde thy God, and the holy one of Israel, whych glorifyeth y^e. Seke the Lorde, while he may be founde, and call vpon hym while he is
nye. * Let y^e vngodly man forsake his owne wayes, & the vnryghteous hys owne ymagyngs, and turne agayne vnto the Lorde: so shal he be mercyfull vnto hym: and to oure God, & for he is very ready to forgieue.

For thus sayeth the Lorde: my thoughtes are not poure thoughtes, and poure wayes are not my wayes, but as farre as the hea-uens are hyer then the earth, so farre do my wayes excede yours, and my thoughtes yours. * And lyke as the rayne & snowe cōmeth downe from heauē, and returneth not thither agayne, but watereth y^e earth, ma-keth it frutefull and grene, that it maye ge-ue corne vnto the sower, and breade to hym that eateth. So the worde also that cometh out of my mouth shal not turne agayne bode vnto me, but shal accōplysh the my wyl & prosper in y^e thyng wherto I sende it. And to shall ye goe forth wth ioye, & be led wth peace.

The mountaynes & hylles shal synge wth you for ioye, & all the trees of the felde shal clappe theyr hādes. For thornes, there shal growe fyre trees, & the thyrre tre in the steade of byers. And thys shal be done to y^e prayse of the Lorde, and for an euerlastyng token, that shal not be taken awaye.

The lvj. Chapter.

An exhortacyon to iudgement and ryghteousnes, to the spiritual keepyng of the Sabbath. Agaynst shepherdes that deuoure theyr flock.

Thus sayeth the Lorde. * Kepe equite, and do ryght, for my sa-uyng health shal come shortly, & my ryghteousnes shal be opened. Blessed is y^e mā that doth thys, and the mans chyld whych kepeth the same. * He that taketh hede, that he vnha-lowe not the Sabbath (that is) he that kepeth hym selfe that he do no euil. Then shal not the stranger, whych cleaueth to y^e Lorde, saye: * Alas, the Lorde hath shut me cleane out fro hys people. Neither shal the * gelded mā saye: lo, I am a drye tre. For thus sayeth the Lorde, vnto the gelded that kepeth my Sabbath: Namely, that holdeth greatly of the thyng that please me, and kepeth my couenaunt: vnto them wyl I geue in my housholde and wthin my walles, a better heritage & name, then yf they had bene called sonnes & daughters. * I will geue the an euerlastyng name, y^e shal not perith. Agayne the strangers that stycke to the Lorde, to serue hym, and to loue hys name: * and to be hys seruantes. And all they, whych kepe the selues, that they vnhalowe not the Sabbath, namely, that they fulfyll my couena-unt: them wyl I byngne to my holy moutaine, and make them to yfyll in my house of prayer. Theyr burnt offrynges and sacrificy-ces shalbe accepted vpon myne auter. * For my house shalbe called an house of prayer for all people.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God whych ga-thereth together the scatred of Israel: I will byngne yet another congregacyon to hym.
Come all ye beastes of the felde, that ye may deuoure, all y^e beastes of y^e wodde. * For hys watchmē are all blynde, they haue all together no vnderstandyng, they are all domme dogges, not beyng able to barkke, they are slepy: slegys are they, and lye in sloupyng:
they are chamelelle dogges, that be neuer satisfied. The sheperdes also in lyke maner haue no vnderstandyng, * but every man turneth his awnewaye, every one after his aw-ne couetousnes wth all hys power. * Come (saye they) I wyl fetch wyne, so shal we fyll oure selues, that we maye be dronken.
And do to morowe, lyke as to dāye, yce and moche more.

The lvij. Chapter.

The Jewes are rebuked for theyr inuerye done to Chyrt.

He ryghteous perissheth, and no mā regardeth it in hys hert. Good godly people are take awaye, and no mā cosydereth it. Namely, that the ryghteous is cō-uayed awaye from the wycked. He comme-the into peace, & godlye mē rest in their chābres, and before the godly man goeth peace.
Come hyther therfore ye charmers chyldren,
* ye sonnes of the aduouter and the whore: Wherin take ye your pleasure? vpon who gape ye wth your mouth, & bleare out your tongue? Are ye not chyldren of aduoutry, and a seide of dissimulacyō? Ye make your fyre vnder the oaks, and vnder all grene trees, and ye offe chyldren in the valleys, and dennes of stone. Thy parte shalbe wth the stony rockes by the riuier: yee, euē these shal be thy parte. For there y^e hast poured meat & drinke offryng vnto them. Shulde I delite in that? Thou hast made thy bed vpon hye mountaynes, thou wentest vpryther, and there hast thou slayne sacrifices. * Behynde y^e dozes and postes, hast thou sett vp thy re-membraunce.

The prophete

When thou haddest despised thy selfe to another then me, when thou wētest downe and made thy bed wyder, and wpth those Idols hast thou made a couenaunt, and lo-uedest theyr couches, where thou sawest the. Thou wentest streyght to kynge's wyth oyle & vnerse opntmetes (that is) thou hast sent thy messangers farre of, & yet art thou fallen into the pyt therby. Thou art weery for the multitude of thyne awne wayes, yet saydest thou neuer: I wyll leaue of. Thou hast had p lye p thy handes wrought, & therfore thou art carelesse. For when wylt thou be abashed or feare, seynge thou hast broken thy promyse, and remembrest not me, nether hast me in thyne hert. Thynkest thou, that I also wyll holde my peace (as a fore tyme) that thou fearest me not. Pee, verely I wyl declare thy goodnes and thy woꝝkes, but they shall not profyte the: when thou cryest, let thy chosen heape deliuer the. But the wynde shall blowe them furth, and vante shall take the all away. Neuertheles, they that put their trust in me, shall inheret the lande, & haue my holy byll in possession. And therfore thus he sayeth: * Make playne, make playne, & cense the strete, take vp the stoblyng blocks out of the waye that ledeth to my people. For thus sayeth the hye & excellent, euen he that dwelleth in cuerlastyngnesse, whose name is the holy one: * I dwell hye aboue and in the sanctuary, and wpth hym also, that is of a cōtrite and humble spete do I dwell. I maye heale a troubled mynde, and a cōtrite herte. * For I chynge not euer, & am not wroth wyth out ende. But the blasfym goeth from me, and is included in the body, and I made the breath. I am wroth wyth hym for his couctousnes, I synpte him, I hyde me, and am angrey, when he turneth him selfe, & foloweth the by waye of his awne hert. I haue leen his wayes and I heale hym. I lede him and restore to hym cōfozte, and to those that were soꝝ for him I make the frutes of thankesgeyng, that he maye saye. Peace peace * vnto them that are farre of, and to them that are nye, sayth the Lorde, and I make hym whole. But the wycked are lyke the ragynge see, that canot rest, whose water someth wpth the myre & grauel. Enē so the * wycked haue no peace, sayeth God.

The. lviij. Chapter.

The Lorde (by the mouth of the prophete) re- proueth the people for theyr saynges, wherby they are ful of hypocryse.

Rye * now, as loude as p cast. Leauē not of, lye vp thy voyce lyke a trōpet, & shewe my people theyr offences, & the house of Jacob their synnes. For they se- ke me daylye, & wyll knowe my wayes, enē as it were a people that byd ryght, and had not forsake the statutes of the Lord. They argue wpth me concernynge ryght iudge- ment, and will be nye vnto God. * Wher- fore fast we (saye they) and thou seest it not: we put our lynes to strytenes, and thou re- gardest it not.

* Beholde, whē ye fast, poure lust remayneth styll: for ye do no lesse vyolence to your detters: lo, ye fast to stryfe and debate, & to synpte with poure byll without mercy. Now ye shall not fast thus that your voyce myght be heard aboue. * Thynke ye this fast plea- seth me, that a man shulde chasten him selfe for a daye, and to wythe his head aboute lyke an hoope, & to lye vpon the earth in an be- ary cloth. Shulde that be called fastynge, or a daye that please the Lorde? Woth not this fastynge rather please me, that thou loose him out of bondage, that is in thy da- uer: that thou breake the ooth of wycked bargaynes, that thou lett the oppressed go free, and take from the all maner of burthen: * to deale thy bread to the hungry, & bringe the poore wandryng, home into thy house, when thou seest the naked & thou couer him, and hyde not thy face from thy neyghboure (and blyssed not thyne awne saynges.)

* Then shall thy lyght breake forth as the moonyng, & thy health shal be as the ryghte: thy righte outnesse shall go before the, and the glory of the Lorde shall embrace the.

* Then yf thou callest, the Lorde shall an- swere the: yf thou cryest, he shall saye: here I am. Pee, yf thou layest awaye fro the thy bur- then, and holdest thy fingers, & cease from blasphemous talkinge, * yf thou hast cōpas- syon vpon the hōgre, & refreischest the trou- bled soule: Then shall thy lyght sprynge out in the darcknesse, & thy darcknesse shal be as p noone day. The Lorde shall euer be thy guyd, & satisfie the desyre of thyne herte in p tyme of drougthe, & fyll thy bones w mary. Thou shalt be lyke a fresh waterd garden * & lyke the fountayne of water, p neuer leaueth rū- nyng. Then the places that haue euer bene waste, shal be builded of the: there shalt thou laye a foundaciō for many kynredes. Thou shalt be called the maker vp of hedges, & the buylder agayne of the waye of p Sabbath.

Pee, yf thou turne thy fete in the * Sab- bath, so that thou do not the thyng which please thy self in my holy daye: & thou call the pleasaunt, holy, and glorious Sabbath of the Lorde, and that thou gyue him the ho- noure: so that thou do not after thyne awne ymaginacion, nether seke thyne awne wyll, ner speake thyne awne wordes. Then shalt thou haue thy pleasure in the Lorde, and I wyll carpe the hye aboue the earth, and fede the wyth the herbage of Jacob thy fa- ther: for p Lorde's awne mouth hath so pro- mised.

The

The. lix. Chapter.

The Lorde is myghtye to saue, and readye to heare our requestes.

Behold * the Lorde's hande is not so shortened that it can not helpe, nether is his eare so stopped that it maye not heare. But * poure mysdedes haue separated you from poure God, & your synnes hyde his face fro you, that he heareth you not. For poure handes are defyled wpth bloude, & poure fyngers w vnryghteousnesse: your lypes speake lyes, and poure tonge setteth oute wycked- nes. No man regardeth ryghteousnes, and no man iudgeth truly. Euerly man hopeth in vayne thynges, and ymagineth disceate: conceauneth weerynesse, and byngeth forth euell. They brede cockatrice egges, and we- aue the spyders webb: who so eateth of the- ir egges, dyeth. But yf one treade vpon the, there cometh vp a serpent. Theyr webb maketh no clothe, and they maye not couer them wpth their labours. Their dedes are p dedes of wyckednes, and the worcke of rob- bery is in their handes. * Theyr fete rūne to euell, and they make haste to shed innocent bloude. Theyr counsels are wicked counsels, harme * and destruccyon are in their way- es. But the waye of peace they knowe not. In theyr goinges is no equyte: their wayes are so croked, that whosoever goeth theryn, knoweth of no peace.

And this is the cause that equite is so far- re from vs, and that righte outnesse cometh not nye vs. * We loke for lyght, lo, it is dar- ckenesse: for the moonyng synne, se, we wal- ke in the darcke. * We grope lyke the blynde vpon the wall, we grope euen as one p bath none eyes. We stamble at the none daye, as though it were toward nyght: in the fallyn places, lyke me that are halfe deed. We roa- re all lyke Beers, and mourne styll lyke do- ues. We loke for equyte, but there is none: for health, but it is farre from vs. For oure offences are many before the, & oure synnes testifie agaynst vs. Pee, we must confesse p we offende, & knowledge that we do amys- se: Namely, transgresse & dissemble agaynst the Lorde, and fall awaye from oure God: vlyng presumptuous, and traytorous y- maginacions, and castinge false matters in oure herres. And therfore is equite gone a- lyde, and ryghteousnes standeth farre of: treuth is fallen downe in the strete, and the thyng that is playne and open, maye not be shewed. Pee, the treuth is taken awaye, and he that refrayneth him selfe from euell, must be spoyled.

Whē the Lord sawe thys, it displeased him fore, p there was no equite. He sawe also, p there was no mā, ryghtwise, & he wōdered p ther was no man to helpe hym. Wherfore he helde hym by his awne power, and he su- stayned him by his awne righte outnesse. * He put ryghteousnes vpo him for a brest plate, a set the helmet of health vpon his head. He put on wrath in steade of clothyng, & toke gelously about hym for a cloke: (lyke as whē a man goeth forth wrathfully to recompen- ce his enemyes, & to be auēged of his aduer- saries.) Namely, p he myght recompence & rewarde the flādes, wher thowowe the na- me of the Lorde myght be feared, fro the syng of the Sunne: and his magesty, vnto the goinge downe of the same.

For he shall come as a violet waterstrea- me, wher the wynde of the Lorde hath mo- ued. * But vnto Sion there shall come a re- demer, and vnto the in Jacob that turne fro wyckednesse, sayeth the Lorde. I wyll make thys couenaunt wpth them (sayth the Lorde:) My spete that is vpo the, and the woꝝ- des which I haue put in thy mouth, shall ne- uer go out of thy mouth, nor out of p mouth of thy chylders chyldre, fro thys tyme forth for euermore worlde wythout ende sayth p Lorde.

The. lx. Chapter.

A consolaciō and comforte to Ierusalem.

Et the vp by tymes, & be bryght, * Ierusalem: for thy lyght cometh, & the glory of the Lorde is rylen vpo the. For lo, whyle the darcknesse & cloude cou- reth the earth and the people, the Lorde shall shewe p lyght, & his glory shall be sene in p. * The Gentiles shall come to thy lyght, and kynges to the bryghtnes p spryngeth forth vpo the. * Lye vpo thyne eyes, & loke rounde aboute the: All these gather the selues, & co- me to the. Thy Sonnes shall come vnto the fro farre, and thy daughters shall gather the selues to the on euery syde. Then thou shalt se thys: and be glorious, thou shalt maruell exceedyngly, and thyne hert shalbe opened: when the abundaunce of the see shalbe con- uerted vnto the (that is) when the ryches of the Gentiles shall come vnto the. The mul- titude of Camels shall couer the, the drome- daries of Madian & Epha. * All they of Sa- ba shall come, byngynge golde & incense, & shewing the prayle of the Lord. * All the catell of Cedar shalbe gathered vnto the, p rāmes of Sabaioth shall scrue p, to be offered acceptablye vpo myne auter, * which I ha- ue chosen, & in the house of my glory which I haue garnished. But what are these, that sic here lyke the cloudes, & as the douds styng to the wyndowes?

The fies also shall wayte for me, & special- ly the byppes of Charis: that they maye byngge thy sonnes fro farre, & theyr syluer & their golde with them, vnto the name of the Lorde thy God, vnto the holy one of Israel, that hath glorified the. * Strangers shall

by buyde

Chyldre by thy walles, & they kynges shall do the scrupce. For when I was angrie, I smote the: and of my mercye, I pardoned: * Thy gates shall stand open ityll both daye and nyght, and neuer be shut: that the hooſte of the Gentiles maye come, and that they kynges maye be brought vnto the. For euery people and kyngdome that scructh not, shall perſhe, & be destroyed wth utter destruction. The glory of libanus shall come vnto the. The fpre trees, Boxes and Cedres together, to garniſhe the place of my Sanctuary, for I will glorifye the place of my ſete.

Moreover, thoſe ſhall come kneeling vnto the, that haue veyed the: and all they that deſpyſed the, ſhall fall downe at thy ſote.

Thou ſhalt be called the cytie of the Lorde, Sion the cytie of the holy one of Iſrael. Becauſe thou haſt bene forſaken and hated, ſo that noman wot thowowe the: I will make the glorious for euer and euer, and toful thowowe out all poſterities: * Thou ſhalt ſucke the mylk of the Gentiles, and kynges breaſtes ſhall fede the. And thou ſhalt know, that I the Lorde am thy Sauoure and redeemer, the myghty one of Jacob. For braſſe, will I gene the golde, and for prou ſpuler: for wode braſſe, & for ſtones prou. I will tozneyne thyne oppreſſion into peace, & thyne exatryons into ryghteouſnes. Violence and robbery ſhall neuer be heard of in thy lande, neither harme and destruction wth in thy borders. Thy walles ſhall be called healeth, and thy gates the prayſe of God. * The Sunne shall neuer be thy daye lyght, and the lyght of the Moone ſhall neuer thyne vnto the: but the Lorde him ſelfe ſhall be thyne euerlaſtyng lyght, and thy God ſhall be thy glory.

* Thy Sunne ſhall neuer go downe, and thy Moone ſhall not be hydd, for the Lorde hym ſelfe ſhall be thy euerlaſtyng lyght, and thy ſowwfull dayes ſhall be ended. Thy people ſhall be all ryghteous, and poſſeſſe the lande euer: the floure of my plantynge, the worke of my handes, wherof I will reioyce. Thy pongest and leaſt ſhall growe in to a thouſande, and the ſimpleſt in to a ſtronger people. I the Lorde ſhall ſhortly bringe this thinge to paſſe in his tyme.

C The. lxxij. Chapter.

C The prophete that Chriſt ſhall be annoynted and ſent to preache.

I the ſpyete of the Lorde God is vpon me, for the Lorde hath anoynted me, and ſent me, to preache good tydynges vnto the poore, that I myght bynde. by the woudded hertes, * that I myght preache delyuerance to the captiue, and open the prizon to them that are boſide: that I myght declare the acceptable yeare of the Lorde, and the daye of the vengeance of oure God: * that I myght comforte all they that are in heuynelle, that I myght geue vnto them ſmourne in Sion, that I myght geue I ſaye, beauty in the ſteade of aſhes, tofulf oymment for ſpyghing, pleaſant raymet for an beympnde: that they myght be called trees of ryghteouſneſſe, a plantynge of the Lorde for hym to reioyce in.

They ſhall bynde the longe rough wyl-derneſſe, & ſett by the olde deſerte. They ſhall repayre the waſte places, & ſoche as haue bene voyde thowowe out many generacions. ſtraungers ſhall ſtande and fede your caſtel, and the Alcautes ſhall be your plowme & dyellers of your vynges. * But ye ſhall be named the preſtes of the Lorde, and me ſhall call you the ſeruauntes of oure God. Ye ſhall enioye the goodes of the Gentiles, and triumphe in their ſubſtance. For your greete reproſe you ſhall haue double toye, and for ſhame, ſhall they haue toye of their porcyon. For they ſhall haue double poſſeſſion in their laide, and euerlaſtyng toye ſhall be wth the.

For I the Lorde, which loue ryght and hate robbery (though it were offered me) ſhall make the: workes full of faythfulneſſe & make an euerlaſtinge coneuant wth them.

Their ſede alſo and their generacion ſhall be knowe amonge the Gentiles, and amonge the people. All they that ſe the, ſhall knowe that they are the hre blessed ſede of the Lorde. And therfore * I am toful in the Lorde, & my ſoule reioyſeth in my God. * For he hath put vpon me the garment of ſaluacion, & conered me wth the malle of ryghteouſneſſe. * He ſhall decke me lyke a bydegrome, and as a byde ſhall hee bye apparell vpon her. For lyke as the groude byngeth forth frute, & as the garden ſhoteth forth ſede: ſo ſhall the Lorde God cauſe righteouſneſſe, and prayſe to God to flozpyth forth, before all the heathen.

I haue ſet watchmen vpon thy walles (Jeruſalem) which ſhall neſther ceaſe daye nor night to preache the Lorde. And ye alſo ſhall remembre the Lorde ye ſhall not kepe him cloſe, nor leaue to ſpeake of him, vntyll Jeruſale be ſett by, & made the prayſe of the worlde. The Lorde hath ſwozne by his right hande & by his ſtronger arme, that from hence forth he will not geue thy corne to be meate for thyne enemyes, ner thy vyne (wherin ſhalt labour) to be drinke for the ſtraungers. But they that haue gathered in the corne, ſhall eate it, & geue thanckes to the Lorde: & they ſhall bozne in the wyne, ſhall drinke it in the court of my Sanctuary.

C The redemption promiſed to the people.

What is he thys, ſ cometh fro Edom, wth redd coloured clothes of Boſtra: (which is ſo coſtly cloth) & cometh in ſo myghtylye wth all his ſtrength. I am he that teacheth ryghteouſneſſe, & am of power to helpe. Wherefore then is thy clothyng read, & thy raymet lyke his that treadeth in the wyne preſſe: I haue troaden the preſſe my ſelfe alone, and of all people there is not one wth me. Thus will I treade downe myne enemyes in my wrath, and ſet my ſete vpon them in my indignacyon. And their bloude ſhall be ſpronge vpon my cloothes, and ſo will I ſtayne all my rayment. * For the daye of vengeance is aſſigned in my hert, & the peare wth my people ſhall be delyuered, is come. I looked aboute me, and there was no man to ſhewe me any helpe, I maruayled ſ noman helde me by. Then I helde me by myne awne arme, & my ſeruettneſſe ſuſteyned me. And thus will I treade downe y people in my wrath, & bathe the in my diſpleaſure: and vpon the earth will I laye their ſtrength.

I will declare the goodneſſe of the Lorde, ye and the prayſe of the Lorde for all that he hath geuen vs, for the greete good ſ he hath done for Iſrael: which he hath gyuen them of his awne fauoure, & accordynge to ſ multitude of his lounge kindneſſes. For he ſayde: Theſe no doute are my people, & no thynnyng chylde, and ſo he was their ſauoure. In their troubles he was alſo troubled w them, and the angell ſ went forth from hys preſence, delyuered the: Of very loue & kyndneſſe ſ he had vnto them, redeemed he the. he hath bozne them, and carped them wth euer, ſence ſ worlde beganne. But after they prouoked him to wrath & veyed his holy mynde he was their enemye, & fought agaynſt them him ſelfe. Yet remembred Iſraell the olde tyme of Moſes & his people. * ſayinge wher is he ſ brought the from y water of the ſee, * wth the ſ ſead his ſhepe: wher is he ſ hath geuen his holy ſpyete amonge them: he ledde the by the ryght hāde of Moſes wth hys glorious arme: demyng y water before the (wherby he gat him ſelfe an euerlaſtinge name) he ledde the in the depe, as an hoſe is led in y playne, ſ they ſhulde not ſtole, as a tame beaſt goeth in the felde: and the breath gyuen of God gyueth him reſt.

Thus (God) haſt thou led thy people, to make thy ſelfe a glorious name wth all.

Loke downe tyeen fro heauen, & beholde the dwellynge place of thy Sanctuary & thy glory. Howe is it, ſ thy gelouſy, thy ſtrength, the multitude of thy mercyes & thy lounge kyndneſſe, will not be entreated of vs: Pet art thou our father. For Abrahā knoweth vs not, nether is Iſrael acquainted w vs. But ſ Lorde art our father & redeemer, & thy name is euerlaſtyng. O Lorde, wherfore haſt ſ led vs out of thy waye: * Wherefore haſt thou hardened our hertes, ſ we feare the not: Be at one w vs agayne, for thy ſeruantes ſake and for the generacyon of thyne he-rytage. Thy people hath had but lytle of thy Sanctuary in poſſeſſion, for oure enemyes haue troden downe the holy place. And we were thyne fro the begynnyng: when thou waſt not their Lorde, for they haue not called vpon thy name.

The selesyte of Jerusalem, and the callinge of the heathen.

I hepe like me, that hytherto haue not asked for me: they fynde me, & hyther to haue not sought me. * I haue sayde I am here, I am here. I am founde of a people that neuer called vpon my name. For thus longe haue I euer holden out my hādes to an vnfaithfull people, & go not the ryght waye, but after their a wne ymaginacions: To a people that is euer despyng me to my face. * They make their oblacions in gardens, and their smoke vpon aulter of byrke, they lurke amonge the graues, and lye in the denues all nyght. * They eat swynnes fleche, & vnclene bzyth is in their vessels. If I comest nye them, they saye touch me not, for I am holper then thou. All these men when I am angrie, shall be turned to smoke & fyre, that shall burne for euer. Beholde it is wyrtten before my face, & shall not be forgotten, but recompensed. * I shall rewarde it them into their bosome: I meane poure mysdedes, and the mysdedes of poure fathers together (sayeth the Lorde) which haue made their smokes vpon ymountaynes, and blasphemed me vpon the hylls: therefore will I measure their olde dedes into their bosome againe. Moreover, thus sayeth the Lorde: * lyke as when one wolde gather holy grapes, men saye vnto hym: bzeake it not of for it is holy: & euen so wyl I do also for my seruauntes sakes, that I wyl not destroye them all. But I wyl take a sede out of Jacob, & out of Iuda one, to take posselsion of my hyll. My chosē shall possesse these thyn-ges, & my seruauntes shall dwell there. Barshalbe a shepfolde, & * the valley of Achor shall gene p stallynge for the catell of my people, & feare me. * But as for you, ye are they I haue forsaken the Lorde, and forgotten my holy hill. Ye haue set vp an aulter vnto Jupiter, & geuen ryche byrnycke offerynges vnto the planettes. Therefore wyl I noybzre you with the swerde, & ye shall be destroyed all together. For when I called, no man gaue me answer: when I spake, ye hearkened not vnto me, but dyd wyckednes before myne eyes, and chose the thynge I pleased me not.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, my seruauntes shall eate, but ye shall haue hunger: Beholde, my seruauntes shall byrnycke, but ye shall suffre thurste. Beholde, my seruauntes shall be mery, but ye shall be confounded. Beholde, my seruauntes shall reioyce for very quyetnesse of herte: But ye shall crye for sozow of hert, and complayne for veracy of mynde. Poure name shall you leaue accursed amonge my chosē, for God the Lorde shall slaye you, and call his seruauntes by another name. * Who so reioyleth vpon earth, shall reioyle in p true God. And who so sweareth vpon earth, shall sweare in the true God. For y olde enemye shall be forgotten, and taken awayne out of my syght. * For lo, I shall make a newe heauen, and a newe earth. And as for y olde, they shall neuer be thought vpon, ner kepte in mynde: but y Lorde sayth be glad and euermore reioyle, for the thynge, that I shall do.

For why: Beholde, I shall make a topfull Jerusalem, and his people topfull, yee, I my selfe will reioyle wyth Jerusalem, & be glad w my people. * And the voyce of wepyng and waylyng shall not be herde in her from thence forth. There shall nether be chyldre ner olde mā, that haue not their full dayes. But when the chyldre cometh to an hōdzyeth yeare olde, it shall dye. And yf he p is an hundred yeare of age do wronge, he shall be curled. * They shall buyde houses, & dwell in the: they shall plante vyneyardes, & eate p frute of them. They shall not buyde, and another possesse: they shall not plant and another eate: * But the lyfe of my people shall be lyke a tre, and so shall the worke of their hādes.

My chosē shall lye longe, they shall not labour, & wayne, ner begett wyth trouble: for they are the hye blessed sede of the Lorde, and their frutes wyth them: And it shall be, that oz euer they call, I shall answer them. Whyle they are yet but thynkynge howe to speake, I shall heare them. * The wolff and the lambe shall fede together, and the lyon shall eate haye lyke the bullock. * But earth shall be the serpentys meate. There shall no man hurte ner slaye another, in all my holy hyll, sayeth the Lorde.

The lxxvi. Chapter.

God dwelleth not in temples made by mannes hande. He despyeth sacrifices done without me: he is a sayth. God comforteth them that are troubled for his sake. Amonge the chypren, the Sabbath is conspuall.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: * Heauen is my seate, & the earth is my fore stole. Where shall nowe p house stande, that ye wyl buyde vnto me? And where shall be the place, that I wyl dwell in? As for these thynge, my hande hath made them all, & they are all created, sayeth the Lorde. * Whych of them shall I then regarde? Euen him that is poze and of a lowly troubled spete, & standeth in awe of my wordes. For who so slayeth an ore for me, doth me so greate dishonoure, as he that killeth a mā. He that killeth a shepe for me, kneteth a dogge. He that byrnygeth me meat offrynges, offret swynes bloude: Who so maketh me a memoypall of incense, prayseth p thynge that is vnyghe. Yet take they soch wayes in hande, and their soule de-lyteth in these abhominacions.

Therefore wyl I also haue pleasure in laughynge them to scozne, and p thynge that they feare, wyl I byrnyge vpon them. * For when I called, no man gaue answer: when I spake, they wolde not heare: But did wyckednesse before myne eyes, and chose p thynge I displease me. Heare the worde of God all ye that feare the thynge which he speaketh. Poure bzythzen that hate you, and cast you out for my names sake, saye: The Lorde is haynouse agaynst vs, but you shall se him in toye when they shall be confounded.

Then shall be heard agret noyse fro the cytle and the temple, the voyce of the Lorde, p wyl rewarde, & recompence his enemyes: lyke as when a wyfe byrgeth forth a man chyldre, oz euer she suffre the payne of p byrth & anguysh of p traunple. Who euer hearde oz sawe soche thynge, doth the groude beare in one dape: oz are the people bozne all at once, as syon trauepled in chyldre byrth and bare her sonnes: For thus sayeth the Lorde.

Am I he that maketh other to beare, and beare not my selfe? Am not I he that beareth and maketh baren: sayeth the Lorde. Reioyle wyth Jerusalem, and be glad wyth her, all ye that loue her. * Be ioyfull wyth her, all ye p mourned for her. For ye shall sucke comforte out of her bzythes, and be satisfied. Ye shall taste, and haue delyte in the plectoushelle of her power. For thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I wyl lett peace into her, lyke a water floude, and the myght of the heythen lyke a flowynge streame. The shall ye sucke, ye shall be bozne vpon her sydes, and be ioyfull vpon her knees. For lyke as a chyldre is comforted of his mother, so shall I comforte you, and ye shall be comforted in Jerusalem. And whē ye se thys, poure herte shall reioyle * and poure bones shall flozpe lyke an herbe.

Thus shall the hande of the Lorde be knowne amonge hys seruauntes, and hys indignacyon amonge hys enemyes. For behold, the Lorde shall come with fyre, & hys charact shall be lyke a whoyle wynde, that he maye recōpence his vengeance in his wrath and hys indignacyon with the flame offyre. For the Lorde shall iudge all flesh wyth the fyre and with his swerde, and there shall be a greate nombze slayne of the Lorde. Soch as haue made them selues holy and cleane in the gardens, & those p haue eaten swynes flech, in pce, and other abhominacions, shall be taken awayne together, sayeth the Lorde. * For I wyl come to gather all people & tonges wyth their workes and ymaginacions: these shall come, and se my gloz. Vnto them shall I geue a token, and sende certayne of them (that be deliuered) amonge the Gentiles: in to Cilycia, Affryca, and Lydia (where men can hāde bowes) into Italye and also Greke lande.

The fles farte of, that haue not herde p speake of me, and haue not sene my gloz, shall preache my pzaple amonge the Gentiles, and shall byrnyge all poure bzythzen for an offryng vnto the Lorde, out of all the people, vpon horses, charrettes and horse lyters, vpon shules and cartes to Jerusalem my holy hyll (sayeth the Lorde) lyke as the chyldre of Israel byrnyge the offryng in cleane vessels, to the house of the Lorde.

And I shall take out certayne of them for to be prestes and leuites, sayeth the Lorde. For lyke as the newe heauen and the newe earth which I wyl make, shall be fast stablified by me: (sayeth the Lorde) So shall poure sede and poure name cōpnyue, and there shall be a newe Moone for the other, and a newe Sabbath for the other, and all fleshe shall come to worshippe before me (sayeth the Lorde) And they shall go forth and loke vpon the carpyons of them that haue transgressed agaynst me. * For their wormes shall not dye, nether shall their fyre be quenched, & all fleshe shall abhorre them.

The ende of the boke of the prophete Esay.

The prophete

The booke of the prophete Jeremie.

The fyrst Chapter.

The booke of Jeremie, and in what tyme he prophesied. He receiveth hym selfe & would refuse the office of a prophete, because he is younge and tender. He is taught of the Lorde, & becometh bold. God openeth vnto hym, that the destruction of the Jewes, by the Babylonians, is at hande. Jeremie is commaunded to speake the worde of God vnto the Jewes, without feare.

I Here are the sermons of Jeremie the sonne of helkiah the prest, one of them that dwelt at Bethleem in the lande of Beniamin: when the Lorde had fyrst spoken with him, in the tyme of Josiah the sonne of Amon kynge of Juda, in the xiiij. yere of his reygne: and so durynge vnto the tyme of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, *and vntill the xi. yere of zedekiah the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda were ended: when Jerusalem was taken, even in the fyfth moneth. The worde of the Lorde spake thus vnto me: *Before I fashioned y in thy mothers wombe, I byd knowe the. And as ever thou wast borne, I sanctified y, and ordeyned y, to be a prophete vnto y people. Then sayde I: *O Lorde God, I canne not speake, for I am yet but younge. And the Lorde answered me thus: Saye not so, I am to younge: *For thou shalt goo to all that I shall sende the vnto, & what soeuer I commaunde the, that shalt thou speake. We .not afrayed of their faces, for I am with the, to deluyer the, sayeth the Lorde.

*And with that, the Lorde stretched oute his hande, and touched my mouth, & y same lorde sayde vnto me. Behold, I put my wordes in thy mouth, and beholde thys daye do I set the ouer the people & kyngdomes: that thou mayest rote out, breake of, destroye, & make waste: and y thou mayest buylde vp & plante. After this, the Lorde spake vnto me sayinge: Jeremie, what seyst y? And I sayde: I se a rodde of an almond tree. Then sayde y Lorde vnto me: thou hast sene right, for I wyll make haste spedelye vpon my worde, to perfourme it.

It happened afterwarde, that the Lorde spake to me agayne, and sayde: What seest thou? And I sayde: I do se a secthyng pot, lokynge from out of the north.

Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: *Out of the north shall come a plage vpon all y dwellers of the lande. It is so. *I wyll call all the kyngdomes of y north (sayeth the Lorde). And they shall come, & every one shall sett his seate in the gates of Jerusalem, and in all their walles rounde aboute & in all cyties of Juda. And thowowe the shall I declare my iudgement, vpon all the wyckednesse of those men y haue forsaken me: that haue burnt incense vnto straunge goddes, & worshipped the workes of their awne handes.

*And therfore garde y thy lynes, aryse, and tell the all, that I geue the in commaundement. Feare them not, lest I destroye the before the. *For beholde, this daye do I make the a stronge fenced towne, an yron pylle, and a brasen wall agaynst the whole lande, agaynst the kynges and myghty men of Juda, agaynst the prestes and people of the lande. They shall fyght agaynst the: but they shall not be able to ouercome the for I am with the, to deluyer the, sayeth the Lorde.

The iiij. Chapter.

God rethrayneth his benefices done vnto the Jewes. Agaynst the prestes & prophetes of yerech he contemne & despyse y. The Jewes are destroyed because they forsooke God, & because they ranne to whose huntinge after ydols.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Go thy ways, crye in the eares of Jerusalem, & saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde: I remembre y, for the kyndnesse of thy youth, and because of thy steadfast loue: at the tyme of thy desponsynge, in that thou folowdest me thowowe y wyldernes, in an vntylled lade. Israel was an hallowed thyng vnto the Lorde, and so was his fyrst frutes. *All they y deuoure Israel shall offende: my fortune shall fall vpon the, sayeth the Lorde. Heare therfore the worde of the Lorde, O thou house of Jacob, and all the generacyons of the house of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde.

What vnfaithfulnesse founde youre fathers in me, that they wente so farre awaye frome, fallynge to lightnesse, and beyng so vayne? They thought not in their hertes. Where haue we lest the Lorde, that brought vs oute of the lande of Egypte *that led vs thowowe the wyldernes, thowowe a deserte & rough lande, thowowe a drye and a deadly lande, yee, a lade that no man had gone thowowe, and wherein no man had dwelt. *And when I had brought you into a pleasaunt welbuylded lande, that ye myght enioye the frutes and all the commodities of the same: ye wet forth and despyled my lade, & brought myne herptage to abhominacyon.

The prestes the selues sayde not: Where is the Lorde? They that had y lawe in theyr handes, knewe me not. *The shepherdes offended agaynst me. The prophetes byd seruyce vnto Baal, & folowed such thynges as shall byynge them no profyt.

Wherfore, I am constrained (sayeth the Lorde) to make my chyldeyn vpon you, & vpon youre chylders chyldeyn: so in to y fles of y chylde, and loke well: sende vnto Cedur, take diligent hede: and se, whether such thynges be done there, whether the Gertils the selues deale deale so falsly and vntreuly w their goddes, (which yet are no goddes in dede) But my people hath geue ouer their hye honoure, for a thyng that maye not helpe them.

Beastonyshed (O ye heauens) be afrayde, & abashed at such a thyng, sayeth the Lorde. For my people hath done two euels. They haue forsaken me the well of the water of lyfe, and dygged them pyttes, yee vyle and broken pyttes, that can holde no water. Is Israel a bonde seruaunt, or one of the household? Why then is he so spoyled? Why do they roate and crye then vpon him, as a ypon? They haue made his lande waste, & hye cyties are so brent vp, y there is no man dwellinge in them. Yee, the chylde of Noph and Taphnes haue despyled thy neck.

*Cometh not this vnto the, because thou hast forsaken the Lorde thy God, euer sence he led the by the waye? And what hast thou now to do in the strete of Egypte: to drynke the water of Nilus? Either, what makest y in the waye of Assyria? To drynke water of the flouder? *Thyne awne wickednesse shall reprove the, & thy turnynge awaye shall condemne the: y thou mayest knowe & vnderstande: howe euell and hurtfull a thyng it is, y thou hast forsaken the Lorde thy God, & not feared him, sayeth the Lorde God of hostes.

*I haue euer broke thy yock of olde, & burst thy bondes: yet sayest y, I wyll nomore offend, but (lyke an harlot) y runnest about vpon all hye hilles, & amonge all grene trees, where as I planted the as a noble vyne, & a good rote whose seed is all faithfull. *How art y turned then in to a bytter, vnfrutefull, & straunge grape? Yee, & that so sore: y though thou walte the w Nitrus & make thy selfe to fauoure with that swete smellinge herbe of Borsith: yet in my syght y art stayned wth thy wyckednesse, sayeth the Lorde thy God.

Saye not now: I am not vnclene, and I haue not folowed Baal. *Loke vpon thyne awne wayes in y woddes, valleys and denes: so shalt thou knowe, what y hast done. Thou art lyke a swyft dromedary, y goeth easely his waye: and thy wattonnes is lyke a wyld alle, that vseth the wyldernes, and that snoffeth and bloweth at his wyll. Who can tame the? All they that seke the shall not saye, but fynde the in thyne awne vnclenes. Hepe thou thy fore from nakednes, and thy throte fro thyrst, and without shame thou answerest. So, for I haue loued straungers and them will I folowe.

Lyke as a thefe that is taken with y dede cometh to shame, even so is the house of Israel come to confusyon: the comen people, their kynges and rulers, their prestes & prophetes. *For they saye to a stocke, thou art my father, and to a stone: y hast begotten me yee, they haue turned their backe vpon me, & not their face. *But in the tyme of their trouble, when they saye: Stande vp, and helpe vs, I shall answer the: Where are nowe thy goddes, y thou hast made the? Lett the stonde vp, & helpe the in the tyme of nede: yf they be able. *For loke howe many cyties thou hast (O Juda) so many goddes hast thou also.

Wherfore then will ye goo to lawe with me, seynge yee all are synners agaynst me, sayeth the Lorde? It is but lost labour, that I smyte poure chyldeyn, for they receaue not my correccio. *Poure awne swerde destroyeth poure pyhetes, lyke a deuouringe lyon. O ye people, loke vpon the wounde of y Lorde. Am I then become a wyldernes vnto the people of Israel? or a lande y hath no lyght? Wherfore sayeth my people the: we are Lorde, we will come no more vnto the. Doth a mayden forget her rayment, or a byde her stomacher? But as for my people they haue forget me, dayes innumerable. Why boastest thou thy wayes so hylic (to optayne fauoure there thowowe) when thou hast yee stayned the with blasphemys, and teachest thyne awne wayes.

*Vpon thy wynges is foude the bloude of poore and innocent people, & y not in corners & holes only, but openly in all these places. Yet darrest y saye: I am (without synne & gyltlesse). Cuth, his wrath can not come vpon me. Beholde, I condemne the in iudgement, because thou darrest saye: I haue not offended. And why runnest thou so often to and fro, to chaunge thy wayes? For thou shalt be confounded, as well of Egypte, as of the Assyrians: yee, thou shalt go thy waye from them, and smyte thyne handes together vpon thy head. Because the Lorde doth abhorre y confydence and hope of thyne, and thou shalt not prospere with all.

The iiij. Chapter.

God beyng mercifull calleth vnto repynce his people, which he had forsaken for their who:edome with ydols. He reborteth Israel vnto repentance, ypromysynge them shepherdes that shalde haue the true knowledge of God. The returns of Israel vnto God, confesse yge theyr offence.

Goemly, *when a man putteth awaye his wyfe, and he goeth fro hym & marieth with another, then the questyon is: shalde he resorte vnto her any more after that? Is not this felde then despyled and vnclene? *But as for the, thou hast played the harlot with many louers, yet turne agayne to me, sayeth the Lorde. Lyft vp thyne eyes vnto y hilaulers & loke, yf thou be not despyled with who:edome. Thou hast wayted for the in the streets, and as a murderre in the wyldernes. Thowowe thy who:edome & shamefull blasphemys, is the lande despyled.

*This is y cause, y therayne & eueninge dewe hath ceased. Thou hast gotten the an who:es forehead, and wilt not be ashamed.

The prophete

Of Jeremie.

Fol. lxxiii.

Als woldest thou saye vnto me: O my father, thou art he that hast brought me vp, & led me from my yowth: Wylt thou then put me awaye, & cast me of for ever? Or wilt thou withdrawe thy selfe cleane from me? Neuertheless, thou speakest such wordes, but thou art euer doinge worse and worse.

of their awone frowarde herte.

Then those y^e be of y^e house of Iuda, shall go vnto y^e house of Israel: & they shall come together out of the north, into y^e same lande y^e haue geuen your fathers. I haue thewed also, howe I toke the by bynging but a childe & gaue the a pleasaunt lande for thyne heritage, yee, & a goodly holl of the heathen, & howe I commaunded the, y^e thou shouldest call me father only, and not to thyneke fro me.

But lyke as a woman vnfaithfully sayeth her husbnde, so are ye vnfaithfull vnto me (O ye house of Israel) sayeth the Lorde. And therfore the voyce of the chyldren of Israel was herde on hye, wepinge and waylyng: for they haue despyled their waye, and forgotten God their Lorde.

O ye disobedient chyldren, turne agayne (sayinge: lo, we are thyne, for y^e part the Lorde our God:) And so shall I heale youre backturninges. Truly saynly trusteth be for helth y^e loketh for it in the hylls and in bayne is it sought in the multitude of the mountaynes, but the healeth of Israel stādeth only vpon God our Lorde.

Confusyon hath deuoured oure fathers labour from oure yowth vpon yee, their shepe and bullockes, their sonnes and daughters. So do we also slepe in oure confusyon, and shame couereth vs: for we & oure fathers fro oure yowth vnto this daye haue synned agaynst the Lorde our God, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lorde our God.

The. iij. Chapter.

The true repentance of returnyng to God. He exhorteth to the circumcysion of y^e herte. The destruction of Ierusalem is prophesied, for the malice of their hertes.

Israel, yf y^e wylt turne the, then I turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. And yf y^e wylt put awaye thyne abhominacions out of my syght, y^e shalt not be moued: And shalt swear: The Lord lyueth in truethe, in equyte and ryghteousnesse: and all people shall be fortunable & ioyfull in him. For thus sayeth the Lorde, to all Iuda & Ierusalem: plowe your lande, and sowe not amonge the thornes.

Be circumsyde in y^e Lorde, and cut awaye the foreskyne of youre hertes, all yee of Iuda, and all the indwellers of Ierusalem: that my indignacyō breake not out lyke fyre and byndle, so y^e no man maye quench it, because of the wyckednes of youre ymaginacions.

Preach in Iuda and Ierusalem, crye out and speake: blowe the trompettes in the lande, crye y^e enery mā maye heare gather together, & saye: Gather you together, and we will go in to stryde cyties. Set vp y^e token in Syon, speede you, and make no taryge: for I will bringe a greute plage, and a greute destruction from the north. For the spoyler of the Gentyles is broken vp from his place, as a lyō out of his denne, that he maye make the lande lande waste, and destroy the cyties, so that no man maye dwel therein. Wherefore, gyrd your selues aboute with sacke clothe, mourne, and wepe, for the fearful wrath of the Lorde is not withdrawen from vs.

At the same tyme (sayth the Lorde) the herte of the kynge and of the princes shall be gone, the prestes shall be astonysed, and the prophetes shall be sore afraied. Then sayd I: O Lorde God, hast thou then disceyued this people and Ierusalem, saying: y^e shall haue peace, and now the swearde goeth thorow the thyr lynes: Then shall it be sayde to the people & Ierusalem: a stronge wynde in the hye places of the wyldernesse cometh thorow the waye of my people, but neyther to fan, nor to cleanse.

After that, shall there come vnto me a stronge wynde from those places, and then wyl I also gyue sentence vpon them. For lo, he cometh downe lyke as a cloude, and his charrettes are lyke a storme wynde: his horsemen are swifter then y^e Eagle. Woe vnto vs, for we are destroyed. O Ierusalem, wash thyne hert fro wickednesse, that thou mayest be helped. How long shall thy nosom thoughtes remaine with the?

For a voyce from Dan and from the hyl of Ephraim speaketh out, and telleth of a destruction. Remembre y^e hepten, and gyue Ierusalem warnyng, and preache vnto her, that watchers ouer her are comyng from far countreys. They haue cryed out agaynst y^e cities of Iuda. And they haue beset her aboute in euery place lyke as the watchmen in the feld: for they haue prouoked me to wrath, sayth the Lorde.

Thy wayes and thy thoughtes, haue brought the vnto this, such is thyne owne wyckednesse and disobedience: and because it is a bytter thing, it hath strikē the to y^e hert. Ah my bely, ah my bely, (shalt thou cry) how is my hert so sore, my hert pateth within me: I cannot be styll, for I haue herde the crying of the trompettes, and peales of warre.

They crye: murther vpon murther, the hole lande shall perishe. Immediatlye, my tentes were destroyed, and my hangynges in the twynkelyng of an eye. How longe shall I se the tokens of warre, and heare the noyse of the trompettes?

Neuertheless, this shall come vpon them, because my people is become foolyshe, and hath not knowen me. They are the chyldren of foolyshe, and without any discrecion. To doo euill, they haue wylt prouoghe: but to doo well, they haue no wysdome. I haue looked vpon the cerry, and se: it was waste and voyde. I looked toward heauen, and it had no spynne.

I behelde the mountaynes, and lo, they trembled, and all the hylls were in a feare.

I looked aboute me, and there was no bodye, and all the byrdes of the ayre were awaye. I marked wel, and the plowed felde was become waste: yea, all they cyties were broken downe at the presence of the Lorde, and indignacion of his wrath.

For thus hath the Lorde sayd: The whole lande shall be desolate, yet wil I not then haue done. And therfore, shall the earth mourne, & the heauen be soze about: for the thyng that I haue spokē to the prophetes purposed and taken vpon me to do, shall not repent me, and I wil not go fro it. The hole lande shall lye, for the noyse of the horsemen and bowemen: they shall runne into tentes, into wooddes, and clyme vpon the stonye rockes. All y^e cyties shall be voyde, and no man dwelling therein.

What wylt thou now do, thou beinge destroyed? For though thou clothest thy selfe with scarlet, & deckest the w golde: though thou payntest thy face with colours now, yet shalt thou trym thy selfe in bayne.

For those that hitherto haue bene thy greute fauourers, shall abhorre the, and goo about to slaye the. For I heare a noyse, lyke as it were of a woman trauayllyng, or one labouryng of her fyrst chyld: Cue the voyce of the daughter Syon, that casteth out her armes, and swooneth, saying: Ah woe is me, how sore vered and faint is my hert, for feare of the murtherers?

The. v. Chapter.

In Ierusalem there no reprobus: saythfull man founde, cyther amongst the people or the rulers, for whos sake y^e Lorde shoulde repare the cytie. Woe: for Ierusalem is destroyed of the Assyrians.

Oke thowowe Ierusalem, beholde I and se: Seke thowowe her stretes also within, if ye can fynde one mā that doeth equal and ryght, or seker for the truthe, and I shall spare that cytie (sayeth the Lorde). For though they can saye: the Lorde lyueth, yet they sweare to discreue. Where as thou (O Lorde) lokest onely vpon fayth and truthe.

Thou hast scourged them, but they toke no repentance: thou hast corrected them for amendement, but they refused thy correction. They made theyr faces harder then a stone, and wolde not amende.

Therfore I thought in my selfe: peradventure they are so symple and foolyshe, that they vnderstand nothing of the Lordes way, and iudgements of our God. Therfore, wyl I go vnto theyr breedes & rulers, & talke with them: yf they knowe the waye of y^e Lord and the iudgements of oure God. But these (in lyke maner) haue broken the yocke, and burst the bondes in sondre.

Wherefore, a Lyon out of the woodde hath hurte them, and a wolfe in the cuenyng shall destroye them. The Leopard doth lye lurkyng by theyr cyties, to teare in peeces all them all them that come therout. For they offend-ces are multiplyed, and they departunge awaye is encreased. Shulde I then for al this haue mercy vpon the? They chylzen haue forsaken me, and *wozne by them that are no goddess. And albeit that I fed them to the ful yet they fall to aduoutre, and haunt harlot-tes houses.

In the desyre of vnclely last they are become lyke the stoned houle: *cuery man neyeth at his neyghbours wyfe: *Shulde I not correct this, sayth the Lorde?

Shulde I not be auenged of euery people, that is lyke vnto this? Clyme vp vpon theyr walles, beate them downe, but destrope them not vterly, take away theyr fortresses, by-cause they are not the Lordes: For vnsapthfully hath the house of Israel and Iuda forsak-ken me, sayth the Lorde: *They haue denyed the Lorde, and sayde: it is not he that loketh vpo vs: Cuth, there shal no misfortune come vpon vs: we shal see nether swerde ner hunger. *As for the warnyng of the Prophetes they take it but for wynde, yea, there is none of these whiche wyl tell them, that such thin-ges shal happen vnto them.

Wherfore, thus sayth the Lorde God of hoostes: bycause ye speake suche wordes, be-holde: *The wordes that are in thy mouth wyl I turne to fyre, and make the people to be wood, that the fyre maye consume them.

*Lo, I wyl byng a people vpon you fro farre, O house of Israel (sayth the Lorde) a myghty people, an old people, a people whose speech thou knowest not, nether understan-dest what they saye. Theyr arrowes are so-dayne death: yea, they them selues be verpe gynantes. This people shal eate vp thy frute & thy meate, yea, they shal deuoure thy sonnes & thy daughters, thy wyfe & thy bullockes.

They shal eate vp thy grapes, & fyngges.
As for thy strong & wel defended cyties, wher-in thou dydest trust, they shal byng to po-uertye, and that thowowe the swerde. *Neuer-thelesse I wyl not then haue done with you, sayth the Lorde. But yf they saye: wherfore doth the Lorde our God all this vnto vs?

Then answer the: *bycause, that lyke as ye haue forsaken me, and serued straunge god-des in your owne lande, euen so shal ye serue other goddes also in a straunge lande.

Preache this vnto the house of Jacob, and crye it out in Iuda, and saye thus: heare this (thou folish & vndiscret people) *ye haue eyes but ye see not: eares haue ye, but ye heare not.

Heare ye not me, sayth the Lorde? Are ye not ashamed to loken in the face? *whiche bynde the see with the lande, so that it cannot passe his boundes. For though it rage, yet can it do nothyng, and though the waues therof do swell, yet maye they not go ouer.

But this people hath a false and obstinate heart, they are departed and gone away fro me They thynke not in theyr hartes: *let vs feare the Lord our God, that giueth vs rayne earlye and late, when nede is: whiche kepeth euer ityll the harvest for vs yerly.

*Neuerthelesse, your mysdedes haue turned these from you, and your synnes haue robbed you herof. For amonge my people are founde wicked persones, that pryncly lay snares & wayte for men, to take them & destrope them. And lyke as a net is full of byrdes, so are theyr houses ful of that whiche they haue gotten with falschod and discepte. Herof commeth theyr great substaunce and riches, her-of are they fat and welthy, and are more mischecuous then any other. *They mynstre not the lawe, they make no ende of the fatherlesse cause, yea, and they prospre: yet they iudge not the poore accordyng to equitye.

*Shulde I not punish these thynges, sayth the Lorde? Shulde I not be auenged of all suche people as these be? Horrible & greuous thyn-ges are done in the lande.

The prophetes teache falsely, and the pree-stes receyue gyftes, & my people *hath pleasure therein: What wil come tycrof at the last?

The. vi. Chapter.

The synnes for which Ierusalem is a sypet. Vncycled pecces. Conetionelle. Discepte. The Lordes secretly the sacrificies of the Jewes. The rompyng of the Babylonians is prophced agayne.

I come out of Ierusalem, ye stronge chylzen of Ben Jamin: blowe vp the troppettes ye *Ecuytes, set vp a token vnto Bethcaran, for a plage and a greate mylerpe appeareth out from the North.

I wyl lyken the daughter Sion to a fayre and tendre woman, and to her shal come the shepherdes with theyr flockes. Theyr tentes shal they ptyche rounde about her, and euery one shal fede them that are vnder his hande.
Make battayle agaynst her (shal they saye) Arple, let vs go vp, whyle it is yet daye.

Alas, the daye goeth away, and the night shadowes fall downe: Arple, let vs go vp by nyght, & destrope her stronge holdes, for thus hath the Lorde of hoostes commaunded.

Heue downe her trees, and set vp bulwo-kes agaynst Ierusalem, for the tyme is come that this cytie must be punished: for in her is all malicounesse. Lyke as a codyte spouteth oute water, so she spouteth out her wickednesse. Robberye & vncrightounesse is verde in her: sorowe and woundes are euer there in my syght. Amend the (O Ierusalem) lest I with drawe my heart fro the, & make the desolate: & thy lād also, & nomā dwel in it. For thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes: The residue of Israel shal be gathered, as the remnaunt of grapes.

And therfore turne thyne hande agayne into the basket, lyke the grape gatherer. But vnto vnto whom shal I speake, whom shal I warne that hemaye take hede? *Theire e-ares are so vncircumcised, that they maye not heare.

Beholde, *they take the worde of God but for a scoone, & haue no lust therto. And therfore, I am so full of thynne indignacyon, (O Lord) & I maye suffre no longer. But shede it out vpon thy chylzen & are without, and vpon all yonge men. Yea, the man must be taken prisoner with the wyfe, & the aged wyth the crepel. Theyr houses with theyr landes & wyues shal be turned vnto straw-gers, when I stretch out myne hande vpon the inhabitours of this land, sayth the Lorde. *For from the leest vnto the most, they hange all vpon couetousnesse, & from the prophete vnto prest, they go all aboute with falschod and lyes.

*And helyde that, they heale the hurt of my people with swete wordes, sayeng: peace, peace, whē there is no peace at all. Were they ashamed when they hadd commytted abhomynacyon? Trulpe nay they be past shame? *And therfore they shal fall amoge & slayne, & in the houre when I shal vy-set them, they shal be brought downe, sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: go into the strea-tes, conspyde & make inquisicyon for & olde waye: and yf it be & good and ryght waye, then go therin, that ye maye fynde rest for your soules. But they saye: we wyl not walcke therin, and I wyl set wachmen ouer you, & therfore take hede vnto & voyce of & troppett. But they saye: we wyl not take hede. Heare therfore ye Gētyles, & thou cōgregacyon shalt knowe, what I haue de-uyled for them. Heare & earth also: behold, *I will cause a plage to come vpo this people, euen & frute of their awne imaginacyōs.

For they haue not bene obediēt vnto my wordes & to my lawe, but abhorred them.
Wherfore, *byng ye me incense from Saba, & swete smellyng Calamus from farre countrees: Your burnt offerynges dysplease me, & I reioyce not in your sacrificies.

And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: behold, I wyl make this people fall, and there shal fall from among them the father & the chylzen, one neyghboure shal perpe wyth another.

Thus sayeth the Lorde. *Beholde, there shal come a people from & North, & a great people shal arple from & endes of the earth, with bowes and with dartes shal they be weapened. It is a rough & fierce people, & & an vnmerryfull people, theyr voyce roareth lyke & see, they ryde vpon horses well appointed to & battail agaynst & O daughter Sion. The crye of them haue we herbe.
Dure armes are feble, heynnesse & sorowe is come vpon vs, as vpon a woman trauelyng with chylde. Let no man go forth into & felde, let no man come vpon & hye stre-te: for the swearde and feare of the enemy is on euery syde.

Wherfore, gyde a sack cloth aboute the (O thou daughter of my people) spynkle thy selfe w alshes, *mourne & wepe bitterly as vpon thy only beloued sonne. For the destroyer shal sodenly fall vpo vs. The haue I set for a stronge tower (O thou prophe-te) & a well fenced wall amonge my people, to seke out and to trye theyr wayes. *For they are all stubberne apostates and fallen awaye, walkege disceitfully, they are clea-ne byasse & yron, for they hurt & destrope eue-ry man. The bellous are brēt in & fyre, & lea-de is not molten, & melter melteth in wayne for & euell is not taken awaye from them.
Therfore do they call the naughty syluer, because the Lorde hath cast them out.

The. vii. Chapter.

Jeremy is commaunded to shew vnto the people the worde of God, whych trusteth in the outwarde securce of the tēple. The euellies that shal happen to the Jewes for the despytynge of theyr prophetes. Sacryfices doth not the Lorde cheefly require of the Jewes, but & they shuld obey hys word.

These are the wordes that God spake vnto Jeremie: sayege. *Stāde vnder the gate of the Lordes houle, and crye out these wordes there & a loude voyce, and saye. Heare & worde of the Lord all ye of Iuda, that go in at this doze, to wor-shyppe the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lord of hoostes the God of Israel. *Amēde pour wayes & your counceils, and I wyl let you dwell in this place. Trust not in false lyge wordes, sayeng: here is & temple of & Lord, here is the temple of the Lord, here is & temple of the Lorde.

But rather in deade amēde pour wayes and counceils, *and iudge ryght betwixte a man and his neyghbour: oppresse not the straunger, & fatherles, & the wyddowe: shede not innocent blond in thys place: cleue not to straunge goddes to your awne destruccō: then wyl I let you dwell in this place, yea, in & lād that I gaue afore tyme vnto your fathers for euer. But take hede: ye trust in lyngge tales, & begyle you & do you no good.
For when ye haue stollen, murdered, com-mytted aduoutre, & perjury. When ye haue offred vnto Baal, folowynge straunge & vknowne goddes shal ye be unpunished?
Yet then come ye, & stande before me in this houle, * (whiche hath my name geuen vnto it) & saye. Cuth, we are absolved quyte, thou-ghe we haue done all these abhomynacyōs.

*What thynke you this house & heareth my name, is a denne of theues? And yea I se what you thynke, sayeth the Lord.

De. Go to my place in Siloh, * wherunto I gaue my name a fore tyme, and loke well * what I byd to y same place for the wyekednes of my people of Isracell. And now, though ye haue done all these dedes (sayeth the Lorde) and I my self rose vp euer by tymes to warne you & to comen with you, yet wolde ye not heare me. * I called, ye wolde not answere. And therfore, * euen as I haue done vnto Siloh, so wyll I do to thys house, that my name is geuen vnto (that ye put youre trust in) ye vnto y place that I haue geuen to you and your fathers. And I shall thrust you out of my syght, * as I haue cast out all youre brythren the whole sede of Ephraim.

D Therfore, thou shalt not praye for thys people, thou shalt nether geue thackes, nor byd prayer for them: y shalt make no intercession to me for them, for in no wyse wyll I heare y. Sepst y not what they do in the cyties of Iuda, & in y streets of Ierusalem. * The chyldren gather styckes, the fathers kynde y tye, y women kynde y dowghe, to bake cakes for the quene of heauen.

They poure out dynckofferynges vnto straunge goddes, to prouok me vnto wrath. Howbeit they hurte not me (sayeth y lord) but rather confounde, & shame them selues.

And therfore thus sayeth the Lord God: behold, my wrath & my indignacion shall be poured out vpo this place, vpo men & catell vpon y trees in y felde & frute of y lade, & it shall burne so y no man maye quench it.

E Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes y God of Isracell: heape vpon your burnt offrynges wth your sacrificys, and eate y fleshe. * For when I brought youre fathers out of Egypt, I spake no worde vnto them of burnt offrynges & sacrificys: but this I comaunded them, sayinge: * herken & obeye my voyce, and I shall be youre God, and ye shall be my people: so that ye walcke in all the wayes, whych I haue comaunded you, that ye maye prospere.

J But they were not obediēt, they inclyned not they eares there vnto, but wet after they awne ymagynacions & after the mocyns of they awne wycked herte, & so turned them selues awaye, and conuerted not vnto me. And this haue they done, fro the tyme that youre fathers came out of Egypt, vnto thys daye.

J Neuertheles, I sent vnto you, all my seruantes y prophetes. I rose vpearly, & sent you worde, yet wolde they not herken, ner offere me they eares, but were obstynate, & worse then they fathers. And y shalt now speake al these wordes vnto them, but they shall not heare the: y shalt crye vpon them, but they shall not answere the. Therfore, shalt thou saye vnto them: this is the prople, y nether heareth the voyce of the Lorde they: God, ner receaueth hys correccion. * I saythfulnesse and treuth is cleane roted out of they mouth.

Utherfore cut of thynne heare y Ierusalem, & cast it awaye, take vp a cōplayne on hys, for y Lord hath cast awaye, and seared y people y he is displeased wthall. For the chyldren of Iuda haue done euell in my syght, sayeth the Lorde. * They haue set vpon they abhominacyōs, in y house y hath my name, and haue despyled it. They haue also buylded an altier at y Copheth, which is in the valley of y chyldren of Benom: that they myght burne they sonnes & daughters in tye, which I neuer comaunded them, nether came it euer in my thought. And therfore beholde, y dayes shall come (sayeth the Lorde) y it shall nomore be called Copheth, or y valley of y chyldren of Benom, but the valley of slaughter, * for in Copheth, they shall be buried, because they shall els haue no rowme. * Yee, the deed bodyes of this people shall be eaten vp of the foules of the ayre & wyld beasts of the erth, and no man shall fraye them awaye. * And as for y voyce of myrth & gladnes of y cyties of Iuda, & Ierusalem, the voyce of y bydegrome, and of the byde, I wyll make them cease, for the lande shall be desolate.

The viii. Chapter.

The destruction of the Jewes. The Lord moueth the people to amendement, reckenyng vpon they synnes. He reprehendeth the lying doctrine of the prophetes and prestes.

At the same tyme sayeth y Lorde, the bones of y kynges of Iuda, y bones of his prynces, the bones of y prestes & prophetes, yee, & the bones of the cytyens of Ierusalem, shall be brought out of they graues & layed agaynst the. * Sunne, the Moone & all y heauenly host: whom they loued, whom they serued, whom they ranne after, whom they sought and worshypped. They shall nether be gathered together ner buryed, but shall lye as doge vpon y earth, to they shame and despylunge.

And all they y remaine of this wycked generation, shall despyre rather to dye the to lyue: wheresoeuer they remaine, and where as I scatter them, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. They shall y saye vnto them also. * Thus sayeth the Lorde. Do men fall so, that they arysle not vpon agayne? D yf Isracell repent, wyll not god turne ageyn to them? Utherfore then is this people & Ierusalem gone so farre backe, that they turne not agayne? They are euer the longer the more obstinat, and wyll not be conuerted.

For I haue looked, & cōsidered: but there is no man y speaketh a good word: there is no man that taketh repentaunce for hys synne, that wyll so moch as saye: wherfore, haue I haue I done thys? But enery man (as soone as he is turned backe) runneth forth styll, lyke a wyld beast in a battayll. The Storke in y ayer knoweth hys apoynted tyme, the Turtle doue the Swallow & the Crane cōspyre the tyme of they trauayll, * but my people wyll not knowe the tyme of the punishment of y Lorde. How darre ye saye then, we are wyle, we haue the lawe of the Lorde amonge vs?

Suerly in wayne hath he prepared his pēne, & vayne haue the wyrters wyrtē it: therfore shall the wyle be confounded, they shall be afrayed & taken: for lo, * they haue cast out the worde of the Lorde: what wyl-dome can then be amonge them? Utherfore, I wyll geue they wyues vnto alcautes, and they felde to destroyers.

For from the lowest vnto y hyest, they folowe all filthye lucre: & from y prophete vnto y prest, they deale all wyls. * Neuer theles, they heale y hurte of my people ver y slenderly, sayenge: peace, peace, where there is no peace at all.

Ipe for thame, how abhominable thyn-ges do they: and yet they be not ashamed, yee, they knowe of no shame.

Utherfore, in the tyme of they visytacion, they shall fall amonge y deed bodyes, & be ouerthrowne sayeth the Lorde.

Moreouer, I wyll consume the in deade (sayeth the Lorde) so y there shall not be one graue vpon y vyne, nether one sygg vpon the tye tre, and the leaues shall be plucked of. And the thynge y I haue geuen them shall be taken fro the: why prolonge we y tyme? Let vs gather oure selues together, and go into y strōge cytie, there shall we be in rest. For y Lorde our God hath put vs to syllece, & geuen vs water mixte w gall, to dyncke: because we haue synned agaynst hym.

We looked for peace, & we fare not the better, we wyped for the tyme of health, & lo, here is no thynge but trouble.

The noyse of his horses is hearde from Dan, y whole lade is afrayed at y neyenge of his stronge horses: for they are come in, & haue deuoured y lade, w all y is in it: y cyties, and those y dwell therein. * Moreover, I wyll sende Cockatrices & serpētes amonge you (which wyll not be charmed) & they shall bite you, sayeth the Lorde.

I wolde haue had cōforte agēst sorowe: but sorowe is come vpon me, and heynnes vereth my hert: for lo, y voyce of y cryenge of my people is herde for feare of them, that come from a farre countre. Is not the Lorde in Syon? Is not y kyng in her? Utherfore then haue they greued me (shall the Lorde saye) w they ymages & foolys straunge fashyōs of a foreyne god? The hartest is gone, the Sōmer hath an ende, & we are not helped. I am sore vexed, because of y hurte of my people. I am heuy & abashed, is ther no triacle at Silcad? Is ther no physycyon ther? Why then is not the helthe of my people recovered?

The ix. Chapter.

The complaine and bewayling of the prophete, the malice of the people. In the knowledge of ydought we onely to reioyce. The bycōceptyon of the hert.

Who * wyll geue my head water y nough, and a wel of teares for myne eyes: y I maye wepe night and daye: for y slaughter of my people: Wolde God, that I had a cotage some where farre from folcke, y I myght leaue my people, and go fro the: for they be all aduoutrers & a shynchyng sorte. They bede they tinges lyke bowes, to shote out lyes. They wax strōge vpon erthe. As for y trouth, they maye no thynge awaye wthall in the worlde. For they go from one wyckednes to another, and wyll not knowe me, sayeth the Lorde.

Yee, one must kepe hym selfe from another: no mā may safely trust his awne bry-ther: for * one brother vndermyndeth another, one neyghboure begyleth another. Yee one dissembleth w another, and they deale w no trouth. * They haue practysed they tinges to lye, & taken great paynes to do mischefe. Thou syttest i y myddes of a dysceatfull people, which for very dissembling falshe, wyll not knowe me, sayeth the Lorde.

Therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: behold, I wyll melte them, and trye them, for what shuld I els do to my people. * They tinges are lyke sharpe arrowes, to speake dysceate. Wth they mouth they speake peaceably to they neyghboure, but pryncely they laye wayte for hym. * Shulde I not punysh the for these thynge, sayeth y Lorde? Shulde I not be auēged of any loche people as thys? Upon y mountaines will I take vp a lamentacion & a sorowful crye, & a mournige vpo y sayre playnes of y wildernes. Namely, how they are so bryte vp, y no man goeth there any moore. Yee, a man shall not heare one beaste crye there.

Wyrdes & catell are all gone from thece: I will make Ierusalem also an heape of stones, & a denne of venymous wormes. And I will make y cyties of Iuda so waste, that no man shall dwell therein. What man is so wyle, as to vnderstande thys? D y to whom hath y Lord spoken by mouth, that he may shewe this, & saye. D y lande, why perishest thou so? Utherfore art y so bryent vp, & lyke a wyldernes, y no man goeth thowow: Yee, the Lorde hym selfe tolde y same vnto the, that forsoke hys lawe, & kepte not y thynge y he gaue them in cōmaudemēt, nether lyued thereafter: * but folowed the wickednes of they awne hertes, & serued straunge Goddes, as they fathers taught them.

Therfore.

Etherfore, thus sayeth J^{h} Lord of hostes, the God of Israel. Beholde, I will fede this people wth wormwood, & geue them gall to dryncke. I will scat^re the also among the heathen, whom nether they ner they fathers haue knowne: & I will fede a wearde am^oge them, to persecute them, untill I bypⁿge them to naught. Moreover, thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. Beware of y^{e} vengeance that hangeth ouer you: and cal for mourning wyues, & sende for wyse women: that they come shortly, and synge a mourninge songe of you: that y^{e} teares may fall out of oure eyes, and y^{e} eye lyddes maye gush out of water.

For there is a lamentable noyse hearde of Sion. How are we so sore destroyed? How are we so piteously confounded? We must forsake our awne naturall countre, & we are shut out of oure awne lodgings. Yet heare the worde of the Lord. O ye women, & let poure eares regarde the wordes of his mouth: y^{e} ye may lerne poure daughters to mourne, & that euery one may teach her neyghbouress, to make lamentacyon. Namely thus: Death is climpynge vp in at oure wyndowes, he is come into oure houses, to destroye the chylde before y^{e} doze, and the yonge man in the strete.

But tell thou playnely, thus sayeth the Lord. The deed bodys of men shall lye upon the ground, as y^{e} donge upon y^{e} felde, & as the hepe after y^{e} mowder, & ther shall be no man to take them vp. Thus sayeth the Lord. Let not the wyle man reioyse in his wysdome, ner y^{e} strong man in his strenght, nether the ryche man in his rycheesse. But who so will reioyse, let hym reioyse in this, that he vnderstandeth, & knoweth me: for I am y^{e} Lord, which do mercy, equyte and ryghteousnesse vpon y^{e} earth. E therfore, haue I pleasure in soch thynges, sayeth the Lord. Beholde, the tyme cometh (sayeth the Lord) y^{e} I will vylet all them, whose foze skynne is vncircumcysed. The Egyptians, the Jewes, the Edomites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, & and the Shauen Madianites, that dwell in the wyldernes. For all the Gentiles are vncircumcysed in the flesh, but all the house of Israell are vncircumcysed in the herte.

The .x. Chapter.

The constellacions of the starres are not to be feared. Of the weakenes of Idols, and of the power of God. Of euill curates.

Care the worde of the Lord that he speaketh vnto the, O y^{e} house of Israel. Thus sayeth y^{e} Lord. Y^{e} shall not lerne after y^{e} maner of y^{e} heathen, & ye shall not be afrayed for y^{e} tokens of heauen: for y^{e} heathen are afrayed of soch: yee, al y^{e} customes and lawes of the Gentyles are nothyng, but vanyte. E ther hewe downe a tree in y^{e} wode with y^{e} handes of y^{e} worckeman, and fastyon it wth the axe: they couer it ouer with golde or siluer, they fasten it with napples & hammers, that it moue not. It standeth as styp as y^{e} palme tree, it can nether speake ner go one fote, but must be borne. B e not ye afrayed of soch, for they can donether good ner euill. But there is none lyke vnto y^{e} , O Lord, & great is the name of thy power. Who wolde not feare the? O kyng of the Gentils for thyne is the domynion.

For amonge all y^{e} wyle men of the Gentyles, and in all theyr kyngdomes, there is none y^{e} maye be likened vnto y^{e} . They are all together vndered & vnyble in this one thyng. All theyr conynge is but vanyte: namely, wode, syluer, which is brought out of Charlis, & beaten to plates: and golde from y^{e} Ophir, a worcke y^{e} is made with the hãde of y^{e} craftesman & the calser, clothed wth yelow sylck & scarlet: euen so is the worcke of theyr wyle men all together. But y^{e} Lord is a true God, a lypynge God, & an euerlastyng kyng. I f he be wroth, the earth shaketh: all the Gentyles maye not abyde his indygnacyon.

As for theyr goddes thus shall you saye to them: they are goddes, that made nether heauen ner earth therfore shall they perishe from the earth, and from all thynges vnder heauen. But (as for oure God) h e made y^{e} earth wth his power, and with his wysdome doth he order y^{e} whole cõpasse of y^{e} worlde, with his discrecyon hath he spred out y^{e} heuens. At his voyce y^{e} waters gather toge- the in y^{e} ayre, h e draweth vp y^{e} cloudes fro the vttemost partes of y^{e} earth: he turneth lyghtenynge to rayne, & bypgeth forth the wyndes out of their treasures. His wysdome maketh all men fooles. And confounded be all casters of ymages, for y^{e} they cast, is but a vayne thyng, & hath no lyfe. E ther vayne craftelimen wth their worckes, y^{e} they in their vanyte haue made, shall perishe wth another y^{e} tyme of visitacyon. Neuertheles, Jacobs porcyon is no soch: but it is he, y^{e} hath made all thynges, & Israel is y^{e} rodd of his inherytaunce. The Lord of hostes is his name. Gather vp thy wares out of the land, y^{e} that art in y^{e} strãge place. For thus sayeth y^{e} Lord. Behold, I will now thowge as wth a stone synge y^{e} inhabitours of this lãde: at this once, and I will bypge trouble vpon them, that they shall proue trewe the wordes y^{e} I haue spoken by the prophetes.

Alas, how am I hurt: Alas how paynefull are my scourges vnto me! For I conspore this sorow by my self, and I must suffer it. M y tabernacle is destroyed, and all my my coardes are broken. My chyliden are gone fro me, & can no where be fonde. Now haue I none to spede out my tent, or to set vp my bagynnes. For y^{e} herdmenn haue done folysly, that they haue not sought y^{e} Lord. E therfore, haue they dealt vnwysely with theyr catell, & all are scatred abrode. Beholde, y^{e} noyse is harde at hand, & great sedicyon out of y^{e} north: to make the cyties of Iuda a wyldernes, & a dwellynge place for dragons. N ow I knowe (O Lord) y^{e} it is not in mas power to ordre y^{e} awne wayes, or to rule his awne steppes & goynges. E therfore, chasten thou vs, O Lord, but with fauoure & not in thy wrath, bypynge vs not vterly to naught. P oure out thyne indygnacyon rather vpon the Gentiles, that knowe y^{e} not, & vpon the people y^{e} call not on thy name. A nd that because they haue consumed, deuoured and destroyed Iacob, and haue made his habytacyon waile.

The .xi. Chapter.

A curse of them that obey not the worde of Goddes promesse. The people of Iuda following the steppes of theyr fathers, wth theyr strange goddes. The Lord sayeth that he will not heare the Jewes, and forbyddeth also Jeremy to praye for them.

This is another Sermon, whych the Lord comaunded Jeremy for to preach, saying: heare the wordes of the couenaut, & speake vnto y^{e} men of Iuda, & to all the that dwell at Ierusalem. And saye thou vnto them. Thus sayeth y^{e} Lord God of Israel: C urseye euery one y^{e} is not obediẽt vnto y^{e} wordes of this couenaut: whych I comaunded vnto poure fathers, what tyme as I broughte them out of Egypt, from y^{e} yron forna ce, saying: B e obedient vnto my voyce, & do acordynge to all y^{e} I comaunde you: so shall ye be my people, & I will be poure God, and will kepe my promyse, that I haue swozne vnto poure fathers. Namely, that I wolde geue them a lande which floweth wth mylck & hony: as ye se, it is come to passe vnto this day. Then answered I , and sayd: Amen. L et it be euen so Lord, as thou sayest.

Then the Lord sayde vnto me agayne: Preache this in the cyties of Iuda & rounde aboute Ierusalem, & saye. Heare y^{e} wordes of this couenaut, that ye maye kepe them. For I haue diligently exhorted poure fathers, euer sence y^{e} tyme that I brought them out of y^{e} land of Egypt, vnto this daye. I gaue them warynge by tymes, saying: herken vnto my voyce. N euertheles, they wolde not obeye me, nor encline theyr eares vnto me, but folowed the wicked ymaginacions of theyr awne hertes. And therfore, I haue accused the as transgressours of all y^{e} wordes of this couenaut, that I gaue them to kepe which they (notwithstandinge) haue not kepte.

And the Lord sayde vnto me. I t is fonde out, that whole Israel and all these citezins of Ierusalem are gone backe. They haue turned them selues to the blasphemys of theyr forefathers, which had no lust to heare my worde. Euen lyke wyle haue they also folowed straunge goddes, and worshipped them. The house of Israell & Iuda haue broken my couenaut, which I made with theyr fathers.

Etherfore, thus sayeth y^{e} Lord. Behold, I will sende a plage vpon the, which they shall not be able to escape: & though they crye vnto me, I will not heare the. T hen shall the townes of Iuda & the citezins of Ierusalem go, & call vpon y^{e} theyr goddes vnto whom they made theyr oblacrys: but they shall not be able to helpe them in tyme of theyr trouble. F or as many cyties as y^{e} hast, O Iuda, so many goddes hast y^{e} had also. And loke how many stretes there be in y^{e} , (O Ierusalem) so many shamefull alters haue ye set vp, alters I saue to offer vpon the vnto Baal. E therfore, praye not y^{e} for this people, byd nether prayse ner prayer for the, for though they crye vnto me in theyr trouble, yet will I not heare them.

What parte hath my beloued in my house, sence he hath worked abominacion serynge many goddes? T he holy fleash of fringes in the tẽple ar goone fro the O Iuda, and thou when thou hast done euill makest thy boast of ytt. E ther Lord called y^{e} a grene olyue tre, a fayre one, a fructfull one, a goodly one: but with greate clamor hath the enemy sett fyre vpon it and the brãches of yt are destroyed. For the Lord of hostes that planted the, hath deuyled a plage for the (O thou house of Israell and Iuda) for y^{e} euill that ye haue done to prouoke hym to wrath, in that ye dyd seruyce vnto Baal.

This (O Lord) haue I lerned of the, and vnderstãdit, for thou hast shewed me theyr ymaginacions. B ut I am (as a meke lambe an ore) that is carped a waye to be slayne, not knowynge, y^{e} they had deuyled soch a counsell agaynst me, sayeng: W e will destroye his meate with wode, & dryue him out of y^{e} land, of y^{e} lypynge: y^{e} his name shall neuer be thought vpon. E therfore, I will beseeche the now (O Lord of hostes) thou ryghteous iudge, thou that trespst y^{e} reynes & the hertes: lett me se the auẽged of them, for vnto y^{e} haue I comitted my cause. The Lord therfore spake thus of the cytezens of Anathoth, that sought to slaye me, sayenge: P reache not vnto vs in the name of y^{e} Lord, or els y^{e} shalt dye of our hãdes. Thus (I saue) spake y^{e} Lord of hostes. Behold, I will

I will visit you. Your young men shall perish with sword, your sonnes & your daughters shall utterly dye of hunger, so none shall remaine. For upon the crying of Anathoth will I bring a plague, even the peare of theyr visitacion.

The xii. Chapter.

The prophete maruelled greatly at the prosperitie of the wicked, although he confesse God to be righteous. The Jewes are forsaken of the Lord, he speaketh against curates and preachers that seduce the people. The Lord threateneth destruction unto the nation that bordered upon Jewrye, which trou- bled and bereft it.

Lorde, thou art more righteous, then I shulde dispute wth the. Nevertheless, lett me talke with the in thynges reasonable. * How hap- peneth it, that the waye of the vngodly is so prosperous? & that it goeth so well with them, whych (without any shame) offende & lyue in wickednes? Thou plantest them, they take rote, they growe, & bynge forth frute. They boast moch of it, yet art thou farre from their repnes. But thou Lord (to whom I am well knowne) thou shalt sene, & pro- ued my herte, * take them awaye, lyke as a flock is carped to the slaughter house, and apointe them for the daye of slaughter.

How longe shall the lande mourne, * and all the herbes of the felde perishe, for the wickednes of them that dwell therein.

The cattell and the byrdes are gone, yet say they tush, * God will not destroye vs utterly.

Seyng, thou art weery in runnyng with the fote men, how wilt thou then runne with horses? In a peaceable sure lande thou mayest be safe, but how wilt thou do in the furious wynde of Iordane? For thy brethren & thy kynred haue all together despyled the, and cryed out vpon thee in thyne absence. * Beleue them not, though they speake saye wor- des to the. As for me (I saye) I haue forsaken myne awne dwelling place, & left myne heritage. My lyfe also I loue so wel, haue I geuen into the handes of myne ene- mies. * Myne heritage is become vnto me, as a Lyon in the wood. It cryed out vnto me, therfore, haue I forsaken it. Myne herita- ge is vnto me, as a speckled byrde, a byrde of dyuerse coloures is vpon it. Come, & ga- ther ye to geather all the bestes of the felde. Come that ye maye eate it vp.

* Diuerse herdmen haue broken downe my vineyard, and troden vpon my por- cyon. Of my pleasaunt porcyon, they haue made a wilderness and desert. They haue layed it waste: & now it is waste, it ligeth vnto me. See, the whole land lyeth waste, & no man regardeth it. The destroyers come ouer the heeth euery waye, for the sword of the Lord doth consume from one ende of the land to the other, & no flesh hath rest.

They haue sowen wheate, & reaped thornes. They haue taken herptage in possession, but it doth them no good. And the prophetes were ashamed of your frutes, because of the great wrath of the Lord.

Thus sayeth the Lord vpon all myne euell neyghbours, that lape haue on myne herptage, whych I haue possessed, even my people of Israel. Beholde, I will pluske them (namely Israel) out of their land, and put out the house of Iuda from among them.

* And when I haue rote them out, I will be at one with them agayne, & I will haue mercy vpon them: & bynge them agayne, euery man to his awne herptage, and into his land. And ye they (namely that trouble my people) will lerne the wayes of them, to sweare by my name. The Lord lyueth (ly- ke as they learned my people to sweare by Baal) then shall they be reckened among my people. * But ye they will not obeye, then will I rote out the same folke, & destroye them, sayth the Lord.

The xiii. Chapter.

The destruction of the Jewes is prefigured, and their spairynge abrode, wher Israel was recreated to be the people of God, and wher they were forsaken.

Thus sayth the Lord vnto me: go thy waye, & get me a linnen breeche, & gyde it aboute thy loynes, & let it not be wet. Then I got me a breeche, accordyng to the comaundement of the Lord, and put it aboute my loynes. After this the seconde tyme, the Lord spake vnto me agayne. Take the breeche & thou hast pre- pared & put about the, & get thee vp, & go vnto Euphrates & hyde it in a hole of a rock. So went I, & hydd it at Euphrates, as the Lord comaunded me. And it happened longe after this, the Lord spake vnto me. Up, & get thee to Euphrates, and fet the breeche from thence, which I comaunded thee to hyde there. Then went I to Euphrates, & dygged vp, & toke the breeche from the place where I had hyd it: & beholde, the breeche was corrupt, so that it was profitable for nothyng.

Then sayde the Lord vnto me. Thus sayeth the Lord. Euen so will I corrupte the pryde of Iuda, & the hye mynde of Jerusa- lem. This people is a wicked people, * they will not heare my worde, they folowe the wicked ymaginacions of their awne herte, & hange vpon straunge Goddes, then they serue & worshippe: & therfore they shall be as this breeche, that serueth for nothyng. For as straptely as a breeche lyeth vpon a mans loynes, so straptely dyd I bynde the whole house of Israel, and the whole house of Iuda vnto me, sayeth the Lord: * & they myght be my people: that they myght haue a glorious name: that they myght be in ho- nour: but they wold not obeye me. laye this ryble before them, & saye: Thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel: Euery pot shall be fylled wth wyne. And they shall lape: they shall saye we knowenot, that euery pot shall be fylled wth wyne. Then shalt thou saye vnto them. Thus sayeth the Lord: Beholde, I shall fill all the inhabitours of this lande wth drunkennes, the kynges that sit vpon Dauides stole, & prestes & prophetes, wth all that dwell at Jerusalem. And I will sett them one agaynst another, ye, the fathers agaynst the sonnes, sayeth the Lord.

I will not pardon them, I will not spare them, ner haue ppytie vpon them: but de- stroye them. Be obedient, geue eare, take not disdain at it, for it is the Lord him selfe that speaketh. Honour the Lord your God here in, & he take his lyght from you, & ouer your fete stromble in darknesse at the byll: lest when ye loke for the lyght, he tur- ne it into shadowe & darknesse of death. But ye will not heare me, that geue you secreete warnyng, I will mourne from my whole hert for your stubburnes. * Wyte- ouly will I wepe, & my teares shall gush out of myne eyes. For the Lordes flocke shall be carped awaye captiue. Tell the kyng & the quene: humble your selues, sett you downe lowe, for your dignyte shall be throwne downe & the crowne of your glo- ry shall fall from your head. Shall not sorowe come vnto thee, as on a woman trauallyng wth child? And yet thou wilt saye, thou in thyne herte. Wher- fore come these thynges vnto me? * Euen for the multitude of thy blasphemyes, shall thy hynder partes & thy fete be discovered. For lyke as the man of Indemayne chaunge his skynne, & the cat of Indemayne her spottes: so maye ye be excoriated in euell, do good. Therfore will I scarce them, lyke as the stone is taken awaye, wth the south wynde. They shall be your porcyon, & the porcyon of your measure, wherwith ye shall be rewar- ded of me, sayeth the Lord: because ye haue forgotten me, & put your trust in dysceat- full thynges. * Therfore shall I turne thy clothes ouer thy heade, & discover thy thy- ghes: & thy pryncities maye be sene, thy ad- uoucers, thy deedly malice, thy headlynnesse, & thy shamefull whoredome. For vpon the fel- des and bylles I haue sene thy abhominati- ons. Who be vnto the (O Jerusalem) when wilt thou euer be clenched any more?

The xiiii. Chapter.

Of the dearth that shal come in Jewrye. The prayer of the people asking mercy of the Lord. The vngodly people are not heard of prayer, sa- yng, & of false prophetes that seduce the people.

The worde of the Lord thewed vnto Jeremy, concernyng the dearth of the frutes. Iuda hath mourned, his gates are desolate: they are brou- ghte to heynesse euen vnto the groude, & the crye of Jerusalem goeth vp. The Lordes sent theyr seruantes to fetch water, & wher they came to the wellles, they dyd fynde no water, but caried their vessels home emptye. They be ashamed & confounded, & couer theyr hea- des. * For the grounde is dryed vp, because there cometh no rayne vpon it. The plow- men also be ashamed, & couer theyr heades. The hynde also forsoke the ponge fawne, & he brought forth in the felde, because there was no grasse. The wynde Alles dyd stande in the hye places, and drewe in theyr wynde lyke the dragons, theyr eyes dyd faple for want of grasse.

Jer. xliii. c.
and. xliii. c.

Doutles oure awne wickednes doth re- warde vs. But the Lord doth accordyng to thy name, though oure transgressions & synnes be many, and agaynst the haue we synned. * For thou art our comfort & helpe of Israel in the tyme of trouble. Why wilt thou be as a stranger in the lande, & as one that goeth ouer the felde, & cometh in only to remaine for a nyght? Why wilt thou make thy selfe a coward, & as it were a gyant: & yet maye not helpe? For thou (O Lord) art in the myddest of vs, & thy name is called vpon of vs: forsake vs not. Thus hath the Lord sayd vnto this people: * Seyng they haue had suche a lust to wa- der abrode, & haue not refrayned theyr fete, & therfore displeased the Lord: but he will now bringe agayne to remembraunce all their mysdedes, & pynthe all theyr synnes.

* Jer. xliii. c.

See, euen thus sayde the Lord vnto me: * Thou shalt not praye to do these people good. * For though they fast, I wil not heare their prayers, and though they offere burnt offerings & sacrifices, yet will not I acce- pte them. For I will destroye the with the sword, hunger & pestilence. Then answered I: O Lord God, & the prophetes saye vnto the. Cuth, ye shall ned to feare no sword, & no hunger shall come vnto you, but the Lord shall geue you cōtynual rest in this place.

And the Lord sayde vnto me: The pro- phetes preach lyes in my name, wher as I haue not sent them, nether gaue I them any charge, nether dyd I speake vnto them: yet they preach vnto you false wyllys, char- ming, vanite, & dysceatfulness of their awne herte. Therfore, thus sayeth the Lord. As for those prophetes that preach in my name (who I neuerthelesse haue not sent) & that saye:

The xvi. chapter.

 Jer. xli. a The prophete the mystry of the Jewes. He the- with that p^r wythspyring of Iudas: the contempt of Gods lawe, is the cause of theyr mysdeds. He p^r the captiuite of Babylon, ad theyr delyue- raunce from thence agayne, & calling of p^r gentiles.

 Jer. xli. a Thus sayde the Lorde vnto me. Thou shalt take p^r no wyfe, ner beget chyl- dre in this place, for of the chyldre that are borne in this place, of theyr mo- thers that haue borne them, and of their fa- thers that haue begotten them in this lāde thus sayeth the Lorde. * They shall dye an horrible deeth, * no mā shall mourne for the- ner burye them, but they shall lye as donge vpon the earth. They shall perishe thorow the swerde and hōger, * and theyr bodies shall be meate for the foules of the ayre, ad beastes of p^r earth. For thus saith p^r Lorde: So not p^r in vnto them ner come to mourne and wepe for them: for I haue takē my pea- ce from thys people (sayeth the Lorde) p^r my fauoure & my mercy. And in this lande shall they dye, olde and yonge, and shall not be buried: no man shall bewepe the, no man shall clyppe or shawe him selfe for them.

 Jer. xli. a There shall not one viset another, to mour- ne wyth them for their deeth, or to comforte them. One shall not offere another the cuppe of consolacyon, to forget theyr heynnes for father and mother. * Thou shalt not go in to theyr feast house, to syt downe, to eate or drinke with the. For thus sayeth p^r Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: * Beholde, I shall take awayne out of this place, p^r voyce of myrth ad gladnesse, the voyce of the byp- degrome and of the byde: p^r, and that in poure dayes, that ye maye se it.

 Jer. xli. a Now when thou shewest this people all these wordes, & they saye vnto the. * Wher fore hath the Lorde deuyld all thys greace plague for vs? Dost what is the offence & syn- ne, that we haue done agaynst p^r Lorde our God? Then make thou them this answer: * Because poure fathers haue forsaken me (sayeth the Lorde) and haue walked after straunge goddes, whom they haue honou- red and worshypped: but me haue they for- taken, and haue not kepte my lawe. * And ye with your shamefull blasphemys, haue exceded the wyckednes of poure fathers. For I wyll bypnyng the agayne into the lande, that I gaue vnto theyr fathers.

 Jer. xli. a Beholde (sayeth the Lorde) * I wyll sende out many sybers to take them, and after p^r wyll I sende out many hunters to hunte them out, from all mountaynes and hylls and out of p^r caues of stone. For myne eyes beholde al theyr wayes, and they cannot be bypnyng fro my face, nether can theyr wycked de- des be kepte close out of my syghte. But first wyll I sufficently rewarde their shame full blasphemies and synnes, because they haue despyled my lande: Namely with theyr stinking Idols & with the carapys of their abhominacions, wherwith they haue filled myne herpytage. * o Lorde, my strenght, my power, and refuge in tyme of trouble. The Gentyles shall come vnto the fro the endes of the worlde, and saye: Merely our fathers haue cleaued vnto lyes, their Idols are but vayne & vnyprofitable. How can a mā make those his goddes, whych are not able to be goddes? And therefore I will once teach the, sayeth the Lorde, I wyll shewe them my hande & my power, that they maye knowe, that my name is the Lorde.

 Jer. xli. a Dure synne (Dye of the trybe of Ju- da) is wyttē in the table of your her- tes, and grauen so vpon the edges of your aulters with a penne of p^ris and wyth an adamāt clawe: p^r as the fathers thynke vpon their chyldre so thinke you also vpo your aulters, woddes, thicke trees, hpe hyll- les, mountaynes & feldes. * Wherfore, I wil make my mounte p^r standeth in the felde all your substance & treasure be spoyled, for the great synne p^r ye haue done vpon poure hpe places thorow out all the coastes of poure lāde. Ye shall be cast out also fro p^r heritage, that I gaue you. And I wil subdue you vnder the heyn bondage of your enemies, in a lande that ye knowe not. For ye haue mini- stred sye to my indignacyon, which shall bur- ne euermore. Thus sayth the Lorde. * Cur- led be the man that putteth his trust in mā, and that taketh helpe for his arme: and he, whose herte departeth from the Lorde: he shall be lyke the death, that groweth in the wyldernes. As for p^r good thyng that is for to come, he shall not see it: but dwell in a drye place of the wyldernes, in a salt and vnder cuppe lande. * Blessed is the man, that putteth his trust in the Lorde, ad whose hope is the Lorde him selfe. * For he shall be as a tre, that is planted by f water syde: whyche thredeth out the rote vnto mynstrell, whom the heate cannot harme, when it cometh, but his leaffe shall be greene. And though there growe but lytle frute because of drouth, yet is he not carefull, but he neuer leaueh of to bynge forth frute. Amonge all thynges, man hath the most disceatfull and stubberne herte.

Who shall then knowe it? * Euen I the Lorde seache out the grounde of the herte, and trye the reynes. * A rewarde euery man accordynge to his wayes, and accordynge to the frute of his workes.

The partriche maketh a nest of egges, whych she layde not. He cometh by ryches, but not by rycheousnes. In the myddest of his lyfe must he leaue them behynde him, and at the last be founde a very foole. But thou (O Lorde) whose throne is most glorious, excellent and of most antiquite, which dwellest in the place of our holy rest: Thou art the comforte of Israel. All they that forsake the, shall be confounded: al they that departe from the, shall be wyrtten in earth: for they haue forsaken the Lorde the very founteyne of the waters of lyfe.

Heale me, O Lorde, and I shall be whole: saue thou me, and I shall be saued, for thou art my prayse. Beholde, these me I saye vnto me. Where is the worde of the Lorde? Let it come now. Where as I neuertheles obediently folowed the as a shepheard, and haue not vncalled taken this office vpon me, this knowest thou well. My wordes also were ryght before the: Be not now terrible vnto me, O Lorde: for thou art he in whome I hope, when I am in perill. Let my persecuters be confounded, but not me: let them be afrayed, and not me. Thou shalt byng vpon them the tyme of their plage, and shalt destroye them ryght so.

Thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me: * Go and stande vnder the gate, where thozowe the people and the kynges of Iuda go out, and in, yee vnder all the gates of Ierusalem, and saye vnto them. Heare the worde of the Lorde, ye kynges of Iuda, and all they people of Iuda, and all ye cytyens of Ierusalem, that go thozowe this gate. Thus the Lorde commaundeth. * Take hede for poure lyues, that ye carie no burthen vpon you in the Sabbath, to bynge it thozowe the gates of Ierusalem: ye shall beare no burthen also out of poure houses in the Sabbath. Ye shall do no labour therein, but ye shall followe the Sabbath, as I commaunded poure fathers. Howbeit, they obeyed me not, neither hearkened they vnto me: but were obstinate and stubborne: & neither obeyed me: nor receaued my correccio. Neuertheles, pfe will heare me (sayeth the Lorde) and beare no burthen into the cytie thozowe this gate vpon the Sabbath. Pfe will halowe the Sabbath, so pfe do no worke therein: then shall there go thozowe the gates of this cytye, kynges and prynces, that shall spt vpon the throne of Dauid: They shall be carped vpon charactes, & ryde vpon horses, both they ad their prynces. Yee, whole Iuda & all the cytyens of Ierusalem shall goe here thozow, and this cytie shall cuer be the more and more inhabited. There shall come men also fro the cyties of Iuda, from about Ierusalem, and from the lande of Benjamin, from the playne felde, from the mountaynes, from the wyldernes: which shall bynge burnt offerings, sacrifices, oblations, and incense, and offere vpon tharkelgeyng in the house of the Lorde. But pfe will not be obedient vnto me, to halowe the Sabbath, so that ye will beare your burthens thozow the gates of Ierusalem vpon the Sabbath. Then shall I see fyre vpon the gates of Ierusalem, and it shall burne vpon the houses of Ierusalem, and no man shall be able to queneh it.

The xiii. Chapter.

God sheweth, by the example of a potters, that it is in his power to destroye the despyers of his worde, and to helpe them agayne when they amend. The conspirage of the Iewes agaynst Jeremy. His prayer agaynst the aduersaries.

This is another communicacion, that God had with Jeremy, saying: Arise, and goe downe into the Potters house, and there shall I tell the more of my mynde. Now when I cam to the Potters house, I founde hym makynge his worke vpon a whele. The vessel that the Potter made of claye, brake amoge his handes: So he beganne a new, and made another vessel accordynge to his mynde. Then sayde the Lorde thus vnto me. * Wape not I do with you, as this Potter doth, O ye house of Israel, sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, ye house of Israel: ye are in my hande, cūe as the claye in the Potters hande.

When I take in hande to rote out, to destroye, or to waste awaye any people or kyngdome: pfe that people (agaynst whom I haue thus deuyled) conuerste from theyr wyckednes: I repete of the plage, that I deuyled to bynge vpon them. * Agayne, when I take in hande, to buyde, or to plante a people or a kyngdome: pfe the same people do euell before me, and beare not my voyce: I repete of the good, & I deuyse to do for the. Speake now therfore vnto whole Iuda: and to them that dwell at Ierusalem. Thus sayeth sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I am deuyng a plage for you, and am takynge a thing in hande agaynst you.

Therfore let euery man turne from his euell waye, take vpon you f thynge that is good, and do right. But they sayde. Nomo- re of this: * We will folowe our awne ymaginacions, and do euery man accordynge to the wyfulness of his awne mynde.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde. After a- monge the heathen, pfe any man hath herde soch horryble thynges, as the daughter of Sion hath done. Shall not the snowe (that melteth vpon the stony rockes of Libanus) mopsten the felde? Or maye the sprynges of waters be so graue awaye, that they rūne nomore, geue mynstrell, ner make frute full? But my people hath so forgotten me, that they haue made sacryfice vnto vayne Goddes. And they prophetes make them fal in theyr wayes fro the auncyēt pathes, ad to go into a fote waye not vled to bet- roden of iust men. Where thozowe they haue brought their lade into an euerylastyng wil- dernesse & scozne. * So pfe whosoener trauay leth therby, shall be abashed, & wagge theyr heades. With an East wynde will I scat- re the, before their enemye. And when their de- struccio cometh, I will turne my backe vpon the, but not my face. Then sayde they come, let vs ymagin somthyng agaynst this Jeremy. For the prestes shall not be destitute of p lawe, neither shall the wyse- men be destitute of counsell, ner p prophetes destitute of the worde of God. Come, and let vs smyte him with the tong, and let vs marke all his wordes. Conspyre me, O Lord, and heare the voyce of myne enemies.

shall they recompence euell for good: for they haue digged a pit for my soule. * Remē bre, howe that I stode before the, to speake good for them, & to turne awaye thy wrath from them.

Therfore let their children dye of hun- ger, ad let them be oppressed wth the swe- arde. Let their wyues be robbed of their chil- dren, and become wyddowes: let their hus- bandes be slayne, let their yongme be kyl- led with the swearde in the felde. Lett the nople be herde out of their houses, when the murderet cometh sodenly vpon them.

For they haue dygged a pyt to take me, & layd snares for my fete. Yet Lorde, I knowest all their counsell, that they haue deu- sed, to slaye me. For geue not their wycked- nes, and let not their sinne be put out of thy syght: but let them be iudged before the as the gyltie. This shalt thou do vnto them in the tyme of thy indignacion.

The xix. chapter.

The prophete the destruction of Ierusalem, for the contempt and despyng of the worde of God.

Thus sayde the Lorde: So thy waye and bye the an earthen pytcher, and byng forth the Senatours ad che- fe prestes into the valley of the chyldren of heinnom, which lieth before the doze that is made of bypcke, and shewe them there the wordes, that I shall tell the, and saye thus vnto the. Heare the worde of the Lorde, ye kynges of Iuda, and ye cytyens of Ierusa- lem. * Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: * Beholde I will byng so- che a plage vpon this place, that the eares of all that heare it shall glowe. And that be- cause they haue forsaken me, and vnhalo- wed this place, & haue offred in it vnto stra- unge goddes: whome neither they, they fa- thers, ner p kynges of Iuda haue knowne. They haue fylled this place also with the bloude of innocentes: for they haue sett vp an aulter vnto Baal, to burne their chyldre for a burnt offering vnto Baal, which I ne- ther commaunded, ner charged the, neither thought once there vpon.

Beholde therfore the tyme cometh (say- eth the Lorde) that this place shall nomore be called Copheth, ner the valley of f chyl- dren of heinnom, but the valley of slaughter: for in this place will I slaye p Senatours of Iuda & Ierusalem, and kyll them downe with the swearde in the syght of theyr ene- mies, ad of them that seke their lyues. And their deed carcases will I geue to be meate for the foules of the ayre, and bestes of the felde. And I will make this citie so desolate and despyled: * that who so goeth ther by, shall be abashed and leaft vpon her, because of all her plagies.

I will fede the also with the flesh of their sonnes ad their daughters. * Yee, euery one shall eate vp another in the besegynge and straynesse, wherwith their enemyes (that seke their lyues) shall kepe them in. And the pitcher shalt thou breake in the syght of the men, that shall be with the, & saye vnto the: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * Euen so will I destroye this people and cytie: as a man breaketh an earthen vessel, that ca- not be made whole agayne.

In Copheth shall they be buried, for they shall haue none other place. Thus wyl I do vnto this place also, sayeth the Lorde, ad to them that dwell therein: yee, I wil do to this citie as vnto Copheth. For p houses of Je- rusalem and the houses of the kynges of Ju- da shall be despyled, lyke as Copheth becau- se of all the houses, in whose parlers they dyd sacryfice vnto all the hooite of heauen and powred drinke offerings vnto straun- ge goddes. And so Jeremy cam from Co- pheth, where the Lorde had sent him to pro- phecie, and stode in the court of the house of the Lorde, ad spake to all the people: Thus sayeth saith the Lorde of hostes & God of Israel: Beholde, I wyl bypyng vpon this cite and vpon euery towne aboute it, all the places that I haue deuised against them: for they haue bene obstinate, and wolde not obeye my warnynges.

The. xx. Chapter.

Jeremie is smitten and cast into prison, for preas- ching of the worde of God. He propheseth the cap- ture of Babylon. He complayneth & he is a mo- kinge stocke for the worde of God. He is compelled by the spere to preache the worde.

When Phasur & prestre, the sonne of Emer, chere in the house of & Lorde, herde Jeremie preache so stedfastly: he smote Jeremie & put him in the stocks, that are by the hye gate of Ben Jamin, in the house of the Lorde. The nexte daye folowynge Phasur brought Jeremie out of & stocks agayne. Then sayd Jeremie vnto him. The Lorde shall call the nomore Phasur (that is excellent and increasynge) but Magor (that is fearfull & afrayed) euery where. For thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I wyl make the afrayed, euen thy selfe, & all that fauoure & which shall perish with the swearde of their enemies, euen before thy face.

And I wyl geue whole Juda vnder the power of the kynge of Babylon, which shall carie some vnto Babylon prisoners, & slaye some with the swearde. * Moreover, all the substance of this lande, all their precious and gorgeous worckes, all costlynge, and all the treasure of the kynges of Juda: wyl I geue into & handes of their enemies, which shall spoyle them, and carie them vnto Babilo. But as for the (Phasur) thou shalt be caried vnto Babilo with all thine household, & to Babylon shalt thou come, where thou shalt dye, and be buried: thou and all thy fauourers, to who thou hast preached lyes. O Lorde, If I am disceaue, then hast thou disceaue me: thou hast dealt strongly, and hast prenypled, and makest me stronge agayne. * All the daye longe am I despised, & laughed to scoone of euery man: because I haue now preached longe agaynst malpicious & pyanny, and shewed them of destruc- tion. * For the whyche cause they cast the word of the Lorde in my teeth, and take me euer to the worst.

Wherfore, I thought fro hence forth, not to speake of him, ner to preache eny more in his name. But the worde of the Lorde was a very burnynge fyre in my hert and in my bones, whiche when I wolde haue stopped, I myght not. For why? I herde so many derisions and blasphemies on euery syde of me: complayne vpon him, saye they, and we will tell his tale, yee euen of myne awne co- panions, and soch as were conuersant with me: went about to murder me, saying vpo him, we shall one waye or other begyle him and prenyple agaynst him, and be slayd of hym.

But the Lorde stode by me: lyke a mygh- tic giuant: therfore my persecutors fell, & coulde do nothing. They shalbe soze confor- ded, for they haue done vniuersally, they shal haue an euerlastinge shame. * And now, O Lorde of hostes, thou ryghteous searcher (which knowest the reynes & the very her- tes: let me se them punished, for vnto the I comynge my cause.

Synge vnto the Lorde, and prayse him, for he hath deliuered the soule of the oppres- sed, from the hande of the violent. * Cursed be the daye, wherein I was borne, vnhappie be the daye, wherein my mother brought me forth. Cursed be the man, that brought my father & tydings to make him glad, sayig: thou hast gotten a sonne. Let it happen vnto that man, as to the cyties * which & Lorde turned vpon syde downe. Let him heare cry- enge in & moynynge, and at none daye lame table howlynge. Why steepest thou not me, as lone as I cam out of my mothers wōbe? O that my mother had bene my graue her self, that the byrth myghte not haue come out, but remayned styll in her. * Wherfore cam I forth of my mothers wombe? To haue ex- perience of labour and sorowe: and to lead my lyfe with shame.

The. xxi. Chapter.

He propheseth that zedekiah shall be taken, and the cite burned.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremie * what tyme as kyng zedekiah sent vnto hi Phasur the sonne of Melchias, and Sophonias the sonne of Maasias prestre, sayinge. * Alke counsell at the Lorde (we praye the) of our behalfe, for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon beleegeth vs, yf the Lorde (perad- uenture) will deale with vs, accordynge to his maruelous power, & take him from vs.

Then spake Jeremie. Geue zedekias this answere. Thus sayeth & Lorde God of Is- rael: beholde, I wil turne backe the weapens that ye haue in youre handes, wherewith ye fyght agaynst the kynge of Babylon & the Caldees, which belege you round aboute & walles, and I will bringe the together into the myddest of this cytie, & I my selfe wyl fyght agaynst you, with an outstretched ha- de, & with a myghtie arme, in great displea- sure and terrible wrath: & wyl smyte the, that dwel in this cite: yee, both men & ca- tell shall dye of a great pestilence.

* And after this (sayeth the Lorde) I shal deliuer zedekias the kynge of Juda, and his seruantes, his people (and soch as are esca- ped in the cite, from the pestilence, swearde and hunger) into the power of Nabuchodo- nosor nosor kynge of Babylon: yee, into the han- des of theyr enemyes, into & handes of tho- se that folowe vpon their lyues, which shall smyte them with the swearde, they shal not ppyte them, they shal not spare them, they shal haue no mercy vpon them.

And vnto this people & shalt saye. Thus sayeth & Lorde: * beholde, I laye before you the waye of lyfe & deeth. * Who so abyde in this cytie, shall perish: ether with & swe- arde, wyth hunger, or wyth pestilence. But who so goeth out to holde on the Chaldees parte, that belege it, he shall saue hys lyfe & shall wyne his soule for a pray. * For I haue set my face agaynst this cytie (sayeth the Lorde) to plage it, and to do it no good. It must be geuen into the hande of the king of Babylon, and be bent with fyre.

And vnto the house of the kyng of Juda, saye thus: heare the worde of the Lorde (O thou house of Dauid) for thus saith & Lorde: * Minster ryghteousnes, & that soone, de- liuer the oppressed from violent power: or euer my terribile wrath breake out lyke a fyre, and burne so, that no man maye quench it, because of the wyckednes of youre yma- ginacions. * Beholde (sayeth the Lorde) I will come vpon you, that dwell in the val- leys, rockes and felde, and saye. * Cusly: who will make vs afrayed: or who will co- me into oure houses? For I wyl vplet you saith the Lorde) because of the wickednes of your inuencions, and wyl kyndle soche a tyre in youre wood, as shall consume al that is aboute you.

The. xxii. Chapter.

He reborteth the kynge of Juda to iudgement and ryghteousnesse, whye Jerusalem is broughte into cap- ture. The death of Selum the sonne of Josua is prophesed.

Thus sayde the Lorde, Go downe in to the house of the kyng of Juda; & speake there these wordes, and saye: heare the worde of the Lorde, thou king of Juda that syttest in the kyngly seat of Da- uid: thou and thy seruantes and thy people that go in and out at this gate. Thus the Lorde comaundeth: * kepe equyte and righ- teousnesse, deliuer & oppressed fro the power of the violent: do not greue ner oppresse the straunger, the fatherlesse ner the wyddow, and shed no innocent bloude in this place.

And yf ye kepe these thynges saythfully then shal there come in at & doze of this hou- se kinges, to sit vpon Dauids seate: they shal be caried in Charettes & ryde vpon horses both they and their seruantes, and theyr people. But yf ye will not be obedient vnto these commaundementes, * I sweare by my- ne awne selfe (sayeth the Lorde) thyngs shal be wafte. For thus hath the Lorde spo- ken vpon the kynges house of Juda. Thou Gilead art vnto me the head of Libanus.

Shall I not make & so wafte (& thy cyties also) that no man shall dwell therein? I wil prepare a destroyer with his weapens for & to heve downe thy speciall Cedze trees, ad to cast them in the fyre.

And all the people that go by this cytie, shall speake one to another. * Wherfore hath the Lorde done thus vnto this noble cytie? Then shall it be answered: * because they haue broken the couenaunt of & Lorde theyr God, and haue worshipped & serued strai- ge goddesses. * Mourne not ouer the deed, ad be not wo for the, but be soze for hym that departeth a waye: for he cometh not agay- ne, and seeth his natue countre no more.

For thus sayeth the Lorde, as touchynge * Selum the sonne of Josias kynge of Ju- da, which raygned after his father, ad is ca- ried out of this place, he shal neuer come hy ther agayne, for he shal dye in & place, wher vnto he is led captiue, ad shall se this lande nomore. * Wo worth hi, that buyldeth hys house with vnrightheousnes, ad his parlors with the good & he hath gotten by vpolce: which neuer recompenseth his neyghbours laboure, ner payeth him his fyre. He thyn- keth in him selfe. I wyl buylde me a wyde house, & gorgeous parlors. He causeth win- dows to be betwen therein, and the sylnges and ioystes maketh he of Cedze, and payn- teth the with Synaper. Thynkest thou to raygne, now & thou prouokest me to wrath with the Cedze trees?

Wyd not thy father eate and drinke, and prospre well, as longe as he dealt w equite and righteounesse: yee, when he helped the oppressed and pooze to their right, the pros- pered he well.

From whence came thys, but onely be- cause he had me before hys eyes, sayeth the Lorde: Neuertheles, as for thynne eyes and thynne herte, they loke vpon coueteousnesse, to shed innocent bloude, to do wronge & vio- lence. * And therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde agaynst Jehokim, & sonne of Josias kyng of Juda. They shal not mourne for him (as they vse to do) alas brother, alas syter. Ne- ther shal they saye vnto him: Alas syr, alas for that noble prync. But as an Alke shal be burped, corrupte and be cast without the gates of Jerusalem.

Clyme vpon the hyll of Libanus (O thou daughter Zion) lyft vp thy voyce vpon Ba- san, crye from all partes: for all thy lours are destroyed. I gaue the warnynge, whyle thou wast yet in prosperyte. But thou say- dest: I wyl not heare. And this maner hast thou vled fro thy youth, that thou woldest neuer heare my voyce. All thy herdmē shal be drem with the wynde, and thy derlynges shal be caried awaye into captiuite. Then shalt thou be brought to shame & confusion because because of al thy wickednes: þ that dwellest vpon Libanus, & makest thy nest in þ Cedre trees. * How litle shalt þ be regarded whe thy sorowes & pangues come vpon the, as a woman traunclyng with chyldre.

* As truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde:) Though Conanias the sonne of Iehoa-kim kynge of Iuda were the sygnet of my right hande, yet will I plucke him of. And I will geue the into the power of them that seke to slaye the, and into the power of them that thou fearest: into the power of Nabuchodo-nosor the kynge of Babylon, and into the power of the Caldees. Moreover, I wyll sende the, & thy mother that bare the into a straunge lande, where ye were not borne, and there shall ye dye. But as for the lande that ye wyll desire to retorne vnto, ye shal neuer come at it agayne. This man Conanias shall be lyke an ymage robbed & torne in peces, which pleaseth noman, for all his apparell. Wherefore both he & his sode shal be sent away, & cast out into a lande, that they knowe not.

O thou earth, earth, earth: heare þ worde of the Lorde. Thus sayeth þ Lorde: Whyte this man amenge the outlawes, for no profperite shall this man haue all his lyfe loge.
Neither shall eny of his sode be so happie, as to syt vpon the seat of Dauid, and to beare rule in Iuda.

Chapter. xliii.

He speaketh agaynst euery Curate that make hauock of þ flocke of þ Lorde. Of the conuersion of þ remnant of the Iewes to the fapth. The commynge of the true shepherd: Christ is prophesied. Agaynst false prophetetes, when al prophete preacheth the worde of God. God conuerteth the hertes of the hearers. Agaynst prophetetes that preache lyes vnder the name of God. The impactes of false prophetes.

Whe * vnto the shepherdes, that despoyle, and scatre my flocke, sayeth þ Lorde. Wherefore this is the comaundement of the Lorde God of Israell, vnto the shepherdes that fede my people: Ye scatre & thrust out my flocke, & loke not vpon the. Therefore now wyll I vylset the wickednes of youre ymagynacions, sayeth the Lorde. And wyll gather together þ remnant of my flocke, from all landes that I had dyscued the vnto, and will bypunge them agayne to their pastures, that they maye growe & increafe. I wyll set shepherdes also ouer them, which shall fede them. They shall nomore feare and drede, for there shall none of them be lost, saith the Lorde. * Be-holde, the tyme cometh, sayeth the Lorde, þ I wyll rayse vp the * ryghteous braunche of Dauid, * which kynge shall beare rule, & he shall prosper with wyldome, & shall set vpequite & rightousnes agayne in þ erth.
In this tyme shall Iuda be saued, & * Israell shall dwell without feare. And this is the name that they shal call him: * euen the Lorde oure ryghteousnesse. * And therefore beholde, the tyme cometh, sayeth the Lorde that it shall nomore be sayde: the Lorde lyueth, which brought the chyldren of Israell out of the lande of Egypte: But the Lorde lyueth, which brought forth, & led the sede of the house of Israell, out of the North lan-de, and from all countrees where I had sca-tered the, and they shall dwell in their awne lande agayne.

My herte breaketh in my body because of the false prophetes, al my bones shake: I am become lyke a broncken man (that by þ reason of wyne can take no rest) for verpe fea & of the Lorde, and of his holy wordes: Because the lande is full of aduouterers & thowowelwering it mourneth * & the pleasaunt pastures of the deserte are dyed vp.
Yee, the waye that men take, is wicked, and they: gouernance is nothyng lyke the holy worde of the Lorde. For prophetes and þ prestes them selues are polluted w pocrities, and they: wyckednes haue I founde in my house, saith þ Lorde. Wherefore, their way shall be slipperry in the darknesse, where in they maye sticke & fall. For I wyll bypunge a plague vpon them, euen the peare of they:
visitacio saith the Lorde. I haue sene folp amonge the Prophetes of Samaria, that they preached for Baall, and discaued my people of Israell.

I haue sene also amonge the Prophetes of Ierusalem foule aduoutry, & presumptuous lyes. They take the most shamefull men by the hande, flatteringe them, so þ they cannot retorne from they: wyckednes. All these w their cyrcelyngs are vntome, as So-dome, and as the inhabitours of Gomorre.

Therefore thus sayeth þ Lorde of hostes concernynge the prophetes: * Beholde, I will fede them with wormwood, and make the drynke the water of gall. For from the prophetes of Ierusalem is ypocrisie come into all the lande.

And therefore the Lorde of hostes geueth you this warninge. * Heare not the wordes of the prophetes, that preach vnto you, and discaue you: surely they teache you vayne for they speake the meanyng of their awne herte, & not out of the mouth of the Lorde.
* They saye vnto the that despyse me: The Lorde hath spokt it: Cuth: ye shal prospere ryght well. And vnto all the, that walcke after the lust of they: awne hert, they saye: Cuth, there shall no misfortune happen you.
For who hath sytten in the counsell of the Lorde, þ he hath herde & vnderstande, what he is aboute to do: Who hath marked lps deuyce, and herde it? Beholde, the stormy wether of þ Lorde (that is, his indignacio) shall go forth, and a vyolent whirlywynde shall fall downe vpon þ heade of þ vngodly.

And

And the wrath of the Lorde shall not turne agayne, vntyll he perfourme and fulfyll the thought of his herte. * And in the latter dayes ye shall knowe his meanyng.

I haue not sent these prophetes (saith þ Lorde) & yet they ranne. * I haue not spoke to the, and yet they preached. But if they had continued in my counsell they had opened to my people my wordes & they had turned my people fro their euell wayes & wycked ymagynacions. * Am I then God that seyth but the thinge, which is nye at han-de, & not that is farre of: sayeth the Lorde.
* Maye eny man hyde hym self so, þ I shall not se hym? sayeth the Lorde. * Do not I fulfyll heauen and earth? sayeth the Lorde.
I haue herde well ynough, what þ prophetes saye þ preache lyes in my name, sayeng: I haue dreamed, I haue dreamed. How lon-ge wyll this continue in the prophetes hert to tell lyes, & to preache the crafty sotylte of their awne hert: Whose purpose is (with the dreames that euery one tell) to make my people forget my name, as they: foresathers dyd, when Baall came vp. The prophet that hath a dreame let hym tell it * & he that vnderstandeth my worde, let hym shewe it saythfully.

For what hath chaffe and wheate to do together? sayeth þ Lorde. Is not my worde lyke a fyre, sayeth the Lorde, and lyke an hammer, þ breaketh the harde stone. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I wyll vpon the prophetes, that steale my worde pryncly fro euery man: Beholde, here am I (sayeth the Lorde) agaynst the prophetes, that make lunges tender to speake, & saye:
The Lorde hath sayde it. Beholde, here am I (sayeth the Lorde) agaynst those prophetes, þ darre prophecy lyege dreames, and discaue my people with their vanyties, & myacles, whom I neuer sent, ner comaun-ded them. They shall do this people greate harme, sayeth the Lorde.

If this people, ether eny prophet or preste aske the and saye: what is the burthen of the Lorde? Thou shalt saye vnto the: what burthen? Therefore wyll I cast you from me, (sayeth þ Lorde) because ye pour selues are a burthen. And the prophet, preste or people that vseth this terme (the burthen of þ Lorde) hym wyll I viset, and his house also.

But thus shall ye saye, euery one to another, & euery man to his brother. * What answere hath þ Lord geuen? or what is the Lordes comaundement? And as for þ burthen of the Lorde, ye shal speake nomore of it: for euery man's awne worde is his burthen because ye haue altered the wordes of þ lyuynge God the Lorde of hostes our God.

Thus shall euery man saye to the Prophetes: what answer hath the Lorde geue the? Or, what sayth the Lorde? And not once to name the burthen of the Lorde. Therfore thus saith the Lorde. For somoche as ye haue vseth thys terme (the burthen of the Lorde) where as I not withstandynge sent vnto you, and forbade you to speake of the Lordes burthen.

Beholde therefore, I wyll repute you as a burthen, and will cast you out of my presence: yee, and the cite also, that I gaue you and your fathers: and will bypunge you to an euelllasting confusion, and into such a shame, as shall neuer be forgotten.

Chapter. xliii.

The bypion of the two panniers of fygges. The first bypion synneth that parte of þ people shuld be brought agayne from captiuite. The second that zedekias & the rest of the people shulde be destroyed.

The Lorde shewed me a bypion: Be-holde, there stode two maundes of fygges before the temple of the Lorde, after that * Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon had led away captiue Iechoni-as the sonne of Iehoa-kim kynge of Iuda, & myghtie men also of Iuda, with the work-masters, and conynge men of Ierusalem, vnto Babilon. In the one maunde were very good fygges, euen lyke as those þ be first ripe. In þ other maunde were very naughty fygges, which might not be eaten, they were so euell. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: what seyst thou Jeremy? I sayde * fygges, wherof some be very good, & some so euell, that no man maye cate them.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, after this maner: Thus saith the Lorde the God of Israell: lyke as thou knowest the good figges, so shall I knowe þ men led away, whom I haue sent out of this place into the lande of the Caldees, for they: pro-fyte: and I will set myne eyes vpon the for the best, for I wyll bypunge the agayne into this lande: I wyll buylde them vp, and not bryake them downe: I will plante them, & not rote them out. * And I wyll geue them an herte, to knowe how that I am the Lorde. They shal be my people, & I will be their God, for they shall retorne vnto me with their whole herte.

* And lyke as thou knowest the naugh-tie figges, which maye not be cate, they are so euell: Euen so wyll I (sayeth the Lorde) let zedekias the kynge of Iuda, (ye and all his princes, & the residue of Ierusalem that remayne ouer in thys lande, and them also that dwell in Egypte) to be vexed and pla-ged in all kyngdomes and lades. And wyll make them to be a * reppose, a comen by worde, a laughyng stocke and shame, in all the places, where I shall scatre them. I wil sende the swerde, hunger & pestilence amonge them, vntyll I haue cleane consumed them out of

out of the lande, that I gaue vnto them ad they fathers.

The xxv. Chapter.

Jeremy propheseth that they shall be in capti- uitye. lxx. yeres, because they contemned and dyf- phed the wyde of God. He sheweth that after lxx. yeres the Babylonians shalbe destroyed. The de- struction of all nations is prophesied. The mouth of the yeres of the nations to warpyng.

A sermon that was geuen vnto Je- remy, vpon all the people of Iuda. In the fourth yere of Jehoakim the sonne of Josias kynge of Iuda that was in the fyrst yere of Nabuchodo- nosor kynge of Babylon. Which sermon, Je- remy the prophet made vnto all the people of Iuda, and to all the inhabitours of Jeru- salem, on this maner.

From the thyrtyene yere of Josias the sonne of Amon kynge of Iuda, vnto thys present dape (that is euen. xxiii. yere) the worde of the Lorde hath bene comitted vn- to me. * And so I haue spoken to you, I ha- ue ryfen vpearly, I haue geuen you war- nyng in season, but ye wolde not heare me. * Though the Lorde hath sent hys seruaun- tes, all the prophetes vnto you in seasō. Yet wolde ye not obeie, ye wolde not enclpne poure eares to heare.

He sayde * turne agayne euery man from his cuell waye, and from your wicked yma- ginaciōs, and so shall ye dwell for euer in p lande, that the Lorde promised you & poure forefathers. And go not after straunge god- des, serue them not, worship them not, and angre me not wyth the workes of your hā- des: then wyl not I punish you. Neuerthe- les ye wolde not heare me (sayth the Lorde:) but haue defied me with p workes of your handes, to pour a wne greate harme.

Wherfore thus sayeth p Lorde of hostes: * Because ye haue not herkened vnto my worde, lo, I wyl sende out, & call for all the people, that dwell in the North, sayeth the Lorde, and will prepayre Nabuchodonosor the kynge of * Babylon my seruaunt, and will bypunge the vpon this lande, and vpon all that dwell therein, and vpon all the peo- ple that are aboute them, and wyl vtterly rote them oute. I will make of the a wilde- nesse, a mockage, and a continuall deserte.

* Moreover, I wyl take from them the voyce of gladnesse and solace, the voyce of the bypdegrome and the bypde, the voyce of the anoynted, with the cressettes: and thys whole lande shall become a wyldernes, and these nations shall serue the kynge of Ba- bylon, threscore yeres and ten. * When the lxx. yeres are expired, I wyl vsset also p wyckednesse of the kynge of Babylon and his people sayeth the Lorde: yee, and the lande of the Caldees, and wyl make it a perpetuall wyldernes, and wyl fulfill all my wordes vpon that lande, which I haue deuised agaynst it: yee, all that is writte in this boke, which Jeremy hath prophesied of all people: so that they also shall be sub- dued vnto diuers nations & great kynges * for I wyl recompense them, accordyng to they dedes and workes of they adone handes.

For thus hath p Lorde God of Israel spo- ken vnto me: Take this wyne cuppe of in- dignacion fro my hande, that thou mayest cause all the people, to whom I send the, for to dryncke of it: that when they haue dryn- ken therof, they maye be mad, & out of their wyttcs, when the swearde cometh, that I wyl sende amonge them. Then toke I the cuppe from the Lordes hande, and made all people to dryncke therof, vnto whome the Lorde had sent me.

But fyrst the cytie of Jerusalem, & all the cyties of Iuda, their kynges ad prynces, to make them desolate, wast, despyled, ad hyf- sed at, and cursed, accordyng as it is come to passe this dape. Yee, and Pharaō p kinge of Egypte, his seruauntes, his prynces and his people all together one wyth another & all kynges of the lande of hus, all kynges of the Philistines lande, Ascalon, Azah, Ac- caron and p remnaunt of Asdod, p Edomi- tes, the Moabites and the Ammonites al p kynges of Cyrus & Sidō: the kinges of the Isles that are beyonde the see: Dedan, Che- ma, Buz & all the p dwell in the vttermoost partes of p worlde: all the kinges of Araby and (generally) all the kynges that dwell in the deserte: al the kinges of Samri, al p kyn- ges of Elam, all the kinges of the Medes, all kynges towarde p North, whether they be farre or nye, euery one agaynst his neygh- bours: Yee, and all the kyngdomes that are vpon p whole earth. The kynge of Sezach sayde he shall dryncke with them also.

Therfore saye thou vnto them: Thys is the commaundemēt of the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Dryncke and be drynckē, spewe and fall, that ye neuer ryse, and that thozowe the swearde, whych I wyl sende amonge you. But yf they will not receaue the cuppe of thy hande, and dryncke it, then tell them: Thus both the Lorde of hostes threaten you: dryncke it ye shall, and that thortely. For lo, * I begynne to plage p cy- tie, that my name is geue vnto: thinke ye then that I wyl leaue you unpunished? Ye shal not go quyte, for why, I call for a swe- arde vpon all the inhabitours of the earth, sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

Therfore tell them all these wordes and saye vnto them, * The Lorde shall cryefre aboue, and let his voyce be herde from hys holy habytacion. With a great noyse shall he crye of Jeremy.

he crye from hys court regall. He shall geue a great voyce, lyke the grape gatherers, and the sounde ther of shalbe hearde vnto the en- des of the worlde. For the Lorde hath a iud- gement to geue vpon all people, & will holde his court of iustice with all fleshy, and punish the vngodly, sayth the Lorde.

For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: * Be- holde, a miserable plage shall goo from one people to another, and a greate stormy wa- ter shall drye fro all the endes of the earth. And the same dape shall the Lorde him selfe sleve them, from one ende of the earth to an- other. There shall no mone be made for eny of them, none gathered vp, none buryed: but shall lye as dunge vpon the grounde.

Wourne, O ye shepherdes, and crye: spyn- kle poure selues with ashes, O ye rammes of the flocke: for the tyme of poure slaughter is fulfilled, that ye shall slepe one another, and you shalbe scatred, and ye shall fall lyke vessels conyngly made.

* The shepherdes shall haue no waye to fle, and the rammes of the flocke shall not es- cape. Then shall the shepherdes crye horry- ly, and the rammes of the flocke shall mour- ne: for the Lorde hath consumed their pastu- re, and they best feldest lye deed because of p horryble wrath of the Lorde. They haue for- taken they foldes lyke as a lyon. For they lande is waste, because of his furiose cruel- ty, and of his fearfull indignatyon.

The xxvj. Chapter.

Jeremy moueth the people to amendment. He is take of the prophetes and prestes, and brought to iudgment. Eriah the prophete is kyled of Jo- achin, contrary to the weyl of God.

In the begynninge of the raygne of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Iuda, came thys worde fro the Lorde, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde: * Stande in the court of the Lordes house, and speake vnto all them which (oute of the cyties of Iuda) come to do worshyp in the Lordes house, all the wordes that I co- maunde the to saye. * Loke that thou kepe not one worde backe, yf peraduenture they wyl herken, and turne euery man from hys wycked waye: * that I maye also repente of the plage, which I haue determyned to bypunge vpon them, because of they wicked inuencyous.

And after thys maner shalt thou speake vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde: yf ye will not obey me, to walke in my lawes, which I haue geuen you, and to heare the wordes of my seruauntes the prophetes, who I sent vnto you, rplyng vpon tyme, and styll sen- dyng. If ye wyl not folowe them (I saye) then I wyl do to thys house * as I dyd vnto Siloh, and wyl make thys cite to be abhorred of all the people of the earth. And the prestes, the prophetes and all the prople hearde Jeremy preache these wordes, in the house of the Lorde.

Nowe when he had spoken out all the wordes that the Lorde commaunded him to preach vnto the people, then the prestes, the prophetes and all the people toke holde vpon him, and sayde: thou shalt dye. Howe darest thou be so bolde, as to saye in the name of p Lorde, it shall happē to thys house as it dyd vnto Siloh: and thys cite shalbe so waste, that no man shall dwell therein?

And when all the people were gathered about Jeremy in the house of the Lorde, the prynces of Iuda hearde of this rumour, and they came soone oute of the kynges palace, into the house of the Lorde: and sat the dow- ne before the * newe doze of the Lorde. Then spake the prestes and the prophetes vnto the rulers and to all the people, these wordes: * Thys man is worthy to dye, for he hath preached agaynst thys cite, as ye poure sel- ues haue hearde with your eares.

Then sayde Jeremy vnto the rulers and to all the people: The Lorde hath sent me to preache agaynst this house and agaynst this cytie all the wordes p ye haue heard. Ther- fore amende poure wayes, and poure aduy- sementes, and be obedient vnto the voyce of the Lorde poure God: so shall the Lorde re- pente of the plage, that he hath deuised aga- ynst you. Howe as for me: I am in your hā- des, do with me, as ye thynke expedient and good. But this shall ye knowe: yf ye put me to death, * ye shall make poure selues, thys cite and all the inhabitours therof, gyltye of innocent bloude. For thys is of a tructh that p Lorde hath sent me vnto you, to spea- ke all these wordes in poure eares.

Then sayde the rulers and the people vn- to the prestes and prophetes: This mā maye not be condempned to death, for he hath prea- ched vnto vs in the name of the Lorde oure God. The elders also of the lande stode vp, and saide thus vnto all the people: Michah the Mozaabite, * which was a prophet vn- der Ezechiah kynge of Iuda, spake to all the people of Iuda. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * Syon shalbe plowed lyke a felde, Ierusalem shalbe an heape of stones, and the hyll of the Lordes house shalbe turned to an hye wod. Wyl Ezechiah the kynge of Iuda, and the people of Iuda put hym to death for thys? No verely: * but rather feared p Lorde, and made they prayer vnto hym. For the which cause also the Lorde repented of the plage, that he had deuised agaynst them.

Shulde we then do soch a shamefull dede a- gaynst oure soules? There was a prophete also, that preached styfly in the name of the Lorde, called Eriah the sonne of Semeiah of Cariathiarim: this man preached also a- gaynst this cite and agaynst this lande, ac- cordyng corning to all as Jeremy sayth. Nowe whe * Jehoakim the kinge with all the estates & princes had hearde hys wordes, the kyng went about to slaye hym. * When Iriah perceaued that, he was afrayed, and fledd, and departed into Egypte.

Then Iehoaikim the kynge sent Seruantes into the lande of Egypt, namely Elna- than the sonne of Achboz, and certayne men with hym into Egypt, which seeched Ariah out of Egypt, and brought him vnto kynge Iehoaikim, that slewe him with the sword, and cast hys deed bodye into the comen peoples graue. But Abiham the sonne of Saphan helped Ieremye, that he came not into the handes of the people to be slayne.

¶ The xxviij. Chapter.

¶ Accrump, at the commaundment of the Roys, sendeth bondes to the Kings of Iuda, and to the other Kinges that were ney, whereby they are mouged to become subiectes vnto Nabuchodonosor. He warneth the people and princes and rulers, that they be leue not false prophetes.

And the begynninge of the reygne of Ichoakim the sone of Josiah kyng of Iuda, came this word vnto Jeremy from the Lorde, which spake thus vnto me: Make the bondes and chay-nes, and put them about thy necke, and send them to the kyng of Edom, to the kyng of Moab, to the kyng of Ammon, to the king of Tyrus, and to the kyng of Sidon: and that by the messengers, which shall come to Jerusalem vnto zedekiah the kinge of Juda: and byd them saye vnto theyr masters: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: speake thus vnto your masters: * I am he that made the earth, the men and the catell that are vpon the grounde, with my great power and outstretched arme, and haue geuen it vnto who it pleased me. * And now will I deliuer all these landes into the power of Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon: my seruaunt. The beastes also of the felde shall I geue hym to do hym seruyce.

* And all people shall serue hym, & hys sonne, and his childers children, vntill the tyme of the same lade become also: yee, many people and great thinges shall serue him.

Mozeouer, that people and kyngdome, which wyll not serue Nabuchodonosor, and that wyll not putt theyr neckes vnder the pocke of the kyng of Babilon: the same people wyll I vsset with the swearde, with hōger, with pestilence, vntyll I haue consumed them in mys handes, sayeth the Lorde.

* And therefore, folowe not your prophetes, soothsayers, expounders of dreames, charmers and wytches: which saye vnto you: ye shall not serue the kyng of Babylon. For they preache you lyes: to byynge you farr from your lande, and that I might cast you out, and destroye you. But the people that put theyr neckes vnder the yock of the king of Babylon, and serue hym, those I will let remayne styll in their awne lande, sayth the Lorde, and they shall occupie it, and dwell therin.

All these thynges tolde I Iedekiah the king of Iuda, and sayde: * But your neckes vnder the yoke of the king of Babylon, and serue him and his people, that ye maye lyue. Why wylt thou and thy people perishe with the swearde, with hunger, with pestilence: lyke as the Lorde hath deuyd for all people, that wyl not serue the kynge of Babylon: * Therefore, geue no care vnto those prophetes, that tell you: ye shall not serue the kynge of Babylon: for they preache you lies: nether haue I sente them, sayeth the Lorde. Howbeit they are bolde, falsely to prophesy in my name: that I myght the sooner dryue you out, and that ye myght perishe with y^e preachers. I spake to the prestes also, and to all the people. Thus sayth the Lorde: heare not the wordes of those prophetes, þ^e preache vnto you, and saye: Beholde, * & the vessels of the Lordes house shall thorowlye be brought hyther agayne from Babylon. For they prophecy lyes vnto you. Heare them not, but serue the kynge of Babylon, that ye maye lyue. Wherfore wyl ye make this cite to be destroyed? But yf they be true prophetes in very dede, and yf the worde of the Lorde be committed vnto them, then let them praye the Lorde of hostes, that the remaunt of the ornamentes (which are in the house of the Lorde, and remayne yet in the house of the kynge of Iuda and at Ierusalem) be not caried to Babylon also: For thus hath the Lorde of hostes spoken concerninge the pylers, the lauer, the seate and the resydue of the ornamentes that yet remayne in this cite, which Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon toke not, * when he caried awaye Iechoniah the sonne of Iehoaikim king of Iuda with all the power of Iuda and Ierusalem, from Ierusalem vnto Babylon, captiue.

¶ See, thus hath the Lorde of hooffes the God of Israel spoken, as touchynge the re-sydue of the ornaments of the Lordes house, of the kynge of Iudaes house, and of Jerusalem. * They shalbe carped vnto Babilon, and there they shall remaine vntill I byset them, sayth the Lorde. * Then will I byynge them hyther agayne. And thys was done in the same yere, euen in the begynnyng of the raygne of zedekiah kynge of Iuda.

The xxviii. Chapter.

¶ The false prophesie of Hananiah the prophete.
Jeremye sheweth that the prophesie of Hananiah is false, by example of the other prophetes. He beinge interpreed of the Lorde, revilyously Hananiah, prophesyinge his death.

But

of Jeremye,

¶ Fe. lxxiii.

BUt in the. iiii. yeare of the raygne of zedekiah kinge of Iuda, in the
v. moneth, it happened þ Hana-niah the sonne of Aſſur þ propheet of Gibeſ, ſpake to me in the houſe of the Lorde, in the preſence of the preſtes, & of all the people, and ſayde: Thus ſayth the Lorde of hoſtes the God of Iſrael: I haue broken the yocke of the kinge of Babilon, * & after two yeare will I brynge agayne into this place: all the ornaments of the Lordes houſe, that Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babilon caried awaye from this place vnto Ba-bilon. Yee, I wyll brynge agayne Iechoniah the ſonne of Jehoakim þ kinge of Iuda hym ſelfe, with all the preſoners of Iuda (that are carped vnto Babilon) euē into thys place, ſayth the Lorde: for I wyll breake the yocke of the kinge of Babilon.

Then the prophet Jeremy gaue answere vnto the prophet Hananiab, befoze the prestes and befoze all the people that were present in the houle of the Lord. * And the pro-phete Jeremy sayde: Amen, the Lorde do þ, and graunte the thyng which thou hast propheced: that he maye byyng agayne all the ornamentes of the Lordes house, and restore all the presoners from Babylon into this place. Neuerthelesse, herken thou also, what I wyll saye, that thou and all the people maye heare. The prophetes that were before vs in tyme past, which ppheced of war-re, oz trouble, oz pestilence, ether of peace, by many nacyns and great kingdomes, were proued by thys (yf God had sende the in very dede) * when the thyng came to passe, which that prophete tolde befoze.

C And Hananiah the prophet toke y chayne from the prophete Jeremyes necke, and brake it, and with that sayde Hananiah, y all the people might heare. Thus hath the Lorde spoken: Euen so will I breake y yocke of Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon, from the neck of all nacions: yee, and that within this two yeaere: And so the prophete Jeremye went his waye. Nowe after that Hananiah the prophete had taken the chayne from the prophete Jeremyes necke, and brake it. The worde of the Lorde came vnto the prophete D Jeremy, sayeng: Go, and tell Hananiah thes wordes. Thus sayth the Lorde. Thou hast broken the chayne of wodd: but in steade of wodd thou shalt make cheynes of yron. For thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: I wyll put a yocke of yron vpo the necke of all this people, that they maye serue Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon: yee, and so shall they do. And I wyll geue hym the bestes in the felde. Then sayde the prophete E Jeremy vnto the prophete Hananiah: *heare me Hananiah: The Lorde hath not sent y but thou bringest this people into a falsse be-lefe. And therfore thus sayth the Lorde : be-holde, I wyll sende the out of the lande, and withyn a yere thou shalt dye, because thou hast falsely spoken agaynst the Lorde. So Hananiah the prophete dyed the same yere in the seuenth moneth.

The xxix. Chapter.

The pistle of Jeremie, sent vnto them that were in captiuitie in Babilon. He prophceeth they; retuene from captiuitie after .lxx. yeares. He prophceeth the destruccion of the kinge and of the people that remained in Ierusalem. He threatnith two prophetes that seduced the people. The death of Semeiah the Belhelamite is prophced.

These are the wordes of the boke, that Jeremy the prophet sent fro Jerusalem vnto the pzesoners, & senatoures, prestes, prophetes, & all the people, whō Nabuchodonosoz had led vnto Babilon: after that time that king Iechoniah and his quene, his chā-berlaynes, the princes of Iuda and Ierusalem, the workeemasters of Ierusalem were departed thither: Which boke Elasah the sonne of Saphan, and Gamariah the sonne of helkiah dyd beare, whō zedekiah pkyng of Iuda sent vnto Babilon to Nabuchodonosoz the kinge of Babilon: these were the wordes of Jeremyes boke.

Thus hath the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel spöke vnto all the p̄soners, that were led from Ierusalem vnto Babylon: *
buielde you houses to dwel therein: plāte you gardēs, that ye maye enioye the frutes ther-of: * take you wyues, to beare you sonnes & daughters, prouyde wyues for your sonnes and hysbādes for your daughters that they maye get sonnes and daughters, and that ye maye multiplie there. Labour not to be fe-we, but seke after peace and prosperite of y citty, wherein ye be p̄soners, * & praye vnto God for it. For in y peace therof, shall y peace be. For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel. * Let not these prophetes and sothsayers y be amōg you disceaue you: & beleue not your awne dreames. For why?
* they p̄ache you lyes in my name, and I haue not sent them, sayth the Lorde.

But thus sayth the Lorde: * Whe ye haue fulfilled, lxx. yeares at Babylon, I will brynge you home, & of myne awne goodnes I will carpe you hyther agayne into thys place. For I know what I haue deuised for you, sayth the Lorde. My thoughtes are to geue you peace, and not trouble (which I geue you all ready, and that ye myght haue hope againe. * Ye shall crye vnto me, ye shall go and call vpon me, and I shall heare you.
* Ye shall seke me and fynde me. Yee, yf so be that ye seke me with your whole hert, I wil be founde of you, sayth the Lorde, and will delyuer you oute of prison, and gather you together agayne out of all places, wherin I haue scatered you, sayeth the Lorde, and I will

The prophecie

will bring you againe to the same place, from whence I caused you to be carried away captive. But where as ye saye, y God hath raised you up prophetes at Babylon. Thus hath the Lord spoken to the kinge that sitteth in the throne of David, and to all the people that dwell in this cite, your brethren that are not gone with you into captivitye. Thus (I saye) speaketh the Lord of hostes: Beholde, * I will sende a sworde, hunger and pestilence vpon them, and will make them lyke vnto the fygges, y maye not be eaten for bitterness. And I will persecute them with the sworde, with hunger, and pestilence.

I will deliuer them up to be vexed of all kingdomes, to be cursed, abhorred, laughed to scorn, and put to confusyon of all the people, amonge whom I haue scattered the: and that because they haue not bene obedient vnto my commaundementes, sayth the Lord, which I sente vnto them by my seruantes the prophetes. * I stode up early, and sent vnto them: but they wolde not heare, sayeth the Lord. Heare therfore the worde of the Lord, all ye prisoners, whom I sente from Jerusalem vnto Babylon. Thus hath the Lord of hostes the God of Israel spoken of Ahab the sonne of Colaiab, and of Zedekiah the sonne of Maasiah, which prophecie I yes vnto you in my name. Beholde, I will deliuer them into the hande of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, that he maye slaye them before your eyes. And all the prisoners of Juda, that are in Babylon shall take vpon this terme of cursynge, and saye: Nowe God do vnto the, as he byd vnto Zedekiah and Ahab, whom the kinge of Babylon rosted in the fyre, because they synned shamefully in Israel.

For they haue not onely defiled their neighbours wyues, but also preached lynging wordes in my name, which I haue not commaunded them. This I testifie, and assure, sayth the Lord. But as for Semeiah the Nehelamite thou shalt speake vnto hym. Thus sayth y Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Because thou hast sealed letters vnder thy name vnto all y people that is at Jerusalem, and to Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah the preste: yee, I sent them to all the prestes: wherein thou wyrttest thus vnto hym: The Lord hath ordeyned the to be preste in the stead of * Jehoiada the preste: that thou shuldest be the chefe in the house of the Lord aboue all prophetes, and preachers, and y mightest set them vpon the pillery, or in the stocks. Howe happeneth it then, that y hast not reproved Jeremie of Anathoth, which neuer leaueh of his prophecenge. And besyde all this, he hath sent vs worde vnto Babylon, and tolde vs playnely, that oure captiuitie shall longe endure: that we shulde buylde vs houses to dwell therein: & to plante vs gardens that we maye enioye the frutes thereof. Which lettre Sophoniah the preste redde, and let Jeremie the prophete heare it.

Then came the worde of the Lord vnto Jeremie, sayinge: Sende worde to all them that be in captiuitie, on this maner: Thus hath the Lord spoken concerning Semeiah the Nehelamite: * Because that Semeiah hath prophecied vnto you without my commaundment, & brought you into a fals hope, therfore thus the Lord dothe certifie you: Beholde, I will viset Semeiah the Nehelamite, and his seede: so that none of his shall remaine amonge this people, and none of the shall see the good, that I will do for this people, sayth the Lord. For he hath preached falsely of the Lord.

The xxx. Chapter.

The retourne of the people from Babylon. God by his charyng sheweth that the people is synfull. The destruction of the enemies of Israel.

These are the wordes, that the Lord sheweth vnto Jeremie, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lord God of Israel: * Wryte vp diligently all the wordes, that I haue spoken vnto the, in a booke. For so, the tyme cometh, sayth the Lord, that I will bringe agayne the prisoners of my people of Israel and Juda, sayth the Lord. For I will restore them vnto the lande, that I gaue to theyr fathers, & they shall haue it in possession.

Agayne, these wordes spake the Lord, concerning Israel and Juda: Thus sayth y Lord: We haue hearde a terrible crye, feare and disquietnes. For what elles dothys signifye, that I se? Namely, that all stronge men synne, euer y man bys hande vpon his loynes, * as a womā in the paine of her travayle: who euer sawe a man travayle with childe? Enquyre thereafter, and se. Yee, all their faces are maruelous pale.

Alas for this daye, which is so dredefull that none maye be likened vnto it: and alas for the tyme of Jacobs trouble, from y which he shall yet be deliuered. For in that daye, sayth the Lord, I will take his pocke from of thy neck, & breake thy bondes: And strangers shall nomore serue hym: but they shall do scrute vnto God theyr Lord, and to * David theyr kynge, whom I will rapse vp vnto them: * And as for the, O my seruant Jacob, feare not, sayth the Lord, and be not afraid, O Israel. For so, I will helpe the also from farre, and thy seed from the lande of their captiuitie.

And Jacob shall turne agayne, he shall be in rest, and haue a prosperous lyfe, & no man shall make hym afraid. For I am with the to helpe the, sayth the Lord. * And though I shall

of Jeremie,

Jo. lxxiii.

I shall destroye all the people, amonge whom I haue scattered the, yet will I not destroye the, but correcte the, * and that with discretion: For I knowe that thou art in no wyse without faute. Therfore thus sayth the Lord: Thy bysinges are peryllous, & thy woundes ready to cast y in to sickness. Ther is no man to medle with thy cause, or to lay plaster vpon the, or to bynde vp thy woundes: there maye no man helpe the.

All thy louers haue forgottē the, and care nothynge for the. For I haue geuen the a cruell stroke, and chastened the roughly: and that for the multitude of thy mysdedes: for thy synnes haue had the ouer hande. Why makest thou mone for thy harme? in dede, thou art sore wounded & in leopardeye: * but for the multitude of thy mysdedes and synnes, I haue done this vnto the.

And therfore, all they that deuoure the, shall be deuoured: and all thyne enemies shall be led into captiuitie. All they that make the wast, shall be wasted them selues, & all those that robbe the, will I make also to be robbed. For I will geue the thy health agayne and make thy woundes whole, sayth the Lord: because they reupled the, as one cast awaye and despised, Syon (sayde they) is she whom no man regardeth.

For thus sayth the Lord: Beholde, * I will bringe agayne the captiuitie of Jacobs tentes, and defende his dwelling place. The cite shall be buylde in her olde estate, and y houses shall haue their ryght foundation, And out of them shall go thakesgeuing, and the voyce of ioye.

I will multiplie them, and they shall not be fewe. I shall endue them with honoure, & no man shall subdue them. Theyr chyldren shall be as a fore tyme, and their congregacion shall continue in my syght. And all those that vexed them, will I vyset.

A captayne also shall come of them: and a pryncce shall sprynge out from the myddest of them: hym will I challege to my selfe, and he shall come vnto me. * For what is he, y geueth ouer his hert to come vnto me? sayth the Lord. * Ye shall be my people also, and I will be your God. * Beholde, on the other syde shall the wrath of the Lord breake out as a stormy water as a mighty whirle winde: and shall fall vpon the heades of the vngodly.

The terrible displeasure of the Lord shall not leaue of, but yll he haue done, and performed the intent of his herte, * which in the latter dayes ye shall vnderstande. At the same tyme, sayth the Lord, shall I be the God of all the generacions of Israel, and they shall be my people.

The xxx. Chapter.

The prophecies that the people of Israel shall be restored agayne vnto theyr prosperitie. To be turned from synne is the gyfte of God. The bysch of Chyche is propheted. All the wycked shall dye in theyr wyckednes. The new testamēt and couenaunt is propheted. The chyrtian are taught and instructed of the Lord. Dure synnes shall be remytted, that they not ones be thought on. God promyseth, that he will cast of the Jewes. The buyllynge agayne of Jerusalem.

Thus sayeth the Lord: * The people of Israel, which escaped in the wilderness from the swerde, founde grace to come into theyr rest. Que so shall the Lord now also appeare vnto me from farre, and saye: * I loue the with an euerlasting loue, therefore, by my mercye I haue drawen the to me. I will repayre the agayne, O thou daughter of Israel, y thou mayest be fast and sure. Thou shalt take thy tabrettes agayne, and go forth with them, that leade the daunce.

Thou shalt plante vynes agayne vpon y hylls of Samaria, and the grape gatherers shall plante, and commonly eate of it.

For the dayes shall come when the watchmen vpon the mount of Ephraim shall crye: * aryse, let vs go vp vnto Sion to our Lord God, for thus sayth the Lord: Reto- pce with gladnes because of Jacob, crie vnto the head of the Gentils: speake out, syng, and saye: O Lord saue thy people, the remnant of Israel, and make them whole. Beholde, I will bringe them agayne from out of the north lande, and gather them from the endes of the worlde, with the blynde and lame that are amonge them, with the women that be great with chylde, and soch as be also deliuered: and the company of them that come agayne, shall be greute.

They shall come weping and with mercysfull pitye will I bringe the hyther agayne. I will leade them to the ryuers of water in a straght waye, where they shall not stamble. * For I am Israels father, & Ephraim is my fyrst borne.

Heare the worde of the Lord, O ye Gentiles, preach in the ples, that I ye farre of, and saye: he that hath scattered Israel, shall gather hym together agayne, & shall kepe hym as a shepherde doth his flocke. For the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and redde hym from the hande of the violent. And they shall come, & reioyce vpon the hyll of Sion, and shall haue plentousnes of goodes, which the Lord shall geue the. Namely, wheate, wyne, oyle, yoge shepe & calves. And theyr consciences shall be as a well watred garden, for they shall nomore be hongrye.

Then shall the mayde reioyce in the daunce, yee, both yonge and olde folkes. For I will turne their sorowe into gladnesse, and will conforzte them from theyr sorowes and make them ioyfull. I will powre plenteousnesse vpon the hertes of the prestes, and my people

 D Lorde, thou hast correct me, & thy chastenynge haue I receaued, & as an vntamed calfe: Conuerter thou me, and I shall be conuerted: for thou art my Lorde God: yee, as sone as thou turnest me, I shall reforme my selfe: and when I vnderstande, I shall smyte vpon my thighe. For verely I haue committed shamefull thinges. For I haue bozne the reprofe and cōfusiō of my youth.*

I wyll plante my lawe in the inward partes of them, and wyte it in their hertes, & wyll be their God, and they shall be my people.*

And from thens forth, shall no mā teach his neyghbour or his brother, & saye: knowe the Lorde. But they shall all knowe me fro the lowest vnto the hiest, sayth the Lorde. For I will forgene their myddedes, and will neuer remēbre their synnes any more. Thus sayth the Lorde, which gaue the sunne to be a lyght for the daye, and the moone and starres to shyne in the night: which moueth the see, so that the floudes therof waxe fere: his name is the Lorde of hostes. Like as this ordinaunce shall neuer be taken oute of my syght, sayth the Lorde. So shall the sede of Israel neuer cease, but all waye be a people before me.

Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde: lyke as the heauen aboue cannot be measured, & as the foundaciōs of the earth beneth maye not be sought out.  So wyll I also not cast out the whole sede of Israel, for that they haue committed, sayeth the Lorde. Beholde, the dayes come, sayth the Lorde, that the cite of the Lorde shall be enlarged from the towre of Hananeel, vnto the gate of y corner wall: from thens shall the ryght measure be takē before her vnto the hyll toppe of y Gath, & shall come about Gath, and the whole valley of the dede starkales, and of the ashes, & all the feldes vnto the broke of Cedron: and vnto the corner of the hogate towarde the east, where as the sanctuary of the Lorde also shall be set. And when it is nowe buylde, and set vp of thys fasthyon, it shall neuer be broken, nor cast downe any more.*

 Jeremy is cast into prison, because he prophesied that the cite shoulde be taken of the kynge of Babylon. The people of God are hys seruantes, and he is the Lorde. To feare God, is to do his wylle, to the entent that synners maye be elchyd.*

These wordes spake the Lorde vnto Jeremy, in the x. yere of zedekiah king of Iuda: which was the xviij. yere of Nabuchodonosor, what tyme as the kynge of Babylon layed seage vnto Ierusalem. But Jeremy the prophet laye boude in the courte of the prison, which was in the king of Iudas house: where zedekiah the kynge of Iuda caused hym to be layed, because he had prophesied of this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde:  Beholde, I wyll deliuer this cite into the handes of the kynge of Babilō, which shall take it. As for zedekiah the kynge of Iuda: he shall not be able to escape the Chaldees: but surely he shall come into the handes of the kynge of Babylon: which shall speake w him mouth to mouth: and one of the shall loke another in y face. And zedekiah shall be carped vnto Babylon, and there shall he be, vntill the tyme that I viset hym, sayth the Lorde. But yf y takest in hande to fpyght agaynst y Chaldees, thou shalt not prosper. And Jeremy sayde: thus hath the Lorde spoken vnto me: Behold, Hananeel the sonne of Selum thynne vnclis sonne, shall come vnto the, and requyre the to redeme the lāde that lyeth in Anathoth vnto thy selfe:  for by reason of kynred it is thy right to redeme it, and to bye it out.

And Hananeel myne vnclis sonne came to me in the court of the prison, accordynge to the worde of the Lorde, and sayde vnto me:  Bye my lande, I praye the, that lieth in Anathoth in the contrey of Benjamin: for by heritage thou hast ryght to looke it oute for thy selfe, therfore redeme it. Then I perceaued that thys was the cōmāndement of the Lorde, and so I bought the lāde from Hananeel of Anathoth, myne vnclis sonne, and weied him there the moneye: euen seuen shekles and ten syluer pence.*

I caused hym also to make me a writing and to seale it: and called recorde therby, and weied hym there the money vpon the wayghtes.  So I toke the euidence with the cōpye, when it was orderlye sealed and redde ouer, and I gaue the euidence vnto Baruch the sonne of Meriah the sonne of Maasiah in the syght of Hananeel my cosyne, and in the presence of the witnesses, that be named in the euidence: and before all the Jewes that were therby in the courte of the prison.*

I charged Baruch also before them sayinge:  The Lord of hostes the God of Israel cōmāndeth the, to take thys sealed euidence with the cōpye: and to laye it in an earthen vessel, that it maye longe continue. For the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel hath determyned that houses, feldes, and vyneyardes shall be possessed agayne in this lande.*

Now when I had deliuered the euidence vnto Baruch y sonne of Meriah, I besought the Lorde, saying:  O Lord God, it is thou that hast made heauen and earth with thy greate power and hie arme, and there is no thyng hyd from the. Thou the west mercy vpon thousandes, thou recōpencest the wickednes of the fathers, into the bosome of the chyldren that come after them.*

Thou art the greate and myghty God, whose name is the Lorde of hostes: greate in counsell, and excellent in worcke. Thynne eyes loke vpon all the wayes of mens chyldren,  to reward euery one after his waye: & accordyng to the frutes of his inuencions.*

Thou hast done greate tokens and wonders in the lande of Egypte, as we se thys daye, vpon the people of Israel and vpon those men: to make thy name greate, as it is come to passe thys daye. Thou hast brought thy people of Israel oute of y land of Egypt, with tokens, with wonders, with a myghty hande, with a stretched out arme and w greate terribleness: and hast geuen them this lande, lyke as thou haddest promysed vnto their fathers. Namely, that thou woldest geue them a lande, that floweth with mylke and honye.

Nowe when they came therin, and possessed it, they folowed nōt thy voyce, and walked not in thy lawe,  but all that thou cōmāndedest them to do, that haue they not done, and therfore come all these plagges vpon them.*

Beholde, there are bullwockes made now agaynst the cite, to take it: and it shall be wōne of the Chaldees that besege it, with swerde, with hunger and death, and looke what thou hast spokē, that same shall come vpon them.

For lo, all thynges are present vnto the.  Yet saist thou vnto me, O Lorde God, and cōmāndest me, that I shall loose a pece of lande vnto my selfe, and take witnesses therto: and yet in the meane season the cite is deliuered into the power of the Chaldees.*

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, saying:  Beholde, I am the Lorde God of all fleshe, is there any thyng then to hard for me? Therfore thus saith the Lorde: Beholde, I shall deliuer thys cite into the power of the Chaldees, and into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, they shall take it in. For the Chaldees shall come, and wyne thys cite, and sett spere vpon it, and burne it: with the gorgeouse houses, in whose parlours they haue made sacrifice vnto Baal, and powred drynckofferynges vnto straunge Goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrath.*

For seying the chyldren of Israel, and the chyldren of Iuda haue wrought wickednes before before me ever fro the yth youth vp, what haue they els done, but prouoked me wth p^rouokers of their awne handes: sayth the Lorde.

¶ What hath this cite bene elles but a prouoking of my w^rath, euer & sence the daye that they buyled it, vnto thys houre wherein I cast it out of my sight, because of the great blasphemys of the chylzen of Israel & Iuda, which they haue done to prouoke me: yee, they, their kynge, their p^rynces, their prestes, their prophetes, the men of Iuda, and the cyties of Ierusalem.

¶ When I stode vp early, and taught the and instructed them, they turned their backs to me, and not they^r faces. They wolde not heare, to be reformed and correct: & but set their ydols in p^r house, that is halowed vnto my name, to despyle it. They haue builded hye places for Baal in the valley of the chylzen of Hennom, to vowe they^r sonnes and daughters vnto Moloch: which I neuer commaunded them: nether came it euer in my thoughte, to make Iuda synne with soch abhominatyon.

¶ And nowe therfore, thus hath the Lorde God of Israel spoken, concernynge this cite, which (as ye youre selues confesse) shalbe deliuered into the hande of the kynge of Babylon, when it is wonne with the sword, with hōger and with pestilence. ¶ Beholde, I will gather them together from all landes, wher in I haue scatered them in my w^rath in my fearfull and great displeasure: and wyl bring them agayne vnto thys place, where they shall dwell safely. And they shalbe my people, and I wilbe their God.

¶ And I wyl geue the one hert and one waye, that they maye feare me all the daies of their lyfe, that they and their chylzen after them maye prospere. ¶ And I wyl sett vp an euerlastyng couenaunt with the. Namelye, that I wyl neuer cease to do them good, and that I wyl put my feare in their hertes, so that they shall not runne awaye from me. ¶ Yee, I will haue a lust and pleasure to do the good, and saythfully to plate them in this lande with my whole hert and with all my soule.

¶ For thus sayth the Lorde: I like as I haue brought all this great plage vpon this people, euen so wyl I also bring vpon them all p^r good, that I haue promysed the. And men shall haue their possessions in this lāde, wherof ye sape now, that it shall nether be inhabited of people ner of catell: but be deliuered into the handes of the Chaldees. Yee, lande shalbe bought for money, & euidences made thereupon, and sealed before witnesses in the countrey of Benjamin, and rounde aboute Ierusalem, in the cities of Iuda, in the cities that are vpon the mountaynes, and in them that lye beneth: yee, and in p^r cities that are in the south. For I wyl bypunge their p^resoners hither agayne, sayth the Lorde.

¶ The xxxiiij. Chapter.
¶ The prophete is monished of the Lorde, to praye for the deliuerance of the people, which the Lorde promysed. God forgiveth synnes, and doth graciously to the people, for hys awne renowne. Of the birth of Christ. The kyngdome of Christ in p^r church shall neuer be ended.

¶ Moreover, the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremie on thys maner. ¶ When he was yet bound in the court of p^reson. Thus sayth the Lorde, which fulfilleth the thing that he speaketh: the Lorde which perfourmeth the thing that he taketh in hand: euen he, whose name is the Lorde: crye vnto me, & I wyl answere, and shewe the great and hye thinges, which were vnknewen vnto the.

¶ Thus (I sape) spake the Lorde God of Israel, concerninge the houses of thys cite, and the houses of the kynges of Iuda, p^r they are broken thowowe the ordinaunce and the sword. Because the inhabitours of this cite haue come to fight against the Chaldees: and they are fylled with the deed carcasses of men, whom I haue slepe in my w^rath and displeasure: when I turned my face fro thys cite, because of all her wickednes. Behold, sayth the Lorde, I wyl repayre & heale their woundes, and make the whole: I will open them the large treasure of peace and truelyth.

¶ And I will retorne the captiuitie of Iuda and Israel: and wyl set them vp agayne as they were afore. ¶ From all my dedes, wher in they haue offended agest me, I will cleanse the. And all their blasphemys which they haue done agaynst me, whē they regarded me not, I will forgue them.

¶ And thys shall get me a name, a prayse, & honoure among all the people of the earth, which shall heare all the good, that I wyl shewe vnto them: yee, they shall be afrayed and astonyed at all the good dedes and benesytes that I wyl do for them. Moreover, thus sayth the Lorde: ¶ In this place, wherof ye sape that it shalbe a wyldernes, wher in nether people ner catell shall dwell: in like maner in the cities of Iuda & without Ierusalem (which also shalbe so voyde, that nether people ner catell shall dwell there) shall p^r voyce of gladnes be heard agayne, the voyce of the bydegrome & of the byde, the voyce of them that shall singe: ¶ Prayse the Lorde of hostes, for he is louynge and hys mercy endureth for euer: and the voyce of them that shall offer vp giftes in the house of the Lorde. For I will restore the captiuitie of this lande, as it was afore, sayth the Lorde. ¶ Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: It shall come yet therto, that in thys lande, which is voyde from men and catell, and in all the cities of the lande, there shalbe set vp shepherdes cotages: in the cities vpon the mountay-mountaynes: and in the cyties that lye vpon the playne, and in the cyties of the southe.

¶ In the lande of Beniamin, in the felde of Ierusalem, and in the cyties of Iuda shall the shepe be nombred agayne, vnder p^r hande of hym, that tellecth them, sayeth the Lorde. ¶ Beholde, the tyme cometh, sayeth the Lorde, that I will perfourme that good thynge, which I haue promysed vnto the house of Israel and to the house of Iuda. In those dayes and at p^r same tyme, I wyl bring forth vnto Dauid, the braynche of ryghtuousnes, & he shall do equytie & righteounesse in the lande. In those dayes shall Iuda be helped & Ierusalem shall dwell safe, and he that shall call her is eue God oure ryghteousnesse. For thus the Lorde promyseth: ¶ Dauid shall neuer want one, to syt vpon the throne of the house of Israel: ¶ nether shall the prestes and Leuites wat one to offere allwaye before me burntofferings, to kyndle the meatofferynge, and to prepare the sacrificys.

¶ And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremie after this maner. Thus sayeth p^r Lorde: maye the couenaunt which I haue made wth daye and nyght be broken, that there shulde not be daye and nyght in due season? Then maye my couenaunt also be broken, which I made wth Dauid my seruaute, and so he not to haue a sonne to reygne in hys throne. ¶ So shall also p^r prestes & Leuites neuer fayle, but serue me. ¶ For lyke as p^r starres of heauen maye not be nombred, nether the sande of p^r see measured: so wyl I multiplie p^r sede of Dauid my seruaute, & the Leuites my ministers.

¶ Moreover, the worde of the Lorde came to Jeremie, saying: Cōsyderest thou not what this people speaketh? Two kynredes (saye they) had the Lorde chosen, & those same two hath he cast awaye. For so they haue despised my people & they reputed the as though they were no people. Therfore thus saith p^r Lorde: ¶ If I haue made no couenaunt with daye & nyght, & geue no statute vnto heauē & earth: the will I also cast awaye the sede of Iacob & Dauid my seruaute: so p^r I will take no p^rce out of his sede, to rule p^r posteritie of Abraham, Isaac & Iacob. But yet I wil turne agayne their captiuitie, & be mercyfull vnto them.

¶ The xxxiiiij. Chapter.
¶ Behethreateneth that the cite, and the kynge zedekiah also, shalbe geuen into the handes of the kynge of Babylon. He rebuketh them that broughte soche of they^r brethren into captiuitie, as were pardoned to go at they^r libertie.

¶ These are the wordes which p^r Lorde spake vnto Jeremie: ¶ what tyme as Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, & all his hostes (out of all the kingdomes p^r were vnder his power) & all hys people, fought agaynst Ierusalem and all the cyties therof. ¶ Thus sayeth p^r Lorde God of Israel: ¶ Soo, & spake to zedekiah the kynge of Iuda, and tell hym. The Lorde sendeth the thys worde: Beholde, ¶ I wyl deliuer thys cite into the hande of the kynge of Babylon, he shall burne it, and thou shalt not escape hys hādes, but shalt be led awaye p^resoner, & deliuered into his power. ¶ Thou shalt loke the kynge of Babylon in the face, and he shal speake with the, mouth to mouth and then shalt thou goo to Babylon. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde, ¶ zedekiah thou kynge of Iuda: ¶ Thus sayeth the Lorde vnto the. ¶ Thou shalt not be slayne with p^r sword, but shalt dye in peace. ¶ Lyke as thy fore fathers the kynges, thy progenitours, were bzente: so shalt thou be bzēt also, and in thy mourninge they shall sape: oh Lorde. For thus haue I determyned, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ Then spake Jeremie the prophete all these wordes vnto zedekiah kynge of Iuda in Ierusalem: what tyme as the kynge of Babylonys hooste beseged Ierusalem, and the remaunt of the cyties. Namely, Lachis and Azekach, which yet remayned of p^r stronge defended cyties of Iuda.

¶ These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremie the prophete, when zedekiah was agreed with all the people at Ierusalem, that there shulde be proclaimed ¶ a libertie: so that euery mā shuld let his seruaunt & handmayde go fre, hebreue and hebreuelle, and no Jewe to holde hys brother as a bonde man. Nowe as they had consented, all the princes and all the people which had gathered vnto this agrement that euery mā shulde set at libertie his bōde seruaunte and bonde woman and no longer to holde them bonde euen so they were obediēt, & let them go free. But afterwarde they repented, and toke agayne the seruautes and hande maydens, whom they had lett go free, and so made the lāde agayne.

¶ For the which cause the worde of p^r Lorde came vnto Jeremie fro the Lorde hym selfe, sayinge: ¶ Thus sayeth p^r Lorde God of Israel: ¶ I made a couenaunt with youre fathers, whē I brought the out of Egypt, (that they shulde no more be bondmen) sayinge. When sent yeares are oute, euery man shall let hys bought seruaute an hebreue go fre, yf he haue serued hym syxe yeares. But youre fathers obeyed me not & herkened not vnto me. As for you, ye were nowe turned, & did right before me, in that ye proclaimed, euery mā to let his neighbour go free, and in that ye made a couenaunt before me, in the tēple that beareth my name. But yet ye haue turned youre selues agayne, and blasphemed my name. In this, p^r euery man hath requyred his seruaute & hādmayde agayne, whō ye had let go quyte and free, & cōpelled the to serue you agayne, and to be youre bōde men, and bondwomen. And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: ye haue not obeyed me, euery man to proclame freedom come vnto his brother & neyghbour: wherfore, & I wyll call you vnto a freedome, sayeth the Lord: euen vnto the swearde, to pestilence, & to hunger, & will make you to be plagued in all the kyngdomes of the earth. Pee, those men þ haue broken my couenaunt, & not kepte the wordes of the appoyntment, which they made before me: * & when they heved the calfe in two, & when there wente thozowe the two halves therof: The Prynces of Iuda, the Prynces of Ierusalem, the gelled men, the prestes and all the people of the lande, which wente thozowe the two sydes of the calfe. Those men wyll I geue into the power of theyr enemies, & into the handes of them that folowe vpon theyr lynes.

* And their deed bodys shalbe meate for the foules of the ayre, & brastres of the felde. As for zedekiah the kyng of Iuda and hys Prynces, I wyll deliuer the into the power of their enemyes, and of them that desyre to slaye them, and into the hande of the kyng of Babylons hoste * which now is departed from you: But thozow my commaundement (sayeth the Lord) they shal come agayne before thys cytye, they shal fyght agaynst it, wyne it, and burne it: & moreover, I wyll laye the cyties of Iuda so waste, that no man shal dwell therein.

The xxxv. Chapter.

The propoundeth the obedience of the Rechabites, and thereby confoundeth the pryde of the Jewes. The commaundment of Ionadab, the father of the Rechabites. He threateneth punishment vnto the rebellious Jewes. He promyseth prosperite vnto the Rechabites, for theyr obedience vnto theyr father.

In the wordes whiche the Lord spake vnto Jeremye, in þ raygne of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kyng of Iuda, are these: So vnto the house of * the Rechabites, & call them out, and bryng them to the house of the Lord into some commodious place, and geue them wyne to dryncke. Then toke I Jazaniah the sonne of Jeremye the sonne of Habaziniyah, and his brethren, & all his sonnes, and the whole housholde of þ Rechabites: and brought them to the house of the Lord into the closet of the chyldren of Hanan the sonne of Jegedaliah the man of God: which was by the closet of the Prynces that is aboue the closet of Maasiah the sone of Selum, which is þ tresurer. And before the sonnes of the kynred of the Rechabites, I set pottes full of wyne, and cuppes, & sayde vnto them: Dryncke wyne. But they sayde: we wyll dryncke no wyne for Ionadab the sonne of Rechaboure father commaunded vs, saying: ye and poure sonnes shal neuer dryncke wyne * buyde no houses, sowe no seide, plante no vynges, yee, ye shal haue no vineyardes: but for all poure tyme ye shal dwell in tentes, that ye maye lyue longe in þ lande wherin ye be straungers.

of Ionadab the sonne of Rechaboure father in all that he hath charged vs, & so we drynke no wyne all oure lyfe longe: we, nor oure wynges, our sonnes and oure daughters. Neither builde we any house to dwell therein, we haue also amonge vs nether vineyardes, ner cornelands to sowe: but we dwell in tentes, we obeye, and do accorbynge vnto all, that Ionadab oure father commaunded vs.

But now that Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon came vnto þ lande, we sayde, come, lett vs go to Ierusalem, that we maye escape the hooste of the Caldees and the Assyrians: and so we dwell now at Ierusalem. Then came þ worde of þ Lord vnto Jeremye saying. Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: So and tell þ me of Iuda and þ inhabitours of Ierusalem: Will ye not be reformed, to obey my wordes sayeth þ Lord: The wordes which Ionadab the sonne of Rechaboure commaunded his sonnes, þ they shulde drynke no wyne, are fast and surely kept: for vnto thys daye they dryncke no wyne, but obeye their fathers commaundement. But as for me, * I haue stand vnto early, I haue spokē vnto you, & geuen you earnest warnyng: & yet haue ye not bene obedient vnto me. Pee, I haue sent my seruantes, all the prophetes vnto you, I rose vnto early, & sent you worde, sayinge: Turne you, nowe euery mā frō his wycked waye: amende poure lynes, and go not after straunge goddes, to worshyppe the: that ye maye continue in the lande, which I haue geuen vnto you & poure fathers, but ye wolde nether heare me, ner folowe me.

The chyldren of Ionadab Rechabs sonne haue stedfastly kepte their fathers commaundement, þ he gaue the, but this people is not obedient vnto me. And therfore thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I will bryng vpon Iuda & vpon euery one that dwelleth in Ierusalem, all the trouble þ I haue deuysed agaynst the. * For I haue spokē vnto them, but they wold not folowe. I haue called vnto them, neuertheless they wold geue me no answer. Jeremye also spake vnto the housholde of the Rechabites: Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: For so moche as ye haue obeyed the commaundement of Ionadab poure father, and kepte all hys preceptes, and done accorbyng vnto all that he hath bydde you: Therfore thus sayeth the Lord of hostes, þ God of Israel: * Ionadab the sonne of Rechaboure shal not sayle, but haue one out of his stocke to stande alwaye before me.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

Baruch wyrteth (as Jeremye endycteth) the boke of the curtes agaynst Iuda & Israel. He is sent with þ boke vnto the people, and readeth it before them all. He is called before the rulers, & readeth it before the also. The rulers shewe vnto the kyng the wordes of the boke. Jehudi taketh the boke, and readeth a lytell of it, and after casteth it in the fyre. There is another wyrtten, at the commaundement of the Lord.

In the

In the fourth yere of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kyng of Iuda, came the worde of the Lord vnto Jeremye, sayinge. * Take a boke, and wyrteth therein all the wordes, that I haue spoken to the, agaynst Israel agaynst Iuda, and agaynst all the people, from the tyme þ I beganne for to speake vnto the (in the raygne of Josiah) vnto thys daye. That when þ house of Iuda heareth of the plage, which I haue deuysed for them, they maye peraduenture * turne, euery man frō hys wycked waye, that I maye forgene theyr offences and synnes.

Then byd Jeremye call Baruch the sonne of Neriah, * and Baruch wyrote in the boke at the mouth of Jeremye, all the wordes of þ Lord, which he had spoken vnto hym. And Jeremye commaunded Baruch, sayinge: I am in prison, so that I maye not come into the house of the Lord: therfore go thou thyther, and reade the boke, that thou hast wyrtten at my mouth: Namely, the wordes of the Lord and redethem in the Lordes house vpon the fastynge daye, that the people, whole Iuda, and all they that come out of the cities, maye heare. Peraduenture they wyll praye meke-ly before the face of the Lord, & turne euery one from hys wycked waye. For greates is the wrath and displeasure, that þ Lord hath taken agaynst this people.

So Baruch the sonne of Neriah byd, accorbynge vnto all that Jeremye the Prophete commaunded him, readinge the wordes of the Lord out of the boke in the Lordes house. And this was done in þ fyft yere of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kyng of Iuda, in þ ix. moneth * when it was commaunded, that all the people of Ierusalem shulde fast before the Lord, and they also that were come from the cyties of Iuda vnto Ierusalem.

Then redde Baruch the wordes of Jeremye out of the boke with in the house of the Lord out of the treasury of Samariah the sonne of Sapha the Scribe, which is besyde the hyer losse of the * newe doze of the Lordes house: that all the people myght heare. Nowe whē Micheah þ sonne of Samariah the sonne of Saphan had hearde all the wordes of þ Lord out of the boke, he wete downe to the kynges palace into the Scribes chambres, for there all the Prynces were set. Elpsama the Scribe, Dalaiah the sonne of Semei, Elnathan the sonne of Achboz, Samariah the sone of Saphan, zedekiah the sonne of Hananiah, with all the Prynces. And Micheah tolde the all the wordes, that he hearde Baruch reade out of the boke before the people.

Then all the princes sent Jehudi the sonne of Nathaniah, the sonne of Selamiah, the sonne of Chusi, vnto Baruch, saying. Take in thynne hande the boke, wherout thou hast red before all the people, and come. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah toke the boke in his hande, & came vnto the. And they sayd vnto him. Syt downe, & rede the boke þ we maye heare also. So Baruch redd that they might heare. Nowe whē they had hearde all þ wordes, they were abashed one vpon another, & sayde vnto Baruch. We wyll certifye þ kyng of all these wordes. And they examyned Baruch, sayinge: tell vs, howe bydest þ wyrtte all these wordes out of hys mouth? Then Baruch answered them: he spake all these wordes vnto me with his mouth, & I wyrote them in the boke.

Then sayde þ princes vnto Baruch: So thy waye, & hyde þ with Jeremye, so that no mā knowe where ye be. And they went into the kyng to the court. But they kept þ boke in the chambze of Elisama the Scribe, & tolde the kyng all the wordes þ he myght heare. So the kyng sent Jehudi to fetch him þ boke which he brought out of Elpsama the Scribes chambze. And Jehudi red in it, that the kyng and all þ prynces, which were aboute him, myght heare. Nowe the kyng sat in the wynter house, for it was in the ix. Moneth & there was a fyre before him. And when Jehudi had redde the oze foure leaues therof, he cut the boke in peces with a penne knyfe, and * cast it into the fyre vpon the harth, vntill þ boke was all byete in the fyre vpon the harth.

Yet no man was abashed therof, or rente his clothes: nether the kyng hym selfe, ner his seruantes, though they hearde all these wordes. Neuertheless Elnathā, Dalaiah, & Samariah besought the kyng, þ he wolde not burne the boke: not withstandynge the kyng wolde not heare them, but commaunded Jerahmeel the sonne of Amalech, Saraiah þ sonne of Eziel & Selamiah þ sonne of Abdiel, to laye handes vpon Baruch the Scribe, and vpon Jeremye the Prophete: but the Lord kepte the out of syght. After nowe that the kyng had bent the boke, & the sermons which Baruch wyrote at the mouth of Jeremye: The worde of the Lord came vnto Jeremye, sayinge. Take another boke, and wyrtte in it all þ forsayde sermons: that were wyrtte in the fyrst boke, which Jehoakim the kyng of Iuda hath byente.

And tell Jehoakim þ kyng of Iuda: thus sayeth the Lord: thou hast byete the boke, & thoughtest within thy selfe. Why hast thou wyrtten therein, that the kyng of Babylon shal come, and make thys lande waste: so þ he shal make both people & catell to be out of it: Therfore thus the Lord sayeth of Jehoakim þ kyng of Iuda. * There shal none of hys generacyon syt vpon the thron of Dauid. Hys deed cōse shalbe cast oute, that the heate of the daye, and the frost of the nyght maye come vpon hym. And I wyll byset the wyckednes wyckednes of hym, of his sede, & of hys seruantes. Moreover, all the euell that I haue promysed them (though they herde me not) wyll I bringe vpon them, vpon the inhabitours of Ierusalem, and vpon all Iuda. Then toke Jeremie another booke, and gaue it Baruch the scribe the sonne of Neriah, whiche wrote therein out of the mouth of Jeremie: all the sermons that were in the fyrst booke, whiche Jehoiakim the kynge of Iuda dyd burne. And there were added vnto them many more sermons, then before.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

Jeremiah succedeth Cononiah. He sendeth vnto Jeremie to praye for hym. Jeremie goynge into the lande of Beniamin, is taken. He is beaten, and put in prison. He is deliuered by kynge zedekiah.

Zedekiah the sonne of Josiah, which was made kynge thowowe Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon, reigned in the lade of Iuda, in the steade of Cononiah the sonne of Jehoiakim. But neither he, ner hys seruantes, ner the people in the lande wolde obeye the wordes of the Lorde, which he spake by the prophet Jeremie. * Neuerthelesse, zedekiah the kynge sent Jehucal the sonne of Shelemiah & Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah the priest to the prophet Jeremie, saying: O praye thou vnto the Lorde oure God for vs. Nowe Jeremie walked fre amonge the people at that tyme, and was not put in prison as yet. * Wharaos hoste also was come out of Egypte: which whē the Caldees that beseged Ierusalem perceaued, they departed from thence.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremie the prophet, sayinge: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of Israel, thys answer shall ye geue to the kynge of Iuda, that sent you vnto me for counsell: * Beholde, Wharaos hoste which is come forth to helpe you, shall returne to Egypte into his awne lande: but the Caldees shall come agayne, and fyght agaynst thys cytie, wyne it; and sett fyre vpon it. For thus sayeth the Lorde, disceane not poure a wne myndes, thynkinge on this maner: thus, the Caldees go now their waye from vs. No, they shall not go theyr waye. For though ye had slayne the whole hoste of the Caldees, that besege you, and euery one of the slayne laye in his tente, yet shulde they stande vp, and set fyre vpon thys cytie. Now when the hoste of the Caldees was broken vp from Ierusalem, for feare of the Egyptian armie, Jeremie went out of Ierusalem towarde the lande of Beniamin, to get hym from amonge the people. And when he came vnder Beniamyns porte, there was a porter, called Neriah, the sonne of Shelemiah the sonne of Hananiah, which fell vpon him, and toke him sayinge: thy mynde is to runne to the Caldees. Then sayde Jeremie: It is not so, I go not to the Caldees. Neuer-theless, Neriah wolde not beleue hym, but brought Jeremie bounde before the princes. Wherefore the princes were angrie with Jeremie, and smote him, and layed hym in prison in the house of Jonathan the scribe. For he was the ruler of the prison. Thus was Jeremie put into the donged and prison, and so laye there a longe tyme. * Then zedekiah the kynge sent for him, and called him, and asked hym quyetly in his awne house, sayinge: thynkest thou this bulpnes (that now is in hande) cometh of the Lorde? Jeremie answered: yee, that it doth: and thou (sayde he) shalt be deliuered into the kynge of Babylons power.

Moreouer, Jeremie sayde vnto kynge zedekiah. What haue I offended agaynst the, agaynst thy seruantes, or agaynst thys people, that ye haue put me in prison? * Where are poure prophetes which haue prophesied vnto you, & sayde, that the kynge of Babylon shulde not come agaynst you & this lade? And therfore heare now, O my Lorde the kynge: let my prayer be accepte before the, and sende me nomore into the house of Jonathan the scribe, that I dye not there. Then zedekiah the kynge commaunded to put Jeremie in the fore entrie of the prison, and dayly to be geuen hym a cake of bread out of the bakers streete vntyll all the bread in the cytie was eatē vp. Thus Jeremie remayned in the fore entrie in the prison.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

Why the mocon of the rulers Jeremie is put into a dongeon. At the request of Abedmelech the chamberlayne, the kynge commaundeth Jeremie to be brought forth of the dongeon. Jeremie sheweth the kynge howe he myght escape death.

Saphatiah the sonne of Nathan, & Godoliah the sonne of Shaphur, Iucal the sonne of Semeliah, and Shaphur the sonne of Melchiah perceaued the wordes, that Jeremie had spoken vnto all the people, namely on thys maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde: * Who so remayneth in thys cytie, shal perishe, ether with the sword, with hunger or with the pestilence. But who so falleth vnto the Caldees, shall escape winnyng his soule for a praye, & shall lyue. * For thus sayeth the Lorde: Thys cytie (no doute) must be deliuered into the power of the kynge of Babylon, and he also shall wyne it. Then sayde the princes vnto the kynge: Syr, we beseeche you let thys mā be put to death. For thus he discorageth the handes of the souldiers that be in thys cytie, and the handes of all the people, when he speaketh soche wordes vnto them. This mā verely labourereth not for peace of the people, but myscheffe. zedekiah the kynge answered & sayde: lo, he is in poure handes, for the kynge maye denye you nothinge. Then toke they Jeremie, and cast hym into the dongeon of Melchiah Melchiah the sonne of Hamlech, that dwelt in the fore entrie of the prison. And they lett downe Jeremie with coardes into a donged, where there was no water, but myze. So Jeremie stak fast in the myze. Now when Abedmelech the Moorian beyng a chamberlayne in the kynges courte, vnderstode, that they had cast Jeremie into the dongeon: he went out of the kynges house, and spake to the kynge, (which then sat vnder the porte of Beniamin) these wordes: My Lorde the kynge, where as these men medle with Jeremie the prophet, they do hym wronge: Namely, in that they haue put him in prison, there to dye of hunger, for there is no more bread in the cytie. Then the kynge commaunded Abedmelech the Moorian and sayde: Take from hence xxx. mē whom thou wylt, & drawe vp Jeremie the prophet out of the dongeon, before he dye. So Abedmelech toke the men w him, and went to the house of the kynge, and there vnder the tresurie he gatt older ragges & woine cloutes, and lett them downe by a coarde, into the dongeon to Jeremie.

And Abedmelech the Moorian sayde vnto the prophet Jeremie: O, put these ragges and cloutes vnder thyn arme holes, betwixte them and the coardes: & Jeremie dyd so. So they drew vp Jeremie with coardes & toke him out of the donged, & he remayned in the fore entrie of the prison. Then zedekiah the kynge sent & caused Jeremie the prophete to be called vnto him, into the thyrde entrie, that is in the house of the Lorde. And the kynge sayd vnto Jeremie: I will aske the some-what but hyde nothyng from me. Then Jeremie answered zedekiah: If I be playne vnto the, thou wilt cause me to suffre death: If I geue the counsell, thou wylt not folowe me. So the king swore an ooth secretly vnto Jeremie, sayinge: As truly as the Lorde lyueth that made vs these soules, I wyl not slaye the, ner geue the into the handes of them that seke after thy lyfe.

The sayde Jeremie vnto zedekiah. Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: * If case be, that thou wylt go forth vnto the kynge of Babylons princes, thou shalt saue thy lyfe, and thys cytie shalt not be bzēt yee, both thou and thy household shall escape with poure lynes. But yf thou wylt not go forth to the kynge of Babylons princes, the shall thys cytie be deliuered into the handes of the Caldees, which shall set fyre vpon it, and thou shalt not be able to escape the. And zedekiah sayde vnto Jeremie. I am afrayde for the Iewes, that are fled vnto the Caldees, lest I come in theyr handes, and so they to haue me in derisyon.

But Jeremie answered: No, they shall not betraye the: O herken vnto the voyce of the Lorde (I beseeche the) which I speake vnto, so shalt thou be well, and saue thy lyfe. But yf thou wilt not go forth, y Lorde hath tolde me this playnely: Beholde, all the women y are left in the kynge of Iudaes house, shalbe led forth out to the kynge of Babylons princes. And they shal saye, y thou art disceaued: and that they whō thou didest put thy trust, haue gotten the vnder, & sett thy fete fast in the myze, and gone their waye fro the. Therefore all thy wyues with their chyldren shall they leade forth vnto the Caldees, and thou shalt not escape their handes, but shalt be the kynge of Babylons prisoner, & this cytie shalt thou cause to be bzēt. Then sayde zedekiah vnto Jeremie: loke that no body knowe of these wordes, and thou shalt not dye. But yf the princes perceaue, y I haue talked with y, and come vnto the, saying: O speake, what sayde the king to the: hyde it not fro vs, & we wyl not put the to death. Tell vs (we praye the) what sayde the kynge to the? So thou geue them thys answer: I haue humbly besought the kynge, that he wyl lett me lye no more in Jehonathans house, that I dye not there. Then came all the princes vnto Jeremie, and asked hym. And he tolde them, after the maner as the kynge bad him. Then they helde theyr peace, and let hym alone for they perceaued nothyng. * So Jeremie abode styll in the fore entrie of the prison, vntyll the daye that Ierusalem was wonne.

The xxxix. Chapter.

Nabuchodonosor besegeth Ierusalem. zedekiah fleeth. He is taken of the Caldees. Hys sonnes are slayne. His eyes are thrust out. Jeremie is prouided for. Abedmelech is deliuered from captiuitie, because of the confidence that he hath in God.

Nowe when the cytie of Ierusalem was taken (for in the ix. yere of zedekiah kynge of Iuda in the tenth Moneth, came Nabuchodonosor the king of Babylon & all his hoste, and beseged Ierusalem & foughte agaynst it. And in the xi. yere of zedekiah in the fourth Moneth y. ix. daye of the Moneth, he bzake into the cytie.) Then all the princes of the king of Babylon, came in, & sat them downe vnder the porte: Mergel, Sarczer, Samgarnebo, Sarlachim, Rablaris, Meregell, Sarczer, Rabmag, w all the other princes of the kynge of Babylon. * And when zedekiah the kynge of Iuda with hys souldiers sawe them, they fled, and departed out of the cytie by nyght thowme the kynges garden, & thowme the porte that is betwene y two walles, and so they wente towarde the wyldernesse.

But the Caldees hoste followed faste after them, and toke zedekiah in the felde of Jericho, and brought hym prisoner to Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon vnto Riblah, that lyeth in the land of Hemath where he gaue iudgement vpon him. So the kynge of Babylon caused the chyldre of zedekiah and all the all the nobles of Iuda be slayne, before his face at Reblach. And made zedekias eyes to be put out, and bounde him with two chaynes, and sent him to Babylon.

C * Moreouer, the Caldees brent by the kynges palace, with the other houses of the people, and brake downe the walles of Ierusalem. As for the remnant of the people that were in the cite, and soch as were come to helpe the (whatlocuer was left of y come for te) Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne carped the to Babylon. But Nabuzarada the chefe captayne let the rascall people (& those that had nothinge) dwell styll in the lande of Iuda, and gaue them vineyardes & cozne felde at the same tyme. Nabuchodonosor also the kyng of Babylon gaue Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne a charge, concernynge Jeremy, sayinge: take and cherish hym, and make moche of him: se thou do hym no harme, but intreate him after his awne desyre.

So Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne, Nabuzazban Rablars, Nergal Sarezzer Rabmag and all the kyng of Babylons Lordes sent for Jeremy * and caused hym to be fet out of the fore entrie of the prison, & comitted him vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam the sonne of Saphan: that he shulde carye him home, * and so he dwelt amonge the people. Now whyle Jeremy laye yet bounde in the fore entrie of the prison, y worde of the Lord came vnto him, sayinge: Go and tell Abedmelech the Mozan: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, the cruell and sharpe plage that I haue deuysed for this cite, will I bringe vpon them, that thou shalt se it: but I will deluyce y (sayeth the Lorde) and thou shalt not come in y handes of those men, whom thou fearest. For doubtles I will saue the, so that thou shalt not perishe w the swerde: but thy lyfe shalbe saued, ad that because thou hast put thy trust in me, sayeth the Lorde.

The xl. Chapter.

Jeremy hath licence to go whether he wyl. He dwelleth with the people that remayneth at Ierusalem, ouer whom Godoliah ruleth, Johanan prophceeth death vnto Godoliah.

A * Ihsus is the worde that the Lord spake vnto Jeremy, * when Nabuzaradan the chefe Captayne had let him go fre from Ramah, whyther he had led him bounde amonge all the prisoners, that were carped from Ierusalem and Iuda vnto Babylon. The chefe captayne called for Jeremy, and sayde vnto hym. The Lorde thy God spake myghrely before of the mysery vpon this place: Nowe the Lorde had sent it, and perfourmed it as he had promysed. For ye haue synned agaynst the Lord, and haue not bene obedient vnto his voyce, therfore commeth this plage vpon you. Beholde, I lowse the bondes from thy handes this daye: yf y wilt nowe go with me vnto Babylon, yf then: for I wyl se to the, & prouyde for the. But yf thou wylt not go with me to Babylō, the remayne here. * Beholde, all the lande is at thy wyl, loke wher thou thynkest couenient and good for the to abyde, there dwell. For as yet he was not gone backe againe to Godoliah therfore he sayde to him: Go backe to Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam, the sonne of Saphan: * whō the kyng of Babylō hath made gouernoure ouer the cyties of Iuda, & dwell with hym amonge the people, or remayne wher soeuer it please the. So the chefe Captayne gaue him his expenses with a rewarde, and let him go. * The wente Jeremy vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam to Mizpa, and dwelt there with hym amonge the people that were left in the lande.

Nowe when the captaynes of the hoste of Iuda (which w their felowes were scatred abrode on euery syde in the lande) vnderstode that y kyng of Babylō had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam gouernoure in the land, and y man, wyfe and childe, yee, and y poore men in the lande (that were not led captiue to Babylon) shulde be vnder his iurisdiction: They came to Godoliah vnto Mizpa: Namely, Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, Johanan and Jonathan the sonnes of Careah, Sareah the sonne of Thanhometh, the sonnes of Ophai the Metopahite, Iesaniah y sonne of Maachati, with theyr companyōs. And Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam, the sonne of Saphan, swore vnto them and theyr felowes in this maner: * We not afrayed to serue the Caldees, dwell in the lande, and do the kyng of Babylon seruice, so shall ye prouyde. Beholde, I dwell at Mizpa to be an officer in the Caldees be halfe, and to satisfye soche as come to vs. Therfore gather you wyne, cozne and oyle, and kepe them in your ware houses, and dwell in your cyties that ye haue in keepynge.

Yee, all the Jewes also y dwell in Moab vnder the Ammonites, in Idumea and in all the countreys, when they herde, that y kyng of Babylō had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam the sonne of Saphan, gouernoure vpon the y were left in Iuda. All the Jewes (I saye) returned oute of all places where they were fled vnto: and came into the lande of Iuda to Godoliah vnto Mizpa, & gathered wyne & other frutes, & that very moche. Moreouer, Johanan the sonne of Careah and all the captaynes of the hoste, that were scatred on euery syde in the lade, cam to Godoliah in Mizpa, & sayde vnto him. knowest thou not that Baalis kyng of the Ammonites hath sent Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, to slaye the: But Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam beleued them not. Then sayde Johanan the sonne of Careah vnto Godoliah in Mizpa in Mizpa these wordes secretly: Let me go, I praye the, and I will slaye Ismael y sonne of Nathaniah, so that no body shall knowe it. Therfore will he kyll the, that all the Jewes which resorte vnto the, might be scatred and the remnant in Iuda perishe. And Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam sayde to Johanan the sonne of Careah: Thou shalt not do it, for they are but lyes, that thou sayest, of Ismael.

The xli. Chapter.

Ismael killeth Godoliah secretly, & many other with hym. Johanan followeth after Ismael.

In the seventh Moneth it happened, y Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah the sonne of Elisama (one of the kynges bloude) came with them that were greatest aboute the kyng, & ten men y were sworn with him: vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam to Mizpa, & they dyd eate together. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah with those ten men that were sworn to him, starte vp, and smote Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam the sonne of Saphan with the swerde, and slewe him, whom the kyng of Babylon had made gouernoure of the lande. Ismael also slewe all the Jewes that were with Godoliah at Mizpa, and all the Caldees that he founde there waytyng vpon hym and those that were able to fyght they slewe with hym.

The nexte daye after that he had slayne Godoliah (the matter was yet unknowne) & there came certayneme from Sichē, from Siloh and Samaria, to the nombre of lxxx. which had shauen theyr beardes, rent theyr clothes, and were all heuye, bringynge meat offrings, & incense in their handes: to offere it in the house of the Lorde. And Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah went forth of Mizpa * wepyng, to mete the. Nowe when he met the, he sayde: So youre waye to Godoliah y sonne of Ahikam. And when they came in the myddest of the cite, Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah (w the that were sworn vnto him) slewe them, euē at the myddest of the pyt. Amonge these lxxx. men there were ten, that sayde vnto Ismael: Oh slaye vs not, for we haue yet a great treasure in y felde, of wheate barley, oyle and hony. So he spared them, & slewe them not with theyr brethzen. Nowe the y pyt wherin Ismael dyd cast y deed bodies of the men (whom he slewe because of Godoliah) had kyng Ismael caused to be made, for feare of Baala the kyng of Israel, and the same pyt dyd Ismael fyll with slayne me. As for the remnant of the people, y kynges daughters and all the people that were yet left at Mizpa, vpon whom Nabuzaradan the chefe Captayne had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam gouernoure: Ismael y sonne of Nathaniah carped them a waye prisoners towarde the Ammonites. But when Johana the sonne of Careah & all they which had bene captaynes ouer the kynges hoste with hym, herde of all the wyckednes that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had done: * they toke theyr companions, & went out for to fyght w Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, and soude him by the greete waters that are in Gibeon. Nowe when all the people, whō Ismael led captiue, sawe Johana the sonne of Careah and all the other Captaynes of the hoste, they were glad. So all the people that Ismael had carped awaye from Mizpa, were brought agayne.

And when they returned, they came to Johanan the sonne of Careah. But Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah fled from Johana with D Egypt of his sworne companions, & wente to the Ammonites. Then Johanan the sonne of Careah and all the captaynes of y hoste that were with him, toke all the remnant of the people, whom Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had led a waye. (When he had slayne Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam) whom they also had rescued from hym: fyghtinge men, women & chyldren, & gelded men, whom they brought agayne from Gibeon: and wente fro thence, & sat the downe at Geruth Camaam, whiche lyeth besyde Bethlehem * that they myght go into Egypte for feare of the Caldees: of whome they were afrayed, because y Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had slayne Godoliah Ahikams sonne * whom y kyng of Babylō had made gouernoure in the lade.

The xlii. Chapter.

The Captaynes aske the counsell of Jeremye what they ought to do. Jeremye monyeth the remnant of the people not to go into Egypte.

All the captaynes, & Johanan y sonne of Careah, Iesaniah y sonne of Olayah came with all the people fro the leest vnto the most, and sayde vnto Jeremy the prophete. * O heare our petition, that thou mayest praye for vs vnto the Lorde thy God, namely, for all the remnant, wher of there be very fewe of vs left of many, as y seest vs: y the Lorde, thy God may shew vs a waye to go in, & tell vs, what we shulde do. Then Jeremy y prophet sayde vnto them: I haue herde you. Behold I will praye vnto God youre Lorde as ye haue requyred me: and loke what answer the Lord geueth you, I shall certifye you therof, and kepe nothyng backe fro you. And they sayde vnto Jeremy. * The Lord of truth & faithfulness be our recorde, that we wyl do all y the Lorde thy God commaundeth vs, whether it be good or euell. We wyl herke vnto y voyce of our Lorde God to whō we sende the, that we maye prospere, when we haue followed the voyce of the Lorde our God.

The Prophecye

The .xliii. Chapter.

¶ Johanan carryeth the remnant of the people into Egypte, contrary to the comend of Jeremie. Jeremie prophesyeth the destruction of Egypte.

NOWE when Jeremie had ended all the wordes of the Lord his God vnto the people which to declare & to ordeyne they: God had sent hym to them, (even all thes wordes I saue) Azariah the sonne of Isaiab, and Johanan the sonne of Kareah with all the stubborne personnes, sayde vnto Jeremie: * Thou lpest, the Lord oure God hath not sent the to speake vnto vs, that we shulde not go into Egypte, and dwell there: * But Baruch the sonne of Neriah prouoketh the agaynst vs, that he myght byynge vs in to the captiuyte of the Caldees: & they might slaye vs, and carye vs awaye prisoners vnto Babylon.

So Johanan the sonne of Kareah, and all the captaynes of the hooste, and all the people folowed not the commaundement of the Lord: Namely, to dwell in the lande of Iuda. But Johanan the sonne of Kareah, and all the captaynes of the hooste, caried awaye all the remnant in Iuda, * that were come together agayne from all the heythe (among whom they had bene scatted) to dwell in the lande of Iuda: Men, women, chyldren, the kynges daughters, all those that Nabuzardan the chete captayne had left with Gedoliah the sonne of Ahikam, the sonne of Saphan. They caried awaye also the prophete Jeremie, Baruch the sonne of Neriah, and so came into Egypte: for they were not obeyed, vnto the commaundement of God. Thus came they to Taphnis.

And in Taphnis the worde of the Lord happened vnto Jeremie, saying: Take great stones in thyne hande, and hyde them in the hyck wall, vnder the doore of Pharaos house in Taphnis, that all the men of Iuda maye see, and saue vnto the: Thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. * Beholde, I will sende and call for Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon my seruant, and will sett his seate vpon these stones that I haue hyd, and he shall sprede his tente ouer them.

And when he cometh, he shall smyte the lande of Egypte, some with slaughter, some with prisonment, and some with swearde. He shall set fyre vpon the temples of the Egyptians goddes, and burne them vp, & take the selues prisoners. Moreover, he shall araye him selfe with the lande of Egypte, lyke as a shepherde putteth on his cote, and shall departe his waye from thence in peace. The pylers also of the temple of the Sunne which are in Egypte: shall he breake in peces, and burne the temples of the Egyptians goddes.

The .xliii. Chapter.

¶ He requyeth the people for their idolatrye, they that set light by the chere of the Lord are chastened. The destruction of Egypte and the Jewes therein is prophesied.

NOWE this is the worde that was shewed to Jeremie, concerning all the Jewes: which dwelt in Egypte: at Migdol, at Taphnis, at Moph, & in the lande of Batures. Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: Ye haue sene all the misery, that I haue brought vpon Ierusalem, and vpon the ctytes of Iuda: so that thys daye they are desolate, and no man dwellynge therein: and that because of the greates blasphemies which they committed, to prouoke me vnto anger. In that they went backe to do sacrifice and worship vnto straunge goddes: whom nether ye, nor your fathers haue knowne. Howbeit, I sent vnto them my seruantes all the prophetes. * I rose vpearly, I sent vnto them, and gaue them warnyng. I do no soche abominable thynges, & thynges that I hate: But they wolde not folowe ner hearken, to turne from their wickednes, & to do nomore sacrifices vnto straunge goddes.

Wherefore myne indignation and wrath was kyndled, and it brente vpon the ctytes of Iuda, the felde with the stretes of Ierusalem, so that they were made waste and desolate, as it is come to passe thys daye. Nowe therefore, thus sayth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: Howe happeneth it, that ye do so greates euill vnto your awne soules: thus to destroye the men and women, chyldren and babes of Iuda: so that none of you is left, because ye prouoke me vnto wrath with the workes of your awne handes: when ye offer vnto straunge goddes in the lande of Egypt, where as ye be gone to dwell. That ye myght utterly perishe, and that ye myght be reuyled and shamefully intreated of all natyons. * Ye haue ye nowe forgotten the wickednes of your forefathers, the wickednes of the kynges of Iuda and their wyues, the wickednes that ye your selues and your wyues haue done in the lande of Iuda, in the ctye and in the lande of Ierusalem.

Yet are ye not sorry vnto this daye, ye feare not, nether walke ye in my lawe and in my commaundementes, that I haue geuen vnto you and your forefathers.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: I am stedfastly aduised and determynd to punyshe you, & to rote out all Iuda. As for the remnant of Iuda, that purposly wente into Egypte, ther to dwell, I will take them, * and they shall all be destroyed. In the lande of Egypt shall they perishe, beinge consumed with the swearde and with hunger. For from the leest vnto the moost, they shall perishe, with the swearde and with hunger. Moreover, they shalbe reuyled, abhorred, shamed, and confounded. For I will viset them that dwell in Egypte, * as I haue visyted Ierusalem, * with the swearde, with hunger and with pestilence. So that none of the remnant of Iuda, which are gone to dwell in Egypte, shall be left to come agayne into the lande of Iuda all though they thynke to come thither agayne, and to dwell there. For none shall come agayne, but such as are fledd awaye.

Then all the men which knewe that their wyues had offered vnto straunge goddes, and a greates sorte of wyues that stode there, yee, and all the people that dwelt there in Egypte in the ctye of Batures, answered Jeremie, and sayde: As for the wordes that thou hast spoken vnto vs, in the name of the Lord, we will in no wyse heare them: but whatsoever goeth out of our awne mouth, that we will do. We will do sacrifice and offer oblatyons vnto the quene of heauen, * lyke as we and our forefathers, our kynges and our heades haue done in the ctye of Iuda, and in the stretes and felde of Ierusalem. For then had we plenteousnes of vitayles, then were we in prosperyte, and no nyse fortune came vpon vs.

But sens we left to burne incense, and to do sacrifice vnto the quene of heauen, we haue had scarcenesse of all thynges, and perishe with the swearde and hunger: Last of all, when we women dyd sacrifice and offered vnto the quene of heauen, dyd we make her cakes and poure vnto her drinck offerings, eue to that ymage dyd we sacrifice and seruite, without our husbandes wylls.

Then sayde Jeremie vnto all the people, to the men, to the women, and to all the folke, which had geuen him that answer: Dyd not the Lord remember the sacrifices that ye, your forefathers, your kynges and rulers, with all the people, haue offered in the ctyes of Iuda, in the stretes and lande of Ierusalem: and hath he not considered thys in his mynde? In somoch that the Lord might no longer suffer the wickednes of your inuencions, and the abhominable thynges, which ye dyd: * Is not your lande desolate and voyde: yee, abhorred and accursed, so that no man dwelleth therein any more, as it is come to passe thys daye?

Dyd not all thys happen vnto you, because ye made such sacrifices to ydols, and synned agaynst the Lord. * Ye haue not folowed his voyce, to walke in his lawe, in his ordynances and statutes.

Yee, this is the cause, that all misfortune happened vnto you, as it is come to passe thys daye. Moreover, Jeremie spake vnto all the people and to all the women. Heare the word of the Lord all Iuda, ye that be in

* The prophery of the destruction of Egypt. Welc: uraunce is promysed to Israel.

* Jer. xlvj. c. * These are the wordes of the Lord to the prophete Jeremie, which he spake agaynst all the Gentyles. These wordes folowing preached he to * the Egipcians concerninge the hoost of Pharaos Recho kyng of Egypte: * when he was in Charcamis, belyde the water of Euphrates: what tyme as Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon slewe him, in the fourth yere of Jehoakim the sonne of Josias kyng of Iuda:

* Jer. xlvj. c. * Make ready buckler and shylde, and go forth to fyght: harness your horses, and sett your selues vpon them: set your salettes fast on, byng forth speares, scour your swerdes, and put on your best plates.

But alas, howe happeneth it, I se you so afrayde: why shyncke ye backe? Theyr worthyes are slayne. Pee, they runne so fast awaye, that none of them looketh behynde him. Fearfulnes is fallen vpon euerychone of them, sayth the Lord. The lightest of foete shall not fle awaye, and the worthies shall not escape.

Towarde the north by the water of Euphrates, they dyd stöble and fall. But what is he this, I swelleth vp, as it were a floude, roaringe and ragynge lyke the streames of water? It is Egypte that ryleth vlyke the floude, and casteth out the waters with so greate noyse.

And he sayde: I will go, and wyll couer the earth, I will destroye the cite with the that are therein. Gett you vp ye horses, rolle forth ye charettes, come forth worthies: ye Moziars, ye Libeans with your bucklers, ye Libeans with your bowes. This daye of the Lord God of hostes, is a daye of vengeance, that he maye auenge hym of hys enemyes. The swerde shall deuoure, it shall be satisfied, and bathed in theyr bloude. For the Lord God of hostes shall haue a slayne offeringe toward the north, by the water of Euphrates. Go vp, O Gilead, and bypunge triacle vnto the daughter of Egypt. But in bayne shalt thou go to surgery: for thy wounde shall not be stopped. The hepythen haue hearde of thy shame, and the lande is full of thy confusio: for one stronge man dyd stömble vpon another, and they are fallen both together.

* Jer. xlvj. c. * These are the wordes of the Lord spake to the prophete Jeremie concerning the coming of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon, which was sent to destroye the lade of Egypt. Preach out thowre the lade of Egypt: & cause it to be proclaimed at Migdol, Noph and

* The wordes of the Lord agaynst the Philistines.

* Jer. xlvij. c. * These are the wordes, that the Lord spake vnto Jeremie the prophete, agaynst the Philistines, before that Pharaos smote the cite of Azah. Thus sayth the Lord: Beholde, there shall waters arysse out of the north: & shall growe to a greate floude, runnyng ouer and couerynge the lande, the cyties, and them that dwell therein.

And the men shall crye, and all they that dwell in the lande, shall mourne at the noyse and stampinge of theyr stronge barbed horses, at the shakynge of theyr charettes and at the rombyng of the wheles. The fathers shall not loke to their chyldren, so feable and wep shall their handes be: at the same tyme when he shall be there, to destroye the whole lande of the Philistines. He shall make waste both Tirus, Sidon, and all other that are sware vnto them.

For the Lord wyll destroye the Philistines, the remnaunt of the yle of Caphtor. Waldenelle is come vpon Azah, A scald with her other valleyes shall kepe her peace.

Howe longe wilt thou slaye, O swerde of the Lord? When wilt thou cease? Turne agayne into thy swete rest, and leaue of. But howe can it cease, when the Lord hym selfe hath geuen him a charge agaynst A scalon, and rayled it vpon agaynst the cityes of the see coast?

The xlvij. Chapter.

* The wordes of the Lord agaynst the Moabites.

* Jer. xlvij. c. * Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel agaynst Moab: wo be to the cite of Rebo: for it is layed wast, brought to confusio: and Ariathia- rim taken, Misgab is brought to shame and afrayed: Moab can boast nomore of Ihesbo: for they haue deuyled agaynst it. Come, shall they saye, let vs rote them out, & they maye be nomore amonge the number of the Gentiles, and that thou Madmen maye nomore be thought vpon: and the swerde shall persecute the. A voyce shall crye fro Hozonaim: With greate wastynge and destruccyon is Moab made desolate.

Chyldren coulde tell of the crye therof. For at the gopnge vnto Luyth, he arose with lamentation and mournynge, and downe towarde Hozonaim, they heard a cruell and a deedly crye. Set you awape, saue your lyues, and be lyke vnto the heeth in the wilderness. * For because thou hast trusted in thine owne workes and treasure, thou shalt be take: Chamos with his prestes and princes shall go awaye into captiuyte. The destroyer shall come vpon all cyties and Taphnis, and saye: Stande still, make the ready, for the swerde shall consume the rounde aboute.

Howe happeneth it, if thy myghte worthies are fallen: why stode they not fast? Euen because the Lord thrust them downe. The slaughter was greate, for one fell euer still vpon another. One cryed vpon another. Up, let vs go agayne to oure awne people, and to oure awne naturall contrey from the cruell swerde.

* Jer. xlvij. c. * They dyd crye euē there, O Pharaos kyng of Egypt thou troublous kyng: the tyme will byng sedition. As truly as I lyue, sayth the king, * whose name is the Lord of hostes, it shall come as the mount of Thabor, and as Libanus yf it stode in the see. O daughter of Egypte make ready thy geer to flye. For Noph shall be voyde and desolate, so that no man shall dwell therein. The lande of Egypt is lyke a goodly fayre calfe: but destruccyon shall come out of the north I saye it cometh. Her waged sounders that ben with her, are like fat calves. They also shall fle awaye together, and not abyde: for the daye of theyr slaughter, and the tyme of their visytation shall come vpon them.

The crye of them shall make a noyse, as if the blast of a trompette. For they shall enter in with their hostes, and come with axes, as it were hewers downe of wodde. And they shall cut downe her wodde, sayth the Lord. They shall be innumerable: for they shall be mo in number then the grethoppers, so that no man shall be able to tell them. The daughter of Egypte is confounded, and deliuered in to the handes of the people of the north.

Thus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel. Beholde, I wyll viset that restless people of Alexandria, Pharaos and Egypte: yee, bothe theyr goddes and theyr kynges: euen Pharaos, and all them that putt theyr trust in hym. Pee, I wyll deliuer them into the handes of those, that seke after theyr lyues. Namely into the power of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon, and into the power of hys seruantes. And after all these thynges it shall be inhabited as afore tyme, sayth the Lord.

* Jer. xlvij. c. * But be not thou afrayed, O my seruante Jacob feare not thou, O Israel. For lo, I wyll helpe the from farre, and thy seede from the lande of theyr captiuite. Jacob also shall come agayne, and be in rest: he shall prospeere and no man shall do him harme. Feare thou not, O Jacob my seruante, sayth the Lord, for I am with the: and wyll destroye all nations, amonge whom I haue scatered the. Neuertheles, I wyll not consume the: but chasten the and correcte the: yee, and that wyl discrety: nerher will I spare the as one that were faultlesse.

The prophery

none shall escape. The valleys shall be destroyed, and the feldes shall be layed waste, lyke as the Lorde hath spoken.

Ecce wpynges vnto Moab, that she get her awaye speedly: for her cyties shall be made so desolate, that no man shall dwell therein. Cursed be he that doth the worke of the Lorde negligently, and cursed be he that keepeth backe his swearde from sheddyng of bloude.

Moab hath cuer bene ryche and carelesse from her youth vp, she hath sytten and takē her ease with her treasure. She was neuer yet put out of one vessell into another (that is) she neuer wente awaye into captiuitie, therfore her taste remayneth, and her sauour is not yet chaunged.

But lo, the tyme cometh, sayth the Lorde, that I shall sende her trusters to trusse her vp: which shall remoue her from her dwellinge: and to mytpe her vessels, and breake her wyne pottes. And Moab shall be ashamed of Chamos, lyke as Israel was ashamed of Bethel, wherin she put her trust. Therfore do ye thynke thus: we are myghty and stronge men of warre: Moab is destroyed, and her cyties bent vp: her chosen yonge men be slayne, sayth the kyng, whose name is the Lorde of hostes. The destruction of Moab cometh on apace, and her fall is at hande.

All her neyghbours shall mourne for her, and all they that know her name shall saye, Howe happeneth it, that the stronge state and the goodly rodde is thus broken? And thou daughter Dibon, come downe fro thy glory, & lye in thy dust. For he that destroyeth Moab, shall come vp to the also, and breake downe thy stronge holde.

And thou that dwellest in Aroer, get thee to the strete, and loke aboute the: aske them that are fledd and escaped, and saye: what thinge is happened? Oh, Moab is confounded and ouercome.

Mourne and crye, tell it out at Arnon, for Moab is destroyed. For iudgment shall come vpon the playne lande: Namely, vpon Holon, and Jahazah, vpon Mephath and Dibon, vpon Rabo and the house of Mephathaim, vpon Cariathiarim and vpon the house of Samul, vpon the house Maon and Carioth vpon Bozrah and all the cyties in the lande of Moab, whether they lye farre or neare.

The horne of Moab is smytten downe and her arme broken, sayth the Lorde. Make her drunken, for she magnified her selfe aboue the Lorde, that me maye clappe theyr hādes at her vomyte, and that she also maye be laughed to scozne. O Israel, shalte thou not laugh him to scozne, when he is taken amonge theues? Yee, because of thy wordes that thou hast spoken agaynst hym, thou shalt be dysruen awaye. Ye Moabites shall leaue the cyties, and dwell in rockes of stone, and become lyke doues, that make theyr nestes in holes.

As for Moabs pryde, we haue heard of it: she is verpe hye mynded. I knowe her stoutnes, her boastyng, her arrogancye, and the pryde of her stomack, sayth the Lorde. I knowe (sayth the Lorde) her indignacyon, she doth not ryght, her wordes are lyes, and they haue not delt truly. Therfore shall their mourning be made for Moab, and euery mā shall crye for Moabs sake: a lamentacyon shall be made to the men that stande vpon the wall. So will I mourne for the also, O Jazer and for the, O thou vineparde of Sabama. Thy vyne bzaunches shall come ouer the see, and the bzaunches of Jazer but vnto the see: the destroyer shall breake into thy harvest and grape gathering: mytpe and cheare shall be taken awaye from the tymbre felde, and from the whole lande of Moab.

There shall be no swete wyne in the presse, the stronge shall haue no stomacke to crye yee, ther shall be none to crie vnto him: which afore tyme were heard fro Hesebon to Eleale and Jahaz, which lifted vp their voyce fro zoar vnto Hozonaim, that bullocke of thre yere olde shall go mourning. The waters also of Memrim shall be dyed vp. Whereouer, I will make Moab cease, sayth the Lorde, from the offerings and censur that, she hath made vnto her goddess in hie places. Therfore my hert mourneth for Moab, lyke a crowde playenge an heuy songe: and for the mennes sake of the bypke wall my herte mourneth also: euen as a pype that ppyeth a dolefull songe: for they shall be very feawe, and destroyed.

All heades shall be shauen, and all beedes clipped of: all handes bolde, and loynes gyrded about with sackcloth. Vpon all the house toppes and stretes of Moab, ther shall be lamentable mourning. For I will breake Moab lyke an vnprofftable vessell, sayth the Lorde. Howe is she destroyed? Howe mourneth she? Howe doeth Moab hange downe her brade, & is ashamed? Thus shall Moab be a laughing stocke: & had in derision of all the people rounde aboute her. For thus sayth the Lorde. Beholde, the enemye shall come flying as an eagle: & sprede hys winges vpon Moab. They shall clyme ouer the walles, & wyne the strongholdes. Then myghty mens hertes in Moab shall be lyke the hert of a woman trauelyng with chylde.

And Moab shall be made so desolate: that she shall nomore be a people, because she hath sett vp her selfe agaynst the Lorde. Feare, pytte & snare shall come vpon the, O Moab, sayth the Lorde. Whoso escape th the feare, shall fall in the pytte: and who so getteth out of Jeremye.

Jo. lxxiii.

out of the pytte, shall be taken in the snare. For I will bring a yere of visitation vpon Moab, sayth the Lorde. They that are able to flye, shall stande vnder the shadowe of Hesebon: For there shall go a fier out of Hesebon, and a flame from Sion, and shall burne vpon that proude people of Moab, and the toppe of thole seditious chyldezen.

Go vnto the, O Moab, for thou people of Chamos shalt perishe. Yee, thy sonnes and daughters shall be leade awaye captiue. Yet at the laste wyll I brynge Moab out of captiuite agayne, sayth the Lorde. Thus farre is of the plage of Moab.

The xlii. Chapter.

The worde of the Lorde agaynst the Ammonites, agaynst Idumea, Damascus, Cedar and Elam.

Concerning the Ammonites, thus the Lorde sayth: hath Israel no childe, or is he with out an heire? Why hath poure king then takē Gad in? Wherefore both his people dwell in his cyties? Beholde therfore, the tyme cometh, sayth the Lorde, I will bring a noyse of warre into Rabah of the Ammonites: and it shall be layed on a desolate heape: and her cyties bent vp: & the Israelites shall be lordes ouer those that had them in possession afore, sayth the Lorde. Hesebon shall mourne, for it shall be roted out of the grounde, sayth the Lorde.

The cyties of Rabah shall crye out, and gyrd the selues with sackcloth: they shall mourne, & runne about the walles: for theyr king shall be led awaye prisoner: yee, his prestes and princes with hym.

Wherefore trustest thou in the valley: thy valleie hath flowed awaye, O thou fearece daughter, & thynkest thou art so safe, by reason of thy treasure, that no mā shall come to the? Beholde, I will brynge a feare vpon the, sayth the Lorde God of hostes, from all those that be about the: so that ye shall be scattered euery mā from another, and a mā shall gather them together agayne & be fled. But after that, I wyll bring the Ammonites also out of captiuite agayne.

Vpon the Edomites hath the Lorde of hostes spoken on thys maner: Is there no moze wysdome in Chemā? Is there nomore good counsell amonge his people? Is theyr wysdome then turned cleue to naught? Gett pou hence, turne poure backes, crye downe into the deppe, O ye citelyns of Medan.

For I will brynge destruction vpon Elau: yee, and the dape of hys visytacyon. If the grapegatherers came vpon the, shulde they not leaue some grapes? If the night robbers came vpon the, shulde they not take so moch as they thought were ynough?

But I wyll make Elau bare, and discover his secretes, so that he shall not be able to byde them, hys sede shall be wasted awaye: yee, hys brethren and hys neyghbours, and he hym selfe shall not be lefte behynde.

Thou shalt leaue thy fatherlesse chyldezen behynde the, and I wyll kepe them, and thy wyddowes shall take their comforte in me. For thus hath the Lorde spoken. Behold, they that me thought were vnmete to drinke of the cuppe, haue dronken with the fyrst: and thynkest thou then to be fre?

No, no, thou shalt nether be quite nor fre: but thou must drinke also. For why? I haue sworn by my selfe, sayth the Lorde, Bozrah shall become a wyldeynes, an open shame, a laughing stocke and cursynge: and all her cyties shall be a continuall deserte.

For I am perfectly informed of the Lorde that he hath sent a message allredy vnto the heythen. Gather you together, and go forth agaynst them: make you ready to the battaylle: for lo, I wyll make the but small amonge the heythen, and lytell regarded amonge men.

Thy hie stomacke and the pryde of thy herte haue disceaued the, because thou wylt dwell in the holes of stony rockes, and haue the hie mountaynes in possession. Neuertheles, though thy neste were as hye as the eagles, yet wyll I cast the downe, sayth the Lorde. Whereouer, Idumea shall be a wyldeynes: whoso goth by it, shall be abashed, and wonder at all her myserable plages. Lyke as Sodome, Gomor, and the cyties y laye ther about were turned vp side downe, saith the Lorde, so shall no body dwell in Idumea, and no man shall haue his habitation there. Behold, lyke as the lyon, so shall a destroyer come vp fro the pleasaunt medowes of Jordan vnto the stronge dwelling place: & whē I haue made him quiet, I will make him to fle from her: and all chosen men, will I set in araye agaynst her. Who is lyke vnto me? What is he that will stryue with me? What shepherde maye stande in my handes?

Therfore, heare the counsell of the Lorde, that he hath taken vpon Idumea: and hys purpose he hath deuysed vpon the citelyns of Chemā. The leest of the flocke shall teare them in peces, & loke what sayre thinge they haue, they shall make it waste, & them selues also. At the noyse of their fall, the earth shall quake & crye of their voyce shall be heard vnto the redd see. Beholde, the enemye shall come and fle vpbither, like as it were an eagle, & sprede hys winges vpon Bozrah. Then shall the hertes of the worthys in Edom be as the hert of a woman trauelyng of chylde.

Vpon Damascus, Chemā and Arphad shall come confusid: for they shall heare euell tydings: they shall be tossed to and fro lyke the see that cannot stande styll. Damascus shall be soze afrayed, and shall flee, tremblinge come vpon her. Sorowe & payne shall ouertake her as a woman trauelynge of chylde.

But howe shuld so worshippfull & glorious a citie be forsake? Heare therfore: her yonge men shall fall in the stretes, and all her me of warre shall be taken awaye in y tyme, sayth the Lorde of hostes. I wyll kyndle a fyre in the walles of Damascus, which shall consume the palace of Benhadad.

*Esa. xlii.

* As for Cedar and the kingdom of Bazoz, who Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon smote downe, the Lorde hath spoken thus vpon them: Arise, and get you vp vnto Cedar, and destroye the people towardes y caste. Theyr tentes and theyr flockes shall they take awaye: yee, their hangynges and their vessels. Their camels also shall they ca-rye awaye with the. They shall crye to the:
Feare is on euery syde.

¶ He, get you sone awaye, creape into ca-ues, that ye maye dwell there, O ye inhabiters of Bazoz, saith the Lorde: for Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon hath holden a counsell concernyng you: and concluded his deuylce agaynst you. Arise, and get you vp agaynst yonder ryche and careless people (sayeth the Lorde) which haue nether gates nor doore barres, but dwell alone. Their camels shall be stollen, and the droues of theyr catell dyspuch awaye.

Moreover, those wyll I scatter towarde all the wyndes: and bringe them to destruccyon: yee, and that thowowe their a wne familyers, sayth the Lorde. Bazoz also shall be a dwelllyng for dragons, and an euerlastyng wildernes: so that no body shall dwell there:
and no man shall haue there his habitation.

¶ These are the wordes that the Lorde spake to the prophete Jeremy, concerning *Ela, in the begynnyng of the raygne of zedekiah kyng of Iuda. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I wyll breake the bowe of Elam, and take awaye theyr strength: and vpon Elam I wyll bringe the foure wyndes from the foure quarters of heauen, and will scatter them agaynst the same foure wyndes.
And there shall be no people, but some of Ela shall fle vnto them.

For I wyll cause Elam to be afrayed of theyr enemyes, and of them that seke theyr lyues: and wyll bringe vpon them the indygnation of my wrath, sayth the Lorde. And I wyll persecute them with the swearde, so longe tyll I haue brought them to naught.
I wyll sett my throne in Elam, I wyll de-stroye both the kyng and the prynces from thence, sayth the Lorde. But in processe of tyme I wyll bringe Elam out of captiuyte agayne, sayth the Lorde.

The .i. Chapter.

The prophete Jeremy the destruction of Babylon, and the deliuerance of Israel, which was in captiuyte.

The wordes that the Lorde spake vnto the prophete Jeremy, concernyng Babylon, and the lande of y Chaldees: * Breache amonge the Gentyles, let your voyce be heard, make a token, crye out, kepe no silēce, but saye: Ba-ylon is wonne. * Bel is confounded, and Merodach is overcome.

* Yee, their goddes be brought to shame: and their ymages burst in peces. For out of the north & there doth come a people agaynst her: which make her lāde to waste, that no body dwell therein, nether man nor beast: for they slye and departe from thence. * In those dayes and at that tyme, sayth y Lorde: the chylidren of Israel shall come, they and the chylidren of Iuda, wepinge and making haste, and shall seke the Lorde their God.
They shall aske the waye to Sion, thither shall they turne their faces, sayinge: Come and we wyll cleaue to the Lorde, in a counaunt that neuer shall be broken.

*Dan. ii. a

¶ My people hath bene a losse * flocke, & my shepherdes haue discaued the, and haue made them go astraye vpon the hylls.
They haue gone frome the mountayne to the lytle hyll, and forgotten their folde. All they that came vpon them, haue deuoured them: and theyr enemyes sayde: We haue made no faute agaynst them: for they haue displeased the Lorde: yee, euen the Lorde, which is the bewtye of theyr ryghteousnesse & that defended their fathers. Yet shall ye fle from Babylon, and departe out of the lande of the Chaldees, and be ye as the rammes that goo before the flocke. * For loo, I wyll wake vp an hooste of people from the northren lande, and bringe them vpon Ba-ylon: these shall laye sege to it, and wyne it. Theyr arrows shall not mysse, lyke as a connyng archer shutech not wronge.

*Jer. xlii. a Eze. xxxviii. b

And the Chaldees shall be spoyled, and all they that spoyl them, shall be satisfied, sayth the Lorde, * although ye were so chearfull and gladd, to treade downe myne heritage, and fulfilled your pleasures, as the calves in the grasse, and triumphed ouer them lyke the bulles, when ye had gotten the victorie.
Your mothers shall be sore confounded, and they that bare you, shall come to shame.
She shall be the least sett by amonge the nations, voyde, wasted and dryed vp. No man shall be able to dwell there, for the feare of the Lorde, but she shall be whole desolate. * All they that go by Babylon, shall stande still, and be abashed, and shall wondze at all her plages.

*Esa. xlii. a

Go forth in your arape agaynst Babylon rounde about, all ye that can handle bowes: shute at her, spare no arrows: for she hath spined agaynst the Lorde. Crye out: vpon her, vpon her, agaynst her rounde about: she shall peld her selfe, her foundatōs shall fall and her walles shall come downe: for it shall be the vengeance of the Lorde. * Yee, vengeance shall be taken of her, and as she hath done, so deale ye with her. Note out y sower from Babylon, and him that handleth the spyckle in haruest. For feare of the swearde of the enemye, euery man shall gett him to his awne people: and euery man shall fle to his awne lande. Israel is a scattered flocke, the lyons haue disperfed them. * First the kyng of the Assirians deuoured them, * last of all this Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilō hath brosed all their bones.

the God of Israel: Beholde, I will viset the kyng of Babylon and his kingdom as * I haue visited the kyng of the Assirians, and wyll bringe Israel agayne to his pleasaunt pasture, that he maye fede vpon Chamel and Balan, and be satisfied vpon the mouit of Ephraim and Galaad. * In those dayes and at the same tyme, sayth the Lorde, * yf the offence of Israel be sought for, there shall none be founde. Yf men enquire for the syn-ne of Iuda, there shall be none: for I wyll be mercifull vnto them, whom I suffice to re-mayne ouer.

Go downe, O thou auenger, into the ene-myes lande, and viset them that dwell therin: downe with the, and synete them vpo the backes, sayth the Lorde: do accordyng to all that I haue commaunded the. There is gone about the lande a crye of a slaughter and great murther, namely on this maner. How happeneth it, that the hammer of the whole worlde is thus broken and brosed in sonder?
Howe chaunceth it, that Babylon is become a wilderness amonge the hepythen on this maner? My selfe haue layed wayte for the,
and thou art takē vnawares: art thou trapped and snared: for why? thou hast prouoked the Lorde vnto anger. The Lorde hath opened his house of ordinaunce, & brought forth the weapens of his wrath. For the thyng that is done in the lande of the Chaldees, it is the Lorde of hostes worke.

¶ Come agaynst her, for this is her ende: breake vp her chestes: the she her as ye the corne: destroye her, that nothing shall be left.
Slaye all their myghtye souldyers, and put them to death. Woe be vnto them, for the daye and tyme of their visitation is at han-de. We thynke I heare allready a crye, of them that be fled and escaped out of the lāde of Babylon, which shewe in Sion the vengeance of the Lorde our God, the vengeaunce of his temple: yee, a voyce of them, that crye agaynst Babylon. Call vp all the archers agaynst Babylon, pitche your tentes rounde about her, that none escape. * Reco-pence her, as she hath deserved: and accor-dyng as she hath done, so deale with her a-gayne, for she hath * set vp her selfe agaynst the Lorde, agaynst the holpe one of Israel.

¶ Therfore shall her yonge men fall downe in the stretes, and all her men of warre shall be rotes out in that daye, sayth the Lorde. Be-holde, I speake vnto the, O thou proude, sayth the Lorde God of hostes: for thy daye shall come, euen the tyme of thy visitation.
And the proude shall stumble and fall and no man shall helpe him vp. I wyll burne vp his cityes with fyre, and it shall consume all that is rounde about him.

¶ Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: The chylidren of Israel and Iuda suffer violence together. All they that haue them in captiuities, kept them fast, and wyl not let the go, but their auenger and redemer is myghty, whose name is the Lorde of hostes: he shall mainteyne their cause, he shall make the lāde shake, and iudge them that dwell therein, one with another. The swearde shall come vpo the Chaldees, sayth the Lorde, vpon them that dwell in Babylon, vpon their prynces, and vpon their wyle men. The swearde vpo their souldyers, as for those, they shall become fooles. The swearde vpon their wyethies, so that they shall stande in feare. The swearde vpon their hozlmen and charcttes, and vpon all the conion people that dwell vnder them: so that they shall all become ly-ke women. The swearde vpon their treasure, so that it shall be stollē awaye. A drouth vpon their waters, so that they shall be dryed vp. For the lande worshippeth ymages, and delyteth in straunge wondrefull thynges.
¶ Therfore shall wyld beasts, lamias & catte of mountaynes, and estryches dwell therein, for there shall neuer man dwell there, nether shall eny man haue his habitation there for euermore. Like as God destroyed * Sodom and Gomorre, with the cityes that laye ther about, sayth the Lorde. So shall no man dwell there also, nether shall eny man haue there his habitatyon. * Beholde, there shall come a people from the north with a greate bonde of men, and many kynges shall stan-de vp from the endes of the earthe. They beare bowes and bucklers, cruell are they and vnmecyfull.

his handes shall waxe feable. Sorowe and heugnes shall come vpon him, as a woman trauelynge with chylde. Beholde, * lyke as the lyon cometh vp from the pleasaunt me-dowes of Iordane vnto the grene pastures of Eban, so wyll I dryue them forth, and make them runne agaynst her. But whom shall I chose out: & ordyne to soch a thyng?

Ifoz who is lyke me, or who will strepue w me: or what shepherde maye stande agaynst me: Therefore, heare the counsell that y Lord hath geuen vpon Babylon, and the denpce y he hath take vpon the land of the Chaldees: The least among the people shall teare them in peces, and loke what pleasur thing they haue: they shall laye it waste. The noyse at the wympynge of Babylon shall moue the earth, and the crye shall be heard amonge the Gentiles:

The ii. Chapter.

Howe Babylon shalbe ouerthrowen. Jerre. iij. geueh hys booke to Saraias.

* Jerre. xlv. b. and. i. a. Ihus hath y Lord sayd: * behold, I will rayse vp a perous wynde agaynst Babylon and her citezses, that beare cupill wyll agaynst me. I will sende also into Babylon fanners, to fanne her out, and to destroye her lande: for in the daye of her trouble they shall be aboute her on euery syde. Moreover, the Lord hath sayde vnto the bowe men, and to them that clyme ouer y walles in brest places: Ye shall not spare her yonge men: kyll downe all her host. Thus y slayne shall fall downe in the lande of the Chaldees, and the wounded in the stretes. * As for Israel and Juda, they shall not be forsake of their God, of y Lord of hostes for the holy one of Israel sake: no, though they haue fylled all their land full of synne. * Flye awaye from Babylon, euery man saue his lyfe, that ye be not rote out w her wickednesse: for the tyme of the Lordes vengeance is come: yee, he shall reward her agayne. Babylon hath bene in the Lordes hande, & * a golden cuppe that maketh all landes droncken. Of her wyne haue all people droncken: therefore, are they out of theyr wittes. * But sodenly is Babylon fallen, & destroyed. Mourne for her, byynge plasters for her woundes, yf she maye peradventure be healed againe. We wold haue made Babylon whole, saye they: but she is not recouered. Therefore wyll we let her alone, and go euery man into his awne countreye. For her iudgment is come into heauen, & is gone vp to the cloudes. The Lord hath brought forth our righteousnes. And therefore come on, we wyll shewe Sion the worcke of the Lord oure God.

* Jerre. xlv. b. and. i. a. * Make sharpe the arrowes, and multiple poure shylles: * for the Lord shall rayse vp the spere of the kinge of the Medes, which hath already a desyre to destroye Babylon. This shall be the vengeance of the Lord, and the vengeance of his temple.

* Judic. ii. c. iii. Reg. vi. c. Set vp tokens vpon the walles of Babylon: make poure watchstronge, sett poure watchmen in araye: yee, holde veyue watches: and yet for all that shall the Lord go forth with the denpce, which he hath taken vpon them that dwell in Babylon.

* Thou that dwellest by the greates waters, thou that hast so great treasure and riches, thyne ende is come, and the reckening of thy wyninges. * The Lord of hostes hath sworne by him selfe, that he wyll ouerwhelme the with men, lyke gresshoppers in nober, which with a cozage shall crye, alarū, alarū agaynst the. * Yee, euen the Lord of hostes, that w his power made the earth, w hys wysdome prepared the rounde worlde, and with his discretio spred out the heauens. Aflone as he letteth his voyce be hearde, the waters in paye were scarce. * He draweth vp the cloudes from the endes of the earth. He turneth y lightnynges to rayne, he bringeth the wyndes out of their secrete places. If they be esteemed by their wysdome, all me are become fooles. * Confounded be all the casters of ymages: for the thing y they make is but disceate, and hath no bzeath. Mayne is it and an erronpouse worke: and in the tyme of visitation it shall perishe.

* Nevertheless, the porcio of Jacob is none foch: but he y made all thinges, whose name is the Lord of hostes, he is the rodde of his chberitance. Thou hast bene myne hammer and weapens for warre: for with the haue I broken the people in peces: and with the haue I destroyed kingdomes. Thowow the I haue beaten to poulder horse and horseman: yee, the charettes & soch as sat vpon the. Thowowe the I haue broke man & womā, olde & yonge, bachelor & mayden. Thowowe the I haue destroyed the shepherde and his flocke, the husbandeman and his catell, the princes and the rulers. Therefore wyll I reward the cite of Babilō & all her citezses, y Chaldees w all the cupill which they haue done vnto Sio: yee, that ye pour selues shall se it, sayth the Lord: Beholde, I come vpon the, & yf nopsome hill, sayth the Lord: thou that destroyest all landes: I wyll stretche out my hande ouer the, and cast the downe from the stony rockes: and will make the a bzent hill: so that nether corner stones, ner pinacles, ner foundatpōs of stones shall be taken eny more out of the, but wast and desolate shalt thou lye for euermore, sayth the Lord.

Set vp a token in the lande: blowe the trompettes amonge the hepythen: prouoke y nations agaynst her, call the kyngdomes of Ararat, Menni and Ascanes agaynst her. Set the prince agaynst her: bring as great a sorte of terrible horses against her: as yf they were gresshoppers. Prepare agaynst the the people of the Medes w their kynges, prynces and all their chefe rulers: yee, & the whole lande that is vnder hym.

agaynst Babylon: to make the lande of Babylon to waste, that no man shall dwell eny more therein. The worthyes of Babilō shall leaue y batayll, and kepe the selues in strōge holdes, their strength hath fayled them, they shall be lyke women. They dwellynge places shall be bzent vp, they barres shall be broken. One pursuaunt shall mete another: yee, one poste shall come by another, to bring the kyng of Babylon tydinges: that his cytē is taken in on euery syde, the footes occupied, the fennes bzent vp, and the souldiers soze afrayed.

For thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: the daughter of Babilō hath bene in her tyme lyke as a theslypyng flooze, but shortly shall her harvest come. Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon hath deuoured & destroyed me, he hath made me an empty vessell. He swallowed me vp lyke a dragon, and fylled his bely with my delycates: he hath cast me oute, he hath taken my substance awaye, and the thinge that was left me hath he caried vnto Babylon, sayeth the daughter that dwelleth in Syon: yee, & my bloude also vnto the Caldees, sayeth Jerusalem. Therefore thus sayeth the Lord: Beholde, I will defende thy cause, and auenge the: I wyll drinke vp her see, and drye vp her water sprynges.

* Babylon shall become an hepe of stones a dwellinge place for dragons, a fearfulnes and wondrynge, because no man dwelleth there. They shall roare together lyke lyons, and as the yonge lyons when they be angrye, so shall they bende them selues. In theyr heate I shall gyue them a dynet and they shall be droncken for ioye. * Then shall they slepe an euerlastynge slepe, and neuer wake, sayeth the Lord. I shall carpe the downe to be slayne lyke shepe, lyke wethers and goates. O, how was y Selach wonne: O, how was the glory of the whole lāde taken: how happeneth it, that Babylon is so wondzed at among the heathen: The see is rysen ouer Babylon, and hath couered her w his greates waues. Her cyties are layed waste the lande lyeth vnbuylded and voyde: it is a lande where no man dwelleth, and where no man trauayllet thowowe. Moreover, * I wyll viset Bel at Babylon: and the thyng that he hath swallowed vp, that same shall I plucke out of hys mouth. The Sentylys also shall runne nomore vnto hym, yee, and the walles of Babylon shall fall.

O my people, * come out of Babylon, y euery man maye saue his lyfe, from the fearful wrath of the Lord. Be not faynte heret, and feare not at euery rumoure that shall be herde in the lāde: for euery yere bringeth new tydinges, & in the yere folowynge as we tydinges, & robyynge in the lande and

Lord vpo Lord. And lo, the tyme cometh, that I wyll viset the ymages of Babylon, & the whole lāde shall be confounded: yee, and her slayne shall lye in the myddest of her. Heaue & earth witt all that is therein, shall reioyce ouer Babilō, w he the destroyers shall come vpon her fro the North, sayeth the Lord.

* Lyke as Babylon hath beaten downe & slayne many out of Israel, so shall there fall many, and be slayne in all her kyngdome. Ye that haue escaped y sword, haste you, stāde not styll, remembre the Lord a farre of, and thynke vpon Jerusalem, for we were ashamed to heare the blasphemys: our faces were couered with shame, because the straunge aleauntcs came into the Sanctuary of the Lord. Therefore, beholde (sayeth the Lord) the tyme cometh, that I wyll viset y ymages of Babylon, and thowowe the whole lāde they shall mourne and fall. * Though Babylon clymed vp into heauen, and kepte her power an hyc: yet shall I sende her destroyers sayeth the Lord.

A pyteous cry shall be hearde from Babylon, and a greates misery from the land of the Caldees, when the Lord destroyeth them, and when he dryueth out the hyc stomach & proude boastynge, wherwith they haue bene as furious as y waues of greates water floudes, and made greates creakes with their wordes. For the destroyers shall come vpon her (euen vpon Babylon) which shall take their worthyes, and breake their bowes: for God is disposed to auenge hym selfe vpon them, and sufficiently to recompence them. Yee, (sayeth the Lord.) I wyll make theyr prynces, theyr wyle men, theyr chefe rulers, and all their worthyes, droncke: so that they shall slepe an euerlastynge slepe, and neuer wake. Thus sayeth the kyng, whose name is the Lord of hostes.

Moreover, thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. The thycke wall of Babilō shall be broken, and her hyc gates shall be bzent vp. And the thyng that the Sentylys and the people haue wrought with greates trauayle and labour, shall come to naught and be consumed in the fyre.

This is the charge y Jeremy gaue vnto Saraias the sonne of Meriah, the sonne of Anasiah, when he went towarde Babylon with zedekiah the kyng of Juda, in y fourth yere of hys raygne. Nowe thys Saraias was a peacable pryncce. Jeremy wrote in a booke all the misery that shulde come vpon Babylon, yee, and all these sermons that be wyrtten agaynst Babylon, and gaue Saraias thys charge. When thou comest vnto Babylon, se that thou reade all these wordes, and saye. O Lord, thou art determined to rote out thys place, so that nether people ner catell shall dwell there eny more, but to in the myddest of Euphrates, and saye, Euen thus shall Babylon syncke, & be thrust dow-brynge vpon her: so that she shall neuer come vp agayne. Thus farre are the preachynge of Jeremy.

* And in the fourth moneth, the. ix. daye of the moneth, there was so great hongre in the cytie: that there were nomore vytayles for the people of the lande. So all the soldiers brake awaye, and fled oute of the cytie by nyght thozowe the wawe of the porte betwene the two walles by the kynges garden. Howe the Chaldees had compassed the cytie rounde aboute, yet wōt these men their wawe towarde the wyldernes.

* 3cr.ffff.b

And so the Chaldees folowed vpon them, and toke zedekiah the kyng in the felde of Iericho, when his hooft was runne frō hym:
So they carped the kyng awaye prysoner to Reblath, vnto the kyng of Babylon in the lande of Hemath, * where he gaue iudgemēt vpon hym:

The kynge of Babylon also caused zedekiahs sonnes to be slayne befoze his face, yee and put all the prynces of Iuda to death at Reblath. Moreover, he put out the eyes of zedekiah, caused him to be bounde with two cheynes, to be caried vnto Babylon: and let hym lye in prison, tyll he dyed.

Nowe the tenth daye of the fyfth moneth in þynynth yere of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babilon, Nabufaradan the chefe captay-ne and the kynge of Babylons seruātes came vnto Ierusalem, and hent vp the house of the Lorde. He brent by also the kynges palace, all y^e houses and all the gorgeous buydynges in Ierusalem. And the whole host of the Chaldees that were with the cheefe captayne, brake downe all the walles of Ierusalem rounde aboute.

As for the poore people and soch folke as yet was left in the cytie: which also were fallen to the kynge of Babylon, yee, and what people as yet remayned: Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne caried the awaye prisoners. But the poore people of the countrey, byd Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne leane in the lande, to occuppe the byncardes and feldes. The Chaldees also brake the brasen pylers that were in the house of the Lorde, yee, the seate and the brasen lauer that was in the house of the Lorde: and carped all the metall of them vnto Babylon. They toke awaye also the Candelions, shouels, fletchebores, sprynklers, spones, and all the brasen vessel that was occupied in the seruyce: with the basens, colepannes, sprynklers, pottes, candellstycques, spones, and cypres: wherof some were of golde, and some of syluer.

The cheefe captaine toke also the two pillars, the lamer, the twelue brasen bullockes that stode vnder the seate * which kyng Salomon made in the house of the Lord: and all the vessell conteyned so moche metall, that it myght not be weyed. For euery pillar was eyghtene cubytes hye: and þe rope that went aboute it, was twelue cubytes, & foure fyggers thicke and rounde. Nowe vpon the rope were brasen knoppes, ad euery knoppe was fyue cubytes hye: and vpon the knoppes were whopes, and poyngtrantes rounde about of cleane brasse:

After this manner were both the pylers fashyoned with the pōgranates, wherof there were an hundred and. xcvi. which hanged vpon the whoopes rounde about: The chefe captaine also toke Sariah the hie prestte, and Sophoniah that was chefe nexte hym, and the thre keepers of the treasury. He toke oute of the cytie a chāberlayne which was a captaine of the souldyers, and seuen men that were the kynges seruantes, which were founde in the cytie: and Sepher a captayne that vled to muster the men of warre, with threscore men of the countre that were taken in the cytie. These Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne toke, and caried them to the kyng of Babylon vnto Reblath: and the kyng of Babylon caused them to be put to death at Reblath in the lande of Hemath. And thus Iuda was ledde a waye captiue, oute of hys awne lande. This is the slime of the people, whō Nabuchodonosor ledde a waye captiue. ¶

In the seventh yeare of hys raigne, he caried awaye of the Jewes, thre thousand and thre and twenty. In the .xviii. yeare Nabu-chodonosor

Of Jeremye. Fo.lxxxvi.

chodonosor carped awaye from Ierusalem eyght hundreth thirty and two personnes.
In the .xxiii. yeare of Nabuchodonosor Nabuzaradan the chefe captayne, toke awaye seuen hundreth fourty and fyue Jewes pre-soners. The whole summe of all the preso-ners, is foure thousande and syxe hundreth.

In the .xxxvii. yeare after that Jeboachin the kyng of Iuda was carped awaye in the .xxv. daye of the .xii. moneth, Enilmerodach kyng of Babylon (the same yeare that he reygned) gaue Jeboachin the kyng of Iuda hys pardon, and let hym out of p̄yson, and spake loupngly to him. And sett his throne aboue the trones of the other kynges þ̄ were with hym in Babylon. he chaunged also the clothes of his p̄yson, pee, and he dyd eate w̄ hym all his lyfe longe. And he had a continuall lyp̄ng geuen him of the kyng of Babylon, cuery daye a certayne thyng alowed him all the dayes of hys lyfe, vntyll he dyed.

of Jeremy,

The fyyst Chapter.

It happened after Israel was brought into captiuſite, and Ieruſalem deſtroyed, that Ieremie the pro-phete ſate weeping, and ſorrowfully bewailed Ieruſalem and ſpyghnge and howlinge with an heu-and wooll full herte, ſayde.

Alas, howe spyteth the cytie so desolate, y^e somtyme was full of people: howe is she become lyke a wedowe,
* which was y^e lady of all na cyons: howe is she brought vnder trybute, & that ru led all landes. She wepeth sore in y^e nyght so that the teares runne downe her chekes: for amonge all her louers, there is none that geueth her eny comforte: * y^e her nexte fren des traſsgresse agens^t her, and are become her enemies. Iuda is taken prelsoner, becau se she was despyled: and for scrupnge so many straunge goddes, she dwelleth nowe amonge the heythens. She fyndeth no rest, all they that persecuted her, toke her, in strayte places wher she coulde not escape. The greatest of Sion mourne, because no man cometh no more to the sollepne feastes. All her gates are desolat, her prestes make lamētaciō, her may dēs are carefull: & she her selfe is in great heuynesse. Her enemies haue bene rulers ouer her, and her enemyes haue prospered: because the Lorde hath chastened her for her greate wickednes: * her chyldren are ledde awaye * Jerre. 14. e. captiue before theyr enemye. All the bew-tie of the daughter of Sion is awaye, her princes are become lyke hertes that fynde no pasture. They are dyuē awaye before theyr enemye, so that they haue nomoze power.

Howe both Ierusalem remembre the tyme of her misery and disobedience, yee, the ioye and pleasure that she hath had in tymes past seyng her people is brought downe thozow the power of theyr enemye, and there is no man for to helpe her: her enemyes stande lo-kyng at her, and laugh her Sabbath dayes to scozne. Ierusalem hath spinned euer, more and more, therfore is she come in decaye. All they that had her in honour despyse her: for they haue sene her fylthyness. Yee, she sygheth, and is ashamed of her selfe.

¶ Her skynnes are despyled, the remem-bred not what wolde folowe: therfore is her fall so wonderfull, and there is no man to co-forte her. ¶ Lorde, consyde my trouble, for myne enemy hath the vpper hande. The enemy hath put hys hāde to all the precious thynges that she had, yee, euē before her eyes came the heathen in and out of the Sanctuary: * whom thou (neuer theles) hast forbyd-den to come within thy congregacyon. * Deutero.

* All her people scke theye bzeade with heuyenes, and loke what pcecyous thing eu-ery man hath, that geueth he for meate, to saue hys lyfe. Conspyde, O Lorde, and se, how vyle I am become. haue ye no regarde O all ye that go fore by, be holde and se, yf there be eny sorow lyke vnto myne, wherewith the Lorde hath troubled me, in the daye of his fearfull wzath. From aboue hath he sent downe a fyre into my bones and it burneth them cruellie: he hath layed a net for my fete and throuen me wyde open: he hath made me desolate, so that I must euer be mournyn-ge. The yocke of my transgressyon is come at the last, with hys hãde hath he taken it by, and put it aboute my neck. My strength is gone: the Lorde hath delpuered me into those handes, wherout I cannot quyte my selfe. The Lorde hath destroyed all the myghtye men, that were in me he hath proclaymed a feast, to slaughter all my best men. The Lorde hath troden downe the daughter of Iuda, lyke as it were in a wyne presse. * Therefore do I wepe, and myne eyes gush oute of water: for the comforte that shulde quyen me, is farre frome.

My chyldren are dyuene awaye, for why?
the enemy hath gotten the ouerhande.

no man to comfort her. The Lord bath laid the enemy's rounde aboute Jacob, and Jerusalem is become abominacyon in the myddel of them. * The Lord is righteous, for I haue prouoked his countenance vnto anger. Take hede all ye people, and consyde my heuynesse. My maydens and my yonge men are led awaye into captiuite.

I called for my louers (but they begyled me) for my prestes and counsellors, but they perished: euen whyle they sought for meate, to saue theyr lyues. * Consyde (O Lord) howe I am troubled, my wombe is disquieted, my hert turneth about in me, and I am full of heuynesse because I rebelled skornly. The swearde hurteth me withoute, & within I am like vnto death. They heare my mourning, but there is none that wyl comfort me. All myne enemies haue heard of my trouble and are glad therof, because thou hast done it and thou hast brought forth y tyme which I calledst, wher they also shal be like vnto me.

From the shall come all their aduersitie thou shalt plucke the awaye euē as thou hast plucked me, because of all my wickednes. For my sorowe is very greete, & my hert is heuy.

The ii. Chapter.

Alas, * howe hath the Lord darckened the daughter of Syon so sore in his wrath: as for y honour of Israel he hath cast it downe fro heauen vnto y earth. Howe happeneth it, that he remembred not his awne * fote stole when he was angre?

The Lord bath cast downe all the habitacyons of Jacob without any fauour: all y stronge places of the daughter Juda hath he broken in his wrath, and thowen them downe to the grounde: her kyngdome and her princes hath he suspended. In the wrath of his indignacyon he hath broke all the horne of Israel: he hath drawen his right hande from the enemy: yee, a flame of fyre is kyndled in Jacob, and hath consumed vp all rounde aboute. He hath bent his bowe lyke an enemy, he hath fastened his right hand as an aduersary: and euery thyng that was pleasaunt to se, he hath smytten it downe. He hath poured out his wrath lyke a fyre, into the tabernacle of the daughter of Syon.

The Lord is become lyke as it were an enemy, he hath deuoured Israel and all his palaces: yee, all his strong holdes hath he destroyed, and fylled y daughter of Juda with moche sorowe and heuynesse.

* Her tabernacle (which was lyke a garden of pleasure) hath he destroyed: her hye solepne feastes hath he put downe. The Lord hath brought it so to passe, that the hye solepne feastes and Sabbathes in Sion, are cleane forgotten. In his heuy displeasure hath he made the kyng and prestes to be despised.

The Lord bath forsaken his awne sanctuary, and hath abhorred his awne Sanctuaries, and hath geuen the walles of theyr towres into the handes of the enemy. Theyr enemies made a noise in the house of y Lord, as it had bene in a solepne feaste daye.

The Lord thought to breake downe the walles of the daughter of Sion, he spred out his lyne, and drew not in his hande, tyll he had destroyed them: Therefore mourne the turrets and the broken walles together.

Her gates are sonke downe to the grounde, her barres are broken and smytten in sonder, * her kyng & princes are caried awaye to the Gentyls. They haue nether lawe ney prophetes, ney yet eny visyon fro the Lord.

The senatours of the daughter Sion sit vpon the grounde in silēce: they haue strawed ashes vpon theyr heades, and gyrded them selues with sack cloth. The maydens of Jerusalem hange downe theyr heades to the grounde.

Myne eyes begyne to faile me, I thowowe wepyng, * my body is disquieted, my liuer is poured vpo the earth, for y greate hurte of my people, seynge the chyldren and babes dyd swowne in the stretes of the cyte.

Euen when they spake to theyr mothers: where is meate and drynke? for whyle they so sayde, they fell downe in the stretes of the cyte, lyke as they had bene wounded, and some dyed in theyr mothers bosome.

What shall I saye of the, O thou daughter Jerusalem, to whom shall I lyken the? To whom shall I compare the. O y daughter Sion, to comforte the withall? Thy hurte is lyke a mayne see, who maye heale the?

* Thy prophetes haue looked out vayne and foliſhe thynges for the, they haue not observed the of thy wickednes, to kepe the fro captiuite: but haue overladen the, and thowow falschly scattered the a brode. All they that go by the, clappe their handes at the: bysynge and wagginge their heades vpo the daughter Jerusalem, and saye: is this the cyte that men call so sayre: wherin the whole lande reioyleth? All thyne enemies gape vpon y: whysperinge and bytinge their teth, saying: let vs deuoure, for the tyme that we looked for, is come: we haue founde and sene it.

The Lord bath fulfilled the thyng, that he was purposed to do: and perfourmed that he had deuised longe ago: he hath destroyed, and not spared. He hath caused thine aduersarye triumphe ouer the, and set vp the horne of thyne enemy.

* Let thyne herte crye vnto the Lord, O thou cytie of the daughter Sion: let thy teares runne downe lyke a ryuer daye and nyght, rest not, and let not the aple of thyne eye leaue of. Stande vp and make thy prayer in the fyrst watch of the nyght, poure oute thyne hert lyke water before the Lord. lyft vp thyne handes, for the lyues

lyues of thy yonge chyldren, that dye of hunger in the stretes. Beholde, O Lord, and consyde, why hast thou gathered me vp so cleane? Shall y women then eate their awne frute, euen chyldre of a spanne longer? Shall the prestes and prophetes be slayne thus in the Sanctuary of the Lord? Yonge and olde Iye behynde the stretes vpon the grounde, my maydens and yonge men are slayne with the swearde: whom thou in the daye of thy wrathfull indignacion hast put to death: yee, euen thou hast put them to death, & not spared them. My neyghbours that are rounde about me, hast thou called, as it were to a feast daye: so y in the daye of the Lordes wrath none escaped, nether was eny left behynde. Those that I haue brought & noryshed, hath myne enemy destroyed.

The iiii. Chapter.

In the mā, that (thowowe the rodd of his wrath) haue experience of misery. He droue me forth, and led me: yee, into darchenesse, but not into lyght. Agaynst me onely he turneth his hande, and layeth it euer vpon me.

My fleithe and my skynne hath he made olde, & my bones hath he brused. He hath buylded rounde aboute me, and closed me in with gall and tranayle. He hath sett me in darchenes, as they that be deed for euer.

He hath so hedged me in, that I cannot get out, and hath layed heuy lynckes vpon me. Though I crye and call piteously, yet heareth he not my prayer. He hath stopped vp my wayes with foure squared stones, and made my pathes croked.

He layeth wayte for me lyke a Beare, and as a lyon in a hole. He hath marred my wayes, and broke me in peces, he hath layed me waste altogether. He hath bent his bowe, & made me as it were a march to shut at: The arrowes of his quyer hath he shot euen into myne reynes.

* I am laughed to scorn of all my people, they make songes vpon me all the daye longe. He hath fylled me with bitternes, and geuen me wormwood to drynke. He hath smitten my teth in peces with stones, and rolled me in y dust.

He hath put my soule out of rest, I forget all good thynges. I thought in my selfe: I am vndone, there is no hope for me in the Lord. I remembre yet my misery and my trouble, the wormwood and the gall.

Yee, thou shalt remembre them, for my soule melteth awaye in me. Whyle I consyde these thynges in my herte, I get a hope agayne. Namely, it is of the Lordes mercyes that we are not, vterly consumed. For trulpe his pytefull compassion hath not ceased. As we mercyes shall the Lord therewe vpon the, erly, yee in the daye spyng, (O Lord) greates thy faythfulnesse.

* The Lord is my porcyon, sayeth my soule, therfore wyl I hope in him. How good is the Lord vnto them, that put theyr trust in hym, and to y soule that seeketh after hym? The good man with stylnes and patience tarieth, for the health of the Lord.

Howe good is it for a man, to take the pock vpon him from his youth vp. He lyteth alone, he holdeth hym still, and dwelleth quyetly by him selfe. He laicth his face vpon the earth, yf (percase) there happen to be eny hope. He offreth his cheke to the smyter, he wyl be content with reproues.

For the Lord wyl not forsake for euer, * but though he punyſhe hym: yet according to the multitude of his mercyes, he receaueth to grace agayne. For he doth not plage, & cast out the children of men from his herte.

To treade all the presoners of the earth vnder his fete. To moue the iudgement of man before the most hyghest.

To condempne a man in his cause. The Lord hath not pleasure in soche thynges.

What is he then that saith: there shulde somthyng be done without the Lordes commaundement. Out of the mouth of the moost hyghest goeth not euell and good?

Wherfore then murmureth the luyng man: let him murmur at his awne spynne.

* Let vs loke, well vpo our awne wayes and remembre oure selues, and turne agayne to the Lord. Let vs lyfte vp oure hertes with oure handes vnto the Lord: that is in heauen. We haue bene dissimblers, and haue offended, wylt thou therfore not be intreated?

Thou hast couered vs in thy wrath, and persecuted vs, thou hast slayne vs without any fauour. * Thou hast byd thy selfe in a cloude, y oure prayer shuld not go thowowe. Thou hast made vs outcastes, and to be despyled amonge the people. All oure enemyes gape vpon vs.

Feare and pytt is come vpon vs, yee, decepte and destruction. * Whole ryuers of water gush oute of myne eyes, for the greate hurte of my people.

Myne eyes runne, and cannot cease, for there is no rest. O Lord, when wylt thou loke downe from heauen, and consyde?

Myne eye breaketh my herte: because of all the daughters of my cyte. Myne enemies hunted me out sharply, lyke a byrde, yee, and that without a cause. They haue put downe my life into a pytt, & they haue cast stones vpon me. They poured water vpon my heade, then thought I: nowe am I vndone. I called vpon thy name, O Lord, out of y depe pytt. Thou hast herde my voyce: and hast not turned awaye thyne cares from my syghthyng and cryenge. Thou hast enclyned thy selfe vnto me. when I called upon the, and haste sayde: scarce not. Thou (O Lorde) hast mayntened the cause of my soule, and hast redeemed my lyfe. O Lorde thou hast sene my blasphemers, take thou my cause vpon the. Thou hast well consydered howe they go aboute to do me harme, & that all their counsels are agaynst me. Thou hast heard their despytefull wordes (O Lorde) yee, and all theyr ymaginacyons agaynst me. The lyppes of myne enemyes, and theyr deuices that they take agaynst me, all I daye lōge. Thou seyst also theyr syttinge howe, and theyr rynginge vpon: they make theyr songes of nothyng but of me. Rewarde them (O Lorde) accordyng to the worches of theyr handes, Geue them an obstinate herte: euen thy curse. Persecute them (O Lorde) with thine indignacyon, and rote the out from vnder the heauen.

The .iiij. Chapter.

How is the golde become so dymme: howe is the goodly colour of it so sore chaunged: and the stones of the Sanctuary thus scatred in the corner of euery strete. The chyldren of Syon that were alwaye in honoure, and clothed with the most precious golde: howe are they now become lyke the crthen vessels which be made with the potters hande: The dragons geue theyr yong ones suck with bare brestes: but the daughter of my people is cruell, and dwelleth in the wylderne lyke the Estriches. The tongues of the suckyng chyldren, cleue to the rofe of theyr mouthes for very thyrst. The yonge chyldren aske bread, but there is no mā that geueth it the. They that were wonte to fare delycatly, perishe in the streates: they that afore were brought vp in purple, make now moche of donge. The synne of the daughter of my people is become greater the * Sen. xij. a. * the wyckednes of Sodome, that sodenly was destroyed, and not taken with handes.

Her abstepners (or Nazarees) were whyter then the snowe or mylke: theyr colour was freshe, reade as Corall, theyr bewtye lyke the Saphyre. But now theyr faces very blacke. In so moche, that thou shouldest not knowe them in the streates. * Theyr skynne cleueth to theyr bones, It is withered and become lyke a drye stocke. They that be slayne with the sword are happier then loche as dye of hunger, and perishe awaye, fampyng for the frutes of the felde.

* Deutero. xxv. e. iiii. lxxv. vi. f.

* Ezecho. ij. a.

* The women (which of nature are pytiefull) haue sodden theyr awne chyldre with theyr handes, that they might be their meate in the miserable destruccyon of the daughter of my people. * The Lorde hath perfourmed bys heuy wrath: he hath poured oute the furiousnes of bys displeasure. he hath kyndled a fyre in Syon, which hath consumed the foundacyons therof.

Nether the kynges of the earth, ner all inhabytours of the worlde, wolde haue beleued that the enemy and aduersary shuld haue come in at the gates of the cytie of Ierusalem. Which neuerthelesse is come to passe for the synne of her pprophtes, and for the wickednes of her prestes: that haue shed * in nocentes bloude within her. So that the blynde men wente stomblyng in the streates, and stayned them selues with bloude. They wolde in no wyse touche there garments. But they cried vnto euery man flee the staynyng, awaye, gett you hence, touche it not. Yee, they fleade and remoued from them yee, they haue sayde amonge the brethren they shall nomore dwell in this cytie.

The countenance of the Lorde hath banysht them, and shall neuer loke moze vpon them. For they them selues nether regarded the prestes, nor pytyed theyr elders.

Wherfore pet oure eyes sayle vs, whyle we loke for daye helpe: seynge we be euer waytynge vpon a people, that can do vs no good. They lape so sharpe wayte for vs that we cannot go safe vpon the stretes: for oure ende is come, oure dayes are fulfylled, oure ende is here. * Dure persecuters are swyfter then the Eagles of the ayre, they folowed vpon vs ouer the mountaynes and layed wayte for vs in the wyldernesse.

The very * bryth of oure mouth: euen the anoynted Lorde hym selfe was taken in ther nett of whom we saye: Under bys shadowe we shalbe preserued amonge the heythen. And thou (O daughter Edom) that dwellest in the lande of Huz, be glad and reioyce: for the cuppe shall come vnto the also, whych whan thou suppest of, thou shalt be droncken. Thy synnes is well punysht, (O thou daughter Syon) he shall not suffre the to be carped awaye enymore. But thy wyckednes (O daughter Edom) shall he vylet, and for thy synnes sake, he shall lede the into captiuite.

The .v. Chapter.

The prayer of Jeremy.

All to remembraunce (O Lorde) what we haue suffred, consyde, and se oure confusion. Dure enheritaunce is turned to the straungers and oure houses to the aleauntes. We are become carefull and fatherles, and oure mothers are as the wyddowes. We are sayne to dryncke oure awne water for money, and oure awne wod must we bye with money. Dure neckes are vnder persecucion, we are weery, and haue no rest.

Afore tyme we yelded oure selues to the Egyptians, and now to the Assyrians, only that we myght haue byed ynough. * Dure fathers (which now are gone) haue spynned, &

we must beare theyr wyckednes. Seruauntes haue the rule of vs, and no man deliuereth vs out of their handes. We must get oure lyuyng with y parell of oure lyues, because of the mouth of the wyldernes.

Dure skynne is as it had bene bzent in an ouen, for very sore hunger. The wyues are rauished in Syon, and the maydens in the cyties of Iuda. The princes are hanged vpon the hande of the enemies, they haue not spared y olde sagemen, they haue take yonge mennes lyues from the, & the boyes are hanged vpon trees. The elders sytt nomore vnder the gates, and the yonge men vse nomore playenge of musycke. The hope of oure herte is gone, oure mery queer is turned into mournynge. The garlande of oure heade is fallen: alas, that euer we spynned so sore.

Wherfore, oure herte is full of heynnes, & oure eyes dymme: because of the byll of Sidon, that is destroyed. In so moche, that the foresunne vpon it. But thou, O Lorde, that remainest for euermore, and thy seate wolde without ende: wherfore wylt thou styll forget vs, and forsake vs so longe? O Lorde turne thou vs vnto the, and so shall we be turned. Renue oure dayes as in olde tymes, for thou hast banysht vs now longe ynough, and hast bene sore displeased at vs.

The booke of the Prophete Ezechiel.

The fyrst Chapter.

The tyme wherin Ezechiel prophesied, and in what place. Bys offsprynge and offspr. The byspon of the four beasts. The byspon of the whies. The byspon of the thronc, and of the ymage aboute the thronc.

In chaunsed in y. xxx. ycare, the fyfthe daye of the fourth moneth, that I was among the presoners by the ryuer of Cobar: where the heauens opened, and I sawe a byspon of God. Nowe the fyfth daye of the moneth made out the fyfth ycare of kyngc Boachins captiuite. At the same tyme came the worde of the Lorde vnto Ezechiel the sonne of Buzi the preste, in the lande of the Chaldees by the water of Cobar, * where the hande of the Lorde came vpon hym.

And I lokked, and beholde a stormy wynde came out of the North with a greate cloude full of fyre, which with bys glystre lyghtened all rounde aboute. And in the midst of the fyre it was all cleare lyke the face of an angell, and as it were the lyknes of four beasts, and thys was there lykenesse. They were fashyoned lyke a man: sauyng, that euery one had four faces and four wynges.

Theyr legges were streight, but theyr fete were lyke bullockes fete, and theyr glystred, as it had bene sayre scoured metall. Under theyr wynges, vpon all the four corners they had mens handes. Theyr faces and theyr wynges were towarde the four corners: yet were the wynges so, that one euer touched another. When they went, they turned them not aboute: but eche one went streight forwarde.

Furthermoze thys was the symilitude of theyr faces. * vpon the ryght syde of these four, theyr faces were lyke the face of a mā, and the face of a lyon: But vpon the left syde, they had the face of an oxe, and the face of an Eagle. Theyr faces also and theyr wynges were spred out aboute: so that two wynges of one touched euer two wynges of another, & with the other they couered their body. Euery one when it wente, it wente streyght forwarde. Where as the sprete led them, thither they wente, * and turned not aboute in theyr goynge.

The fashyon and countenance of the beasts was lyke hoate coales of fyre, euen as though burning cressettes had bene among the beastes: * (thys was the byspon) and the fyre gaue a glistre, and out of the fyre there went lyghtenynge. When the beastes wente forwarde & backward, one wold haue thought it had lyghtened. Now when I had well considered the beastes, I saw a worcke of wheelles vpon the earth with four faces also nye vnto the beastes.

The fashyon and worcke of the wheelles was lyke y see. The four wheelles were ioyned and made (to loke vpon) as it had bene one whele in another. When one wente forwarde, they wente all four, and turned the not about in theyr goinges. They were large greate and horrible to loke vpon. Theyr backes were full of eyes rounde about them all four. When the beastes wente, the wheelles wente also with them. And when the beastes lyfte them selues vpon the earth, the wheelles were lyft vpon also. Whither soeuer y sprete wente, thither went they also, and the wheelles were lyfte vpon, and folowed them: for the sprete of lyfe was in the wheelles. When the beastes wente forth, stode styll, or lyft them selues from the earth, then the wheelles also wente, stode styll, and were lyfte vpon, for the bryth of lyfe was in the wheelles.

The Prophecie

Of Ezechiel.

No. lxxxix.

Above, over the heades of the beastes there was a fyrmament, which was fashioned as it had bene of the most pure Christall, and that was spred oute above vpon theyr heades: Under the same fyrmament were theyr wynges layed abrode, one towarde another and two wynges couered y^e body of euery beaste. And when they wente forth, I heard the noyse of theyr wynges, lyke y^e noyse of greete waters, as it had bene the voyce of the greete God, and a russhynge together as it were of an hoost of men. And when they stode still, they let downe theyr wynges.

Nowe when they stode still, and had letten downe theyr wynges, it thondred in the fyrmament that was about theyr heades. Above the fyrmament that was ouer theyr heades, there was the fashyn of a seate, as it had bene made of Sapphyr. Upon the seate there satt one lyke a mā. * I behelde hym, and he was lyke an angell, as it had bene all of fyre with in from his loynes vppwarde.

And beneth, when I looked vpon him vnder y^e loynes, me thought he was lyke a wyngynge fyre, that geueyth lyght on euery syde. Yee, the thyne and glyste that lyghtened rounde about, was lyke a raynbowe, which in a raynye dape appeareth in the cloudes. Eue so was the similitude, wherin the glozpe of the Lorde appeared. When I sawe it, I fell vpon my face, and hearkened vnto the voyce of hym that spake:

The ii. Chapter

The prophete is sente to call the people from theyr errorre.

Ad then sayd he vnto me: Stade vp vpon thy fete (O y^e sonne of mā) and I will talke with the. * And as he was comynge wth me, the sprete came into me, and sett me vp vpon my fete: so that I marched the thyng, y^e he sayd vnto me. And he sayd Behold, thou sonne of man: I will sende the to the chyldren of Israel, to those runnagates and obstinate people: for they haue taken parte agaynst me, and are runne awaye from me: * both they and theyr fore fathers vnto this dape.

Yee, I will sende the vnto a people that haue rough visages and stiffe stomakes: vnto whō thou shalt saye on this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde God hym selfe hath spoken, that whether they be obedient or no (for it is a frowarde household) they maye knowe yet that there hath bene a prophete amonge them.

* Therefore (thou sonne of man) feare the not, neither be afrayed of theyr wordes: for prouokers and thornes are with the. Yee, thou dost dwell amonge scorpions, but feare not theyr wordes, be not abashed at theyr looks, for it is a frowarde household.

So that thou speake my wordes vnto them, whether they be obedient or not, for they are obstynate. Therefore, thou sonne of man, obey thou all thynges that I saye vnto the, & be not thou styfnecked, lyke as they are a styfnecked household. Open thy mouth, and eate that I geue the.

So as I was lokynge vp, beholde, there was sent vnto me an hāde, wherein was closed * a booke: and the hande opened it before me, and it was wyrtten within and without full of carefull mournynge: alas, and woo.

The iii. Chapter.

The prophete berynge fedde with the wynde of God and with the constant boldenes of the sprete, is sent vnto the people that were in captiuite. The punishment of a curate that sheweth not the people theyr synnes.

After this, sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, eate that, whatsoeuer it be: yee * eate that booke, and go thy waye, and speake vnto the chyldren of Israel: So I opened my mouth, ad he gaue me the booke for to eate, and sayde vnto me. Thou sonne of man, thy bely shall eate, and thy bowels shall be fylled with y^e booke, that I geue the. Then dyd I eate the boke, * and it was in my mouth sweter then hony. And he sayde vnto me: thou sonne of man, * get y^e soone vnto the house of Israel, and shewe the the wordes, that I comaunde the for I sende the not to the people that hath a straunge, vnkowne, or hard speache, but vnto the house of Israel. Not to many nacyns, which haue dyuerse speeches and harde languages, whose wordes thou vnderstādest not: * Neuerthelesse, yf I sent the to those people, they wolde folowe the. But the house of Israel wyll not folowe y^e, for they wyll not folowe me: yee, all the house of Israel haue stiffe foreheades & harde hertes. * Beholde therefore, I will make thy face preuayle agaynst their faces, and harde thy foreheade agaynst their foreheades: so that thy foreheade shall be harder then an adamant or slynt stone: that thou mayest feare them the lesse, and be lesse afrayed of the, for they are a frowarde household.

He sayde mozeouer vnto me: thou sonne of man, take diligent hede with thyne eares, to the wordes that I speake vnto the fasten them in thyne herte: and go to the presoners of thy people, speake vnto them, and saye on this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde God hath spoken: whether ye heare, or heare not. With that the sprete toke me vp. And I heard the noyse of a greete russhynge and remouynge of the most blessed glozpe of the Lorde out of his place.

I heard also the noyse of the wynges of the beastes, that russhed one agaynst another, that, yet, and the ratyng of the wheles, that were by them, whych russhynge and noyse was very greaue.

* Nowe when the sprete toke me vp, and carped me awaye, I wente wyth an heuy & a sorrowfull mynde, but the hāde of the Lorde comforted me ryght soone.

And so in the begynnyng of the moneth Abib, I came to the presoners, * that dwelt by the water of Cobar, & remainned in y^e place, where they were: And so contynued I amonge them seuen dayes, berynge very soze.

And when the seuen dayes were expired, the Lorde sayde vnto me: * Thou sonne of man, I haue made the a watchmā vnto the house of Israel: therefore take good hede to the wordes of my mouth, & geue the warnynge at my commaundement.

* If I saye vnto the, concernynge the vngodly man, that (wythout doute) he must dye, and thou geuest hym not warnynge, ner speakest vnto hym, that he may turne from his euell waye, and so to lyue: Then shall y^e same vngodly mā dye in his awne vnrigh- teousnes: but his bloude wyll I requyre of thyne hand. Neuertheles, yf thou geue warnynge vnto the wycked, and he yet forsake not his vngodlynelle: then shall he dye in his awne wyckednesse, but thou hast discharged thy soule.

Nowe yf a ryghteous man go from * his ryghteousnesse, and do the thyng y^e is euell: I will laye a stomblynge blocke before him, and he shall dye because thou hast not geuen hym warnynge: yee, dye shall he in his awne synne, so that the vertue, whych he dyd before, shall not be thought vpon: but his bloude wyll I requyre of thyne hande.

Neuerthelesse, yf thou exhortest the ryghteous, that he synne not, & so the ryghteous do not synne: then shall he lyue, because he hath receaued thy warnynge, and thou hast discharged thy soule. And there came y^e hāde of the Lorde vpon me, and he sayd vnto me: Staude vp, and go into the felde, that I may there talke wyth the.

So when I had rysen vp, and gone forth into the felde: Beholde, the glozpe of the Lorde stode there, * lyke as I sawe it afore, by the water of Cobar.

* Then fell I downe vpon my face, & the sprete came into me, whych set me vp vpon my fete, & sayd thus vnto me: Go thy waye, and sparce thy self in thyne house. Beholde, (O thou sonne of man) there shall chaynes be brought for the, to bynde the wythall, so that thou shalt not escape out of them. And I wyll make thy tunge cleue to the rofe of thy mouth, that thou shalt be domme, & not be as a chylder wyth them: for it is an obstinate household.

But when I speake vnto the, then open thy mouth, and saye: Thus sayeth y^e Lorde God: who so heareth, let hym heare: who so wyll not let hym leaue, for it is an obstynate household.

The iiiij. Chapter.

The belege of the cite of Iherusalem is signified. The longe contynuaunce of the captiuite of Israel: An honger is prophesied to come in the captiuite.

Thou sonne of man: take a tyle stonie, & laye it before the, and describe vpon it the cite of Iherusalem, howe it is beleged, howe bulwarkes and stronge wythes are grauen on euery syde of it: describe also tentes, and an hoost of men rounde aboute it, wyth engynes of warre.

Moreover, take an yron panne, and set it betwixte the and the cite, in steade of an yron wall. Then set thy face toward it, belege it, and laye ordinaunce agaynst it, to wythstande it. Thus shalt thou haue a token vnto the house of Israel. But thou shalt slepe vpon thy left syde, and laye the synne of the house of Israel vpon the. Certayne dayes appoynted, thou shalt slepe vpon that syde, and beare their synnes. * Neuerthelesse, I will appoynte the a tyme (to put of theyr synnes) & the nombre of the dayes: Three hundred and .xx. dayes must thou beare the wyckednesse of the house of Israel. When thou hast fulfilled these dayes lye downe agayne, and slepe vpon thy ryght syde. xl. dayes, and beare the synnes of the house of Iuda.

* A dape for a peare, a dape (I saye) for a peare, wyll I euer laye vpon the. Therefore set nowe thy face agaynst that beleged Iherusalem, and discouer thyne arme, that thou mayest prophesye agaynst it.

Scholde, I wyll laye chaynes vpon the, that thou shalt not turne the from one syde to another, tyll thou hast ended the dayes of thy sege.

Wherefore, take vnto the wheate, barley beanes, growell scde, Millin and fythes: & put these together in a vessel, and make the loaves of bread therof, accordynge to the nombre of the dayes that thou shalt lye vpon thy syde: that thou mayest haue bread to eate, for the hundred and .xx. dayes.

And the meate that thou eatest, shall haue a certayne wayght appoynted: namely twentye sycles euery dape. Thus appoynted meate shalt thou eate daylye, fro the begynnyng to the ende.

Thou shalt dryncke also a certayne measure of water: Namely, the sytt parte of an hin shalt thou dryncke daylye fro the begynnyng vnto the ende. Warly eates shalt thou eate, yet shalt thou fyrtt cost them at a fyre made with mans doge, that they maye se it. And with that sayde the Lorde: Euen thus shall the chyldren of Israel eate their despoiled bread in the myddest of the Gentiles, and geue whom I wyll leaue them.

Then

D Then sayde I: Oh Lord God. Beholde my soule was yet neuer stayned: for from my yowth vnto this houre, I dyd neuer eate of a deed carcase, or of that which was stayne of wyld beastes, nether came there euer any vncleane fleshe in my mouth.

Wher vnto he answered me, and sayde: Well shal I wyll graunte þ to take cowes donge for the donge of a mā, and to tolke the bread wyth all before them.

And he sayde vnto me: Beholde thou sonne of man, I wyll mynyshe all the promys of bread in Ierusalem, so that they shall wepe their bred: and eate it wyth scarcenelle. But as for water, they shall haue a very lytle measure therof, to drinke. And when they haue nomore bread ner water, one shall be destroyed wyth another, ad samplly awaye for theyr wyckednesse.

The. v. Chapter.

The epdile of the heare, by which is signified the destruction of the people. The causes of the anger of God towards the people.

Thou sonne of man, take the then a sharpe knyfe, namely, a rasoure. Take that, and shawe the heare of thy head and beerd: Then take the scales and the wayght, & deuyde the heare a sinder. And after thou hast accomplished þ dayes of the wege: burne the thyrde parte therof in the fyre in the myddest of the cytte, & cut the other thyrde parte in peces wyth a knyfe. * As for þ thyrde parte þ remaineth, cast it in the wynde and I wyll drawe out þ swerde after them.

Yet afterwarde, take a lytle of the same, and bynde it in thy cote lappe. Then take a curtely of it, and cast it in the myddest of the fyre: & burne it in the fyre. Out of the same fyre shall there growe a flame, vpon the whole house of Israel. Moreover, thus sayde the Lord God: Thys same is Ierusalem. I sett her in the myddest of the heathen & nations that are rounde aboute her, but she hath despyled my iudgements moze then the Gentiles them selues, and broke my commaundementes moze then þ nacyns, that lye rosede aboute her: for they haue cast out myne ordinaunces, and not walched in my lawes.

Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God: * For so moch as ye haue bene moze augmented in nombre of people then the heathen, þ dwell rosede aboute you: and ye haue not walched in my lawes, nether haue ye kepte myne ordinaunces, and ye haue not lyued so ryght-wyllens the heathen that ar rounde aboute you: Therefore thus sayeth the Lord God: I wyll also come vpon the, I my selfe I saye, for in the myddest of the wyll I syt in iudgment, in the syght of the heathen, & wyll handle the of soch a fashyon, as I neuer dyd before, and as I neuer wyll do from that tyme forth, and that because of all thynne abho-minacions. For in the fathers shall be sayne to eate their awne sonnes, and the sonnes their awne fathers. Soch a courtte wyll I kepe in the, and the whole remnant of the wyll I scatere in to all the wyndes.

Wherefore, as truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lord God) seyng thou hast despyled my sanctuary, wyth all maner of abhominacyons & wyth all thy shamefull offences: For thys cause wyll I also destroye the. Myne eye shall not ouersee the, nether wyll I spare the.

* One thyrde parte wythin the, shall dye of the pestilence & of hunger: Another thyrde parte shall be slayne downe rounde aboute the wyth þ swerde: The other thyrde parte þ remaineth, wyll I scatere abroade towarde all the wyndes, and drawe out the swerde after them. Thus I wyll perfourme my indignacyon, & let my wrath agaynst them, and I will calfe my selfe. So that whē I haue fulfilled myne anger agaynst them, they shall knowe that I am the Lord, which wyth a feruent gelously haue spoken it. Moreover, I wyll make the waste and abhorred, before all the heathen that dwell aboute the, & in the syght of all them, that go by the: so that whē I punish the in my wrath, in myne anger, & wyth þ plage of my whole displeasure: thou shalt be a very abhominacion, shame, a galyng & wondryng stocke, amonge the heathen that lye aboute the. Ene I the Lord haue spokē it, and it shall come to passe, when I shute amonge them the perlous darter of hunger, which shall be but death: yee, therefore shall I shute them, because I will destroye you: * I wyll encrease hunger, and mynyshe all the provision of bread amonge you.

Plages & misery wyll I sende you, yee, & wyld beastes also to destroye you. Pestilence and bloudsheddinge shall come vpon you, & the swerde wyll I bringe ouer you. Euen I the Lord, haue sayde it.

The. vi. Chapter.

He sheweth that the people shalbe plagued for the synne of Idolatrye. He prophesieth the repentance of the remnant of the people, and theyr deliuerance. The destruction of the towne is prophesied.

Ad the worde of the Lord came vnto I me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, turne thy face to the mountaynes of Israel, that thou mayest prophesie vnto them, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lord God, O ye mountaynes of Israel: Thus hath the Lord God spoken to the mountaynes, hylls, valleys and dales.

Beholde I, I my selfe I saye, wyll bringe a swerde ouer you, and destroye youre hye places: I wyll cast downe youre aulters, and breake downe youre ymages. Your slayne men wyll I laye before youre goddes, and the deed carcasses of the chydren of Israel wyll I cast before theyr Idoles, youre bones wyll I destroye rounde aboute aboute youre aulters, and dwelling places. The cyties shalbe desolate, þ hyllchapelg layed waste: youre aulters destroyed, & broken: youre goddes cast downe, and taken awaye, your temples layde eue wyth the grounde, your awne woordes cleane rote oute.

Your slayne men shall lye amonge you, that ye maye learne to knowe, howe that I am the Lord. Those þ be amonge you & haue escaped the swerde, wyll I leaue amonge the Gentiles, for I wyll scatere you amonge the nacyns. And they that escape of you, shall thinke vpon me amonge the heathen, where they shalbe in captiuitie.

As for that whozys and vnfaithfull herete of theys, wherewith they runne awaye frome, I wyll breake it: yee, & put oute those eyes of theirs, that comytte fornicacyon wyth theyr Idols.

Then shall they be ashamed, and displeased wyth their selues, for the wyckednesses and abhominacyons, which they haue done: and shall learne to knowe, þ I am the Lord howe that it is not in vayne, that I þ Lord spake, to bringe soch misery vpon them.

The Lord sayde moreover vnto me: Sympte thynne handes together, and stampe wyth thy fete, and saye: Wo worth all the abhominacions and wyckednesses of the house of Israel, for because of them, they shall perishe wyth the swerde, wyth hunger and wyth pestilence. Who so is farre of, shall dye of the pestilence: he that is nye at hande, shall perishe wyth the swerde: and the other that remaine & þ are beleged, shall dye of hunger.

Thus wyll I satysfy my wrothfull displeasure vpon them. And so shall ye learne to knowe, that I am the Lord, when youre slayne men lye amonge youre Idols, and aboute youre aulters: vpon all hye hylls and toppes of mountaynes, amonge all grene trees, amonge all thycke okes: ene in the places, where they dyd sacrifice to all theyr Idols. I wyll stretch myne hande oute vpon them, and wyll make the lande waste: So þ it shall lye desolate and voyde, fro the wyldernes of Sebloth forth, thowowe all their habitacyons: to learne the for to knowe, that I am the Lord.

The. vii. Chapter.

The ende of all the lande of Israel shall sodenly come. The cause of the destruction thereof. The prophete is commaunded to shewe the summe of the curles that are at hande.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me on thys maner: The I call, O þ sonne of man. Thus sayeth the Lord God vnto the lade of Israel: The ende cometh, vpon the lande of Israel yee, verely the ende cometh vpon all the four corners of þ lade. But now shall þ ende come vpon the for I wyll sende my wrath vpon the, & will punish the: accordyng to thy wayes, & rewar-de the after all thynne abhominacions. * Myne eye shall not ouersee the, nether will I spare the: but rewarde þ, accordyng to thy wayes, and declare thynne abhominacions. Then shall ye knowe, that I am the Lord.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, one misery and plage shall come after another. þ ende is here. The ende (I saye) is come, it watched for þ, beholde it is come all ready, thy destruction is erlye come agaynst the, þ dwellest in the lande.

The tyme is at hande, the daye of sedicio is harde by, & the crye shall not be as the soundinge agayne of the mountaynes. Therefore, I wyll shortly pour out my soze displeasure ouer the, and fulfill my wrath vpon the. I wyll iudge the after thy wayes, and recompence the all thy abhominacions.

* Myne eye shall not ouersee the, nether wyll I spare the: but rewarde the after thy wayes, & thynne abhominacions shall be punished in the middes of the, to learne you for to knowe, howe that I am the Lord þ sympteth. Beholde, the daye is here the daye is come, þ houre is rúne out, the rodde flourisheth, þ yde wareth grene, malycious violence is growne vp, and the vngodly warre to a stat. None of the shal remaine ouer, none of their riches, not one of ther seede, and no lametacion shall be made for them.

The tyme cometh, the daye draweth nye: * Who so byeth, lett him not reioyce: he that selleth, lett hym not be soz: for why. * Trouble shall come in the myddest of them all: so þ the seller shall not come agayne to the thinge he solde, all though they lyke be yet wyth þ lyuinge. For whē the prophecie was preached vnto all the people, none returned from ther synne, and noman toke strengthe to him agēst his wyckednesse, to saue his awne lyfe. The trompettes shall ye blowe, & make you all ready, but no mā shall goo to þ battell, for I am wroth wyth all þ whole multitude.

The swerde shall be without, pestilence and hunger wythin: so that whoso is in the felde, shall be slayne wyth the swerde: and he that is in the cytte shall perishe wyth hunger and pestilence.

And soch as escape and fle from amonge them, shall be vpon the hylls, lyke as the doues in þ felde: euer y one shall be afrayed, because of his awne wyckednesse.

All handes shall be let downe, & all knees shall be weake as the water: they shall gyze them selues wyth sackcloth, feare shall fall vpon them. Theyr faces shall be confounded, & and theyr heades balde: theyr spluer shall they cast forth in the stretes, & their golde shall be despyled: * yee, theyr spluer & golde maye not deliuer the, in the daye of þ fearful wrath of the Lord.

¶ They

The propherye

They shall not satisfy their hungry souls, neither fill their empty bellies therewith: For it is become their awne decaye thozow their wickednes: And ther bewtyfull costlye ornamente that God had ordeyned to be their great glozpe, in it they haue sett vpon abominacyōs vnto ther Idols. For this cause wyl I make them and it to be abhorred. Moreover, I wyl geue it into the handes of the straungers to be spoyled: and to the wycked, for to be robbed, and they shall destroye it. My face wyl I turne fro them, my treasury shall be defiled: for the threues shall go in to it, and suspende it. Make a cheyne, for the lande is whole defyled wth vnyghteous iudgement of innocent bloude, and the cytie is full of violent oppresyon. Wherefore, I wyl bringe the most cruell tyrantes from amonge the heathen, to take theyr houses in possession. I wyl make the pompe of the proude to cease, and ther sanctuary shall be defyled. When this trouble cometh, they shall seke peace, but they shall haue none. One myschefe and sorowe shall folowe another, and one rumoure shall come after another: * Then shall they seke visyons in vayne at their Prophetes. The lawe shall be gone from the prestes, and wysdome from the elders. The kynge shall mourne, the prynces shall be clothed with heynesse, and the hādes of the people in the lāde shall tremble for feare. I wyl do vnto them after theyr awne wayes, accordynge to their awne iudgements wyl I iudge them: to learne them for to knowe, that I am the Lorde.

The viij. Chapter.

In an apparance of the similitude of God, Ezechiel is brought vnto Ierusalem in the sperte. The Lorde herewith the Prophetes the Idolatries of the house of Israel, and cheafes of the prestes.

It happened, that in the fyrte yere of my fyfth daye of the fyrte moneth. I sat in my house, and the Lordes of the councell of Iuda with me: and the hande of the Lorde God fell euē there vpon me. And as I looked vp, * I sawe as it were a licknesse of fyre from hys loynes downe warde, and fro hys loynes vwarde it shyned maruclous cleare & lyke an angell to loke vpon. * This similitude stretched out an hande, and toke me by the hearepe lockes of my head, and the sperte lyft me vp betwixte heauē and earth: and brought me in a visyon to Ierusalem, into the entrie of yinner porte that lyeth toward the north: there stode an ymage, with whō he that hath all thynges in hys power, was very wroth.

And beholde, the glozpe of the God of Israel was in the same place: euē * as I had sene it afore in the felde. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of mā, Dlyst vp thyn eyes, and loke toward the north. Then lyft I vp myne eyes toward the north, & beholde:

beynde the porte northwarde, there was an auter made vnto the ymage of prouocacyō in the very entryng in. And he sayde further: more vnto me: Thou sonne of mā, seest thou what these do? Seest thou the greates abominacyōs that the house of Israel comytte in this place: to dryue me fro my sanctuary? But turne the aboute, and thou shalt se yet greater abominacyōs. And wth that brought he me to the courte gate: & when I looked, beholde, there was an hole in y wall. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of mā, dygge thozow the wall. And whē I dygged thozow the wall, beholde, there was a doze. And he sayde vnto me: Go thy waye in, and loke what wycked abominacyōs they do here. So I wente in, and sawe: and beholde, there were all maner ymages of wormes & beastes, all Idoles and abominacyōs of the house of Israel paynted euery one rosēd about the wall. Ther stode also before the ymages. * Ixx. Lordes of the councell of the house of Israel: and in the myddest of them stode Jaazanih the sonne of Saphan: And euery one of thē had a censoure in hys hāde, and out of the incense, there went a smoke, as it had bene a cloude. Then sayde he vnto me. Thou sonne of mā, hast thou sene what the Senatoures of the house of Israel do secretly, euery one in hys chambze? * For they saye: Cuth, the Lorde seeth vs not, the Lorde regardeth not the worlde. And he sayd vnto me: Turne the yet agayne, and thou shalt se yet greater abominacyōs y they do. And wth that he brought me to the doze of the porte of the Lordes house, toward the north. And beholde, there sat women mournynge for Chamus. Then sayde he vnto me: hast thou sene this, thou sonne of mā? Turne y aboute, and thou shalt se yet greater abominacyōs then these are. And so he brought me into the inwarde court of the Lordes house: and beholde at y porte of the Lordes house, betwixte the fore entrie and the auter, there were fyue and twety men, that turned their backs vpon the temple of the Lorde, and theyr faces toward y caste, and these were wypped the sonne.

And he sayde vnto me: hast thou sene this, thou sonne of mā? Thynketh the house of Iuda, that it is but a trifle, to do these abominacyōs here? Shulde they fill the lande full of wyckednesse, and undertake to prouoke me vnto anger? Pee, and purposely to cast vp theyr noses vpon me? Therefore wyl I also do some thyng in my wrothfull displeasure, so y myne eye shall not ouerse thē, neither wyl I spare them. * Pee, and though they crye in myne eares wth loude voyce, yet wyl I not heare them.

The ix. Chapter.

The

Of Ezechiel.

No. xci.

The destruction of Idolatres, and the conuersacion of the ryghtes. They that shalbe saued are marked. They that are vnmarched are slayne. A complaunte of the Prophet for the destruction of the people.

I crept also with a loude voyce in myne eares, sayinge: Come, here ye rulers of the cyte, euery man wth his weapened hande to the slaughter. Then came there fyue me out of the strete of the vpper porte toward the north, and euery man a weape in hys hāde to y slaughter. There was one amongest them, that had on hym a linnen rayment, & a wyrters pnyck-horne by hys syde.

These wente in, & stode beynde the brasen auter: for the glozpe of the Lorde was gone awaye from the Cherub whych was vpon him, & was come downe to the thersholde of the house, and he called the man that had the linnen rayment vpon hym, and the wyrters pnyck-horne by his syde, and the Lorde sayde vnto hym: Go thy waye thozowe the cyte of Ierusalem, and set a marche vpon the foreheades of them, that mourne and are sorow for all the abominacyōs, that be done therein. And to the other, he sayde that I myght heare: * Go ye after hym thozowe the cytie, slaye, ouerse none, spare none: kyll and destroye both olde men and yonge, maydens, chyldren, and wyues.

But as for those, that haue the marche vpon them: se that ye touch thē not, * and be gyne at my Sanctuary. Then they began at the elders, whych were in the temple, for he had sayde vnto thē: When ye haue defyled the temple, and fylled the courte wth the slayne, thē go your waye forth. So they wente out, & slewe downe thozowe the cite. Nowe when they had done the slaughter, & I yet escaped: I fell downe vpon my face, & crept, sayinge: O Lorde, wylt thou then destroye all y resydue of Israel, in thy soze displeasure, that thou hast poured vpon Ierusalem? Then sayde he vnto me: The wyckednesse of the house of Israel and Iuda is very greateso y the lande is full of bloude, and the cite full of vnfaithfulnesse: For they saye: * Cuth the Lorde regardeth not the earth, he seeth vs not. Therefore wyl I vpo them, * myne eye shall not ouerse thē, neither wyl I spare thē, but wyl recompense theyr wyckednesse vpon theyr heades. And beholde, the man that had the linnen rayment vpon hym, and the wyrters pnyck-horne by hys syde: tolde all the matter howe it happened, and sayde: Lorde as thou hast comaunded me, so haue I done.

The x. Chapter.

The man that toke whete burninge coles oute of the temple of the wheles & of the Cherubyns, in token of the burninge of Ierusalem. A rebekall of the visyon of the wheles, of the beastes, and of the Cherubyns.

As I looked, beholde, in the firmament that was aboue the Cherubyns there appeared the similitude of a stole of Saphyr vpon them: * Then sayde he that sat therein, to him that had the lynnē rayment vpon hym: Crepe in betwene the wheles that are vnder the Cherubyns, and take thyn hāde full of hoate coales out from betwene the Cherubyns, and cast them ouer y cytie. And he crepte in, that I myght se.

Now the Cherubyns stode vpo the ryght syde of the house, when the man wente in, & the cloude fylled the inner courte. * But the glozpe of the Lorde remoued from the Cherubyns, and came vpon the thersholde of the house: so that the temple was full of cloudes, and the courte was full of the spere of the Lordes glozpe. Pee, and the soude of the Cherubyns wynges was hearde into the fore courte, lyke as it had bene the voyce of the almyghtye God, when he speaketh. Nowe when he had byden the man that was clothed in linnen, to go and take the hoate coales from the myddest of the wheles, whych were vnder the Cherubyns: he wēt & stode beynde the wheles. Then y one Cherub reached forth hys hande from vnder the Cherubyns, vnto the fyre that was betwene the Cherubyns, and toke therof, and gaue it vnto hym that had on the linnen rayment in his hande: which toke it, & went out. And vnder the wynges of the Cherubyns, there appeared the lycknesse of a mans hāde: I sawe also foure wheles beynde the Cherubyns, so y by euery cherub there stode a whele. And the wheles were (to loke vpon) after the fashion of the precyous stone of Charys: yet (vnto the syght) they were all. iij. of one fashyon, as yf one whele had bene in another.

When they wente forth, they wente all foure together, not turnynge aboute in their goynge: But where the fyrst wente, thither wente they after also, so that they turned not aboute in their goynge. Their whole bodies, their backs, theyr handes & wynges, pee, and the wheles also, were all full of eyes rounde aboute them all foure. And I hearde hym call the wheles. * Euery one of thē had foure faces: so that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the seconde of a man, the thyrde of a lyon, the fourth of an Aegle, & they were lyfted vp aboue. This is the beast, that I sawe at the water of Cobar. Nowe whē the Cherubyns wente, the wheles wente wth them, and when the Cherubyns shoke theyr wynges to lyft thē selues vwarde, y wheles remayned not behynde, but were wth them also. Shortly, when they stode, these stode also. And when they were lyft vp, the wheles were lyft vp also with them, for the sperte of lyfe was in the wheles.

* Then the glozpe of the Lorde was lyft vp up from the thersholde of the temple, and remayned vpon the Cherubyns: And the Cherubyns slackred wyth theyr wynges, and lyfte them selues vp from the earth: so that I sawe when they went, and the wheles wth them. And they stode at the east syde of the porte that is in the house of the Lorde. So the gloze of the Lorde was vpon the. Chys is the beast p^r I sawe vnder the God of Israel, by the water of Cobar. And I perceaued, that it was the Cherubyns. Every one had foure faces, & every one foure wynges, and vnder theyr wynges, as it were mens handes. Nowe the fygure of theyr faces was, euen as I had sene them, by the water of Cobar, and so was the countenance of the. Every one in hys goinge wete straght forwarde.

The .xj. Chapter.

¶ And he that seduced the people of Israel, against these be prophesies, shewynge them howe they shalbe dyspayred abroade. The renynge of p^r here is a synne of God, otherwyse can we not walke in hys commaundementes. He threatneth them that leane vnto theyr awne counsellors.

And ouer, the sprete of the Lorde lyft me vp, and brought me vnto the East porte of the Lordes house. And beholde, there were xxv. men vnder the doze amonge whom I sawe Jaazaniah the sonne of Azur, and Wheltiah the sonne of Bananiah, the rulers of the people. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Thou sonne of man: these men ymagyn myschefe, and a wycked counsell take they in thys cpte, sayinge: tush, there is no destruccyon at hande, let vs buylde houses: this Ierusalem is the cauldron, and we be the fleshe. Therefore shalt thou prophesye vnto them, yee, prophesye shalt thou vnto them, O sonne of man. And wyth that fell the sprete of the Lorde vpon me, and sayde vnto me: Speake, thus sayeth the Lorde: On this maner haue ye spoken (O ye house of Israel) & I knowe the ymaginacions of poure hertes. Many one haue ye murthered in this cpte, and fylled the stretes full of the slayne. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: The slayne men that ye haue layed on the grounde in this cpte, are the fleshe, and thys cpte is the cauldron: * But I wyll byynge you out of it & ye haue feared the swerde, & I wyll byynge a swerde ouer you, sayeth the Lorde God. I wyll byynge you out of thys cpte and deliuer you into poure enemyes hande, and will condemne you. Ye shalbe slayne in all the coastes of Israel, I wyll be auenged of you: to lerne you for to knowe, that I am the Lorde. Chys cpte shal not be poure cauldron, neether shal ye be p^r fleshe theryn: but in the coastes of Israel wyll I punyssh you, that ye maye knowe, that I am the Lorde: in whose commaundementes ye haue not walcked, nee kepte hys lawes: * but haue done after p^r cu-stomes of the heathen, that lye rounde aboute you.

Nowe when I preached, Wheltiah the sonne of Bananiah dyed. Then fell I downe vpon my face, and cryed wyth a loude voyce: O Lorde God, wylt thou then utterlye destroye all the remnaunt in Israel? And so the worde of the Lorde came to me on thys maner: thou sonne of man: thy brethren, thy kynnsfolke, & the whole house of Iuda, which dwell at Ierusalem, saye. Wythdrowe ye farre from the Lorde, for the lade is geue vs in possession. Therefore tell the, thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll sende you farre of amonge the Gentiles, and skatre you amonge the nacpons, & I wyll halowe you but a lytle, in the landes where ye shal come. Tell the also, thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll gather you agayne out of the nacpons, and byynge you from the countrees where ye be scatted, and wyll geue you the lande of Israel agayne. And they shal comine thither, And they shal take awaye all ther Idols & all ther abhominacions from thence.

* And I wyll geue you one hert, and I wyll plante a newe sprete wythin your bowels. That stony herte will I take out of your body, and geue you a fleschy herte: that ye maye walke in my commaundementes, and kepe myne ordinaunces, and do them: p^r ye maye be my people, & I poure God. But loke whose hertes are dysposed to folowe theyr abhominacions and wycked lyuinges: those mens dedes wyll I byynge vpon theyr awne heades, sayeth the Lorde God. After thys dyd the Cherubyns lyft vp theyr wynges, and the wheles wente wyth them, and the gloze of the Lorde was vpon them. * So the gloze of the Lorde wente vp fro the myddest of the cpte, and stode vpon the mount of the cpte toward the east: * But the wynde toke me vp, and in a visyon (whych came by the sprete of God) it brought me agayne into Caldea amonge the presoners. Then the visyon that I had sene vanyshed awaye from me. So I spake vnto the presoners, all the wordes of the Lorde, whych he had shewed me.

The .xij. Chapter.

¶ The parable of the vessels of the captiuitie. The expoyson of the parable, by whych the takynge of bryge zedekiah is signified. Another parable wher by the dyscreete of honger and thys is signified.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, I sayinge: Thou sonne of man, thou dwellest in the myddest of a frowarde householde: * whych haue eyes to se, and yet se not: eares haue they to heare, and yet heare they not, for they are an obstinate householde. Therefore (O thou sonne of man) make thy gere redy to flyt, and go forth by fayne dape lyght, that they maye se. Yee, euen in theyr syght shalt thou go from thy place to another place: p^r paradventure they wyll consydre, & they be an vnbedyt householde: Thy gere p^r I shal made redy to flyt wythall, shalt thou beare out by fayne dape lyght that they maye se: ad thou thy selte shalt go forth also at euē in theyr syght, as a mā doth when he flytteth. Wygge thozowe the wall, that they maye se & beare thozow it the same thyng, that thou tokest vp in theyr syght. In ther syght p^r shalt I beare vpo thy sholders, & cary yt forth in the darke. Wyde thy face p^r thou se not the earth, for I haue made the a shewtoken vnto the house of Israel. Nowe as the Lorde commaunded me, so I dyd: the geare p^r I had made readie brought I out by dape. At euē I brake downe an hole thozow the wall wyth my hande: and when it was darke, I toke the gere vpon my sholders, and bare them out in theyr syght.

And in the moynynge, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of mā, p^r Israel that frowarde householde aske the, and saye: what doest thou there? Then tell the: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Chys punysshment toucheth the chiefe rulers at Ierusalem, and all the house of Israel, that dwell amonge them: Tell them: I am poure shewe token: lyke as I haue done, so shal it happen vnto you: Flyt shal ye also, and go into captiuitie. * The chiefe that is amonge you, shal lade hys sholders in the darke, & get hym awaye. He shal breake downe the wall, to carye stufte therthozow: he shal couer his face, that he se not the grounde, with hys eyes. * Wylyne wyll I sprede out vpon hym, and catch him in my net, and cary hym to Babylon, in the lade of p^r Caldees: which he shal not se, and yet shal he dye there. As for all hys helpers, & all hys hostes, that be about hym, I wyll scatere them toward all the wyndes, and drawe out a swerde after them. * So when I haue scatred them amonge the heathen, and strowed them in the landes, they shal knowe, that I am the Lorde. But, I wyll leaue a lytle nobre of them fro the swerde, hunger and pestilence: to tell all their abhominacions amonge the heathen, where they come: & they maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of mā: wyth a fearfull tremblynge shalt heate thy bread, wyth carefulnesse & sorowe shalt thou dryncke thy water. And vnto the people of the lade, speake thou on this maner: Thus sayeth the Lorde God, to them that dwell in Ierusalem, and to the lande of Israel: Ye shal eate poure bread wyth sorowe, and dryncke poure water wyth heynnesse: Yee, the lande wyth the fulnesse therof shalbe layde waste, for the wyckednesse of them that dwell the-rin. And the cyties p^r now be well occupped, shal be voyde, and the lade desolate: that ye may knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

Yet came the worde of the Lorde vnto me agayne, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, what maner of byworde is that, whych ye vse in p^r lade of Israel, sayinge: Tush, * seynge that the dayes are so slacke in commynge, all the visyons are of none effecte: Tell them therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll make that byworde to cease, so that it shal no more be commonly vled in Israel.

But saye thys vnto them: The dayes are at hāde, that euery thyng which hath bene prophesied, shalbe fulfilled. There shal no visyō be in vayne, neether eny prophetic sayle amonge the chyldren of Israel: For it is I the Lorde, that spake it: and whatlocuer I the Lorde speake, it shal be perfourmed, and not be slacke in commynge.

Yee, euen in poure dayes (O ye frowarde householde) will I deuyse some thyng, and byynge it to passe, sayeth the Lorde God. And p^r worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Beholde, thou sonne of man: The house of Israel sayeth on thys maner: Tush, as for p^r visyon that he hath sene, it wyl be man a dape or it come to passe: It is farre of yet, the thyng that he prophesied. Therefore saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: All my wordes shal nomore be slacke: Loke what I spake, that same shal come to passe, sayeth the Lorde.

The .xiii. Chapter.

¶ The worde of p^r Lorde agaynst false prophetes, whych teach the people & counsellors of theyr awne hertes.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of mā. Speake, prophesye agaynst those pphetes, that preach in Israel: & saye thou vnto them that prophesye out of theyr awne hertes: Heare the worde of the Lorde, thus sayeth the Lorde God: * Wo be vnto those folysch prophetes, p^r folowe theyr awne sprete and speake where a. they se nothyng. O Israel, thy prophetes are lyke the foxes vpon the drye felde: For they stande not in the gappes, neether make they an hedge for the house of Israel, that men myght abyde the battell in the dape of the Lorde. Wayne thynges they se, and tell lyes, to * mayntaine their preachynges wythall. The Lorde (saye they) hath spoken it, whan in very dede the Lorde hath not sent them. Wayne visyons haue ye sene, and spokē false prophesies, whē ye saye: the Lorde hath spoken it, where as I neuer sayde it.

Therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Becase cause poure wordes be vayne, and ye sche out lyes: Beholde, I wyll vpon you, sayeth the Lorde. Wyne hādes shal come vpon the prophetes that loke out vayne thinges, and preach lyes: they shall not be in the counsell of my people, ner wyttten in the booke of the houle of Israel, ner shall they come in the lande of Israel: ye maye knowe, howe I am the Lorde God. And that for by cause: they haue dysceined my people, * and tolde the of peace, where no peace was. One setteth up a wall, and they dawbe it with lowe clape. Therefore tell them whych dawbe it with vntempered morter, that it shall fall: * for there shall come a great shower of rayne greates hyle stones shall fall vpon it, & a soze storme of wynde shall breake it, so shall the wall come downe. Shall it not then be so vnto you: where is nowe the morter, that ye dawbed it wthall: Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll breake out in my wrothfull displeasure wth a stormy wynde, so that in myne anger there shall come a myghty shower of rayne, & hyle stones in my wrath, to destroye withall.

As for the wall, that ye haue dawbed w vntempered morter, I wyll breake it downe, make it cuen wth the ground: so y the foundacion therof shall remoue, and it shall fall, yee, and ye poure selues shall perishe in the myddest therof: to learne you for to knowe, that I am the Lorde. Thus wyll I perfourme my wrath vpon thys wall, and vpon them that haue dawbed it wth vntempered morter, and then wyll I saye vnto you: The wall is gone, and the dawbers are awaye. These are the prophetes of Israel, which prophete vnto the cytie of Ierusalem, and loke out visiōs of peace for them, where as no peace is, sayeth the Lorde God. Wherefore (thou sonne of mā) sett thy face agaynst the daughters of thy people, which prophete out of their awne hertes: and speake thou prophete agaynst the, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Wo be vnto you, that some pylowes vnder all arme boles, ad bolsters vnder the heades both of yōge and olde, to catch soules wth all. * for whan ye haue gotten the soules of my people in youre captiuite, ye promysse them lyfe, and dishonoure me to my people, for an hādfull of barley, and for a pece of bread: whan ye kyll the soules of the, that dye not, and promysse lyfe to them, that lyue not: Thus ye dissemble w my people, that beleuech youre lyes.

Wherefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll also vpon the pylowes, wher wth ye catch the soules in spenge: the wyll I take from youre armes, and let the soules go, that ye catch in spenge. Poure bolsters also wyll I teare in peces, and delpyer my people out of youre hād: so that they shall come nomoze in youre handes to be spoyled, and ye shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. Seing that with youre lyes ye discomforthe the her-te of the ryghteous, whom I haue not discomforthe: Agayne: for so moch * as ye coage the hande of the wycked, so that he maye not turne from his wicked waye, and lyue: therefore shall ye spee out nomoze vanytie, ner prophete youre awne gessynges: for I wyll delpyer my people out of youre hande, that ye maye knowe, howe that I am the Lorde.

The xliij. Chapter.

The Lorde demerth hys woide to the people for their synnes sake: The dyspyer of the woide both the Lorde sometyme decreas by false prophetes. A comferte of the that fledde vnto Babilon.

There resorted vnto me certayne of the elders of Israel, & sat downe by me. Then came the woide of the Lorde vnto me, sayeg: Thou sonne of mā, these men beare their vncleannes in theyr hertes, and go purposly vpon the stonbynge blocke of theyr awne wyckednesse: shulde I then answer at their request: Therefore speake vnto them, & saye: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Every man of the house of Israel that beareth hys vncleane Idols in hys herte, purposynge to stonble in hys awne wyckednesse, and cometh to a prophet, to enquire eny thinge at me by him: vnto that mā wyll I the Lorde my selfe geue answer, accordynge to the multitude of hys Idols: that the house of Israel maye be shamed in their awne hertes, because they be cleue gone fro me, for their abhominaciōs sakes.

Wherefore, tell the house of Israel: thus sayeth the Lorde God: * Be conuerted, for sake youre Idols, and turne youre wyues from youre fylthynesse, and turne youre faces fro all youre abhominaciōs. For euery man, (whether he be of the house of Israel or a straunger, y sojourneth in Israel) whych departeth fro me, and carreth Idols in hys herte, purposynge to go styll stonbyng in his awne wyckednesse, and cometh to a prophet, for to aske counsell at me thozow hym: vnto that man wyll I the Lorde geue answer, by myne awne selfe. I wyll set my face agaynst that man, and wyll make hym to be an example for other, yee, and a comen bywoide: and wyll rote him out of my people, that he may knowe, how that I am the Lorde. * and yf that prophete be disceined, wher he telleth hym a woide: then I the Lorde my selfe haue disceined that prophet, and wyll stretch forth myne hande vpon hym, to rote hym out of my people of Israel: and they both shalbe punished for theyr wyckednes. Accordynge to the synne of hym that asketh, shall the synne of the prophete be: that the house of Israel be led nomoze fro me thozow erreure, and be no moze dyspled in their wyckednesse: but that they maye be my people, & I theyr God, sayeth the Lorde God. And the woide of the Lorde came vnto me, me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man, when the lande synneth agaynst me, & goeth forth in wyckednesse: I will stretch out myne hande vpon it, & destroye all the proulysp of their byed, and sende derth vpon them, to destroye man & best in the lande. * And though Noe, Daniel & Job, these thre men were amonge them, yet shall they in their ryghteousnesse delpyer but their awne soules, sayeth the Lorde God. If I byynge noysome beastes into the lande, to waste it vp, & it be so desolate, that no man may go therein for beastes: yf these thre men also were in the lande, as trulyp as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde God) they shall saue nether sonnes ner daughters, but be only delpyered them selues: and as for the lāde, it shall be waste.

Of I byynge a swearde into the lāde, & charge it to go thozow the lāde: so that I slaye downe man & beast in it, & yf these thre men were therein: As trulyp as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde God) they shall delpyer nether sonnes ner daughters, but only be saued them selues. If I sende a pestilence into the lande, & poure out my soze indignacyon vpon it in bloude, so that I rote out of it both man and beast. And yf Noe, Daniel & Job were therein: as trulyp as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde God) they shall delpyer nether sonnes ner daughters, but saue their awne soules in their ryghteousnes. Hozeouer, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Hoze moze when I sende my foure troublous plagis vpon Ierusalem: the swearde hunger, perious beastes & pestilence, to destroye mā and beast out of it. Beholde ther shall be a remnaūt saued therein, which shall bringe forth their sonnes and daughters. Beholde, they shall come forth vnto you, and ye shall se their waye, and what they take in hande, and ye shall be cōforted, as touchinge all the plagis that I haue brought vpon Ierusalem. They shall comferte you, when ye se their waye and workes: and ye shall knowe, howe that it is not without a cause, that I haue done so agaynst Ierusalem, as I byd, sayeth the Lorde God.

The xv. Chapter.

As the vnyuersall wood of y vne tree is cast in to the fyre, so sayeth he that Ierusalem shalbe bzent.

The woide of the Lorde came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of man: What cometh of the vyne amonge all other trees: & of the wyde vyne stock amonge all other tymbre of the groaue? Do men take wodd of it, to make any worcke with all? Or maye there a nayle be made of it, to haunge any thyng vpon? Beholde, it is cast in fyre to be bzent, the fyre consumeth both the endes of it. the myddest is bzent to ashes. As it mete then for any worcke: No, seynge then, that it was mete for no worcke, bringe whole: moch lesse maye there any thinge be made of it, when the fyre hath consumed & bzent it. And therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Lyke as I cast y vne into fyre for to be bzent, as other trees of y wodd: Euen so wyll I do with them that dwell in Ierusalem, & set my face agaynst them: they shall go out from the fyre, & yet the fyre shall consume them. * The shall ye knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I set my face agaynst the, & make y lāde waste: because they haue so soze offended, sayeth the Lorde God.

The xvi. Chapter.

The prophete entrepynge to speake of the abhominaciōs of Ierusalem: both spytte the benedictiōs of God toward it. Ierusalem is reprobous of benedictiōnes. for her fornicacyon with Idols. He susteyneth the wickednes of other people in comparison of the synnes of Ierusalem. The cause of the abhominaciōs in to whych the Sodomyers fell. Ezechy is prompted to the repentant.

A Sayne, the woide of the Lorde spake vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of mā, we the cytie of Ierusalem their abhominaciōs, & saye: thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto Ierusalem: Thy progeny and hyndred came out of the lāde of Canaan * thy father was an Amorite, thy mother a Cethyre, thus was the maner of thy byrth. In y daye of thy byrth when thou wast bozne, y stringe of thy nanell was not cut of: y wast not bathed in water to make the cleue: Thou wast nether rubbed w salt, ner swadled in cloutes: No mā regarded y so moch, as to do any of these thinges for the, or to thewe the soch fauoure, but y wast vtterly cast out vpon y felde, yee, despised wast y in y daye of thy birth.

Then came I by the, and saue y troden downe in thyne awne bloude, & layde vnto the: Lyue, although thou be dyspled in thyne awne bloude, yee euen I (I tell the) sayde vnto y lyue, although thou be dyspled in thyne awne bloude. * So I plāted y, as y blossome of the felde: y art growe vp, & waxe greate: y hast gotten a maruelous pleasant beutie, thy breastes are come vp, thy hearre is goodly growe, where as y wast naked & bare afoze.

Howe whan I wete by the, & looked vpon the: beholde, thy tyme was come, yee, eue the tyme to wowe the. Then spred I my clothes ouer y, to couer thy dishonestye: yee, I made an othe vnto the, & married my selfe with the (sayeth the Lorde God) and so thou becomest myne awne. Then washed I the with water, and pouged thy bloude from the. I anoynted the with oyle, I gaue the chaunge of raymentes, I made the thies of Carus lether: I gyrded y aboute with white sylke I clothed the with kercheffes, I decked the w costly apparell, I put rynges vpon thy fyngers: a chayne aboute thy necke, spānges vpon thy fore heade, rare rynges vpon thyne eares, and set a beutifull crowne vpon thyne head. Thus wast thou deckt with syluer & golde, & thy raymēt was of fyne white sylke.

hast taken thy garmētes of diuerse colours, & deckte thyne aulters therewith, where vpo þy myghtest fulfyll thyne whozdomme, * & of soch a fashyō, as neuer was done, ner shalbe.
* The goodly ornaments & Jewels which I gaue the of myne awne golde and syluer, hast thou taken, and made the mēs prynces therof, & commyted whozdomme withall.

Thy garmentes of diuerse colonres hast thou taken, and deckte them therewith: myne ople & incense hast thou set befoze them. My meate which I gaue the, as spynnels, ople & hony: (to fede the withall) that hast thou sett befoze them, for a swete sauoure. And thys came also to passe, sayeth the Lorde God: * Thou hast take thine awne sones & daughters, whō thou haddest begotten vnto me: and these hast thou offered vnto the, to be their meate. Is this but a small whozdome of thine (thinkest thou) that thou slayest my chyldren, and geuest them ouer, to be bzent vnto the? And yet in all thy abhominacions and whozdome, thou hast not remēbered the dayes of thy youth, howe naked & bare thou wast at y tyme, and troden downe in thyne awne bloude. After all these thy wyckednesses (wo wo vnto the, sayeth the Lorde)

* (thou hast buylded thy stremes and byndel houses in euery place) Thou hast buylte hye places, yee at the head of euery strete hast thou buylded an altar. Thou hast made thy beuty to be abhorred, thou hast layed out thy legges to euery one that came by, & multiplied thyne whooredome. * Thou hast comytted fornicacy on the the Egypcyans thy neyghbours, which had moche flethe: and thus hast thou increased thine whooredome, to anger me.

Beholde, I dyd stretch out myne hande ouer the, & dyd * minishe thy stoare of lode, and deluyce the ouer in to the wylls of the Philistines thine enemyes, which are ashar med of thy abhominable waye. * Thou hast played the whore also with the Assyrians, because thou wast insatiable. Yee, thou hast (I saye with the) played the harlot, & yett haddest thou not ynough. Thus hast I forther-more comptted thy fornicacyon fro the lan-de of Canaan vnto the Caldees, & yet thy lust not satisfied. Howe obstinate is thine herte (sayeth the Lorde God) seynge thou doest all these workes of an errant whoze: buyldinge thy stews at þ head of euery strete, & thy bro dell houses in all places: Thou hast not bene as an other whoze, þ holdeth scozne of a small rewarde, but a wife þ breaketh wedlocke, & taketh other in steade of her husbode. Gyftes are geuen to all other whozes, but þ geuest rewardes vnto all thy louers: & offrest them gyftes, to come vnto þ out of all places, & to comytte fornicacy wth the. It is come to passe wth the in thy whozdomes contrary to the vse of other women: yee, there hath no soch for nicacyon bene comitted after þ, seynge that thou profrest gyftes vnto other, and no re warde is geuen the: this is a cōtrary thinge.

Therefore, heare the worde of the Lorde, O thou harlot: thus sayeth the Lorde God:
For so moch as þu hast sett forth thy pouthe to whozdom, & discovered thy shame, tho-rowe thy whozdom wth all thy louers, and with all þe Idols of thy abhominacions in þe blonde of thy chyldren, * who thou hast geue them: Beholde therfore, I will gather together all thy louers, vnto who thou hast made thy selfe comē: pee, and all them who thou fauourest, & euery one þe thou hatest: I will (I saye) gather the together rounde aboute the, and * will discouer thy shame before the,
that they maye se all thy fylthynges.

* Hoꝛeouer, I will iudge þ as a breake of wedlocke and a murtherer, and recõpence þ thync a wne bloude in wꝛath and gelousy.
I will geue þ ouer in to their power, þ shall breaꝓe downe thy stues, & destroye thy bzoddell houses: they shall stryꝓe þ out of thy clothes, all thy fayre & beutyfull Jewels shall they take frõ þ, & so let the sꝓt naked & bare:
* pce: they shall bꝛinge þ comẽ people vꝓõ þ, which shall stone the, & slaye þ downe wꝛ their sweardes. * They shall burne vꝓ thy houses, & punysh the in þ sight of many wemen.
Thus will I make thy whoꝛdome to cease, so þ thou shalt geue out no moꝛe rewarde.

Shulde I make my wrath to be still, take my gelousy from the, be cōtent, & no more to be displeased: seynge thou remēbreſt not the dayes of thy yowth, but hast prouoked me to wrath in all these thinges? Beholde therfore I will brynge thyne awone wayes vpo thyne heade, sayeth the Lorde God: howe be it, I neuer dyd vnto the, accorдынge to thy wickednesse & all thy abhominacyons. Beholde, all they that vse comen prouerbes, shall vse this prouerbe also agaynst the: soche a mother, soche a daughter.

Thou art euē thy mothers a wne daughter, & hath cast of hyz housbande & hyz chyldren: Yee, thou art the syster of thy sisters, which forsoke their husbandes & their chy-ldrē. * Poure mother is a Cethypte, and poure father an Amozyte. Thyne eldest syster is Samaria, she and her daughters that dwell vpon

Upon thy left hande.

If But thy pongest syfter that dwelleth on thy ryght hande, is Sodoma & her daughters. Yet hast thou not walked after their wayes, ner done after their abhominacyōs:
but þstodest a lytell & very small tyme, and in all thy wayes þ hast bene moze corrupte then they. As truly as I lyue, sayeth þ Lord God: Sodoma thy syfter w her daughters, hath not done so euell, as þ and thy daughters. Beholde, * the synnes of thy syfter So-doma were these: Pryde, fulnesse of meate, aboundaunce & Idilnesse: these thynges had she & hir daughters. Besydes þ, they reached not their hande to the poore and nedye, but were proude, and dyd abhominable thynges befoze me: therfoze I toke them awaye, as pleased me. Nether hath Samaria done half of thy synnes, * yee, thou hast exccaded them in wickednesse: In so moch that in compar-yson of all þ abhominacyōs which þ hast done, þ hast made thy sylsters good women. Ther-foze thou (which dydest condempne thy syfter) beare thyne awne shame, for thyne awne offences, that þ hast committed, moze abhominable then they dyd, which in dead ar moze ryghteous, then þ art, be thou (I seye) ashamed, and beare thy shamfull rebuke. scynge þ thou hast proued thy sylsters in cōparyson of the ryght wyse.

C As for their captiuyte, namely þ captiuyte of Sodomā, & her daughters: þ captiuyte of Samaria & her daughters: I will bringe the agayne, so will I also bringe agayne thy captiuyte amōge them: þ þ mayest take thyne a wne cōfusiōn vpon þ, & be ashamed of all þ thou hast done, & to cōforte them. Thus thy sisters (namely) Sodomā & her daughters: Samaria and her daughters, w thy selfe, & thy daughters, shalbe brought agayne to yōre olde estate. When þ wast in thy pryde, & before thy wickednesse came to lyght: thou woldest not heare speake of thy sister Sodomā, vntill the tyme þ the Syrians with all their townes, & the Philistines with all that lye rounde aboute the, brought the to shame & confusiōn: þ þ mygbtest beare thyne a wne sylthynes & abhominacyō, sayeth þ Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lorde God: I shulde (by right) deale with the, as thou hast done.
Thou hast despyled the oth, and broken the couenaunte. Neuerthelesse, I will remembre y couenaunt that I made with the in thy youth in so much that it shalbe an euerclasting couenaunt: so that I also remembre thy wayes, & be ashamed of them: then shalt thou receaue of me thy elder & yonger systers, who I will make thy daughters, and that besyde thy couenaunt. * And so will I renew my couenaunt with y, that thou mayest knowe that I am the Lorde: that thou mayest thincke vpon it, be ashamed, and excuse thyne awne confusyon nomore: when I haue forgiven the, all that thou hast done, sayeth the Lorde God:

The xvij. Chapter.

¶ The parable of the two Eagles.

The worde of y^e Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of mā: put forth * a darcke speakeyng and a parable vnto y^e house of Israel, & saie: Thus sayeth y^e Lorde God: There came a great * Eagle wth greate wynges, yee, with a myghtye longe bodye, & full of fethers of dyuerse coloures, vpo the mount of Libanus, & toke the hyest bzaunch fro a Cedre tree, & brake of y^e toppe of his twygge, & carped it into plāde of Canaan, & set it in a cyte of marchaūtes. He toke also of the seade of the lande, & planted it in a frutefull grounde, he brought it vnto greate waters, and set it as a wyllowe tree ther by. Then vpd it growe, and was a greate bynestocke, but lowe by the grounde whose bzaunches turned in to it selfe, and y^e rotes of it, were fastened vnder it, thus there came of it a vyne, and it brought forth blossomes, & spred out bzaūches. But there was another Eagle, a great one, which had greate wynges & many fethers: and beholde, y^e rotes of this vyne had an hūger after him, & spred out his bzaunches towarde him, y^e he myght watche her with the orchyperd y^e he had planted. Nevertheless, it was planted vpo a good ground besyde greate waters: so y^e (by reason) it shulde haue brought out bzaūches & frute, & haue bene a goodly vyne. Speake y^e therfore, thus sayeth y^e Lorde God: Shall this vyne prosper: Shall not his rotes be plucked oute, his frute be broken of, his grene bzaunches, wither & fade awaye: yee, without ether strōge arme or many people, shall it be plucked v^y y^e rotes. Beholde, it was plāded: shall it p^{ro}sper therfore: Shall it not be dyed v^y & withered, yee, euen in y^e quyttinge out of his blossomes, as soone as y^e east wide bloweth:

As for ouer, y worde of y Lord came vnto me sayinge: Speake to yfrowarde houthol-de: knowe ye not, what these thynges do si-gnifye: Tell the: Beholde, * y kyng of Babylon came to Ierusalem, & toke y kyngc and his prynces, and ledde them to Babylon.

He toke of the kynges sede, and made a couenaunt wyth hym, and toke an othe of him: The Prynces of the lande toke he wyth him also, that the laude myght be holden in subieccyon, and not to rebelle, but kepe the couenaunt, and fulfyll it. But he fell from him, & sent his Embassytours into Egypt ¶ He myght haue horses and moche people.
Shulde that prospere? Shulde he be kepte safe, that doth soch thynges? Or Shulde he escape, that breaketh hys couenaunt? ¶ As truly as I lyue sayeth the Lorde God: He shall dye at Babylon, in the place where the kyng dwelleth, & made hym kyng: whose

of he hath despyed, and whose couenaunt he hath broken. Neither shall Pharaoh with his great host & multitude of people, maynteyne him in the warre: when they cast up dykes, and set up bulwokes to destroye moche people. Forseyne he hath despyed of othe, and broken the couenaunt (where as he yet gaue his hande ther vpon) and done all these thynges, he shall not escape.

¶ Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde God. As truly as I lyue, I wyll byynge myne othe of he hath despyed, and my couenaunt that he hath broken, vpon his awne head. * I wyll cast my net aboute him, and catch him in my parne. To Babylon will I carie him, there will I punyssh him, because of the greafe offence that he made me. As for those that fle from him out of the host, they shall be slayne with the swerde. The respydue shall be scattered towarde all the wyndes: and ye shall knowe, that I the Lorde haue spoken it.

¶ Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll also take a brynche from an hye Cedre tree, and will set it, & take of vppermost twygge, yet is but tendre, and plante it vpon an hye hyll: Namely, vpon the hye hyll of Syon will I plante it: it maye bringe forth twygges, & geue frute, and be a greafe Cedre tree: so of all maner of foules maye bylde in it, & make their nestes vnder shadow of his brynches.

And all the trees of the felde shall knowe that I the Lorde haue brought downe of hye tree, and set the lowe tree vpon: I haue dyed vpon the grene tree, and made the drye tree to floreye: Euen I the Lorde that spake it, haue also brought it to passe.

The xvij. Chapter.

¶ He that setteth th euerie man shall beare his awne synne. To him that amendeth, is saluacion promysed. Deeth is prophesied to the ryghtwylle, which turneth backe from the ryghtwylle.

¶ The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, on this maner: what meane ye by this comen prouerbe, ye vse in the lade of Israel, sayinge: * The fathers haue eaten soure grapes, & of childres tethe are set on edge: As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lorde God, ye shall vse this byworde nomore in Israel.

¶ Beholde * all soules are myne. Lyke as a father is myne, so is a sonne myne also. The soule of synner, shall dye. * If a man be godly, & do the thinge that is equall and ryght, he eateth not vpon the hylls: he lyfeth not by eyes vpon to of foule Idols of Israel: he despyeth not his neyghbours wyfe: he medleth not with a menstruous woman: he greueth no holty: he geueth his detter his pledge agayne, he taketh none other mans good by violence: * he parteth his mete to the hongrye: he clotheb the naked: * he lendeth nothyng vpon vsury: he taketh nothyng ouer: he wythdraweth his hande from doyng wronge: he dealeth saythfully betwixte man & man: & walketh in my commaundementes, and kepeb my lawes, & perfourmeth the saythfully: * This is a ryghteous man, he shall surely lyue sayeth the Lorde God.

¶ If he now gett a sonne, that is a murderer, a shedder of bloude: yf he do one of these thynges * (though he do not all) he eateth vpon the hylls: he despyeth his neyghbours wyfe: he greueth the poore & neddy: he robbeth & spoyleth: he geueth not of detter his pledge agayne, he lyfeth vpon his eyes vnto Idols, & medleth with abhominable thinges: he lendeth vpon vsury, & taketh more ouer. Shall this man lyue? he shall not lyue. Seynge he hath done all these abhominacions, he shall dye, his bloude shall be vpon him.

¶ Nowe yf this man gett a sonne also, that seeth all his fathers synnes, which he hath done: and feareth, nether doth soch lyke: Namely, he eateth not vpon the mostaynes: he lyfeth not his eyes vpon to Idols of Israel: he despyeth not his neyghbours wyfe: he beareth no mā: he kepeth no mans pledge: he nether spoyleth, ner robbeth eny mā: he dealeth his meate to the hongrye: he clotheb the naked: he oppresleth not the poore: he receaueth no vsury, ner any thyng ouer: he kepeth my lawes, & walketh in my commaundementes. This mā shall not dye in his fathers synne, but shall lyue without fayle. As for his father: because he oppresled & spoyled his brother, and dyd wyckedly amonge his people: lo, he is deed in his awne synne. And yet saye ye: Wherfore then shulde not this lone beare his fathers synne? Therefore: because a sonne hath done equyte & ryght, hath keppe all my commaundementes, & done them: therefore shall he lyue in dede. The same soule that synneth, shall dye. * The sonne shall not beare the fathers offence, nether shall the father beare a sonnes offence. The ryghteousnes of a ryghteous shall be vpon him, & the wickednes of a wicked shall be vpon him self also. * But yf a ryghteous man turne awaye fro all his synnes, & he hath done, and kepe all my commaundementes, and do the thinge that is equall and ryght: doubtles he shall lyue, and not dye. As for all his synnes that he dyd before, they shall not be thought vpon: but in his righteousness that he hath done, he shall lyue. * For haue I eny pleasure in the death of a synner, sayeth the Lorde God, but rather that he conuerte, and lyue? Agayne: yf a ryghteous man turne awaye fro his ryghteousnes, and do iniquyte, accorde to all a abhominacions, & the wicked mā doth: shall he lyue? All the ryghteousnes that he hath done, shall not be thought vpon: but in the faulte that he hath offended withall, and in the synne that he hath done, he shall dye.

¶ And yet ye saye: Cuth * a waye of the Lorde is not indifferent. Heare therefore ye house of Israel: Is not my waye ryght? Ye, are not poure

Of Ezechiel

Ho. xlv.

¶ poure wapes rather wicked: * Whe a ryghteous man turneth awaye from his ryghteousnesse, and medleth wyth vngodlynes: he must dye therein: pee, for the vngodlynes that he hath done, must he dye. Agayne: * when the wycked mā turneth awaye fro his wickednesse, that he hath done, and doth the thinge which is equall and ryght: he shall saue his soule alpye. For in so moch as he remembreth him selfe, & turneth him from all the vngodlynes that he hath vscd, he shall lyue and not dye.

¶ And yet sayeth the house of Israel: Cuth, the waye of the Lorde is not equall. Are my wapes vngodly? O ye house of Israel: Are not poure wapes rather vngodly? As for me, I wyll iudge euery man, accorde to his wapes, O ye house of Israel, sayeth the Lorde God. * Wherfore, be conuerted, and turne you cleane from all your wyckednesse, so shall there no synne do you harme. Cast awaye fro you all poure vngodlynesse, that ye haue done: * make you newe hertes and a newe sprete. Wherfore wyll ye dye, O ye house of Israel: seynge I haue no pleasure in the death of him that dyeth, sayeth the Lorde God. Turne you then, and ye shall lyue.

The xix. Chapter.

¶ The captiuite of Iacobabaz & of Jehoachin is signified by the yrons whelpes, & by the yron. He setteth out a prosperite of the cytie of Ierusalem that is past, & the myscre thereof that is present.

¶ Thou sonne of man mourne for the princes of Israel, & saye. Wherfore laye thy mother of lyonesse amonge the lyons, & norshed her yonge ones amonge the lyons whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vp, and it became a lyb: it learned to spoye, and to deuoure folke. The hea then herde of him, and toke him in their nettes, and brought him in chaynes vnto the lande of Egypte.

¶ Nowe when the damme sawe, that all her hope and coforte was awaye, she toke another of her whelpes, and made a lyon of him: which wente amonge the lyons, & became a scarce lyon: learned to spoye and to deuoure folke: he destroyed their palaces, and made their cyties waste. In so moch that of whole lande & euery thinge therein, were utterly desolate, thowow of very voyce of his roaringe.

¶ Then came the heathen together on euery syde oute of all countrees agaynst hym, layed their nettes for hym, and toke hym in their pytte. * So they bolde him with chaynes, and brought him to the kyng of Babylon: which put him in prison, that his voyce shulde nomore be herde vpon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy mother, she is lyke a vyne in thy bloude, planted by the water syde: her frutes and brynches are growe out of many waters, her stalkes were so ströge, that me myght haue made staues therof for officers: she grewe so hye in her stalkes.

¶ So when men sawe that she exceded the beygth & multitude of her brynches, she was rote out in displeasure, and cast downe to the grounde. The East wynde dyed vpon her frute, her stronge stalkes were broke of, withered and bent in the fyre. But now she is platted in the wyldernesse, in a drye & thurstye ground. And there is a fyre gone out of her stalkes, which hath bent vpon her brynches and her frute: so that she hath no more ströge stalkes, to be staues for officers. This is a pyteous and miserable thinge.

The xx. Chapter.

¶ The Lorde denpeth that he will answer them when they praye, for the offence of bapndenes which he here oblecteth. He promyseth that his people shall retorne from captiuite. By the wood that shulde be bent is signified the burninge of Ierusalem.

¶ The vij. yeare the x. daye of the v. moneth, * it happened, y certayne of elders of Israel came vnto me, for to aske counsell at the Lorde, & sat them downe by me.

¶ Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me on this maner: Thou sonne of mā: speake vnto the elders of Israel, & saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Are ye come hyther to aske eny thyng at me? As truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde) I will geue you no answer. Wilt ye not reproue the (thou sonne of mā) wilt thou not reproue them? Shewe them a abhominacions of their fore fathers, & tell them. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: * In the daye when I chose Israel, and lyft vp myne hande vpon the seide of the house of Jacob, & Iewed my selfe vnto them in the lande of Egypte: Pee, when I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them, and sayde: I am the Lorde poure God, euen in the daye that I lyfte vp myne hande ouer the, to bringe them out of the lande of Egypte, into a lande that I had promysed for the, which floweth with mylcke & hony, & is a pleasaunt lande amonge all other. Then sayde I vnto them: * Cast awaye euery mā the abhominacions that he hath before him, and despye not poure selues with the Idoles of Egypte, for I am the Lorde poure God.

¶ But they rebelled agaynst me, and wolde not folowe me: to cast awaye euery man the abhominacions of his eyes, and to forsake the Idoles of Egypte. Then I made me to poure myne indignacion ouer them, & to satisfie my wrath vpon them: pee, euen in the myddest of the lande of Egypte. But I wolde not do it, for my names sake: that it shulde not be vngodly before the heathen, amonge whom they dwelt, & amonge whom I Iewed my selfe vnto them, & I wolde byynge them out of the lande of Egypte. Nowe when I had carryed them out of the lande of Egypte, and brought them into the wyldernesse: I gaue them them my commaundementes, & shewed them my lawes, * which whoso kepeth shall lyue in them: I gaue them also my holy dayes, to be a token betwixte me & them, & therby to knowe, that I am the Lorde, which halowe them. And yet the house of Israel rebelled agaynst me in y^e wyldernesse, they wolde not walcke in my commaundementes, they haue cast awaye my lawes (which whoso kepeth shulde lyue in them) and my Sabboth dayes haue they greatly vnhalowed.

* Then I made me to poure out myne indignacyon vpon the, & to cōsume them in the wyldernesse. Yet I wolde not do it, for my names sake: lest it shulde be dishonoured before the heathen, from the whych I had carryed them awaye. But I swore vnto them in the wyldernesse, that I wolde not brynge them in to the lande, which I gaue them: a lande that floweth with mylke and honny, & is a pleasure of all landes: and that because they refused my lawes, and walcked not in my commaundementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabbothes, for their herte was gone after their ydoles. Neuerthelesse, myne eye spared them, so y^e I wolde not utterly slaye the, and cōsume them in the wyldernes. Whereafter, I sayde vnto their sonnes in the wyldernesse: * walcke not in the statutes of youre fore fathers, kepe not their ordinaunces, and defyle not your selues with their ydoles, for I am the Lorde youre God. But walcke in my statutes, kepe my lawes & do them, halowe my Sabbothes: * for they are a token betwixte me & you, y^e ye maye knowe howe y^e I am the Lorde your God. Notwithstandynge, their sonnes rebelled agaynst me also: they walked not in my statutes they kept not my lawes to fulfill the (which he y^e doth shall lyue in them) neither halowed they my Sabboth dayes. Then I made me agayne to poure out my indignacyon ouer them, & to satisfye my wrath vpon the in the wyldernesse. Neuerthelesse, I withdrew my hande for my names sake, lest it shulde be vnhalowed amonge the heathen, before whō I had brought the forth. I lyft vp myne hande ouer the also in the wyldernesse, y^e I wolde scatere them amonge the nacyns, because they had not kepte my lawes, but cast asyde my commaundementes, vnhalowed my Sabbothes, and lyft vp their eyes to their fathers ydoles. Wherefore I gaue the also commaundementes not good, & lawes thowowe the whych they shulde not lyue, & I vnhalowed the in their awone gyses: (whē I appointed for my selfe all their fyrst bozne) to make the desolate: y^e they myght knowe, howe y^e I am the Lorde.

Therefore (O thou sonne of man, tell the house of Israel, thus sayeth the Lorde God) Welyde all thys, youre fore fathers haue yet blasphemed me more, and greatly offended agaynst me. For after I had brought them in to the lande, that I promysed to geue the, when they sawe euery hye hyll & all y^e thicke trees: they made there their offsprynge, & prouoked me wth their oblacyns, makynge swete sauours there, and powred out their drinckoffsprynge. Then I asked the what is y^e hyll altare y^e ye go to it? And therfore is it called y^e hye place vnto this daye. Wherefore, speake vnto y^e house of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: ye are euen as vncleane as youre fore fathers & comynge wth ydoles also with their abhominacyons. In all youre ydoles, where vnto ye bynge your oblacyns, & and to whose honoure ye burne youre chyldren: ye, defyle youre selues, euen vnto this daye: howe darre ye the come, and aske any questyon at me? Ye householde of Israel! As truly as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde God) ye get no answer of me: and as for the thyng that ye go aboute, it shall not come to passe, where as ye saye: we wyll be as the heathen, & do as other people in the lande, wth wth wood and stone wyll we worshyppe.

As truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lorde God, I myselfe wyll rule you wth a myghty hande, with a stretched out arme, & with indignacyon powred out ouer you: and will brynge you out of the nacyns and landes, wherin ye are scatred, and gather you together with a myghty hande, with a stretched out arme & wth indignacyon poured out vpon you: and wyll brynge you in to the wyldernesse of the people, & there I will reason with you face to face. Lyke as I punished youre fore fathers in the wyldernesse, so will I punyche you also, sayeth the Lorde God. I will brynge you vnder my iurisdiction, and vnder y^e bonde of the couenaut. The forsakers also and the transgressours will I take from amonge you, & brynge them out of the lande of youre habitacyon: as for the lande of Israel, they shall not come in it: y^e you maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

So to nowe then (sayeth the Lorde God) ye house of Israel * Every one of you folowe your ydols, and serue them: sernge y^e refuse to obeye me. And my holy name shall y^e nomore vnhalowe with your offsprynge and ydoles. For vpon my holy hyll, euen vpon the hye hyll of Israel sayth y^e Lorde God, shall all the house of Israel and all that is in the lande, worshyppe me: * and in the same place will I fauoure the, and there will I requyre your deane offsprynge and the fyrstlynges of your oblacyns, with all youre holy thynges.

I will accepte youre swete sauour, whē I brynge you from the nacyns, and gather you together out of the landes, wherin ye be scatred: that I maye be halowed in you before the heathen, and that ye maye knowe, that that I am the Lorde, whych haue brought you into the lande of Israel: yee, into the same lande, that I swore to geue vnto youre forefathers. There shall ye call to remembraunce your awone wayes & all your ymaginacyons, wherin ye haue bene defyled: * and ye shall iudge youre selues worthy to be destroyed, for all youre wickednes, y^e ye haue done. And ye shall knowe, y^e I am y^e Lorde: whē I entreate you after my name, not after youre wicked wayes, ner accordyng to youre corrupte workes: Ye house of Israel, sayeth y^e Lorde. Moreover, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayynge: Thou sonne of mā, set thy face toward the south, & speake to the south wynde, & saye to the wth toward the south: heare the worde of the Lorde, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll kyndle a fyre in the, that shall consume the grene trees with the drye. No man shall be able to quench his flame, but all that loke from the south to the north, shall be brennt therin: & all fleshe shall se, that I the Lorde haue kyndled it, so that no man maye quench it. Then sayde I: O Lorde, they wyll saye of me: * Cuth, they are but fables, that he telleth.

The xxi. Chapter.

The threatheneth the swerde, y^e is to saye, destruc: yon to the cite of Ierusalem. He sheweth the fall of Ierusalem: & he is commended to prophete the destruction of the chyldren of Ammon. After y^e slaughter of other, at the last the Lorde threatheneth death vnto Nabuchodonosor: bynd seife.

The worde of y^e Lorde came to me, sayynge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face toward Ierusalem, speake agaynst the Sanctuary, and prophete agaynst the lande of Israel, saye to y^e lade of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, I wyll vpon the, & will drawe my swerde out of the sheath, & rote out of the both the ryghtynous & the wycked: Seynge then y^e I will rote out of y^e both the ryghtynous and wycked, therfore shall my swerde go out of his sheath agaynst all fleshe fro y^e north to y^e south: y^e all fleshe maye knowe howe y^e I the Lorde haue drawe my swerde out of y^e sheath, & it shall not be put in againe.

Mourne therfore (O thou sonne of man) y^e thy loynes crack withall, ye mourne bitterly for the i^e their presence. And yf they saye, wherfore mourest thou? Then tell the: for the terynges that cometh, at the whych all hertes shall melt, all handes shall be latten downe, all stomaches shall faynte, & all knees shall wawe feble. Beholde, it cometh & shall be fulfilled, sayeth the Lorde God.

Agayne, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayynge: Thou sonne of man, prophete, and speake. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: speake. The swerde, the swerde is sharpened & well scoured. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, & scoured that it maye be byght. Shall we then make myrthe? Agēst y^e * tribe of my sonne it is gone for the destroyinge all trees. He hath putt his swerde to the dygh-tinge, y^e good holde maye be taken of it. This swerde is sharpened & dyght, that it maye be geuen in to the hande of the manslayer.

Crye (O thou sonne of man, & howle, for this swerde shall smyte my people, & all the rulers in Israel) my people shall be fearede thowowe this swerde. Smite therfore thou vpon thy thyghe, for it is gone for the to make a teryall. And what a teryall shall this be, whē euen my scepter shall be reprobued? It shall not be sayeth the Lorde God. Prophecy y^e sonne of mā, & smyte thyne handes together: make the swerde two edged, ye make it thre edged, that manslayers swerde, y^e swerde of the greates slaughter, whych shall smyte the: euen in their preuchambres: to make them abashed & faynt at the hertes, & in all gates to make some of them fall. I haue geue that fearfull swerde. O howe byght and sharpe is it, howe well dyght & mete for the slaughter. Sett the some place alone, ether vpon the ryght hande or on the left, whycher so euer thy face turneth. I wyll smyte my handes together also & satisfye my wrothfull indignacyon: Euen I the Lorde haue sayde it.

The worde of the Lorde came yet vnto me agayne sayynge. Thou sonne of mā, make y^e two stretes, y^e the swerde of the kynge of Babylon maye come. Both these stretes shall go out of one kynges lade. And chose y^e a place, at the heade of the strete chose out a corner. Make y^e a strete, y^e the swerde maye come toward Nabath of the Ammonites, & to the stronge cytie of Ierusalem. For the kynge of Babylon shall stande in the turnynge of the waye, at the head of the two stretes: * to aske counsell at the sothe sayers, castynge the lottes wth his arrowes, to aske counsell at the ydole, and to loke in the lyner. But y^e sothe sayynge shall poynte to y^e ryght syde vpon Ierusalem, y^e he maye set men of warre, to smyte it wth a greates noyse, to crye out Alarū, to lett batell rammes agaynst the gates, to graue vp dyches, & to make bulworkes.

Neuertheles, as for the sothe sayynge, they shall holde it but for vanite. And esteame the as those to whome they haue often sworn. Notwithstandynge he shall remembre their wyckednesse, so that by ryght they must be taken & wonne. Therfore sayeth the Lorde God. For so much as ye poure selues shewe your offence, and haue opened youre wickednesse, so that in all youre workes men maye see your synnes: therfore as ye come to remembrance, and ye shall be taken by violence.

O thou shamefull wycked guyde of Israel whose daye is come: euen the tyme that wickednesse shall haue an ende. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: take awaye the garland, & put of the crowne, and so is it awaye: the humble is ble is exalted, and the proude brought lowe. Punyſhe, punyſhe, yee, punyſhe the will I, & deſtroye them: and that ſhall not be fulfilled vntill he come, to whom the iudgement be- longeth, & to whom I haue geuen it. And thou (ſonne of man) prophete, & ſpeake: Thus ſayeth the Lord God to ſchylde of * Am- mon, & to their blaſphemy, ſpeake thou: The ſwearde, & ſwearde, is drawen forthall redy to the ſlaughter, & ſcoured to conſume that it giſteth (becauſe thou haſt loſed ſout vanyties, and propheted lyes) ſit maye come vpon thy necke, lyke as vpon the other vngodly, whych he ſlayne: whole daye came, whan their wyckedneſſe was full.

Shulde I put it by agayne? Naye I wyll punyſhe the, in ſlāde where thou waſt noyſhed & bozne, and poure my indignacyō vpon the and wyll blowe vpon the in the fyre of my wrath, and delouer ſ vnto cruel peo- ple, which are lerned to deſtroye. Thou ſhalt fede the fyre and thy bloude ſhall be ſhed in ſ lande, that thou mayeſt be put out of reme- braunce. Euen I the Lord haue ſpoken it.

The xxij. Chapter.

¶ The worde of the Lord agaynſt Jeruſalem for man ſlaughter, & denyinge due honour vnto their fathers & mothers, & other wyckedneſſes. Of the wycked doctrine of the ſaſſe prophetes & preſters, & of their vnſacrable couetouſneſſes. The Exa- mple of rulers. The wyckedneſſe of the people.

Moreouer, the worde of ſ Lord came vnto me, & ſayde: thou ſonne of man, wyll thou not reprove thyſ bloud- churſtye cpte? Shew them their abhominacyōs, and tell them: Thus ſayeth the Lord God: O thou cpte, that thedeſt bloude in ſ myddelt of ſ, that thy tyme maye come alſo: & makeſt the Idoles to deſpyle the wythall. Thou haſt made thy ſelfe gyley, in ſ bloude & thou haſt ſhed: and deſpiled the in the Idoles, which thou haſt made. Thou haſt cauſed thy dayes to drawe nye, & made the tyme of thy yeares to come. Therefore wyll I make the to be confounded amonde the heathen, & to be deſpiled in all the lādes, whether they be nye or farre from the: they ſhall laugh the to ſcorne, thou that haſt gotten the ſo foule a name, & art full of myſchefe. Beholde, the rulers of Iſrael haue brought euery man hys power, to ſhed bloude in the. * In the haue they deſpiled father & mother, in ſ haue they oppreſſed the ſtraunger, in the haue they vexed the wydowe and the fatherleſſe. Thou haſt deſpiled my Sanctuary, and vnhalo- wed my Sabbath. Murthurers are there in the, that ſhede bloude, & eate vpon the hylls, and in the they vſe abhominacyōn.

* In ſ haue they diſcouered their fathers ſhame, in the haue they vexed womē in their ſickneſſe. Euery man hath deale ſhamellully wyth his neyghbours wyfe, & abhominably deſpiled hys daughter in lawe. In the hath euery mā forced his awne ſyſter, euen his ſa-thers daughter: yee, * gyftes haue bene re- ceaued in the, to ſhede bloude: * Thou haſt taken vſury and encrease, thou haſt oppreſ- ſed thy neyghbours by extorcyōn, and ſoz- gotten me, ſayeth the Lord God. Beholde, I haue ſmyten my handes vpon thy coue- touſneſſe, that thou haſt vſed, and vpon the bloude whych hath bene ſhed in the. As thy herte able to endure it, or may thy hādes de- fende the ſelues, in the tyme ſ I ſhall byrnye vpon the: Euen I the Lord that ſpeake it, wyll byrnye it alſo to paſſe. * I wyll ſcatte the amōge the heathen, & ſtrowe the aboute in the landes, & wyll cauſe thy ſylthynelle to ceaſe out of the yee, and thou ſhalt be thynne awne enheritaunce & not myne in the ſyghe of the heathen, that thou mayeſt knowe, that I am the Lord.

And the worde of the Lord came vnto me, ſayinge: Thou ſonne of man, * the houſe of Iſrael is turned to dzoſſe. All they ſ ſhul- de be bzaffe, tynne, yron, & leat & are in ſ fyre become dzoſſe. Therefore, thus ſayeth ſ Lord God, ſ for ſo moche as ye all are turned in to dzoſſe, beholde: I wyll byrnye pou together vnto Jeruſalem, lyke as ſpyler, bzaffe, yron, tynne and leade are put together in the for- nace, and the fyre blowe there vnder to melt them. Euen ſo wyll I gather you, put you in together, and melt you in my wrath & indi- gnacyōn. I wyll byrnye pou together, and kyndle the fyre of my cruell diſpleaſure vnder you, that ye maye be melted therein.

Lyke as the ſpyler is melted in the fyre, ſo ſhall ye alſo be melted therein: that ye maye knowe, howe that I the Lord haue powred my wrath vpon you.

And the worde of ſ Lord came vnto me, ſayinge. Thou ſonne of man, tell her. Thou art an vnclene lande, which is not rayned vpon in the daye of ſ cruell wrath: * thy pro- phetes that are in the, are ſwozne together to deuoure ſoules, lyke as a roatynge Lyon, ſ ſpyner by his praye. They receaue ryches and good, & make many wyddowes in the. Thy preſtes breake my lawe, and deſpyle my Sanctuary. * They put no differēce betwene the holpe & vnholpe, nether diſcerne betwene ſ cleane & vnclene: they turne their eyes fro my ſabbathes, & I am vnhalowed amonge them. Thy rulers in the are lyke rauynge wolues, to ſhed bloude, and to deſtroye ſoules, for their awne couetouſlucre. * As for thy prophetes, they dawbe with vntempe- red claye, they ſe vanytyes, and prophete vnto the, ſayinge: ſ Lord God ſayeth ſo, where as the Lord hath not ſpoken. The people in the lande vſeth wycked extorcyōn & robbery. They vete the poore & nedye and * oppreſſe the ſtraunger agaynſt ryght. And I ſought in the lande for a man, that wolde make by the hedgē, and ſett him ſelfe in the gappe gappe before me in the landes behalfe, & yt ſhulde not be corrupted: but I could fynde none. Therefore, I wyll poure out my cruell diſpleaſure vpon the, & burne the in the fyre of my wrath: they & awne wayes wyll I re- cōpce vpon they & heades ſaieth ſ lord God.

The xxiii. Chapter.

¶ Of the ſynecacyōn, that is to ſaye, of the Idolatrye of Samaria and Jeruſalem, vnder the names of Whor- iſh & Wholbah. In compariſon of Samaria be ſhe: the ſ ſynecacyōn of Jeruſalem is ſ ſyſter, the de- ſtruction of Jeruſalem is propheted. The aduoutye of both the whores is ſounde oute. They & deſtruction.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me ſayinge: Thou ſonne of mā, there were two womē, & had one mo- ther. Theſe (whē they were yōge) begāne to playe ſ harlottes * in Egypt. There were they & bzefteſ bzofed, & ſ pappes of they & maydenhead did ſ Egv- ptiaſ deſtroye. The eldeſt of them was cal- led Wholah & her yōgeſt ſyſter Wholbah. Theſe two were my wyues, & bare ſonnes & daughters. They & names were Samaria, & ſ was Wholah: & Jeruſale, & was Whol- bah. As for Wholah ſhe begāne to go a who- ring, whē I had take her to me. * She was ſett on fyre vpon her louers ſ Affrians as her neyghbours which had to do w her: euen ſ prices & Lordes ſ were deckte i coſtly arape ſayre ponge men, luſty ryders of horyes.

Thus thozow her whordome, ſhe cleued vnto all the ponge men of Affria. Yee, ſhe was madd vpon the, & deſpiled her ſelfe w all they & Idols. Nether ceaſed ſhe fro ſ forni- cacyōn, & ſhe vſed w the Egvptians: for in her youth they laye w her, they bzofed the bzefteſ of her maydenhead, & poured they & whordome vpon her. Wherefore, * I delouer- red her ſto the handes of her louers, eue the Affrians, whom ſhe ſo loued. Theſe diſco- uered her ſhame, toke her ſonnes & daugh- ters, & ſlew her w ſ ſwearde: An euell name gat ſhe of all people, and they puniſhed her.

* Her ſyſter Wholbah ſawe this, and de- ſtroyed her ſelfe w inordynate loue, more then ſhe, & exceded her ſyſter in whordome * ſhe loued ſ Affrians (which alſo laye w her) namely, ſ prices & greaſe lordes, ſ we- re clothed w al maner of gorgious apparell all luſty horymē & ſayre ponge perſonnes.

Then I ſawe, that they both were deſp- led a lyke. But ſhe increaſed ſtill i whordo- me, for when ſhe ſawe mē paynted vpon the wall, ſ ymages of the Caldees ſett forth w freſh coulours, w ſayre gyddes about the & goodly bonettes vpon they & heades, lokyn- ge all lyke pynces (after the maner of the Babylonys and Chaldees in they & awne lande) where they be bozne) immediatly, as ſoone as ſhe ſawe the, ſhe bzent in loue vpon them, and ſente meſſaungers for them into the lande of the Chaldees.

Now when the Babylonys came to her, they laye with her and deſpiled her with they & whordome, and ſo was ſhe polluted with them. And when her luſt was abated from the, * her whordome and ſhame was diſcouered and ſene: then my herte forſoke her, lyke as my herte was gone from her ſyſter alſo. Neuertheleſſe, ſhe vſed her whor- dome euer the longer the more, and remem- bred the dayes of her youth, wherein ſhe had played the harlot i the lande of Egypt: * ſhe bzent in luſt vpon them, whose fleſhe was lyke the fleſhe of Affes, and they & ſede lyke the ſede of horyes. Thus thou haſt renued ſ ſylthynelle of the youth, when thy louers bzofed thy pappes, and marred thy bzefteſ in Egypte.

Therefore (O Wholbah) thus ſayeth the Lord God: I wyll rayſe vp thy louers (w whom thou haſt ſatysfied thy luſt) agaiſt the, and gather them together roude about the: namely the Babylonys, and all the Chaldees, rulers, mightye mē & tyrautes, w all the Affriaſ: all ponge & ſayre louers: princes and Lordes, knyghtes and gentel- men, which be all good horymē. Theſe ſhall come vpon the with horyes, charrettes, and a greaſe multitude of people: which ſhall be harnelleſſed aboute the on euery ſyde, w bzef- plates, ſhyldes & helmettes. I wyll puniſh the before them, yee, they & ſelues ſhall punyſh the, accordynge to they & awne iud- gemēt. I wyll put my gclouſy vpon the, ſo that they ſhall deale cruelly with the. They ſhall cut of thy noſe and thynne eares, and the remnaunt ſhall fall thozow the ſwear- de. They ſhall cary awaye thy ſonnes and daughters, and the reſidue ſhall be bzent in the fyre. They ſhall ſtrype the out of thy clothes, and cary thy coſtly Jewels awaye with them.

Thus wyll I make an ende of thy ſyl- thynelle and whordome, which thou haſt brought oute of the lāde of Egypte: ſo that thou ſhalt turne thynne eyes nomore after them, and caſt thy mynde nomore vpon Egypte. ſ for thus ſayeth ſ Lord God beholde I wyll delouer the into the handes of them, whom thou hateſt, yee, euen into the han- des of them, with whom thou haſt fulfilled thy luſt, whych ſhall deale cruelly wyth the. All thy labour ſhall they take with them, and leaue the naked and bare, and thus the ſhame of thy ſylthype whordome ſhall come to lyght. All theſe thynges ſhall happē vnto the, becauſe of thy whordome which thou haſt vſed amonge the Gentyls wyth whole Idols thou haſt deſpiled thy ſelfe. Thou haſt walcked in the waye of thy ſyſter, therefore wyll I geue ſ her cup- pe in thy hande.

Thus ſayeth the Lord God: Thou ſhalt be dryncke of dyncke of thy sisters cuppe, how depe and farre so euer it be to þe botome. Thou shalt be laughed to scorne, and had as greatly in derisyon, as is possible. Thou shalt be full of drunkennes and sorowe, for the cuppe of thy sister Samaria is a cuppe of destruction and wastynge: the same shalt thou dyncke, and suppe it out euen to the dregges, yee, thou shalt eat vp the broken peces of it, & so teare thynne a wne brestes: For eue I haue spoken it sayeth the Lord God.

¶ Therefore, thus sayeth þe Lord God: For so moch as thou hast forgotten me, & cast me aside behinde the, so beare now thynne a wne fylthines and whoredome. The Lord sayde moreouer vnto me: Thou sonne of mā wilt þe not reprove Oholah & Oholibah? Shewe them theyr abominacions: namely that they haue broken theyr wedlocke, & slayned theyr handes w bloude: yee, euen w theyr ydoles haue they comytted aduoutrey & and offered them by the fyre theyr a wne children (to be deuoured) wth theyr had hozne vnto me. Yee, & thys haue they done wth to me also: they haue despyled my Sanctuary i that same dape, & haue vnhalowed my Sabbath. For when they had slayne theyr children for theyr ydols, they came the same dape into my Sanctuary to despyle it. Lo, thys haue they done in my house: Welyde all thys, thou hast sent theyr messengers for men out of farre countrees: & when they came, thou hast bathed & pasted thynne eyes w colours, trymmed & set forth thy self of þe best fashion: thou satest vpō a goodly bed and a table spred before the: wherupō thou hast set myne incense and myne oyle.

¶ Then was there great chere with her to optayne peace, and though with those men many me came, yet were ther also brought, men of Sabba from the wilderness: which gaue the braceletes vpon theyr handes, & sett glorious crownes vpon theyr heades: and I sayde vnto her: that seynge she was styph in age in her whoredomes: now shall her fornycatyōs come to an end w her. And they wente into her as vnto a comē harlot. Eue so wēt they, (I say) to Oholah & Oholibah those fylthy women. O all ye þe loue vertue & ryghteousnes, iudge the, punishe the: * as aduouters & murderers ought to be iudged & punished. For they are breakers of wedlocke, & the bloude is i theyr handes. Wherefore thus sayeth the Lord God: I wil bryge a greete multitude of people vpo the, & make the be scattered & spoyled: the shall stone the, & goze the w theyr swerdes. They shall slaye theyr sonnes & daughters, and burne vp theyr houses with fyre.

And so they shall laye your fylthyness vpon your a wne selues, and ye shall be punisshed for the synnes that ye haue comytted with your ydols: and ye shall knowe þe I am the Lord God.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

The prophete the seynge of Jerusalem by a parable of a seynge potte. The parable of Ezechiel wth seynge deed, which he after expoundeth.

In the nyth yere, i þe tenth moneth, the tenth dape of the moneth, came the worde of the Lord vnto me, sayenge. O thou sonne of mā, wyte vp the name of thys dape, yee, euen the houre of this present dape: when the kyng of Babylon sett hym selfe agaynst Jerusalem. Shewe that obstinate household * a parable, and speake vnto the: Thus sayeth the Lord God: Gett the a potte, sett it on, and powze water into it: put all þe peces toge ther in it, all the good peces: the lopne & the shulder, and fyl it with the best bones. Take one of the best shepe, & an heape of bones withall: let it boyle well, & lett the bones sethe well therin. With that sayde the Lord God on thys maner. * Wo be vnto the bloudy cytie of the pot, wherupon the rustyness hageth, & is not yet scoured a wape. Take out the peces that are in it, one after another: there neede not lottes be cast therfore, for the bloude is yet in it. Upon a playne dyke stone hath she powzed it, & not vpon the grounde, þe it myght be couered w dust. And therfore haue I letten her powze her bloude vpon a playne dyke stony rocke, because it shulde not be hyd, and þe I myght byynge my wrothfull indignacyō & vengeance vpon her.

¶ Wherefore, thus sayeth the Lord God: Wo be vnto þe bloud thurstye cytie, for whō euen I my selfe will make a grett fyre and sett moche woode, and kyndell the fyre and seath the fleashe, and spice the pott, so that the very bones shall be bzent. Moreouer I will sett the pott empty vpon the coles, so þe metall shall be bzent & molten also for heate, & þe fylthyness of yt shall be molten in yt, & þe dross of yt shall be consumed. Thou to kest great payne thys to despyle thy selfe. And yt will not be purged fro þe exceddinge dross in yt: but thorow fyre shall þe dross of yt be purged. In thy fylthynesse euen in thy myscheuous dedes, þe dost cōpnyue & because thy fylthynesse is abhominable, for I haue censed the, but thou art not censed. Thou shalt not be pouged fro thynne vncle nesse, tyll I haue powzed my wrothful indignacyō vpo þe. Eue I þe Lord haue so denyed. Yee, it is come thereto all redy, & I wyll do it. I will not go backe, I will not spare, I will not be treated: but accordyge to thy wayes & ymaginacyōs, þe shalt be punisshed, sayeth the Lord God. And the worde of the Lord the Lord came vnto me, sayeng: Thou sonne of mā, beholde, I will take a wape þe pleasure of thynne eyes w a plage: yet shalt thou nether mourne, ner wepe, ner water thy chekes therfore: I mayest mourne by thy self alone, but vse no deadly lamentacyō. Holde on thy bonet, and put on thy shoes vpo thy fete, couer not thy face, & eat no mourners bread. So I spake vnto þe people by tymes in þe moynynge, & at eue my wyfe dyed: then vpo þe next morowe, I dyd as I was commaunded. And þe people sayd vnto me, wilt þe not tell vs what thys signyfeth towarde vs, for this þe doest for our sake. I answered them, þe worde of þe Lord came vnto me sayeng: Tell þe house of Israel, thus sayeth the Lord God: beholde, I will suspēde my sanctuary: euen the glory of your power, þe pleasure of your eyes, and the thing that ye loue: your sonnes and daughters whom ye haue left, shall fall thorow the swerde.

¶ Lyke as I haue done, so shall ye do also: Ye shall not hyde your faces, ye shall eate no mourners bread: your bonnettes shall ye haue vpo your heades, & shoes vpo your fete. Ye shall nether mourne ner wepe, but, i your synnes ye shall be sorowfull, & one reuēte with another. Thus Ezechiel is your hew token. For loke as he hath done, so (whe this cometh) ye shall do also: that ye maye lerne to knowe, þe I am þe Lord God. But beholde, O thou sonne of mā: In the dape when I take from them theyr power, theyr ioye & honour, the lust of theyr eyes, the burthen of theyr lyfes: namely, theyr sonnes and daughters, shall not this be known: Then shall there one escape, and come vnto þe, for to shewe the. In þe dape shall thy mouth be opened to him, which is escaped, & thou mayest speake, and be nomore dōme. Yee, and thou shalt be theyr hew tokē that they maye knowe, howe that I am þe Lord.

The xxxv. Chapter.

The worde of the Lord vpon the sonnes of Ammon, which reposed at the fall of Jerusalem. Agaynst Moab and Syer. Agaynst Idumea. Agaynst the Ishmaelynes.

In the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayenge: Thou sonne of mā, set thy face agaynst the Ammonytes, & prophete vpon them, and saye vnto the Ammonytes: heare the worde of þe Lord God. Thus sayeth þe Lord God: For so moch as thou speakest ouer my sanctuary, A ha, I trowe it be nowe suspended: & ouer the land of Israel, I trowe it be nowe desolat, yee, & ouer þe house of Juda, I trowe they be now led a wape psoners: Behold, I will delyuer the to the people of þe east, & they maye haue þe in possession: these shall set theyr castels and houses in the. They shall eate thy feute, & dyncke by thy milke. As for Ra-bath, I will make of it a stall for camels, & of Ammon a shepfold: and ye shall knowe that I am the Lord.

¶ For thus sayeth þe Lord God: In so moch as thou hast clapped with thynne handes, & stamped with thy fete, yee, reioysed i thynne herte ouer the lande of Israel with despyte: beholde, I will stretch out myne hāde ouer the also, & ad delyuer the, to be spoyled of the heathen, and rote the out from amonge the people, and cause the to be destroyed out of all landes: yee, I will make the to be layed waste, that thou mayest knowe, that I am the Lord.

¶ Thus sayeth the Lord God: For so moch as Moab & Seir do saye: As for þe house of Juda, it is but lyke as all other Getyles be: Therefore beholde, I will open þe syde of Moab, & take a wape theyr strength, their cyties & cheste coastes of theyr lāde, which are þe pleasures of þe cōtre. As namely, Bethie simoth, Baalmeon & Cariathaim: the se will I opē vnto the of the east, & they maye fall vpo þe Ammonytes: & will geue it the in possessiō: so þe Ammonytes shall nomore be had in remembrance amonge þe heathen. Eue thus will I punyssh Moab also, that they maye know, how þe I am the Lord.

¶ Moreouer, thus sayeth þe Lord God: Because that Edom hath auenged and cased hym selfe vpon the house of Juda, & ad haue done great offence & auēged hi selfe vpo the therfore, thus sayeth the Lord: I will reach out myne hāde vpon Edom, & take a wape man & beast out of it. From Chemā vnto Dedā will I make it desolat, theyr shall be slayne w the swerde. * Thorow my people of Israel will I auēge me agayn vpo Edom theyr shall hāde him, accordyge to my wroth and indygnacyō, so that theyr shall knowe my vengeance, sayeth the Lord God.

¶ Thus sayeth the Lord God: For so moch as the Philistines haue done this: namely taken vengeance with despytfull stomackes, and of an olde euill will set them selues to destroye. Therefore, thus sayeth þe Lord God: Behold, I will stretch out myne hāde ouer þe Philistynes, & destroye þe destroyer, and cause all the remnant of the see coast, to perishe. A great vengeance wyll I take vpo the, and punyssh them cruelly: & they maye knowe, howe that I am the Lord, which haue auenged me of them.

* because that Tyre hath spoke vnto Ieru-salem: A ha, now I trowe the portes of the people be broken, and we turned vnto me, for now the is destroyed I shall be fylled.
Pee, therefore, sayeth the Lord God: Beholde I Tyre, I will vnto p. I will bryge a great multitude of people agaynst p, lyke as whē the see aryseth with his waues: These shall bryake the walles of Tyre, and cast downe her towres: I will scrape the grounde from her, and make her a bare stone: pee, as the dyenge place, where the fysshers hāge vp theyr nettes by p see syde. Ene I haue spoken it, sayeth the Lord God. The Getyls shall spoyle her: her daughters vnto p felde shall perishe w the swearde, that they maye knowe how that I am the Lord.

For thus sayeth the Lord God: Behold, I will bryge hither Nabuchodonosor, which is the kynge of Babylon, and a kynge of kynge: fro p North vpon Tyre: w hoyses, charettes, hoysmen, and with a greate multitude of people. Thy daughters that are i the lād, shall he slaye with the sweard: but agaynst the, he shall make bullworke and graue vnto byches aboute p, and lyft vp hys shylde agaynst the. Hys synge and batelrāmes shall he prepare for thy walles, and w his weapens bryake downe thy towres.
The dust of hys hoyses shall couer the, they shall be so many: thy walles shall shake at p noyse of the hoysmen, charettes and wheles when he cometh to thy portes, as men do into an opē cytie. With p hoyses of his horse fete, shall he treade downe all thy stretes.

He shall slaye the people with the sweard, and bryake downe p pylers of thy strength.
They shall waste a waye thy ryches, and spoyl thy marchaundise. Thy walles shall they bryake downe, and destroye thy houses of pleasure. Thy stones, thy tymbre ad foundacions shall they cast in the water.

* Thus will I bring p melody of thy son-ges, and the voyce of thy mynstrelsy to an ende, so that they shall nomore be herde. I will make a bare stone of the, pee, a dyenge place for nettes, & p shalt neuer be buylded agayne: For euen I the Lord haue spoke it, sayeth the Lord God: thus hath the Lord God spoken concernynge Tyre. The fles shall be moued at the noyse of thy fall, & at the crye of the slayne, p shall be murdered i the. All kynge of the see shall come downe from theyr seates regall: they shall laye awaye theyr robes, and put of theyr costly clothyng. Pee, with trembling shall they be clothed, they shall lyt vpon the ground: they shall be afrayed at thy foden fall, ad be abashed at the.

They shall mourne for the, and saye vnto
the. * Thou noble cytie, that hast bene so greatly occupied of olde, thou that hast bene the strongest vpon the see with thyne inhabytours, of whom al men stode i feare.

How arte thou nowe so vtterly destroyed?
Now at p tyme of thy fall p inhabytours of the fles, pee, and the fles them selues, shall stande i feare at thy ende. For thus sayeth the Lord God: whē I make the a desolate cytie (as other cyties be, that no mā dwell in) and whē I brynge the depe vpon p that greate waters maye couer the. Then will I cast the downe vnto the, that descende into the pitte: vnto a people that hath bene lōge deed, and set the i a lande that is beneth, ly-ke the olde wilderness, with them which go downe to theyr graues, so that no mā shall dwell more in the. And I will make the to be nomore in honoure, in the lande of the lyninge. I will make an ende of the, and thou shalt be gone. Though thou be sought for, yet shalt thou not be founde for euermore, sayeth the Lord God.

The xxvii. Chapter.

The prophete is moued to bewaile the desolacion of Tyre. He setteth out the pryse of Tyre for the haunteynge of marchauntes therto.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me sayenge: O thou sonne of man, make a lamentable complaynte vnto Tyre, * Tyre, and saye vpon Tyre, p which art a porte of the see, p occupieth with moche people, & many fles: thus speaketh the Lord God: O Tyre, thou hast sayd: what, I am a noble cytie thy borders are in the myddest of the see, ad thy buylders haue made p maruelous goodly, Al thy tables haue they made of cypres trees of p moit Sanyr, fro Libanus haue they take Cedre trees, to make p malkes:
and p Okes of Basan, to make p rowers.

Thy boordes haue they made of puerp,
& of costly wood out of the fle of Cethim.
Thy sayle was of dyuers colours, small nedle worke out of p lāde of Egypt, to hange vnto thy mast: & thy hāgiges of yelow sylc-ke purple, out of p fles of Elisab. They of Sydon & Arnad were thy maryners, and p wyldest i Tyre were thy shypmasters. The eldest and wyldest at Gebal were they, p meded & stopped thy shippes. All shippes of the see w theyr shypmen occupied theyr marchaundies i p. The Perses, Lydians ad phutēs were in thyne host, & helped the to fyght: these hanged by theyr shylde & helmettes with the, these sett forth theyr bewty. They of Arnad were with thyne hoost rounde aboute thy walles, & p Pigmenias were thy watchmen vnto thy towres, these hāged by theyr quivers rounde aboute thy walles, and made the maruelous goodly.

Charlis occupied with the in all maner of wares, in syluer, yron, tymne and lead, and made thy marchett greate. Iauan, Tubal, and

and Desech were thy marchauntes, which brought the mē, and ornaments of metall for thy occupiēge. They of p house of Thogarma brought vnto the at the tyme of thy marre, hoise, hoysmen and mules. They of * Dedan were thy marchauntes: and many other fles that occupied with the, brought the weathers, Elephāt bones & Peacockes for a present. The Siriās occupied with p, because of thy diuerse worckes, and increased thy marchaundies, with Smaragdes, with scarlet, with nedle worcke, with whyte lynen cloth, with sylcke, and with crystall.

Juda and the lande of Israel occupied w the & brought vnto thy markettes, wheat, of Minich and pānag, balme, hony, oyle, & tryacle. Damascus also vled marchaundys w the, in the best wyne of Helbon & w will:
because thy occupiēge was so greate, ad thy wares so many, Dan, Iauan & Menfall haue brought vnto thy markettes, yronredy made, with Cassia & Calam, accordige to thyne occupiēge. Dedan occupied with the in sayre tapestre worcke and culshyns.

Arabia & al the princes of Cedar haue occupied w the, in theyr, wethers and goates.

The marchauntes of Seba and Rema haue occupied also with the, i all costly spy-ces, in all pprecious stones and golde, which they brought vnto thy markettes. Harā, Ehene and Eden, the marchauntes of Saba, Aliria, and Chelmad, were all doers w the, and occupied with the. In costly ray-ment, of yelow sylcke & nedle worcke (very pprecious, & therefore packte and bounde together with ropes.) Pee, and in Cedre woodde, at p tyme of thy markettes. The shippes of Charlis were the chefe of thy occupiēge.

Thus thou art full, and in greate worship, euen i the myddest of the see. Thy robbers shall brynge the into grett waters, p eastte winde shall ouerbear the into p myd-dest of the see: so that thy wares, thy marchaundies, thy ryches, thy maryners, thy shypmasters, thy buylders of thy broken places, thy occupiers (that brought p thy-nges necessary) the men of warre that are in the: pee, and all thy comens shall perishe in the myddest of the see: in p dape of thy fall.
The suburbs shall shake at the loude crye of thy shypmen. All wherry men, & all maryners vpon the see, shall leape out of theyr boates, & set the selues vpon p lande. They shall lyft vp theyr voyce because of the and make a lamentable cry. They shall cast dust vnto theyr heades, and lye downe in the al-wes. They shall haue them selues, and put sacke cloth vpon them for thy sake.

They shall inourne for the with hertfull sorrow, and heuy lamentacion, pee, they also shall wepe for the. Alas, what cytie hath so bene destroyed in p see, as Tyre is: Whē thy wares and marchaundies came fro the sees, p ganest al people ynough. The kiges of the earth hast thou made ryche, thorow the multitude of thy wares & occupiēge.

But thou art now cast downe i to the depe of p see, all thy resorte of people is perished with the. All they that dwell i the fles are abashed at the, & all theyr kynge are afrayed, pee, theyr faces haue chaūged couloure.
The marchauntes of the nacpons wondre at p. In that thou art so cleane brought to naught, and comest nomore vp.

The xxviii. Chapter.

The worde of God agaynst the kynge of Tyre for hys pryde. Daniel The prophete is moued to bewaile the kynge of Tyre. The worde of the Lord agaynst Sydon. The Lord promyseth that he will gather together the children of Israel.

The worde of p Lord came vnto me sayenge: thou sonne of mā, tell the prince of Tyre: Th sayeth the Lord God, because thou hast a proude hert and hast sayde: * I am a God, I haue my seate in the myddest of the see lyke a God: where as thou art but a man and not God, and yet standest i thy-ne a wne conceate, that thou arte God: Be-holde, p thynkest thy selfe a wyser then * Daniel, that there is no secretes hyd from the. Wpth thy wysdome and thy vnderstandynge, thou hast gotten the great wel-thynges, and gathered treasure of syluer ad golde. With thy greate wysdome ad occu-pyēge, hast thou increased thy power, and because of thy greate ryche, thy herte is proude.

Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God:
For so moch as thou hast lyft vp thyne hert as though thou were God: Beholde, I will brynge ennemyes vnto the, euen the tyrantes of p heathē: these shall drawe out their swardes vpon thy bewty and wysdome, & shall defyle thy glory. They shall cast the do-we to p pitte, so that thou shalt dye in the myddest of the see, as they that be slayne.
Let se, pf thou wilt saye then (before them that slaye p) I am God: where as thou art but a man and not God, in the hādes of the that slaye the. Dye shalt thou, euen as the vncircumcised in the handes of the ennemyes for I my selfe haue spoken it, sayeth the Lord God.

Moreover, the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayeng: Thou sonne of mā, make a lamentable complaynte ouer p kynge of Tyre, ad tell hym: Thus sayeth the Lord God: thou art a scale of a lyknesse, full of wysdome & excellēt bewty. Thou hast bene in the pleasaunt garden of God: thou art de-ckte with al maner of pprecious stones: with Ruby, Topas, Crystall, Jacynthe, Onix,

Moreouer, it happened in the eleventh yeare, the first daye of the thirde moneth, y^e the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayeng: thou sonne of man, speake vnto Pharaos the kynge of Egypte, and to al hys people. Whom art thou lyke in thy greatnesse? Beholde, I was lyke a Cedre tre vpon the mount of Lyba-nus with sayre braunches: so thynke, that he gaue shadowes and shot out very hye. Hys toppe reached vnto y^e cloudes. The waters made hym great, and the depe set hym vp an hye. Rounde aboute the rotes of hym rane there floudes of water, he sent out his lytle ryuers vnto all the trees of the felde. Therefore was he hyer then all the trees of the felde, and thorow the multytude of waters y^e he sent from him, he optayned many longe braunches. All foules of the ayre made theyr nestes in his braunches, vnder his bowes gedyed all the bestes of the felde, and vnder his shadow dwelt all people. Sayre & beutiful was he in his gretnesse & in the length of hys braunches, for hys rote stode besyde great waters. No Cedre tre myght hyde hym. In the pleasaunt garde of God, there was no fyre tre lyke hys braunches, y^e play-ne trees were not lyke the bowes of hym.
All the trees in y^e garden of God myght not be compared vnto him in his betwty, so sayre and goodly had I made hym wth the mul-tytude of hys braunches. In so moch that all the trees in y^e pleasaunt garde of God had enuy at hym. Therefore, thus sayeth y^e Lorde God: for so moch as he hath lyft vp him selfe so hye, and stretched hys toppe in to y^e cloudes, and seinge his hert is proude in his hyghnesse. I wyll delyuer hym into y^e handes of the myghtyest among the heathen, which shall rote him out. Accordynge to his wyckednesse wyll I cast hy awaye, y^e enemye shall destroye hym, and the myghty men of the heathen shall so scatce him that his braunches shall lye vpon all mountaynes and in all valleyes: his bowes shall be broken downe to the grounde thorow out the lande. Then all the people of the lande shall go from his shadowe, ad forsaue hym.
When he is fallen, all the foules of the ayre shall syt vpon hym, and all wyld beasts of the felde shall go aboute. Amonge his braunches: so that from hence forth, no tre in the water shall attayne to his highnesse, nor reach his toppe vnto y^e cloudes, nether shall eny tre of the water stande so hye, as he hath done. For vnto death shall they all be delyuered vnder the earth, and go downe to the graue lyke other men.

Moreover, thus sayeth the Lorde God: In the daye when he goeth downe to the graue I will cause a lamentacion to be made, I will couer the depe vpon him, I will staich his floudes, ad the great waters shall be restrayned. I shall cause Lybanus to be sorowfull for his sake, ad all the trees of the felde shall be smytte. I will make the heathen shake at the sounde of his fall, when I cast him downe to hell with them that de-scende into the pytte. All the trees of Eden, with all the cholen and best trees of Lyba-nus, yec, and all they that are planted vpo the waters, shall mourne with hym also in the lower habitacyons: for they shall go dow-ne to hell with him, vnto them that be slay-ne with the swerde, which dwelt afore vnder the shadowe of his arme among the heathen. To who shalt thou be lykened, that art so glorpyous and greace, among the trees of Eden? Yet art thou cast downe vnder the earth (amonge y^e trees of Edē) where thou must lye amonge vncircumcised, wth them y^e slayne wth y^e swerde. Euen thus is it wth Pharao & all his people, sayeth the Lorde God.

The xxxii. Chapter.

The prophete is commaunded to betwape Pharaos the kynge of Egypt. He prophesyeth that destruction shall come vnto Egypt thorow the kynge of Babylon.

In the eleventh yeare, y^e first daye of the twelue month, y^e worde of y^e Lorde came vnto me sayeng: thou sonne of mā, take vp a lamētacyō vpo Pharaos y^e king of Egypt, & saye vnto him: thou art reputed as a lyon of the heathē, & as a whal-fyn i y^e see: Thou castest thy waters about the, thou troublest y^e waters with thy fete and stāpest in theyr floudes. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll sprede my net ouer the, namely, a greace multytude of people: these shall dryue y^e ito my parne, for I wyll cast the vpon the lande, and let the lye vpo the felde, that all y^e foules of the ayre maye sytt vpon the. I will geue all the bestes of the felde ynough of y^e. Thy flesh wyll I cast vpon the hylls, and fyl the valleyes with thy hyghnesse. I wyll water the lāde with the aboundaunce of thy bloude euen to the moutaynes, and y^e ryuers shall be full of thy bloude. When y^e art put out, I will couer y^e heauen, and make his starres dymme. I will sprede a cloude ouer the Sunne, ad the Mōne shall not geue her light. All y^e lightes of heauē wyll I put out ouer y^e, & brig dar-kenes vpon thy lāde, sayeth the Lorde God.
I will trouble the hertes of many people, when I byng thy destruccio among y^e heathen & countrees, whom y^e knowest not. Per,
I will make many people wth theyr kinges to afrayed thorow the, y^e theyr heare shall stāde vp, when I shake my swerde at theyr faces. Sodenly shall they be astonyed, eue-ry man in hym selfe, at the daye of thy fall.
For

For thus sayeth the Lorde God, the king of Babylons swerde shall come vpon the,
with the swardes of the worthyes wyll I smyte downe thy people. All they that be myghty amonge the Gentyles shall waste y^e proude pompe of Egypte, & byng downe all her people. All the catell also of Egypte wyll I destroye, y^e they shall come nomore vpon y^e waters: so that nether māns fote ner beastes clawe, shall sterc the eny more. The wyll I make their waters depe, & cause their floudes to runne lyke oyle, sayeth the Lorde God. When I make y^e lande of Egypte desolate, and when the countre with all that is therein, shall be layde waste, & when I smyte all them which dwell in it, that they may knowe, that I am y^e Lorde. This is y^e mour-nyng, that y^e daughters of the heathen shall make: Pee, a sorow & lamentacion shall they take vp, vpon Egypte, and all her people, sayeth the Lorde God.

In the xii. yeare, the xv. daye of the mo-neth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayeng: Thou sonne of man. Take vp a la-mentacion vpon y^e people of Egypte, & cast the downe, yec, them I saye, & the myghty people of y^e heathē also, euen with the* that dwell beneth: and with them that go downe into the graue. Downe (how sayre so euer y^e be) & laye the with y^e vncircumcised. Amonge those y^e be slayne with y^e swerde, shall they
lye. To the swerde is the all redy delyuered: therefore pluck downe to y^e grounde, her & all her multytude. The myghty worthyes shall speake to him out of y^e hell & to his helpers, y^e be gone downe & lye vncircumcised and wth them that be slayne with the swerde.

Assur is there also wyth hys company, & their graues rōide aboute, which were slay-ne and fell all with the swerde, whose graues lye besyde him in y^e lowe pytte. Hys co-mens are buried rōide aboute hys graue, all together wounded and slayne with the swerde, which mē afore tyme brought feare into the lande of the lypunge.

There is Elam also wyth all hys prople, and their graues rōide aboute: which all beyng wounded & slayne with y^e swerde, are gone downe vncircumcised vnder y^e earth, which neuertheles somtime brought feare into the lande of the lypunge: for the which they beare their shame, with y^e other that be gone downe to the graue.

Their burial is geuen them and all their people, amonge them that be slayne. Their graues are rōide aboute al them, whych be vncircumcised, & with the* that be slayne tho-row y^e swerde: for seying that in times past they made the lande of the lypunge afrayed they must now beare their awne shame, wth them that go downe to the pytte, and lye amonge them that be slayne.

There is Meslech also and Tubal, and their people, & their graues rōide aboute.
These all are among the vncircumcised, and them that be slayne wyth the swerde, because afore tyme they made the lande of the lypunge afrayed.

Shulde not they then lye also amonge y^e worthyes, & vncircumcised? Pauntes which with their weapons are gone downe to hell whose swardes are layed vnder their hea-des, whose wyckednesse is vpon their bones: because that as worthyes, they haue brought feare into the lande of the lypunge Pee, amonge the vncircumcised shalt thou be destroyed, & slepe wyth them, that perished thorow the swerde.

There is the lande of Edom wyth her kynge and prynces also, which with theyr strength are layed by them that were slayne with the swerde, yec, amonge the vncircu-cised, and them which are gone downe into the pytte. Moreover, there be all y^e prynces of the north, with all the Sidonys, which are gone downe to the slayne.

With their feare and strength they are come to confusio, and lye there vncircumcised, among those that be slayne with y^e swe-arde: and beare their awne shame, with the that be gone downe to y^e pytte. Now whan Pharaos seyth this, he shall be comforted ouer all hys people, that is slayne with the swe-arde: both Pharaos and all his host, sayeth the Lorde God. For I haue geuen my feare in the lande of the lypunge. But Pharaos and all his people shall lye among the vncircumcised, and amonge them that be slayne with the swerde sayeth the Lorde God.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

He setteth out the office of a curate that preacheth the Gospel. He strengtheneth them that dyspayre, and boldeneth them with the promes of mercie. The worde of y^e Lorde agaynst y^e remnant of y^e people, & agaynst the mockers of the wordes of the prophete.

Aayne, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me: sayeng. Thou sonne of man, speke to y^e children of thy people, and tell the:
Whan I sende a swerde vpon a lande, yf the people of the lande take a mā of their countre, & set hym to be their watchman, the same man, whan he seyth y^e swe-arde come vpon the lande, shall blowe the trompet, and warne the people.

If a man now heare the noyse of the trōpet & wyll not be warned, and the swerde come: and take him awaye: his bloude shall be vpon his awne head: for he herde y^e sound of the trompet, & wolde not take hede, therfore his bloude be vpon him. But yf he will receaue warninge, he shall saue his lyfe.

Agayne

Agayne, of the watchman se þ ſwearde com, and ſhewe it not with the trowpe, ſo that the people is not warned: of the ſwearde come then, & take eny man from among the: the ſame ſhall be taken awaye in his awne ſpynne, but his bloude wyll I requize of the watchmans hande.

*Eze.iii.c

*And now (O thou ſonne of man) I haue made the a watchman vnto the houſe of Iſrael: that where as thou heareſt eny thinge out of my mouth, thou mayeſt warne the on my behalfe. If I ſaye vnto the wycked thou wycked, thou ſhalt ſurely dye, & thou geueſt him not warnynge, that he maye be warre of his vngodly waye: then ſhall the wycked dye in his awne ſpynne, but his bloude wyll I requize of thy hãde. Acuertheles, of thou warne the wycked of hys waye, to turne from it, where as he yet wyll not be turned from it, the ſhal he dye becauſe of his ſpynne, but thou haſt deliuered thy ſoule.

Therefore (O thou ſonne of man) ſpeake vnto þ houſe of Iſrael. Ye ſaye thus: Oure offences and ſynnes lye vpon vs, and we be corrupte in them: how ſhulde we then be reſtored vnto lye? Tell them: * As truly as I lye ſaith the Lord God, I haue no pleaſure in þ death of the wycked, but moche rather þ the wycked turne fro his waye, & lyeue. Turne you, turne you fro your vngodly wayes, O ye of the houſe of Iſrael. O wherefore wyll ye dye?

O thou ſonne of man, tell the chyldren of thy people: * The righteouſnes of the ryghteous ſhal not ſaue him, whanſoeuer he turneth awaye vnfaiſtfully. Agayne, the wickedneſſe of the wycked ſhal not hurt hym, whan ſoeuer he conuerteth from hys vngodlyneſſe.

*Eze.riiij.d

*Eze.iiij.b.
*Eze.riiij.a

And the ryghteouſneſſe of the ryghteous ſhall not ſaue his lye, whanſoeuer he ſynneth. If I ſaye vnto the ryghteous, that he ſhal ſurely lye, and ſo he truſt to his awne ryghteouſneſſe, and do ſynne, then ſhall hys ryghteouſneſſe be nomore thought vpon, but in the wyckedneſſe that he hath done he ſhal dye. * Agayne, of I ſaye vnto the wycked: thou ſhalt ſurely dye: and ſo he turne from his ſynnes, and do þ thinge that is lawfull and right: In ſo moche that the ſame wicked man geueth þ pledge agayne, reſtoreth that he had taken awaye by robbery, walkeſt in the commaundementes of lye, and doth no wronge. Then ſhall he ſurely lye, and not dye. Yee, the ſynnes that he hath done, ſhall neuer be thought vpon. For in ſo moche as he doth now the thinge that is lawfull & ryght, he ſhall lye. And yet the chyldren of thy people ſaye: Cuth: the waye of þ Lord is not ryght, but they lye, where as their awne waye is rather vnrigh.

When þ ryghteous turneth fro his rygh-teouſnes and doth the thinge that is wicked he ſhall dye therfore. But of the wicked turne from his wickedneſſe, doing the thinge þ is lawfull and right, he ſhall lye therfore. Yet ye ſaye: * the waye of the Lord is not equall. O ye houſe of Iſrael * I will iudge euery one of you after his wayes.

In the xii. yere, the v. daye of þ tenth moneth of oure captiuite, it happened, that one which was fled out of Ierulã, came vnto me, and ſayd: the cite is deſtroyed. Now þ hande of þ Lord had bene vpon me the evening afore this mã (which was eſcaped) came vnto me, & had opened my mouth, vntyll þ moorning þ he came to me: yee, he opened my mouth, ſo þ I was nomore domme. Then came the worde of þ Lord vnto me, & ſayd. Thou ſonne of man, theſe þ dwell in þ waſted lãde of Iſrael, ſaye: Abraham was but one man, and he had the lande in poſſeſſion: now are we many & the lande is geuen vs to poſſeſſe alſo. And therfore tell them. * Thus ſayeth the Lord: * In the bloud haue ye eaten, poure eyes haue ye lyeft vpon to Idoles, & and haue ſhed bloud: ſhall ye then haue the lande in poſſeſſion?

Ye leane vpon your ſwearde, ye worcke abhominaciõs, euery one deſileth his neygbour wife: and ſhall ye the poſſeſſe the lande? Saye þ theſe wordes vnto them. Thus ſaith the Lord God. As truly as I lye all ye þ dwell in thys wyldeerneſſe, ſhall be ſlaine with þ ſwearde: whatſoeuer is vpon the felde, will I geue vnto the beaſtes to be deuoured: thoſe that be in ſtrong holdes & denes, ſhall dye of the peſtilence. For I wyll make the lande ſo deſolate and waſte, & the pompe of her ſtrength ſhal come to an ende. The mountaynes in Iſrael ſhall be ſo waſte that no man ſhall trauaile therby.

*Then ſhall they lerne to knowe, that I am the Lord, when I make the lande waſte & deſolate, becauſe of all their abhominaciõs, that they haue wrought. And thou ſonne of man, the chyldre of thy people that talcke of the, by the walles and in the doores of their houſes, ſayinge one to another: Come, let vs heare, what worde is gone forth from the Lord. Theſe come vnto the, after þ manner of a greate people: yee, as who ſayth they were my people, they lye downe before the, and heare thy wordes, but they do not thereafter: for in their mouthes they make a feſte of them, and they herte goeth after theyr awne couetous lucre. And as a balet that hath a ſwete tune, and is pleaſant to ſynge, ſo ſhalt þ be vnto them: thy wordes ſhall they heare, but they will not do thereafter. Ad the worde of þ Lord came vnto me, ſayinge. Thou ſonne of man, prophecye agayneſt the ſhepherdes of Iſrael, prophecye and ſpeake vnto them. Thus ſayeth the Lord God. * Who be vnto the ſhepherdes of Iſrael, that fede them ſelues? ſhulde not the ſhepherdes fede þ flocke? Ye haue eatẽ by the ſatt, ye haue clothed you with the woll: þ beſt fedde haue ye ſlaine, but the flocke haue ye not nouriſhed. The weake haue ye not holden vpon þe ſicke haue ye not healed: þ broken haue ye not bounde together, þ out caſtes haue ye not brought agayne: þ loſt haue ye not ſought, but * churliſhly & cruelly haue ye ruled the. Thus are they ſcattered here & there without a ſhepherd: yee, all þ beaſtes of the felde deuoure the, and they go aſtraye.

Why ſhepe go wandring vpon all mountaynes and vpon euery hye hyll. Yee, they be ſcattered abroad in all felde, and there is no man, that careth for the, or ſeketh after the. Therefore, O ye ſhepherdes, heare the worde of the Lord. Thus ſayeth þ Lord God: As truly as I lye, for ſo moche as my ſhepe are robbed, and deuoured of all the wylde beaſtes of the felde, haupnge no ſhepherd: and ſeinge that my ſhepherdes take no regarde of my ſhepe, but fede them ſelues onely, and not my ſhepe. Therefore, heare the worde of the Lord (O ye ſhepherdes) Thus ſayeth þ Lord God: Beholde, I my ſelfe wyll vpon the ſhepherdes: and requyre my ſhepe from their handes, and make them ceaſe from feydinge of my ſhepe: yee, the ſhepherdes ſhall fede the ſelues nomore. For I wyll deliuer my ſhepe out of their mouthes, ſo that they ſhall not deuoure them after this. For thus ſayeth the Lord God: * Beholde, I wyll loke to my ſhepe my ſelfe, and ſeke them. Like as a ſhepherd among þ flocke ſeketh after the ſhepe that are ſcattered abroad, euen ſo wil I ſeke after my ſhepe, & gather them together out of all places, where they haue bene ſcattered in the cloudy and darcke daye. I will bringe them out from all people, and gather the together out of all lãdes. I will bringe them into their awne lande, and fede them vpon the mountaynes of Iſrael, by the ryuers, and in all the places of the countrey. I will fede them in ryght good paſtures and vpon the hye mountaynes of Iſrael ſhall there foldes be. There ſhall they lye in a good folde, and in a fat paſture ſhall they fede: euen vpon the mountaynes of Iſrael.

I will fede my ſhepe my ſelfe, and byſtice them to their reſt, ſayeth the Lord God.

* Soch as be loſt, will I ſeke: ſoch as go aſtraye: will I bringe agayne: ſoch as be wounded, will I bynde vpon: ſoch as be weake, will I make ſtrong: ſoch as be fat & ſtrong, theſe will I rote oute, and fede them with the thinge that is lawfull. And as for you (O my ſhepe) ſayeth the Lord God. * I wyll put a difference amonge the ſhepe, amonge the weathers & the goates. Was it not ynough for you, to cate vpon þ good paſture, but ye muſt treade downe þ residue of your paſture w your fete alſo? Was it not ynough for you to drinke cleare water, but ye muſt trouble the residue alſo with your fete?

Thus my ſhepe muſt be ſayne to cate the thinge, that ye haue troden downe w your fete, and to drinke it, that ye with your fete haue deſiled. Therefore, thus ſayeth þ Lord God vnto them: Beholde, I wyll ſeuer the fat ſhepe from the leane: for ſo moche as ye haue ſhot the weake ſhepe vpon the ſpides & ſhoulders, and runne vpon them with your hornes, ſo loge tyll ye haue vtterly ſcattered them abroad. I will helpe my ſhepe, ſo that they ſhal nomore be ſpoyled: yee, I will diſcerne one ſhepe from another. I wyll rayſe vpon vnto them one onely ſhepherd, euen I my ſeruaunt * David, he ſhall fede the, and he ſhall be their ſhepherd. I the Lord will be their God, and my ſeruaunt David ſhall be their prince: Euen I the Lord haue ſpoken it.

*Eze.riiij.f
*Actes.ii.c.
*Eze.riiij.g

Moreover, I wyll make a couenant of peace with them and dyue al euell beaſtes out of the lande: ſo that they maye dwell ſafely in the wyldeerneſſe, and ſleepe in the woddes. Good fortune and proſperite will I geue them, and vnto all that be roide aboute my hyll. * A proſperous ſhower and rayne will I ſende the in due ſeaſon, that the trees in the wodde maye bring forth their frutes and the grounde her increaſe. They ſhall be ſafe in their lande, and ſhall knowe, that I am the Lord, which haue broken their rock and deliuered the oute of the handes of thoſe, that helde them in ſubiccyon.

They ſhal nomore be ſpoyled of the beaſtes, net deuoured wyth the beaſtes of the lande: but ſafely ſhal they dwell, and no mã ſhall fraie them, I will ſet vpon an excellent plante for them, ſo that they ſhall ſuffre no more hunger in the lande, nether beare the reproche of the beaſte eny more. Thus ſhall they vnderſtande, that I the Lord theye God am with them, and that they (euen the houſe of Iſrael) are my people ſaith þ Lord God. Ye men are my flocke * ye are the ſhepe of my paſture: and I am your God, ſayeth the Lord God.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying. Thou sonne of man, turne thy face toward the mount Sion, and saye vnto it. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde (O mount Sepz) I wyll vpon the, I wyll reach out myne hande ouer the, yee, waste and desolate wil I make the. Thy cities wil I breake downe, and I shal lye voyde: that thou mayst knowe, how I am the Lorde. For so moche as thou bearest an olde enemye agaynst the chyldren of Israel, and hast drawne the chyldren of Israel vpon the swerde, what tyme as they were troubled and punished for their synne: Therefore, as truly as I lyue, sayeth the Lorde God, I will prepare the vnto bloude, yee, bloude shall folow vpon the: * seinge I layest wayte for bloude, therefore shall bloude persecute the. Thus wil I make the mount Sepz desolate and waste, and bringe to passe, that there shall no man goo thither, nor come from thence. His mountaynes wil I fyll with his slayne men: thy hilles, valleys and ryuers, shall lye full of them, that are slayne with the swerde. I will make the a perpetuall wilderness, so that thy cities shall not returne to their former estate: yee maye knowe, how that I am the Lorde.

And because I haue sayde: what, both these nations and both these landes must be myne, I will haue the in possession: where as the Lorde was there. Therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: As truly as I lyue, I will handle the accordinge to thy wrath and gelousy, lyke as thou hast dealt cruelly with them, that I maye be knowen amonge them, how I haue punished the. Yee, and that thou also mayest be sure, that I the Lorde haue herde al thy despyteful wordes, which thou hast spoken agaynst the mountaynes of Israel, sayinge: Lo, they are made waste, and geue vs to denoure. Thus with your mouthes ye haue made your boast agaynst me, yee, and multiplied your proude wordes agaynst me, which I haue herde altogether. Where vnto, thus sayeth the Lorde God: to the ioye of all the worlde wil I make the waste. * And lyke as I (O mount Sepz) wast glad, because the heritage of the house of Israel was destroyed: euen so wyll I do vnto the also, yee thou and whole Edom shall be destroyed, and knowe, that I am the Lorde.

The xxxvi. Chapter.

The promise of deliuerance from the Gentyles vnto Israel. The benefites done vnto the Jewes are to be ascribed to the mercy of God, not vnto their desertinges. God reneweth our hertes by the waye of his commaundementes.

Thou sonne of man, prophesye vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and speake: * Heare the worde of the Lorde. O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: Because your enemye hath sayde vpon you: A, ha, the hye euerslastynge places are now become ours, prophesye therfore, and speake: thus sayeth the Lorde God. Seynge ye be wasted and trode downe on euery syde, and become a possession vnto the residue of the Gentiles, which haue brought you into mens mouthes and vnto an euell name amonge the people. Therefore, heare the worde of the Lorde God, O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto the mountaynes and hilles, valleys and dales, to the voyde wilderness and desolate cities, which are spoyled, and had in derision on euery syde, amonge the residue of the heathen. Yee, eue thus sayeth the Lorde God. In the fyre of my gelousy haue I taken a deuyce, agaynst the residue of the Gentiles, and agaynst all Edom: which haue taken in my lande vnto them selues for a possession: which also reioyced fro their whole hert with a despitefull stomache, to waste it, and to spoyl it.

Prophesye therfore vpon the lande of Israel, speake vnto the mountaynes and hilles to valleys and dales, thus sayeth the Lorde God. Behold, this haue I deuised in my gelousy and terrible wrath. For so moche as ye haue suffered reprove of the heathen, therefore thus saith the Lorde God. I haue sworn, that the Gentiles which lye aboute you, shall beare their confusion the selues. And as for you (O mountaynes of Israel) ye shall shute out your braunches, and bringe forth your frute to my people of Israel, for it is hard by, that it will come. Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you wyll I turne me, yee maye be tyld and sowne.

I wyll sende you moche people, which shall be all of the house of Israel, the cities shall be inhabited, and the decayed places shall be repaired agayne. I wil prouide you with moche people and cattell, which shall increase and bringe frute, I wyll restore you also to your olde estate: and shewe you more kyndnes the euer ye had before: wherby ye shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. Yee, people wyll I send vnto you (O my folke of Israel) which shall haue the in possession, and thou shalt be their inheritance, so that thou shalt nomore be without them. Agayne, thus sayeth the Lorde God. For so moche as they saye vnto you, thou art an eater vp of men, and a waster of thy people: therefore thou shalt eate no more men, neither destroye thy people any more, sayeth the Lorde God. And I will not suffice the, for to heare thine awne confusion amonge the Gentiles from henceforth. Thou shalt not beare the reprove of the nations, nor cast out cast out thyn awne people any more, saith the Lorde God.

Moreover, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying. O thou sonne of man, when the house of Israel dwelt vpon their awne ground, they defiled the selues with their awne wayes and ymaginacions: so that in my sight their waye was lyke the uncleynesse of a menstruous womā. Wherefore, I poured my wrathfull displeasure vpon them, because of the bloude that they had shed in the lande, and because of their Idols, wherwith they had defiled the selues. I scatred the also amonge the heathen, so that they were strawed aboute in the landes. Accordinge to their wayes and after theyr awne inuencions, so dyd I punishe them.

Now, when they were gone vnto the heathen, and come in amonge the, they dishonoured my holy name: so that it was sayde of them. Are these the people of God, and must go out of their awne land? The spared I my holy name, which the house of Israel had dishonoured amonge the Gentiles, to whom they came. Therefore tell the house of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I do not this for your sakes (O house of Israel) but for my holy names sake, wherby ye dishonoured amonge the heathen, when ye came to them. Therefore, I wyll halowe my grete name agayne, which amonge the Gentiles is euell spoken of: for ye your selues haue dishonoured it amonge them. And the Gentiles shall knowe that I am the Lorde, when I am honoured in you before their eyes, sayeth the Lorde God.

As for you, I will take you from amonge the heathen, and gather you together out of all countres, and bringe you agayne into your awne lande. * Then wil I poure cleare water vpon you, and ye shall be cleane: yee, from all your uncleynesse and from all your Idols shall I cleanse you. A new herte also wil I geue you, and a new sprete wil I put into you. As for that stony herte, I will take it out of your body, and geue you a fleshy herte. I will geue my sprete amonge you: and cause you to walcke in my commaundementes to kepe my lawes, and to fulfill them.

And so ye shall dwell in the land, that I gaue to your forefathers, and ye shall be my people, and I wil be your God. I will helpe you out of all your uncleynesse. I will call for the corne, and will increase it, and let you haue no hunger. I will multiplye the frutes of the trees and the increase of the felde for you, so that ye shall beare no more reprove of hunger, amonge the heathen. Then shall ye remember your awne wicked wayes, and your ymaginacions, which were not good: so that ye shall thinke ye were worthy to be destroyed: for your synnes and abhominacions.

But I wyll not do thys for your sakes (saith the Lorde God) be ye sure of it. Therefore, O ye house of Israel, be ashamed of your synnes. Moreover, thus saith the Lorde God: what tyme as I shall cleanse you from all your offences, then will I make the cities to be occupied agayne, and will repaire the places that be decayed. The desolate lande shall be builded agayne, which afore tyme laye waste in the sight of all them that were by. Then shall it be sayde: this waste lande is become lyke a garden of pleasure, and the voyde, desolate and broken downe cities are now strong, and defended agayne. Then the residue of the heathen that lye rounde about you, shall knowe that I am the Lorde, which repaire that was broken downe, and plante agayne, and was made waste. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, and will do it in dede.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I wyll yet once be founde agayne of the house of Israel, and do this for them: * I shall increase them as a flocke of me. Lyke as the holy flocke and the flocke of Jerusalem are in the hye solempne feastes: so shall also the wilde wasted cities be filled with flockes of men: and they shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

The xxxvii. Chapter.

The prophesie of the bringynge agayne of the people beyng in captiuite. He sheweth the bygyn of the ten tribes with the two.

The hande of the Lorde came vpon me, and caried me out in the sprete of the Lorde, and let me downe in a playne felde, that laye full of bones, and he led me rounde about by them: and beholde, the bones that laye vpon the felde, were very many, and maruelous dyde also. Then sayd he vnto me. Thou sonne of man: thinkest thou these bones maye lyue agayne? I answered the Lorde God, thou knowest. And he sayde vnto me. Prophesye thou vpon these bones, and speake vnto them. Yee dyde bones, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde God vnto these bones: Beholde, I wyll put bryth into you, that ye maye lyue: I will geue you synowes, and make fleshe growe vpon you, and couer you ouer with skynne: and so geue you bryth, that ye maye lyue, and knowe, that I am the Lorde.

So I prophesied, as he had commaunded me. And as I was prophesyinge, there came a noyse and a great mocyon, so that the bones rane euery one to another. Now when I had looked, beholde, they had synowes, and fleshe grew vpon them: and aboute they were couered with skynne, but there was no bryth in them. Then sayd he vnto me. Thou sonne of man, prophesye thou towarde the wynde: prophesye and speake to the wynde. Thus Sayeth the Lord God. Come (O thou ayre) from the four wyndes, & blowe vpon these flayne that they may be restored to lyfe. So I prophesied, as he had commaunded me: then came the breath into them, and they receaued lyfe, and stode vp vpon their fete, a maruelous greete sozte.

Moreouer, he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel. Beholde, they saye: Oure bones dried vp, oure hope is gone, we are clene cut of. Therefore prophesie thou, and speake vnto them: thus saith the Lord God. Beholde, I will open your graues (O my people), and take you out of your sepulchres, & brynge you into the lande of Israel agayne. So shall ye knowe that I am the Lord, when I open your graues, and brynge you out of them. My sperte also will I put in you, and ye shall lyue: I will set you agayne in your awnc lande, and ye shall knowe, that I am the Lord, which haue sayde it, and fulfilled it in dede.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: thou sonne of man, take a stycke & wypte vpon it. Vnto Iuda and to the chyldren of Israel his companions. Then take another stycke, and wyte vpon it: Vnto Joseph the stock of Ephraim, & to all the house of Israel his companions. And than, take both these together in thyn hande, so shall there be one stycke therof. Now ys the chyldren of thy people saye vnto the: wilt thou not shewe vs, what thou meanest by these? Then geue them this answer: thus sayeth the Lord God: beholde, * I will take the stock of Joseph, which is in the hande of Ephraim, and of the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them to the stock of Iuda, and make them one stock, and they shall be one in my hande. And y two stiches where vpon thou wytest, shalt thou haue in thyn hand, that they may se, and shalt saye vnto them.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: beholde, I will take awaye the chyldre of Israel from amonge the heathen, vnto whom they be gone, and will gather them together on euery pde, and brynge them agayne into theyr awnc lande: yee, I will make one people of them in the lande, vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and they all shall haue but one kyng. They shall no more be two peoples fro hece forth, neither be deuided into two kyngdomes: they shall also defile the selues nomore with their abhominacions, Idoles, & all their wycked doinges. I will helpe the out of all their dwellinge places, wherein they haue synned: and wil so clense them, that they shall be my people, and I their God.

David my seruaunt shall be their kyng, & they shall haue one shepherde onely. They shall walcke in my lawes, & my commaundementes shall they both kepe and fulfill. They shall dwell in the lande, that I gaue vnto Jacob my seruaunt, where as your fathers also haue dwelt. Yee, euery in the same lande shall they, their chyldren, & their chylders chyldren dwell for euermore, & my seruaunt David shall be their euermore prince. Moreover, I wil make a boode of peace w them, which shall be vnto them an euermore lastinge couenaunt. I wil seele them also, & multiply them, my Sanctuary wil I set among them for euermore. * My dwellinge shall be with them: yee, I will be their God, & they shall be my people. Thus the heathen also shall knowe, that I the Lord am the holy maker of Israel: when my Sanctuary shall be amonge them for euermore.

The xxxviii. Chapter.

The prophesie that Gog and Magog shall come with an appointed hoste into the lande of promys. Their intent. He reuereth the comming of Gog was before prophesied of the prophetes. The destruction of hym.

And the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge. Thou sonne of man, turne thy face toward the lande of Gog the lande of Magog which is y chefe prince at Mesech and Tubal: prophesie agaynst hym, & saye. Thus sayeth the Lord God. * O Gog y chefe prince of Mesech and Tubal: beholde, I will vpon the, & will turne the aboute and put a bytt in thy chaunces: I will brynge the forth and all thine hoste, both horse and horsmen, which be all weapened of the best fashion: a great people, y handle altogether speares, shildes, & swordes: the Beres, Morians and with them the Libians, which all beare shildes and helmettes: Gomer and all his hostes: the house of Chogorma out of the north quarters, and all his hostes, yee, and moch people with the.

Therefore prepare y, set thy selfe in aray with all thy people, that are come vnto the by heapes, and be thou their defence. After many dayes thou shalt be visited, and in y latter yeaeres thou shalt come into the lande that hath bene destroyed with the swearde, & now is replenished agayne with diuerse people vpon y mountaynes of Israel, which haue longe lye waste. Yee, they be brought out of the nations, and dwell all safe. Thou shalt come vplike a stormy wether, to couer the lande, & as it were a darck cloude, thou with all thine hostes, and a greate multitude of people with the.

Moreouer, thus sayeth the Lord God: At the same tyme shall many thynges come into thy mynde, so that thou shalt ymagyn mysche, and saye: I wyll vp to yonder playne lande, seinge they syt at ease, & dwell so safely for fely (for they dwell all without any walles they haue nether barres nor doores) to spoyle the, to robbe the, to lape hade vpon their so well shabited wyldernes: against that people, y is gathered together from amonge the heathen, which haue gotten catell and good, and dwell in the middest of the lande. Then shall Saba, and Dedan, and the marchantes of Charis with all their worthies saye vnto the: Art thou come to robbe? hast thou gathered thy people together, because thou wilt spoyle? to take syluer and golde: to cary awaye catell and good, and to haue a greate praye?

Therefore, O thou sonne of man, y shalt prophesie, and saye vnto Gog. Thus saith the Lord God. In y daye thou shalt knowe that my people of Israel dwelleth safe: and shalt come from thy place out of the north partes, thou & moch people with the which ryde vpon horses, wherof there is a greate multitude and an innumerable sozte. Yee, thou shalt come vpon my people of Israel, as a cloude to couer the lande. They shall come to passe in y latter dayes: I will brynge the vp into my lande, y the heathen maye knowe me, wher I get me honoure vpon the (O Gog) before their eyes.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: Thou art he, of whom I haue spoken afore tyme by my seruautes y prophetes of Israel, which prophesied in those dayes and yeaeres, that I shuld brynge the vpon them. At the same tyme, when Gog cometh vp into the land of Israel (saith the Lord God) shall my indignacion go forth in my wrath. For in my gelously and hote displeasure I haue deuyled * that there shall be a greate trouble in the lande of Israel at y tyme. The very fishes in the see, the foules of the ayre, the bestes of the felde, and all the men that are vpon the earth, shall tremble for feare of me.

The hilles also shall be turned vp side downe, the stappes of stone shall fall, and all walles shall syncke to the grounde. I will cal for a swearde vpon them in all my mountaynes sayeth the Lord God: so that euery mans swearde shall be vpon another. With pestylence and bloude will I punishe him: stormy rayne and hyle stones, fyre and brimstone will I cause to rayne vpon him and all his heape, yee, and vpon all that greate people that is with hym. Thus will I be magnified, honoured, & knowne amonge the heathen: that they maye be sure, howe that I am the Lord.

The xxxix. Chapter.

The helth the destruction of Gog and Magog. The graue of Gog and of his hoste. He prophesie that Gog & his company shall be deuoured of byrdes and bestes, wherof y house of Israel is waited. Their brynge agayne fro captiuitie is promysed.

Therefore, O thou sonne of man, prophesie agaynst Gog, and speake. Thus sayeth the Lord God: Beholde, * O Gog: thou chefe prince at Mesech and Tubal, I wyll vpon the, and I punishe the with fire plagues, & leade the from the north partes, and brynge the vp to the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy bowe, I will smyte it out of thy left hade, and cast thyn arrowes out of thy ryght hade. Thou with all thine heape, and all the people that is w the, must fall vpon the mountaynes of Israel. Then will I geue the vnto foules and wilde bestes of the felde, to be deuoured: there must thou lye vpon the felde: for euery the Lord haue spoken it, sayeth the Lord God.

Into Magog, and among those that syt so carelesse in the fles: will I send a fyre, & they shall knowe, that I am the Lord, I will make also y name of my holinesse to be knowne among my people of Israel: and I will not let my holy name be euil spoken of euermore: but the very heathen also shall knowe, that I am the Lord, the holy one of Israel. Beholde, it cometh, and shall be fulfilled in dede, sayeth the Lord God. This is the daye wherof I haue spokē. They that dwell in the cities of Israel, shall go forth and set fyre vpon the weapes, and burne them: shildes and speeres, bowes and arrowes, bylles & clubbes: leue yeaeres shall they be burnynge therof, so that they shall els bryge no stiches fro y felde, neither haue nede to beue downe eny out of y wodde. For they shall haue weapes ynowe to burne. They shall robbe those that robbed them, & spoyle those that spoiled them sayeth the Lord God. At the same tyme wil I geue vnto God, a place to be buried in Israel, euē the valley, where thorough men go from the east to the see warde. Those y traunple therby, shall stoppe their noses for stenche. There shall Gog & all his people be buried: and it shall be called the valley of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes longe shall the house of Israel be buryenge of the that they maye clense the lande. Yee, all the people of the lande shall burie them. O, it shall be a glorious daye, when I gett me that honoure, saith y Lord God. They shall ordeyne me also to be deed buriers, euery geynge thowow the lande, & appoynte them certayne places to bury those in, which remaine vpon the felde, y the lande maye be clenched. From ende to ende shall they seke, & that seuen monethes longe. Now those y go thowow y lande, where they se a mans bone, they shall set vp a tokē by it, tyll y deed buryers haue buried it also, in y valley of the people of Gog. And y name of the citie shall be called, hamonah (y is a multitude) Thus shall they make the lande clene.

And thou sonne of man: thus sayeth the Lord

* Apo. xij. d.

Lord God. Speake vnto all the foules and every byrde, yee, and to all the wilde beastes of the felde, heape you together and come, gather you rounde aboute vpon my slaughter, that I haue slayne for you: cut a greete slaughter vpon the mountaynes of Israell: eat of the flesh and drinke bloude. Ye shall cate the flesh of the worthies, & drinke the bloud of the princes of the lande: of the wetters, of the lammes, of the goates, and of the oxen: ye shall slayne at Basan. Eate the fat: your belly full, and drinke bloude, till ye be drunken of the slaughter, whych I haue slayne vnto you. Still you at my table with horses and stronge horsmen: with captaynes and men of warre, sayeth the Lord God.

I will bringe my glory also amonge the Gentyles, that all the heathen maye see my iudgement, that I haue kepte, and my hand whych I haue layed vpon them: that the house of Israell maye knowe, how that I am the Lord their God from that daye forth. And the heathen shall knowe, that where as the house of Israell were led into captiuite: it was for their wyckednes sake, because they offended me.

For the which cause I hyd my face from them, and deliuered them into the handes of their enemies, that they might all be slaine with the sword. Accordyng to their vncleynesse & vnfaithfull dealinges, so haue I entreated them, and hyd my face from them.

Therefore, thus sayeth the Lord God: Now will I bringe agayne the captiues of Jacob, & haue mercy vpon the whole house of Israell, and begetous for my holy names sake. All their confusion and offence that they haue done agaynst me shall be taken awaye: & so safelye shall they dwell in their lande, that no man shall make them afraied. And whē I haue brought them agayne from amonge the people, when I haue gathered the together out of their enemies landes, & am prayd in them before many heathen: then shall they knowe, that I am the Lord their God, whych suffred the to be led into captiuite amonge the heathen, but now haue I brought them agayne into their owne lāde, and not left one of them ponder.

After that, will I hyde my face nomore from the: but will poure out my spete vpon the house of Israell, sayeth the Lord God.

The .xl. Chapter.

The restoration of the captiues and of the temple: that was to come is shewed vnto the prophete.

In the .xxv. yere of oure captiuite, in the begynnyng of the yere, the .x. daye of the moneth: that is the .xiiij. yere, after that the cyte was smytten downe: the same daye came the hand of the Lord vpon me, and caried me forth: euen into the lande of Israell brought he me in the visyons of God: & set me downe vpon a marvelous hye mountayne, wher vpon there was a buylding (as it had bene of a cyte) toward the north.

Thyther he caried me, and beholde, there was a mā, whose similitude was like brasce, which had a threde of flax in his hande, & a meterode also. He stode in the doze, and sayd vnto me: marcke well with thine eyes, hearken to with thine eares, and fasten it in thine hert, whatsoeuer I shal thewe the, for to that intent that they myght be shewed the therfore art I brought thyther. And whatsoeuer thou seest, thou shalt certypse shewe of Israell therof.

Beholde, there was a wall on the out syde rounde aboute the house: the meterode that he had in his hande, was sixe cubytes long & a spanne. So he measured the bredth of the buyldinge, which was a meterode, and the heygth also a meterode. Then came he vnto the east doze, & wente vpon the steares, & measured the postes of the doze, wherof euery one was a meterode thicke. Euery chambze was a meterode longe & brode: betwene the chambzes were fyue cubytes. The poste of the doze within the porche, was one meterode. He measured also the porche of the ynnner doze, which conteyned a meterode. Then measured he the entree of the doze, that conteyned eyght cubytes, & his pylers two cubytes: and this entree stode inwarde.

The chambzes of the doze eastwarde, were thre on euery syde: a lyke brode and longe. The pylers also that stode of both the sydes were of one measure. After this, he measured the wydenesse of the doze, which was .x. cubytes, & the heygth of the doze, .xiiij. cubytes. The edge before the chambzes was one cubyte brode vpon both the sydes, and the chambzes six cubytes wyde of eyther syde. He measured the doze from the rydge of one chambze to another, whose wydenesse was .xxv. cubytes, & one doze stode agaynst another. He made pylers also .lx. cubytes hye, rounde about the court doze. Before the inwarde parte vnto the fore entree of the ynnner doze, were .l. cubytes. The chambzes and their pylers within, rounde about vnto the doze, had syde wyndowes. So had the fore entrees also, whose wyndowes were rounde about within. And vpon the pylers there stode date trees.

Then brought he me into the fore court: where as were chambzes & pauerd worckes, made in the fore court rounde aboute .xxx. chambzes vpon one pauerd worcke. Now the pauerd worcke was a longe besyde the dozes & was the lower pauerd worcke. After this he measured the bredth fro the lower doze, vnto the ynnner court of the outsyde, which had an .C. cubytes vpon the east & the north north parte. And the doze in the uttermoste court toward the north, measured he after the length and bredth: his thre chambzes also on either syde with his pylers and foztreyes: which had euen the measure of the first doze. His heygth was .l. cubytes, the bredth .xxv. cubytes, his wyndowes & porches with his date trees, had euen lyke measure as the doze toward the east: there were .viij. steppes to go vpon, and their porche before them. Nowe the doze of the ynnner court stode streyght ouer agaynst the doze, & was toward the north east. Fro one doze to another he measured .C. cubytes.

After that, he brought me to the south syde, where there stode a doze toward the south: whose pylers and porches he measured, these had the fyrst measure, and with their porches they had wyndowes rounde about, like the fyrst wyndowes. The heygth was .l. cubytes, the bredth .xxv. with steppes to go vpon: his porche stode before with his pylers and date trees on either syde. And the doze of the ynnner court stode toward the south, and he measured from one doze to another an .C. cubytes. So he brought me into the ynnner court, thowse the doze of the south syde, which he measured: and it had the measure as forsyde. In lyke manner, his chambzes, pylers and foztreyes, had euen the forsyde measure also. And he had with his porches rounde about wyndowes of fifty cubytes heygth, and .xxv. cubytes brode. The porches round about were .xxv. cubytes longe, and .v. cubytes broad: and his porche reached vnto the uttermost court, vpon his pylers, there were date trees, and eyght steppes to go vpon.

He brought me also into the ynnmost court vpon the east syde, and measured the doze, accordyng to the measure as forsyde. His chambzes, pylers and porches had euen the same measure, as the fyrst had: and with his porches, he had wyndowes rounde about. The heygth was .l. cubytes, the bredth .xxv. cubytes: his porche reached vnto the uttermost court: his pylers also had date trees on either syde, & .viij. steppes to go vpon. And he brought me to the north doze & measured it: which also had the forsyde measure. His chambzes, pylers & porches had wyndowes rounde about: whose heygth was .l. cubytes, and the bredth .xxv. His pylers stode toward the vtmost court, and vpon them both were date trees, and .viij. steppes to go vpon. Ther stode a chambze also, whose inraunce was at the doze pylers, and there the burnt offerings were washed.

In the doze porche, there stode on eyther syde two tables for the slaughtinge: to slepe the burnt offerings, syn offerings and trespass offerings ther vpon. And on the outside as men go forth to the north doze, ther stode two tables. Foure tables stode on ether side of the doze, that is .viij. tables: wherupon they slaughted. Foure tables were of hewe stone for the burnt offerings, of a cubite and a halfe longe and brode, and one cubite hye: wherupon were layed the vessels and ornaments, which were vled to the burnt and slayne offerings: whā they were slaughted. And within, there were hokes foure fingers brode, fastened rounde about, to hange flesh vpon, and vpon the tables was layed the offryng fleshe. On the out syde of the innermost doze were the syngers chambers in the inwarde court besyde the north doze ouer agaynst the south. There stode one also, besyde the east doze northwarde.

And he sayde vnto me: This chambze on the south syde belongeth to the prestes, that kepe the habytatyon: and this toward the north, is the prestes that wayte vpon the altar: which be the sonnes of Sadoch, that do seruite before the Lord in stede of the chyldren of Leui. So he measured the fore court, which had in length an .C. cubytes, and asmoche in bredth by the foure corners. Nowe the altar stode before the house. And he brought me to the fore entree of the house, and measured the walles by the estry doze: which were .v. cubytes longe on eyther syde. The thynknes also of the doze on eyther syde was thre cubytes. The length of the porche was .xx. cubytes, the bredth .xi. cubytes, and vpon steppes went men vpon to it: by the walles also were pylers on eyther syde one.

The .xli. Chapter.

The disposition and druce of buylding agayne the temple, & of the other thinges thereto belönging.

After this, he brought me to the temple, and measured the postes, which were of both sydes fyue cubytes thicke, accordyng to the wydenesse of the tabernacle. The bredth of the doze was .x. cubytes, & the walles of the doze on eyther syde .v. cubytes. He measured the length therof, which cōteyned .xl. cubytes, & the bredth .xx. Then went he in & measured the doze postes: which were two cubytes thicke: but the doze it selfe was fyue cubytes, and the bredth of the doze was .viij. cubytes. He measured the length and bredth therof, which were euery one .xx. cubytes, before the temple.

And he sayde vnto me: this is the holiest of all. He measured also the wall of the house, which was .vi. cubytes. The chambzes that stode rounde about the house, were euery one .iiij. cubytes wyde: and one stode harde vpon another, wherof ther were .xxiiij. ther stode postes beneth by the walles rounde about the house, to beare the vpon: but in the wall of the house, they were not fastened. The syde cham-chambres were, & byer & wyder, & had steppes thozowe them rounde about the house.

Thus was it wyder aboue, & fro the lowest men myght go to the hyst by & mydd chābres. I sawe also & the house was very hye rounde aboute. The foundatyon of the syde chābres was a meterodde, & is. vi. cubites broad. The thiknes of the syde wall without, contened. v. cubites, and so dyd the out wall of the chambres in the house.

Between the chambres was the wyde-nes. xx. cubites rounde about the house. The chambre dozes stode ouer agaynst the out-wall, the one doze was toward & north, the other toward the south: and the thynknesse of the out wall was. v. cubites rounde about Nowe the buylding that was separated to-warde the west, was. lxx. cubites wyde: the wall of the buylding was. v. cubytes thicke rounde about, and the length foure scoze cu-bites & ten. So he measured the house which was an. C. cubytes longe, and the separated buylding with the wall were an. C. cubytes longe also. The wydenes before the house, and of it that was separated toward the east, was an. C. cubytes.

And he measured the length of the buylding before and behynde with the chambres vpon both the sydes: and it contened an. C. cubytes. The ynnmer temple, the porch of the fore court, the syde postes, the thre had syde wyndowes and pylers rounde about oueragaynst the postes, fro the grounde vp to the wyndowes. The wyndowes the sel-ues were spled ouer with bozdes: and thus was it aboue & doze vnto the ynnmost house: and without also. Pee, the whole wall on euery syde both within and without was si-led ouer with great bozdes. There were che-rubins and date trees made also, so that one date tree stode euer betwixte to cherubyns.
One cherub had two faces, the face of a mā lokyng asyde toward the date tree, & a lions face on the other syde. Thus was it made rounde about in all the house. Pee, the cherubyns and date trees were made from the grounde vpon the doze, and so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.

The bypistes of the temple were foursquared, and the fashyon of the sanctuary was * eue as it appeared vnto me afore in & visio. * The table was of wodde. iij. cubites hye and. ij. cubytes longe: hys coznors, the length & the walles were of wodde. And he sayde vnto me: Thys is the table, that shall stande before the Lorde. The temple and the holpest of all had eyther of them two dozes: and euery doze had. ij. lytle wyckettes which were foldē in one vpon another, on euery syde two. And vpon the dozes of the temple, ther were made cherubins and date trees, like as vpon the walles: and a greate thynke balke of wodde was before on the out syde of the porche. vpon both the sydes of the walles of the porch, there were made depe wyndowes and date trees, haupng beames and balkes, lyke as the house had.

The. xliij. Chapter.

Of the chambres of the temple for the prestes,
and the holy cherges.

hen carped he me out into & fore court toward the north, & bro. A ught me into the chambre & stode ouer agaynst the back buyldinge north ward, which had the lēgth of an. C. cubytes: whose doze turned toward the north. The wydenes contened. l. cuby-tes: oueragaynst the. xx. cubytes of the ynn-mer court, and agaynst the paueid worke that was in the court, besyde all these thre, ther stode pillers, one oueragaynst another:
And before thys chambre there was a walkyng place of. x. cubites wyde, and within was a waye of one cubite wyde ad their dores toward the north. Thus the hyst chābres were alwaye narrower then the lowest and myddelmost of the buyldynge: for they bare chambre vpon chambre, and stode thre together one vpon another, not haupng pillers lyke the fore court: therfore were they smaller then those beneth and in the myddest to reken from the grounde vpwarde.

The wall without that stode by the chābres toward the vnnmost court vpon the fore syde of the chambres, was. l. cubytes longe: for the length of the vnnmost chambres in the fore court was. l. cubytes also: but the lēgth therof before the temple was an. C. cubytes.
These chambres had vnder them an inuāce of the east syde, wherby a man myght go in to them out of the fore court, thozowe the thicke wall of the fore court toward & east, ryght oueragaynst the separated buylding.
Before the same buyldynge vpon thys syde, there were chambres also which had a waye vnto them, lyke as the chambre on the north syde of the same length and wydenesse.

They inuānce, fashyon and dozes were C also of the same maner. Pee, euen lyke as the other chambre dozes were: so were those also of the south syde. And before the waye to-warde the syngers steppes on the east syde, there stode a doze to go in at. Then sayde he vnto me: The chābrs toward the north & the south which stāde before the backe buyldynge: those be holy habytatpons, wherem the prestes that do scrupce before the Lorde, must eate & most holy offeringes: and there must they laye & most holy offeringes, meat offerynge, synne offerynge, and trespace offerynge: for it is an holy place. When the prestes come therin, they shall not go out in to the fore court: but (seyng they be holy) they shall leaue the clothes of their ministration,

cyon, and put on other garmētes, when they haue any thyng to do with the people.

Nowe whē he had measured all the ynn-mer house, he brought me forth thozowe the east porte, and measured the same rounde about. He measured the east syde with & me-terode, which rounde about contened. v. C. meteroddes: And the north syde measured he which contened rounde about eue so moch.
The other two sydes also toward the south and the west, which he measured, contened ether of them. v. C. meteroddes. So he measured all the foure sydes, where there went a wall rounde aboute. v. C. meteroddes lōge, and as broad also which separated the holy from the vnholp.

The. xliij. Chapter.

He seeth the glory of God goyng into the temple, from whence it had before departed. He menconeth the ydolatre of the children of Israel, for which they were consumed and brought to naught. He is comanded to call them agayne to repentance.

He brought me to the doze & turneth toward the east. Behold, then came the glory of the God of Israel fro out of & east, whose voyce was lyke a great noyse of waters, and the earth was lychtened with his glory. His syght to loke vpon was * lyke the fyrst, that I sawe when I went in, what tyme as & cyrie quild haue bene destroyed: * and like the visyon & I sawe by the water of Cobar. Then fell I vpon my face: but the glory of the Lorde came into the house, thozowe the east doze. So a wynde toke me vp, and brought me into the ynnmer court: and beholde, the house was full of the glory of the Lorde.

I hearde one speaking vnto me out of the house: and there stode one by me, that sayde vnto me: O thou sonne of man, * this row-me is my seate, & the place of my fetteppes, where as I wyl dwell amonge the children of Israel for euermore: so that the house of Israel shall nomore defyle my holy name: neither they, ner their kynge thozowe they whozdome, thozowe their hye places, & tho-rowe the deed bodyes of their kinges: which haue builded their threholdes i maner hard vpon my threholdes, & their postes almost at my postes: & a wall betwytte me and them.

Thus haue they defyled my holy name w their abominations, & they haue comytted. Wherfore, I haue destroyed them in my wyath. But now they shal put awaye their whozdome & the deed bodyes of their kinges out of my syght, & I maye dwell among the for euermore. * Therfore, O thou sonne of mā, shewe thou the housholde of Israel a tēple, that they maye be ashamed of their wickednes, & measure the selues an exāple therat.

And when they be ashamed of all they worckes, then shewe them the fourme & fa-shyon of the temple, the comming in, the go-it shal be & holpest of all. Beholde, that is the descripcyon and fashyon of the house. Thys is the measure of the aultar, after the true cubite: which is a spāne longer then another cubyte, his botome in the myddest was a cu-bite longe and wyde, and the ledge that wēt rounde about it, was a spāne broad. This is the heygth of the aultar. From the ground to the lower steppes, the length is two cubi-tes: and the bredth one cubite: and from the lower steppes to the hēgther, are foure cu-bites, and the bredth but one cubite.

vpon the foure coznors, and the ledge that went rounde about had halfe a cubite, and & botome therof rounde about one cubite: hys steppes stode toward the east. And he sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thus sayeth the Lorde God: these are the ordynauces and lawes of the aultar: in the daye, whan it is made to offer burntofferings, and to sprenering, with the ledge that goeth rounde about, herwith shalt thou clense it, and reconcle it.

* Thou shalt take the bullocke also of the * Eze. xliij. c

The next daye, take a goatbucke, wout the bullocke. Nowe whan thou hast made it cleane, then offre a ponge bullocke * without blemish, and a rāme out of the flocke without blemish also. Offer the before the Lorde: and let & presse cast * salt therupō, and geue them so vnto the Lorde for a burntofferynge.

Seuen dayes shalt thou bynge euery daye a goatbuck. A ponge bullocke and a ramme of the flocke, both without blemish, shall they offre. Seuen dayes shall they reconple and clense the aultar, and offre vpon it. Whē these dayes are expyed, then vpon the eight daye and so forth, the prestes shall offre their burntofferings and healthofferings vpon the aultar: so will I be mercifull vnto you, sayeth the Lorde God.

No, ner the leuites that ben gone backe fro me: and haue diſceaued the people of Iſrael with all erreours, goyng after theyſe ydoles: therefore ſhall they beare their awne wyckednes. hominations, which they haue done. Shulde I uſe them to be porters of the houſe, and to all the ſeruyce that is done therein? But the preſtes, the leuites, the ſonne of * Sadoch, that kepte the holy ordynaunces of my ſanctuary, when the chyldzen of Iſrael were gone from me, ſhall come to me, to do me ſeruyce, to ſtande before me, and to offre me the fat and the bloude, ſayth the Lord God.

They ſhall go into my ſanctuary, and treade before my table: to do me ſeruyce, and to wayte vpon myne ordynaunces. Nowe when they go in at ſ dozes of the ynnner court: they ſhall put on lynen clothes, ſo that no wollvne come vpon them while they do ſeruyce vnder the dozes of ſ ynnner court, and within. They ſhall haue ſayze linen bonettes vpon their heades, and lynen breeches vpon their loynes, which in their labour they ſhall not put about them. And when they go forth to the people into the outwarde court, they ſhall put of the clothes wherein they haue miniſtered, and laye them in the habitatio of the ſanctuary, and put on other apparell, leſt they vnhalowe the people with theyſe clothes.

* They ſhall not ſhaue theyſe heades, ner ſe noꝝyſe the bulke of theyſe heare, but rounde theyſe heades onely. * All the preſtes that go into the inmoſt court, ſhall dryncke no wyne. * They ſhall mary no wedowe, nether one that is put fro her huſbade: but a mayde of the ſeede of the houſe of Iſrael, or a wedowe that hath had a preſte before.

* They ſhall ſerue my people the difference betwene the holy and vnholy, betwixt the cleane and vncleane. If any diſcord ariſe, they ſhall diſcerne it: & geue ſentence after my iudgements. My ſolempne feaſtes, my lawes and ordynaunces ſhall they kepe, and halowe my ſabbathes. * They ſhall come at no deed perſone to deſpyle them ſelues, except it be father or mother, ſone or daughter, brother or ſyſter, that hath had yet no huſbade, in ſoch maye they be deſpyled.

And when he is clenſed, then ſhal be rekened vnto him. vij. dayes: and yf he go into ſ ſanctuary agayn to do ſeruyce, he ſhall bring a ſynofferpyng, ſayth the Lord God. * They ſhall haue an heritage: yee, I my ſelfe wyll be their heritage: els ſhall ye geue the no poſſeſſion in Iſrael, for I am their poſſeſſyon. The meatofferpynges, ſynofferpyng and trefpaccofferpynges ſhall they eate, & eueꝝ dedicate thyng in Iſrael, ſhal be theyſe. The fyrſtlinges of all the fyrſt frutes, and all fre-wyllofferpynges ſhal be the preſtes.

Ye ſhall geue vnto the preſte alſo all the fyrſt frute of your firſt bozne, all I ſay, & all that is ſeparated vnto God, all poure heue offerpynges (I ſaye) ſhal be the preſtes, & alſo ſe fyrſtlinges of your dough, ſe God maye proſpere

The xlvj. Chapter.

The ſacrifyces of the ſabbath and of the newe moones. Thoroze which dozes they muſt go in, or come out of the temple, &c.

Thus ſayth the Lord God: ſe doze of the innermer court toward the eaſt ſhal be ſhut the. vij. working dayes: but in the ſabbath and in the daye of the newe moone, it ſhal be opened. Then ſhall ſ prince come vnder the doze porche, and ſtande ſtill wout by the doze check. So the preſtes ſhall offre vpon his burnt and healthofferpynges. And he ſhall worchyp at the doze poſte, and go hys waye forth agayne: but the doze ſhall nomoze be ſhut tyll the cuenyng.

On the ſame maner ſhall the people of the lande alſo do their worchyp before ſ Lord without thys doze vpon the ſabbathes and newe

newe moones. This is now the burnt offering, & the prince shall bring vnto the Lord upon the sabboth: syre lambes without blemish, & a ram without blemish, & an ephah for a meat offering, with the ram. As for the labes, he maye geue as many meat offerings to them as he will: and an hyrn of oyle to an ephah. In the daye of the newe moneth, it shall be a ponge bullocke without blemish, syre labes and a ram also without blemish. With the bullocke he shall geue an ephah, & with the ram an ephah also for a meat offering: but to the lambes, what he maye come by. And euer an hyrn of oyle to an ephah.

When the prince cometh, he shall go vnder the doze porche, and euen there departe forth agayne. But when the people of the lande come befoze the Lord in the hye solempne feaste, as many as come in by the north doze to do worshipping, shall go out agayne at the south doze. And they that come in at the south doze, shall go forth agayne at the north doze. There shall none go out at the doze, where he came in, but shall go ryght forth ouer on the other syde, and the prince shall go in and out amonge them.

Upon the solempne and hye feaste dayes this shall be the meat offering. An epha to a bullocke and an ephah to a ram, and to the lambes, as many as he will: but euer an hyrn of oyle to an ephah. Nowe when the prince bringeth a burnt offering or an health offering with a fre wyl vnto the Lord, & east doze shall be opened vnto hym, that he maye do with his burnt and health offerings, as he doth vpon the sabboth: and when he goth forth, the doze shall be shut after him agayne. He shall dayly bring vnto the Lord a labbe of a yere olde without blemish for a burnt offering: this shall he do euery morning.

And for a meat offering, he shall geue the syre parte of an epha, and the thyrde part of an hyrn of oyle, to myngle with the cakes, euery morning. See, this shall be a dayly meat offering vnto the Lord: for an euerydaye ordinance: and thus shall the lambes meat offering and oyle be geuen euery morning, for a dayly burnt offering.

Moreover, thus sayeth the Lord God: If the prince geue a gyfte vnto any of his sonnes, then shall it be his sonnes heritage perpetuall, that he maye possesse it. But yf he wyl geue one of his seruantes, some of his heritage, it shall be his to the fre yere, and then to retorne agayne vnto the prince: for his heritage shall be his sonnes onely. The prince also shall take none of the peoples inheritance, ner put them from their possession: but to his awne sonnes shall he geue his possession, that my people be not scattered abroad, but that euery man maye haue his a wone.

And he brought me thowre the intrance at the syde of the doze to the habitacyle of the sanctuary, that belongeth to the prestes and stode toward the north, and beholde, there was a place vpon the west syde, then sayde he vnto me. This is the place where the prestes shall dryght the trespass and syn offeringes, and bake meat offerings, & they nede not beare them into the outwarde court: and so to vnhalowe the people. So he brought me into the vtmost court, rounde about all the foure corners. Beholde, in euery corner of the court, there was yet a lytle court. See in all the foure corners of the court, there was made a lytle court of xl. cubites lōge, & xxx. cubites broade: these foure lytle courttes were of one like measure: and there went a ridge wall rounde about them all foure, vnder the which there were hartes made rounde about. Then sayde he vnto me: This is the hechin where the ministers of the house shall dryght the slayne offerings of the people.

The xlvij. Chapter.

The vison of the waters that came out of the temple. The coastes of the lande of promys, and the diuision thereof by trybes.

After this, he brought me agayne befoze the doze of the house: and beholde, there gushed out waters from vnder the postes of the house eastwarde, for the houte stode toward the east, that ran downe vpon the ryght syde of the house, which lyeth to the southwarde. Then caryed he me out to the north doze, and brought me forth there rounde about by the vtmost doze that turneth eastwarde. Beholde, there came forth the water vnto the right syde. Nowe whā the man that had the meter odde in his hande went vnto the east doze, he measured a .ij. cubites, and then he brought me thowre the water, eue to the angles: so he measured yet a thousande, and brought me thowre the water agayne vnto the knees: yet measured he a thousande, and brought me thowre the water vnto the loynes. After this he measured a thousande agayne, then was it socha ryuer, that I myght not wade thowre it. The water was so depe, that it was nedeful to haue swymmed, for it might not be waded ouer. And he sayde vnto me: halt thou sene this, O thou sonne of man: and with that, he brought me to the ryuer banck agayne.

Nowe when I came there, there stode many trees vpon either syde of the ryuer bancke. Then sayde he vnto me: This water that floweth out toward the east, and runneth downe into the playne felde, cometh into the see: and from the see runneth out: & maketh the waters whole. See, all that lyue & moue, wherunto this ryuer cometh, shall recouer, reouer. And where this water cometh, there shall be much fysh. For all that cometh to this water, shall be lusty and whole. By this ryuer shall the fyshers stāde from Engaddi vnto En Gaim, & there spread out their nettes: for there shall be great heapes of fysh, lyke as in the mayne see. As for his claye and pyttes, they shall not be whole, for why? it shall be occupied for salt.

By this ryuer vpon both the sides of the thore, there shall growe all maner of frutefull trees, whose leaues shall not fall of, neither shall their frute perishe: but euer be rypp at the monethes: for the water runneth oute of the sanctuary. This frute is good to eate, and his leafe profitable for medicine. Thus sayth the Lord God: Let this be the border, wherin ye shall deuide the lande vnto the .xii. tribes of Israel, with the lyne. Parte it indifferently vnto one as vnto another: of the which lande I sware vnto your fathers, that it shulde fall to youre inheritaunce.

This is the border of the lande vpon the north syde, from the mayne see, as men go to zadada: namely hemath, Berotia, Sabarim: from the borders of Damascus and hemath vnto hazar Tichon, and lyeth vpon the coastes of haucran. Thus the borders fro the see forth, shall be hazar Euan the border of Damascus, the north and the borders of hemath, that is the north parte.

The east syde shall ye measure from haucran and Damascus, from Galead and the lande of Israel by Jordane and so forth, fro the see coast, that lyeth eastwarde: and this is the east parte.

The south syde is, from Thamar forth to the waters of stryfe vnto Cadis the ryuer to the mayne see: and that is the south parte.

The west parte: namely the greatesee fro the borders thereof, tyll a mā come vnto hemath: this is the west parte.

This lande shall ye parte among you, according to the trybes of Israel, and deuide it to be an heritage for you, & for the straungers that dwell amonge you, and begget children. For ye shall take them amonge the chyldren of Israel, lyke as though they were of youre awne household and contrey, and they shall haue heritage w you amonge the chyldren of Israel.

Like in what trybe the straunger dwelleth, in the same trybe shall ye geue hym his heritage, sayth the Lord God.

The xlvij. Chapter.

The lottes of the .viij. trybes. The partes of the possession of the prestes and of the temple, of the leuites, of the cite, of the prince are rehearsed. The lottes of the other trybes. The gates of the cite.

These are the names of the trybes that lyeth vpon the north syde, by the waye of Hethlon, tyll thou comest vnto he-math and hazar Enam, the borders of Damascus toward the north besyde hemath: Dan shall haue his porcyon from the east quarter vnto the west. Upon the borders of Dan from the east syde vnto the west, shall Aser haue his porcyon. Upon the borders of Aser from the east parte vnto the west shall Nephtaly haue his porcyon.

Upon the borders of Nephtaly from the east quarter vnto the west, shall Manasses haue his porcyon. Upon the borders of Manasses from the east syde vnto the west, shall Ephraim haue his porcyon. Upon the borders of Ephraim from the east parte vnto the west, shall Ruben haue his porcyon. Upon the borders of Ruben from the east quarter vnto the west, shall Juda haue his porcyon. Upon the borders of Juda fro the east part vnto the west, ye shall set asyde one porcyon of .xxv. meter odde longe and brode, like as an another porcyon fro the east syde vnto the west, wherin the sanctuary shall stāde.

As for the porcyon that ye shall separate, out for the Lord, it shall be .xxv. meter longe & .x. meter brode. Which separated holy porcyon shall belonge vnto these: namely to the prestes, toward the north .xxv. meter, and toward the west .x. meter, brode, toward the east .x. meter, brode also, & toward the south .xxv. meter, longe, wherin the sanctuary of the Lord shall stāde. See, this same place shall be the prestes, that are of the chyldren of Sadoch and haue kept my holy ordinance: which went not astraye in the erreure of the chyldren of Israel, lyke as the leuites are gone astraye: and this separated pece that they haue of lande, shall be the most holy, harde vnto the borders of the leuites. And next vnto the prestes shall the leuites haue .xxv. meter, longe, and .x. meter, brode. This shall be on euery syde .xxv. meter, longe, and .x. meter, brode. Of this porcyon they shall sell nothing, ner make any permutatiō thereof, lest the chefe of the lande fall vnto other, for it is halowed vnto the Lord.

The other .v. meter, after the bredth lyeth by the .xxv. meter, shall be comē: it shall belonge to the cite and to the suburbs for habitacions, and the cite shall stāde in the myddest thereof. Let this be the measure: toward the north parte .v. meter, & .iiij. meter, toward the south parte .v. meter, & .iiij. meter, toward the east part, .v. meter, & .iiij. meter, toward the west parte .v. meter, & .iiij. meter.

The suburbs harde vpon the cite, shall haue toward the north .i. and .ij. meter, toward the south .i. and .ij. meter, toward the east .i. and .ij. meter, toward the west also .i. and .ij. meter. As for the residue of the length, that lyeth harde vpon the separated holy grounde: namely .x. meter, toward the east, and .x. meter, toward the west, nexte vnto the holy porcyon: it and the increase thereof shall serue for their meat:

a man amonge the prisoners of Iuda, that shall shewe the kynge the interpretacyon. The answered the kynge, & sayde vnto Daniel, whose name was Balthazar. Art thou he that cast shewe me the dreame, whiche I haue sene, & the interpretacyon therof? Daniel answered the kynge to his face, & sayde: As for this secreete, for the which the kynge maketh inquisicion: it is nether the wysse, the sorcerer, the charmer ner the deuell conturer, that can certifie the kynge of it. * Only God in heauen can open secretes, and he it is, that sheweth the kynge Nabuchodonosor, what is for to come in the latter dayes.

* Math. xii. c.

¶ Thy dreame, & that which thou hast sene in thyn head vpon thy bed, is this: O kynge thou dydest cast in thy mynde, what shulde come hereafter. So he that is opener of mysteries, telleth the, what is for to come. As for me, this secreete is not shewed me, for eny wysdome that I haue, more then eny other lyuinge: but onely by myght shewe I kynge the interpretacyon, and that he myght knowe I thoughtes of his awne herte. Thou kynge sawest, and beholde: there stode before the a greate Image, whose fygure was maruelous greate, and hys visage grymme. The Image heade was of fyne golde, hys brest & armes of siluer, his body and loynes were of copper, his legges were of yron, hys fete were parte of yron, and parte of earth.

* Math. xxi. c. Luke. xi. b.

* This thou sawest tyll, the tyme I, with out eny handes, there was heuen of, a stone which smote the Image vpon the fete, that were both of yron and earth, and brake them to powder: then was the yron, the earth, the copper, the syluer and golde broken altogether in peces: and became lyke the chaffe of corne, that the wynde bloweth awaye from the somer floozes, that they can no more be founde. But the stone that smote the ymage, became a greate mountayne, which fulfylleth the whole earth: This is the dreame. And now we wyll we shewe before the kyng, what it meaneth.

* Dan. ii. b.

* O kynge, thou art a kynge of kynges: for the God of heauē hath geue the a kyngdome, ryche, strength and maiesty: & hath deliuered the all thynges, that are amonge the children of men: the bestes of the felde, & the foules vnder the heauen, and geuen the dominion ouer the all. Thou art that golden head. After I there shall aryse another kyngdome, which shall be lesse then thyn. The thyrd kyngdome shall be lyke copper, & haue dominacyon in all lades. The fourth kyngdome shall be as stronge as yron. For lyke as yron breaketh and breaketh all thynges: yee, euen as yron beateth euery thyng downe, so shall it beate downe and destroye.

¶ Where as thou sawest the fete and toes, parte of earth and parte of yron: that is a deuyded kyngdome, whiche neuertheless shall haue some of the yron grounde mixte with it for so moche as thou hast sene the yron mixte with the claye.

The toes of the fete that were parte of yron and parte of claye, signifyeth: that it shall be a kyngdome partely stronge and partely weake. And where as thou sawest yron myxt with claye: they shall myngle them selues with the fete of simple people, & yet not cōtynue one with another, lyke as yron wyll not be souldered with a pottherde.

In the dayes of these kynges, shall I God of heauen set vp an euerlasting kyngdome whych shall not perishe, & his kyngdome shall not be geuen ouer to another people: yee, the same shall breake & destroye all these kyngdomes, but it shall endure for euer.

* 1. Cor. xii. b.

And where as thou sawest, that wythout eny handes there was cut out of I mounte a stone, which brake the yron, the copper, the earth, the syluer and golde in peces: by that hath the greate God shewed the kyng, what wyll come after this. This is a true dreame, and the interpretacyon of it is sure.

* 1. Cor. xii. b.

¶ Then the kynge Nabuchodonosor fell downe vpon his face, & bowed him selfe vnto Daniel, and commaunded that they shuld offre meat offeringes and swete odoures vnto hym. The kynge answered Daniel, and sayde: yee, of a trueth poure God is a God aboue all goddes, a Lorde aboue all kynges, and an opener of secretes: seynge thou canst discouer this myserie. So the kynge made Daniel a greate man, and gaue hym many & greate gyftes.

* 1. Cor. xii. b.

* He made him ruler of all the countrees of Babylon, and Lord of all the nobles, that were at Babylon. Nowe Daniel intreated I kynge for Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, so that he made them rulers ouer all the officers in the lande of Babylon: But Daniel hym selfe remayned still in the court by the kynge.

* 1. Cor. xii. b.

The. iii. Chapter.

The kynge setteth vp a golden Image, which he commaundeth to be worshipped. Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago are accused, because they dyspyed the kynges commaundment. They are brought vnto the kynge and commaunded to worshype the Image. They refuse to do it and are put into a burnynge ouen. By belefe in God they are deliuered from the fyre. Nabuchodonosor confesteth the power of God after the sight of the myracle.

Nabuchodonosor the kynge caused a golden Image to be made, whych was lx. cubytes hie, and syxe cubytes thicke. This he made to be set vp in the felde of Mura in the land of Babylon & sent oute to gather together the dukes, Lordes and nobles, the iudges and officers, the debtyes and shreues: with all the rulers of the lande: that they myght come to I dedicacyon of the Image whiche Nabuchodonosor nosor the kynge had set vp: So the dukes, Lordes and nobles, the iudges and officers, debtyes and shreues with all I rulers of the lande gathered them together, and came vnto the dedycacyon of the Image, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

¶ Nowe whē they stode before the Image, which Nabuchodonosor set vp, I bedel cried out with all his might: O ye people, kynredes and tinges, to you be it sayde: that whē ye heare the noyse of the trompettes, which shall be blowen, with the harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies and all maner of Musick: ye fall downe and worshype I golde Image, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge hath set vp. Whoso then falleth not downe & boweth him selfe, shall euen the same houre be cast into an hote burnynge ouen. Therefore, when all the folke herde the noyse of I trompettes that were blowen, with the harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies ad all kynde of Melody, then all I people, kynredes and nacyns fell downe, and bowed them selues vnto the golde Image, that Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

¶ Nowe were there certayne men of the Caldees, that wente euen then and accused the Jewes, and sayde vnto the kynge Nabuchodonosor: O kynge, God saue thy lyfe for euer, Thou beyng kynge hast geuen a commaundement, that all men whē they heare I noyse of the trompettes, harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies and all the other melodies: shall fall downe and bowe them selues towarde the golden Image: whoso then fell not downe & worshipped not that, he shulde be cast into an hote burnynge ouen. Nowe are there certayne Jewes, whom thou hast set ouer the officers of the lande of Babylon: namely, Sydrach, Misach and Abednago. These men (O kynge) regarde not thy commaundment, yee, they wyll not serue thy goddes, ner bowe them selues to I golden Image, that thou hast set vp.

* Dan. ii. g.

¶ Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruell wrath and displeasure, commaunded, that Sidrach, Misach and Abednago shulde be brought vnto hym. So these men were brought before I kynge. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them, & sayde: what? O Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, wyll not ye serue my goddes: nor bowe poure selues to the golden Image, that I haue set vp. Well, be redy hereafter, whē ye heare the noyse of the trompettes blowe with the harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonies and all the other melodies: that ye fall downe, and worshype the Image whiche I haue made. But yf ye worshype it not, ye shall be cast immediatly in to an hote burnynge ouen. Let se, what God is there, that maye deliuer you oute of my handes? Sydrach, Misach and Abednago answered the kynge, & sayde: O Nabuchodonosor, we ought not to consent vnto the in this matter, for why? oure God whō we serue, * is able to kepe vs fro the hote burnynge ouen (O kynge) and can ryght well deliuer vs out of thy handes. And though he wyll not, yet shalt thou knowe (O kynge) that we will not serue thy goddes, ner do reuerēce to I Image, which thou hast set vp. Then was Nabuchodonosor full of indignacyon, so that the countenance of his face chaunged vpon Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. Therefore he charged and commaunded, that the ouen shuld be made seuē tymes hotter, then it was wonte to be: & spake vnto the strongest workmen, that were in his hofte, for to bynde Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, and to cast them into the hote burnynge ouen.

* 1. Cor. xii. b.

¶ So these men were bounde in their cotes hosen, shues with their other garmentes, & cast into the hote burnynge ouen: for the kynges commaundement was so stryct, and the ouen was excedynge hote. As for the mē that put in Sidrach, Misach & Abednago, I flame of the fyre destroyed them. And these thre mē Sidrach, Misach & Abednago fell downe in the hote burnynge ouen, beyng faste bounde. The Nabuchodonosor I kyng marueled, and stode vp in all hast: he spake vnto hys counsell and sayde: dyd not ye cast these thre mē bounde into the fyre? They answered, and sayde vnto the king: yee, O kynge. He answered, and sayde: lo, for all that, yet do I se foure mē going lowse in the myddest of the fyre, and nothyng corrupte: and the fourth is I lyke I sone of God to loke vpon.

* 1. Cor. xii. b.

¶ Upon this went Nabuchodonosor vnto the mouth of the hote burnynge ouen: he spake also, and sayde: O Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, ye seruautes of the hye God, go forth, & come hyther. And so Sidrach, Misach & Abednago went out of the fier. Then the dukes, lordes & nobles, & the kinges counsell came together to se these mē, * vpon whō the fyre had no maner of power in theyr bodies. In somoch I the very here of their heed was not burnt, & theyr clothes vchaunged: yee, there was no smell of fier felt vpon them.

* 1. Cor. xii. b.

¶ Then spake Nabuchodonosor, and sayde, Blessed be the God of Sidrach, Misach and Abednago: * which hath sent his angell, ad defended his seruautes, I put theyr trust in him: that haue altered the kynges commaundment: and leoperde their bodies ther vpon: rather then they wolde serue or worshype eny other God, excepte their awne God onely. Therefore I wyll and commaunde, that all people, kynredes and tinges, which speake any blasphemie agaynst I God of Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago, shall dye, and their houses shall be pyld: Because, * there is no God that maye saue, as this. So the kynge promoted promoted Sidrach, Misach, & Abdenego, in the lande of Babylon.

The. iiii. Chapter.

¶ Nabuchodonosor dreamed agayne. Daniel interpreted it. Nabuchodonosor is out of his realme, and eateth with beasts. He confesseth the power of God, and is restored into his kyngdome.

* Dani. vii. c.

Nabuchodonosor kyng vnto all people, kyngeddes and tinges that dwell vpon the whole earth: peace be multiplied amōg you. I thought it good to shewe the tokens and maruelous worke, y^e the h^ye God hath wrought vpon me. O, howe great are his tokens, and howe myghtie are his wonders: * his kyngdome is an euerlasting kyngdome, and his power lasteth for euer and euer.

* Psal. xlii. b.
* Dan. vii. d.
* Luke. i. c.

* Dan. ii. a.

I Nabuchodonosor being at rest in myne house, and flozthyng in my palace, sawe a dreame, which made me afrayed: & the thoughtes that I had vpo my bedd, with the visions of myne head, troubled me. * Then sent I out a commission, that all they which were of wysdome at Babilō shulde be brought before me, to tell me the interpretacyō of the dreame. So there came the sothsayers, charmers, Caldees and conurers of deuils: to whom I tolde the dreame, but what it betokened, they coulde not shewe me: tyll at y^e last, there came one Daniel (other wyle called Balthazar, according to the name of my God) which hath the sperte of y^e holy goddes in him, to whom I tolde the dreame, saying: O Balthazar, thou prince of Sothsayers: for so moche as I knowe, that thou hast the sperte of the holy Goddes and no secrete is hy^e from the. tell me therfore, what the vision of my dreame (that I haue sene) maye signifye. I sawe a vision in my heade vpon my bed: and beholde, there stode a tre vpon the grounde, which was very hye, greete and myghtye: the begyth reached vnto the heauen, and the bredth extended to all the endes of the earth: hys leaues were fayre, he had very moche frute, so that euery man had ynough to eate therein.

The beastes of the felde had shadowes vnder it, and the foules of the ayre dwelt in the bowes therof. Shortly, all creatures fed of it. I sawe in my head a vision vpo my bed: & behold, a watcher & the holy one came downe fro heauen, & cryed myghtely, saying. He we downe y^e tree, breake of his bzaunches, shake of his leaues, and scatre his frute abroad: that all the beastes maye get them awaye fro vnder him, and the foules from his bzaunches. Reuertheles, leaue the grounde of hys rote styll in the earth, & bynde him vpon the playne felde, with cheynes of yron and stele. With the dewe of heauen shall he be wet, & he shall haue hys parte in the herbes of the grounde with other wylde beastes.

¶ That mans herte of his shall be take from

hym, and a beastes herte shall be geuen hym, tyll seuen yeaeres be come and gone vpo him.

This erande of the watcher, is a comaundment grounded and sought out in the counsell of him, that is most holy: to learne me for to vnderstande, that the best hath power ouer the kyngdomes of men, & geueth them, to whom it lyketh him, and bringeth the very out castes of men ouer them. This is the dreame, that I kyng Nabuchodonosor haue sene. Therfore O Balthazar, tell thou me what it signifyeth: for so moche as all y^e wyle men of my kyngdome are not able to shewe me, what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for the sperte of the holy Goddes is in the.

Then Daniel (whose name was Balthazar) helde hys peace by the space of an houre and hys thoughtes troubled hym. So the kyng spake, & sayde: O Balthazar, lett nether the dreame ner the interpretacyō therof feare the. Balthazar answered, saying: O my Lorde, this dreame happē to thynne enemies, and the interpretacyō to thynne aduersaries. As for the tree that thou sawest which was so great & myghtye, whose begyth reached vnto the heauen, and hys bredth into all the world: whose leaues were fayre, and y^e frute moche: vnder the which the beastes of y^e felde had they^e habitacyō and vpo whose bzaunches the foules of the ayre dyd syt.

¶ Then thou (O kyng) art the tre, greete and stronge. Thy greatnes increaseth, & reacheth vnto the heauē, so doth thy power to y^e endes of the earth. But where as the kyng sawe a watcher euen an holy angell, y^e came downe from heauē, and sayde: he we downe the tree, and destroye it: yet leaue the ground of the rote in the earth: and bynde hym vpon the playne felde with cheynes of yron & stele: he shall be wet with the dewe of heauē, and hys parte shall be with y^e beastes of the felde, tyll seuen yeaeres be come and gone vpo hym: This (O kyng) is the interpretacyō, yee, it is the very deuyce of hym, that is best of all, and it toucheth my Lorde the kyng.

¶ Thou shalt be cast out fro men, and thy dwellinge shall be with the beastes of y^e felde: with grasse shalt thou be fed lyke an oxe. Thou must be wet with y^e dewe of the heauen: yee, seuen yeaeres shall come, & go vpon the, tyll thou knowe, * y^e the best hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, & geueth the to whom he lyketh. Moreover, where as it was sayde, that the rote of the tree shulde be left styll in the grounde: it betokeneth, y^e thy kyngdome shall remayne whole vnto the, after thou hast lerned to knowe, that y^e power cometh from heauen. Wherefore, O kyng, be cōtent with my counsell, that thou mayest redeme thy synnes with almyse * and thyne offences with mercy to poore people: for thyng shall be an helynge of thynne erreure.

All these

All these thynges touche the, kyng Nabuchodonosor.

¶ So after xii. monethes, the kyng walked vp and downe in the palace of the kyngdome of Babylon, and sayde. This is the greete cyte of Babylon, which I my selfe with my power and strength haue made a kynges court, for the honour of my mayestye. While these wordes were yet in y^e kynges mouth there fell a voyce from heauen, sayinge: O kyng Nabuchodonosor, to the be it spokē: Thy kyngdome shall departe from the, thou shalt be cast out of mēs company: thy dwellinge shall be with the beastes of y^e felde, so y^e thou shalt eate grasse lyke as an oxe, tyll seuen yeaeres be come and gone ouer the. euen vntill thou knowest, that the best hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, & that he may geue them, vnto whom it please him. The very same houre was this matter fulfilled vpon Nabuchodonosor: so y^e he was cast out of mens company, and dyd eate grasse lyke an oxe. hys body was wet with the dewe of heauen, tyll hys heares were as great as Eagles fethers, and hys nayles lyke byrdes claws.

¶ When this tyme was past, I Nabuchodonosor lyfte vp myne eyes vnto heauē, and myne vnderstandinge was restored vnto me agayne. Then gaue I thackes vnto the hyghest. I magnified and praysed him that lyueth for euer more, * whose power endureth alwaye, and hys kyngdome from one generation to another: in comparyson of whom all they that dwell vpon the earth, are to be reputed as nothyng.

* Dani. iii. f.

* Isa. xlviii. b.

* Job. xlii. b.

¶ He handleth according to his will, amōg the powers of heauen & amonge the inhabitants of the earth: and there is none y^e maye resyste his hande, or saye: what doest thou? At y^e same tyme was myne vnderstandinge geuen me agayne, and I was restored to the honoure of my kyngdome, to my dignite, and to myne awne shapē agayne. My great estates and Princes sought vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdome agayne, so that I had yet greater worshyppe.

¶ Then dyd I Nabuchodonosor, loue, magnifye and prayse the kyng of heauē: for all his wordes are true, and hys wayes ryght. As for those that go on proude, he is able to bringe them downe.

The. v. Chapter.

¶ Balthazar kyng of Babylon, abusynge the bestels of the temple, treth an hande wyrtynge in the wall. The sothsayers called of the kyng, cannot expōnde the wyrtynge. Daniel is called, which readeth it, and interpreteth it also. Balthazar begynne flayne, Varius cōfesseth in hys rowme.

Kyng Balthazar made a great banquet to his thousand Lordes: with all these thousande he made great chere, and when he was droncken with wyne commaunded to bring hym the golden and syluer vessels * which hys father Nabuchodonosor had taken oute of the temple at Jerusalem: that the kyng & his Lordes with his quene and concubynes myght drinke therout.

So they brought the golden vessell, that was taken oute of the temple of the Lordes house at Jerusalem. Then the kyng and his Lordes with his quene and concubines drōcke out of them. They drōcke wyne, and praysed they^e Idoles of golde, syluer, copper yron, wodde and stone.

In the very same houre there appeared 13 fyngers, as it had bene of a mans hande wyrtynge, ryght ouer agaynst the candelstycke vpon the playne wall in the kynges palace: & the kyng sawe the palme of the hande that wrote. * Then chaunged the kyng his countenance, and his thoughtes troubled hym, so that the ioyntes of his body shoke, and hys knees smote one agaynst y^e other. * Wherefore the kyng cryed myghtely, that they shulde bringe hym the charmers, Caldees and conurers of deuils. The kyng spake also to the wyle men of Babylon, and sayde: Who so can rede this writing, & shewe me the playne meaning therof: shall be clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde aboute his necke, and rule the thyrde part of my kyngdome.

* Jerem. l. a.

* Dani. ii. a.

¶ Upon this, came all the kynges wyle mē: but they coulde nether reade y^e wyrtynge, ner shewe the kyng what it signified. The was the kyng sore afrayed, in so moche, y^e hys colour chainged, and his Lordes were sore vexed. So by reason of this matter, that had happened to the kyng & his Lordes, y^e quene went vp herselfe into the banquet house, and spake vnto the kyng, sayinge: O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer. Let not the thoughtes trouble the, and let not thy countenance be chaunged. For why? there is a man in thy kyngdome, that hath the sperte of the holy goddes within him, * as it was sene in thy fathers dayes. He hath vnderstandynge and wysdome lyke y^e goddes. He the kyng Nabuchodonosor thy father made this man chefe of the sothsayers, charmers, Caldees & readers of destines: because that soche an aboundant sperte, knowledge & wysdome (to expōnde dreames, to open secretes, and to declare harde dowtes) was founde in him: yee, euen in Daniel, whom the kyng named Balthazar. Let this same Daniel be sente for, and he shall tell, what it meaneth.

* Dani. ii. a.

¶ Then was Daniel brought before the kyng. So the kyng spake vnto Daniel, and sayde. Art thou that Daniel, one of the prisoners of Iuda, whom my father the kyng brought out of Jeruzalem? I haue heard speake of the, that thou hast the sperte of the holy goddes, experience and vnderstandinge, and that there hath bene greete wysdome founde in the.

The Prophecie

In y. Nowe haue there bene brought me, wise & conninge charmers, to reade thys wytyng and to shewe me the meanynge therof. But they coude not tell me, what thys matter signified. Then hearde I saie, that thou canst expounde darcke thynges, and declare harde doubtis. Well than, yf thou canst reade thys wytyng, & shewe me the meanynge therof thou shalt be clothed wth purple, haue a cheyne of golde aboute thy necke, and rule the thyrd parte of my kyngdome.

domes. * The very same night was Balthazar p^r kyng of the Caldees slayne, and Darius out of Medea toke in the kyngdome, beynge. lxxi. yere of age.

The vii. Chapter.

Daniel is made ruler over the Lyones. The proclamation of an acte agaynst Daniel. The proclamation of the acte, wherof Daniel is accused vnto the kyng as transgressoure. He is put into a denne of Lyons by the commaundement of the kyng. He is deliuered by sayth in God. Daniels accusars are put vnto the Lyons to be toyme in sonder. Darius by the proclamation of a decree, magnifyeth the God of Daniel.

It pleased Darius to set ouer his kyngdome an. C. and. xx. Lordes, whiche shulde be in all hys kyngdome about. Aboue these he set thre Prynces (of whom Daniel was one) that the Lordes myght geue accomptes vnto them, and the kyng to be vndiscayed.

But Daniel exceeded all these Prynces and Lordes, for the sperte of God was plentifulous in him: so that the kyng was mynded to set hym ouer the whole realme. Wherfore the Prynces and Lordes sought, to prycke out in Daniel some quarell agaynst the kyngdome: yet coude they fynde none occasyon ner faute vpon hym. For why: he was so saythfull, that there was no blame ner dishonesty founde in hym.

Then sayde these men: we wyl get no quarell agaynst thys Daniel, excepte it be in the lawe of hys God. Upon this, wente the prynces & Lordes together vnto the kyng, & sayde thus vnto hym: kyng Darius, God saue thy lyfe for euer. All the greates estates of the realme: as the Prynces, Dukcs, Senators and Judges, are determed to put oute a commaundement of the kyng, & to make a sure statute: namely, y^e whoso despyeth any peticyon, ether of any God or man (within this. xxx. dayes) excepte it be onely of the, kyng: the same person may be cast into the Lyons denne. Wherfore, O kyng, conforme thou this statute, and make a wytyng: that the thing which the Medes and Perses haue ordeyned be not altered ner broken.

So Darius made the wytyng, and confirmed it. Nowe when Daniel vnderstode y^e the wytyng was made, he wente into hys house: and y^e windowes of his wall toward Jerusalem stode open. There kneeled he downe vpon hys knees, thre tymes a daye: there he made hys peticyon, and prayd hys God, lyke as hys maner was to do afoze tyme.

Then these men made searche, and founde Daniel makynge hys peticyon. & prayinge vnto hys God. So they came to the kyng, & spake befoze him concernynge his commaundement, sayinge: O kyng, hast thou not subscribed the statute, y^e within. xxx. dayes who so requyrez his peticion of any God or man but onely of thy selfe, O kyng: he shal be cast into the denne of the Lyons? The kyng answered swered, and sayde: yee, it is true. It must be as a lawe of the Medes & Perses, that maye not be broken.

Then answered they, and sayde vnto the kyng: Daniel one of the prisoners of Iuda kyng, regardeth neither the, ner thy statute, that thou hast made, but maketh his peticyon thre tymes a daye. When the kyng hearde these wordes, he was soze greued, and wolde haue excused Daniel, to deliuer hym, and put of the matter, vnto y^e Sunne wente downe, to y^e intent that he myght saue hym.

These men perceauynge the kynges mynde, sayde vnto him: knowe this (O kyng) y^e the lawe of the Medes and Perses is, that y^e commaundement & statute which the kyng maketh, maye not be altered. * Then y^e kyng had them bynge Daniel, and they cast hym into the Lyons denne.

The kyng also spake vnto Daniel, and sayde: thy God, whom thou alwaye seruest, eu^e he shall defende the. And there was brought a stone, and layd vpon the hole of y^e denne: this the kyng sealed with his awne synge, and with the synge of hys prynces: that the kynges commaundement concernynge Daniel, shulde not be broken.

So the kyng wente into hys palace, and ate no meate y^e nyght nether was there any mynstrelly brought in befoze hym, nether coude he take any slepe. But by tymes in the moynynge at the breake of the daye, y^e kyng arose, and wente in all haste vnto the denne of the Lyons.

Nowe as he came nye vnto the denne, he cried with a piteous voyce vnto Daniel: yee, the kyng spake, and sayde vnto Daniel: O Daniel, thou seruaunt of the lyuynge God, is not thy God (whom thou alwaye seruest) able to deliuer the from the Lyons? Daniel sayde vnto the kyng. O kyng, God saue thy lyfe for euer. * Wh^{er} God hath sent his angell: which hath shut the Lyons mouthes, so that they might not hurte me. For why: mine vngyltynesse is founde out befoze hym. And as for the, O kyng, I neuer offended the.

Then was the kyng exceedinge glad, & commaunded to take Daniel out of the denne. So Daniel was brought out of the denne, and no maner of hurte was founde vpon him. For he put hys trust in hys God. And as for those men which had accused Daniel, y^e kyng commaunded to bynge them, and to cast the in the Lyons denne: them, theyr chyldren and theyr wyues. * So the Lyons had the mastery of them, and brake all theyr bones as sonder, or eue they came at the grounde.

* After thys, wrote kyng Darius vnto all people, kyndredes, and tuges, that dwelt in all landes: peace be multiplied with you. My commaundement is, in all my domynion and kyngdome, that men feare and stande in a we of Daniels God.

* For he is the lyuynge God, which aby: * Dan. xliij. b. dethuer: hys kyngdome shal not faile, and his poweris cuerlastynge. * It is he that deliuereth, and saueh: he doth wonders and marvelous workes, in heauen and in earth: he hath preserued Daniel from the power of the Lyons. This Daniel prospered in the reynne of Darius and Cyrus of Persia.

The viii. Chapter.

A visio of. liij. beastes is shewed vnto Daniel. The visio is interpreted of. liij. kyngdomes of the worlde. Of the power & increase of Antichrist. Of the euill lastynge kyngdome of Chyria.

In y^e first yere of Balthazar kyng of Babylon, saue Daniel a dreame, and a visio was in hys heade vpon hys bedde. Which dreame he wrote, and the summe of the matter is thys: Daniel spake and sayde: I saue in my visio by nyght, and beholde: the foure wyndes of the heauen stroue vpon the see, and foure greates beastes came vp from the see, one vnlke another.

The first was as a Lyon, and yet had he * Regles wynges. I saue, that his wynges were plucked from hym, and he taken awaye from the earth: that he stode vpon hys fete as a ma, and that there was geuen him a mans herte.

Beholde, y^e secōde beast was lyke a * bea- * re, & stode vpon the one syde. Among his teeth in his mouth he had. iij. greates longe teeth, & it was sayde vnto him. Arise, cate vp, moch fleth. Then I looked, and beholde, there was another lyke vnto a leopard, this had wynges as a foule, * euen foure vpon the backe. * Thys beast had foure heades, and there was power geuen hym. After this I saue in a visio by nyght, and beholde, the fourth beast was grymme and horrible, and marvelous stronge. It had great yron teeth, it deuoured and destroyed, and stamped the resydue vnder hys fete. It was farre vnlke the other beastes that were befoze it: for it had * ten * hornes, wherof I toke good hede.

And beholde, there came vp amonge the, another lytell horne, befoze whō there were thre of the first hornes plucked awaye. Beholde, this horne had eyes lyke a man, and a mouth speakynge presumptuous thynges. * I looked tyll the seates were prepared, and tyll y^e olde aged sat him downe. hys clothynge was as whyte as snowe, and the hearres of hys head lyke the pure woll. hys trone was lyke the fyrre flame, and hys wheles as the burning fyre. There drew forth a fyre streame, and went out from hym. * A thousande tymes a thousande serued him. x. * tynnes ten thousande stode befoze hym. The iudgement was set, and the bookes opened. Then toke I hede there vnto, because of the voyce of the proude wordes, which the horne spake. I behelde, all thynges, that it wente aboute.

E Nowe when I Daniel had sene this visio: and sought for the vnderstandynge of it: be-holde, there stode before me a thinge like vnto a man. And I herde a mans voyce in the riuier of Tylap, which cryed, and sayd: O Sa-biel, make this man vnderstande the visyō.
So he came, and stode by me. But I was afrayed at hys commynge, and fell downe vpon my face.

The ramme which thou sawest with the two hornes, is the kynge of the Medes and Perses: but the goate is the kynge of Greke lande: the greate horne that stode betwixte his eyes, that is the principall kynge. But where as it brake, and foure other rose vp in the steade: it signifieth, that out of this people shall stande vp * foure kyngdomes, but not so myghtye as it.

He shall be myghtye and stronge, but not in his awne strenght. he shall destroye aboue measure, and all that he goeth aboute shall prosper: he shall slaye the stronge and holy people. And thorowe hys craftyness, falschid shall prosper in hys hande, hys herte shall be proude, and many one shall be put to death in his welchynesse. he shall stāde vp agaynst the Prynce of Prynces, * but he shall be destroyed wythout hande. And thys visyon that is shewed vnto the, is as sure as y^e eunyng and the moonyng. * Therfore wryte thou vp thys syght, for it wyl be longe or it come to passe.

O Lorde, & done wickedly agaynst all thy ryghteousnes: yet let thy wrathfull displeasure be turned awaye (I beseeche the) fro thy cyte Jerusalem thy holy byll. And why? for oure synnes sake, and for the wickednesse of oure forefathers is Jerusalem & thy people abhorred, of all the that are aboute vs: Now

Gabriel. (* whō I had sene afore in the vision) came flyng to me, and touched me about the offering tyme in the euynge. He informed me, & spake vnto me: O Daniel maye be consumed, that the synne maye haue an ende, that the offence maye be reconciled, and to bypunge in euerlastynge ryghteousnes-se, to fulfill the visyōs and the prophetes, and to anoynte the moost holy one. Under-stande this then, and marke it well: that fro the tyme it shalbe concluded * to go and repayre Jerusalem agayne, vnto Christ (or the anoynted) prince: there shalbe seuen wekes: Then shall the stretes and walles be buyl-ded agayne. lxx. wekes, but with harde tron blous tyme. After these lxx. wekes, shall Christ be slayne, and they shall haue no plea sure in hym. Then shall there come a people with the prince, and destroye the cyte & the Sanctuary: and hys ende shall come as the water floude. But the desolacyon shall continue tyll the ende of the battell.

He shall make a stronge bonde with many, for the space of a weke: & when the weke is halfe gone, he shall put downe the slayne and meatoffringe. * And in the temple there shalbe an abhominable desolacyon, tyll it be destroyed all. And it is concluded, that this wastynge shall continue vnto the ende.

The .x. Chapter.

There appeareth vnto Daniel a man clothed in lye-ren, whych sheweth hym wherfore he is sent.

In the thyrde yere of kynge Cirus of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniel (other wyse called Balthasar) a matter, yee, a true matter, but it is yet a longe tyme vnto it. He vnderstode the matter well, and perceaued what the visyō was. At the same tyme, I Daniel mourned for the space of thre wekes, so that I had no lust to eate bread: as for fleshe and wyne there came none wythin my mouth: No, I dyd not once anoynte my self, tyll the wole thre wekes were out.

Upon the .xxiiij. daye of the first moneth,
I was by the greates floude, called Tygris
* I lyft up myne eyes, and looked: and beholde, a mā clothed in lye, whose loynes were gyrded by with fyne golde of Arabys: his body was lyke the Chrysolite stone, hys face (to loke vpon) was lyke lychtenynge, hys eyes as the flame of fyre, hys armes and fete were lyke fayne glysterynge metall, but the voyce of his wordes was lyke the voyce of a multitude.

* Dan. ix. c. d.
* Dan. ix. c. d.
I Daniel alone sawe thys visyō: & the men that were wyth me, sawe it not: but a greate fearfulness fell vpon them, so they fled awaye, and byd them selues. I was left there my selfe alone, and sawe this greates vision, so longe tyll there remayned nomore strength wythin me: yee, I lost my coloure clene, I wasted awaye, and my strenght was gone. Yet hearde I the voyce of hys wordes: and as soone as I hearde it, fayntnesse came vpon me, and I fell downe flat to the grounde vpon my face. And behold, an hande touched me, whych set me vp vpon my knees & vpon the palmes of my handes, sayynge vnto me. * O Daniel, thou well beloued man: take good hede of the wordes, that I shall saye vnto the, and stande ryght vp, for vnto the am I nowe sent.

And when he had sayde these wordes, I stode vp treblyng. Then sayde he vnto me: feare not Daniel: for why, sence the fyrst daye that thou

that thou set thynne herte to vnderstande, and bydest chasten thy selfe before thy God: thy wordes haue bene herde. And I had come vnto the, when thou beganest to speake had not the prynce ouer the kyngdom of the Per-ses wythstande me. xli. dayes. But lo, * An-thel one of the chiefe prynces, came to helpe and I was left to cōtinue ther with the kinges of Persia, & am come to shewe the, what shall happen vnto thy people in the latter dayes. For it wylbe longe yet of the visyō be fulfilled.

Nowe when he had spoken these wordes vnto me, I cast downe my head to the grounde and helde my tūge. Beholde, there touched my lippes one very lyke vnto a man.
Then opened I my mouth, and sayde vnto him, that stode before me, O my Lorde, my toyntes are lowed in the visyō, and there is nomore strength within me. Howe may my Lordes seruauit then talke wyth my Lord? seynge there is no strenght in me, so that I ca-not take my breath: vpon this there touched me agayne, one moche lyke a man * and conforted me, sayynge. O thou man so well be-loued, feare not: be cōtent, take a good hert vnto the, and be stronge. So when he had spoken vnto me, I recovered, and sayde.
Speake on my Lord, for thou hast refreshed me. Then sayd he: knowest thou wherfore I am come vnto the: nowe wyl I go agayne to fyght wyth the prince of the Perses. As soone as I go forth, lo, the prince of Greke-lande shall come. Neuertheles, I wyl shewe the the visyō, that is fast noted in the scripture of truth. And as for all ponder matters, there is none that helpeth me in the, but An-thel poure prynce.

The .xi. Chapter.

A prophete of the kynges of Persia. Of the kyngdome of Grece. Of the kyngdome of Egypte, and of the bonde therof, and of the battell wyth the kyngdome of Syria. Of the Jewes that fye vnto the kyngdome of Egypte, whom Antiochus the kyng of Syria per-secuteth, whych feygureth vnto vs Antychrist. The vyde of Antiochus.

And in the fyrst yere of Darius of Media, I stode by hym, to cō-forte him, and to strenghten hym, & nowe wyl I shewe the the truth.
Beholde, there shall stande vp yet thre kynges in Persia, but the fourth shalbe farre rycher then they all. And when he is in the cheffest power of hys ryches, he shall prouoke euery man agaynst the realme of Grekelande. * Then shall there arys yet a myghtye kyng, that shall rule wyth greates dominion, and do what hym lyst. *
And as soone as hys kyngdome cometh vp, it shalbe destroyed, and deuyded towarde the foure wyndes of the heauen. They that come after hym, shall not haue soche power & dominyon as he: but hys kyngdome shalbe scattered, yee, euen amonge other then those.

And the kyng of the south shalbe myghtyer, then his other prynces. And one shall be stroger then he, & shall rule hys dominyon wyth greates power.

And in the ende of yeaeres they shalbe loyned together, and the kynges daughter of the southe shall come to the kyng of the north, for to make frendshyppe, but she shall not op-tayne the power of that arme, nether shall she be able to endure thozowe his myght: but she, and soch as brought her (pee and he that begat her, and comforted her for hys tyme) shalbe deliuered by. Out of the bzaunches of her rote, there shall one stande vp in hys steade: whych wyth power of armes shall go thozowe the kynges lande of the north, and handle hym accordynge to hys strenght. As for their Idols and prynces, with their costly Jewels of golde and syluer, he shall cary the awaye captiues into Egypte, and he shall reigne more yeaeres then the kyng of the north. And when he is come into the kynges realme of the south, he shalbe slayne to turne agayne into hys awne lande. Wherefore hys sonnes shalbe displeased, & shall gather together a myghtye greates host of people: and one of them shall come, and go thozowe lyke a water floude: then shall he returne, and go forth with despyng and boastynge vnto hys awne lande.

Then the kyng of the south shalbe angry and shall come forth to fight agaynst the kyng of the north: yee, he shall bypunge a greates multitude of people together, and a greates heape shalbe geuen into his hāde: these shall he cary awaye wyth greates pryde, for so moche as he hath cast downe so many thousādes, neuertheles, he shall not preuaile.
For the kyng of the north shall gather (of the new) a greates heape of people then afore, and come forth (after a certayne tyme & yeaeres) wyth a myghtye hoste and exca-dynge greates good.

At the same tyme there shall many stande vp agaynst the kyng of the south, so that the wycked chyldren of thy people also shall exalte them selues (to fulfill the visyō) & then fall. So the kyng of the north shall come to laye sege, and to take the strong fenced cyties:
And the power of the of the south shall not be able to abyde him, and the best men of the people shall not be so strong, as to resyst hym.
Shortly, when he cometh, he shall hāde hym as he lyst, & no man shalbe so hardy as to stande agaynst hym. He shall stande in the pleasunt cōtre, whych thozowe him shal-be destroyed: He shall set hys face wyth all hys power to optayne hys kyngdom, and to be lyke it. Yee, that shall he do, and geue him vnto the daughters amonge women, to de-stroye hym. But he shall fayle, nether shall he optayne hys purpose. After thys shall he

The first Chapter.

The tyme wherein Iſeas diſſpbed. Iſeas becamage an harlot to his wife, ſignifieth the Ado-latrie of the people. The deſtruction of the offſprings of Iſrahel, & of the Hieruſalymes, is prophesied.

This is the worde of the Loꝝ de, that came vnto Oseas the sonne of Beery * in the dayes of Oseas, Ioathan, Ahas and Iezekias kynges of Iuda: and in the tyme of Acroboā sonne of Ioas kin-ge of Israel.

If yett, when the Lorde spake vnto Moys he sayde vnto hym. * So thy waye, take an harlott to thy wyfe, and get chyldren by her: for the lande hath comytted greafe whoredome agaynst the Lorde. So he wen-te, & toke Somer the daughter of Deblaim:
 whych conceaued, and brought forth a sonne. And the Lorde sayde vnto hym: call hys name Iesrael, for * I wyll shortly auenge the bloude of Iesrael vpon the house of Jehu, & wyll bypunge the kyngdome of the house of Israel to an ende. Then wyll I breake the bowe of Israel, in the valley of Iesrael.

She concealed yet agayne, and bare a daughter. And he sayde vnto hym. Call her name. Lozhamah (that is, not obtaininge mercy) * for I wyl haue no pytie vpon the house of Israel, but forget them, and put the cleane out of remembrance. * Neuerthelesse, I wyl haue mercy vpon the house of Iuda, and wyl saue the, euen thowowe the Lord thy God. But I wyl not deliuer them thowowe eny bowe, swerde, basset, bowes, or bowmen.

Nowe, whē he had weaned Lozuchamah, the concealed agayne, and bare a sonne.
Then sayde he: call hys name, Loamp. For why? ye are not my people, therfore will not I be your God. And though the nombze of the chyldzen of Israel be as the sande of the see, whych can nether be measured nec tolde: yet in the place where it is sayde vnto the
* ye be not my people: euen there shall it be thus reported of them * they be the chyldzen of the lpyngge God. * Then shall the chyldze of Iuda and the chyldzen of Israel be gathered together agayne and chose them selues for greate shall be the daye of Israel.

¶ The.ij. Chapter.

to be eny people, vnto that same tyme. Then shall thy people be deliuered, yee, all those þe founde wyrtten in the boke. * And any of them that slepe in the dust of the earth, shall awake: some to the everlastynge lyfe, some to perpetuall shame & reproche. * The wyse (such as haue taught other) shall glorye, as the wyngynge of heauen: and those þe haue instructed the multitude vnto godlynesse, shalbe as þe starres, wozlde without ende.

And thou O Daniel, shut vp these woꝝdes, and seale the booke tyll the last time. Na-ny shall go aboute here and there, and then shall knowledge increase. So J Daniel loked, & beholde, there stode ^{as it were} other two: one vpon thys shoꝛe of the water, the other vpon pondeꝛ syde. And one of the sayd vnto hym, which was clothed in linnen and stode aboute vpon the waters of the floude.
How longe shall it be to the ende of these wo-derous woꝝkes?

* Then herde I the man wpth the lyncen clothes, which stode aboue vpon the waters of the floude: whē he helde vp hy^r rpyght and left hande vnto heauen, and swate vp hym whych lynceth for ever * that it shall tary for a tyme, two tymes and halfe a tyme: & whē the power of the holy people is clene scatred abroad, then shall all these thynges be fulfilled.

I herde it well, but I vnderstode it not.
 ¶ Then sayde I: O my Lord, what shall hap= pen after that? He answered: So thy waye Daniel, for these wordes shall be cloied vp & sealed, tyll the last tyme: and many shall be pu= rified, clenfed & tryed. ^{as it were in fire} But the vngodly shall lyue wpyckedly * and tho= se wicked (as many of them as they be) shall haue no vnderftādyng. As for such as haue

See some of those which haue vnderstandyng shall be persecuted also, that they may be tryed, purifyed and clenched, tyll the tyme be out: for there is yet another time appoyntted. The kynge shall do what hym lyst * he shall exalte and magnifye him selfe agaynst all that is God. Yee, he shall speake maruelous thinges agaynst the God of all goddes wherin he shall prospere, so longe tyll the uisid already. he shall not regarde the God of hys fathers, but his lust shall be vpo wome.

Yee, he shall not care for any God, for he shall magnifye him selfe aboue all. In hys place shall he worshype the myghtie stoute God:
and the God whom his fathers knewe not,
shall he honour with golde and syluer, with precious stones and vpleasaunt Jewels.

¶ And he shall be do, thozowe hys ströge fen-sed places, settinge vpe hys straunge God whom he confessith and encreasinge his glory. Soche as will receaue hym, & take hym for God, he shall geue the greate worshyppe and power. yee, and make the Lordes of the multitude, and geue them the lande with rewardes. In the latter tyme shall the kynge of the south stryue wyth him: and the kynge of the north in lyke maner shall come against him with charettes, horshemen and w^a greate nauy of shippes. he shall come into the landes, destroye and go thozowe: he shall entre also into the fayre pleasaunt lāde: Many cy-ties and countres shall decaye. * excepte Edō, Moab and the best of the chyldren of Ammon, whych shall escape from hys hande. he shall stretch forth his handes vpon the coun-trees, & the lande of Egypte shall not escape hym. foz thozowe his gopnge in, he shall haue dominion ouer the treasures of syluer and golde, and ouer all the precious Jewels of Egypt, Libia and Ethiopia. * Neuerthelesse, the tydynge out of the East and the north shall trouble him, for the whych cause he shall goo forth to destroye and rote owte a greate multitude. The tentes of hys palace shall be pytched betwyxe the two sees, vpon the hyll of the noble Sanctuary, foz he shall come to his dethe, * and then shall no

The prophete

* Jer. vi. a. her, and reprove her * for she is not my wyfe, nether am I her husbunde, onlesse she put away her whoredome out of my syght, & her aduoutry fro her brestes. If no I shall strypp her naked, & sett her * euen as she came in to the world: yee, I shall laye her waste, & make her lyke a wyldernesse, & slaye her for thyeste. I shall haue no pite also vpon her chylde * for they be the chyldezen of fornicacyon. Their mother hath brokē her wedlocke, and she that bare the * is come to confusyon. For she sayd: I will go after my louers, & geue me my water and my bread, my woll & flaxe, my oyle and my dyrtyche. But I will hedge her waye with thornes, and stoppe it, that she shall not fynde her footstepes: and though she runne after her louers, yet shall she not get them: she shall seeke them, but not fynde them. * Then shall she saye: well, I will go turne againe to my fyrst housbade, for at y tyme was I better at ease, the now. But this wolde she not knowe, where as I yet gaue her corne, wyne, oyle, syluer & gold * whych she hath hanged vpon Baal.

* Jer. vi. b. Wherefore, & now will I go take my corne and wyne agayne in their season, and set a gayne my woll & my flaxe, whych I gaue her, to couer her shame. * And now will I discouer her foolysheesse, euen in the syght of her louers, & no man shall deliuer her out of my handes. & moreover, I will take awaye all her myrth * her holy dayes, her newmoones, her Sabbathes and all her sollepne feastes: I will destroye her vineyardes & figg trees, though she sayeth: lo, here are my rewardes, that my louers haue geuen me. I will make it a wodde, and wyld beestes shall eate it vp. I will punyssh her also for y dayes of Baal * wherein she censd hym, deckyng hym wpyth her carnynges & cheynes: whē the folowed her louers, and forgot me, sayeth the Lorde.

* Jer. vi. c. Wherefore beholde, I will call her agayne bringe her into a wyldernesse, & speake freedly vnto her: there will I geue her her vyntardes agayne, yee & the * valley of Achor also to thewe her hope and comforte. Then shall she syng there * as in the tyme of her yowthe, and lyke as in the daye when she came out of the lade of Egypte. Then (sayeth y Lorde she shall saye vnto me) O my housbunde, & shall call me nomore Baal: for I will take awaye those names of Baal fro her mouth, yee, she shall neuer remēbre their names eny more. * The wyll I make a couenaut with them, with the wyld beastes, with the foules of the ayre, and wpyth euery thyng that crepeth vpon the earth.

* Jer. vi. d. * As for howe, swerde and battel, I will destroye loch out of the lande, & wyll make the to slepe safely. * Thus wyll I mary the vnto myne awne selfe for euermore: yee, eue to my selfe wyll I mary y, in ryghteousnesse, in equite, in lounge kyndnesse and mercy. In sayth also wyll I mary the vnto my selfe, and thou shalt knowe the Lorde. At the same tyme wyll I thewe my selfe frendly & gracious vnto the heuens, sayeth the Lorde: and the heauens shall helpe the earth and the earth shall helpe the corne, wyne and oyle, & they shall helpe Iserael. * I wyll sowe them vpon earth, for a seide to myne awne selfe, & wyll haue mercy vpon her, that was without mercy. And to them whych were not my people, I wyll saye: thou art my people and he shall saye: thou art my God.

The. iij. Chapter.

Of the loue of God towards the people.

Ihen sayde the Lorde to me: * Go yet thy waye & worke an aduouterous womā, whō thy neyghboure loueth, as the Lorde doth the chylde of Iserael: how be it they haue respecte to straunge goddes, & loue the wyne kannes. * So I gat her for. r. v. siluerlynges, and for an homer & an halfe of barley, & sayde vnto her: Thou shalt lyde with me a lōge season, but se that thou playest not the harlot, & loke y medle w none other mā, & then will I kepe my selfe for the.

* Thus the chyldezen of Iserael shall syt a great while without kyng and prince, without offering and aulter, without preste & reuelacyon. But afterwarde shall the chylde of Iserael conuerse, and seke the Lorde theyr God, and * Dauid theyr kyng: & in the latter dayes they shall worshyppe the Lorde, & bys lounge kyndnesse.

The. iij. Chapter.

A complaynte agaynst the people and the prestes of Iserael.

Care the worde of the Lorde, O ye chyldezen of Iserael. For the Lorde must punyssh, them that dwell in the lande. And why? There is no trewthe, there is no mercie, there is no knowledge of God in the lande: but swearing, lyge, manslaughter: theft & aduoutry haue gottē the ouerhande, and one bloudgyllnesse foloweth another. Therefore shall the land be in a miserable case, and all they that dwell therein, shall be roted out. The beastes in the felde, the foules in the ayre, & the fpythes in y see shall dye. Yet is there none, y wyll chaste nor reprove another. * For thy people rebuketh the prestes, whych shulde reforme other men.

Therefore stonblest thou in the daye tyme & the prophet w the in y nyght. I wyll bring thy mother to sylce, and why? * my people perishe, because they haue no knowledge. Seinge then y thou hast refused vnderstanding, therefore wyll I refuse the also: so that thou shalt nomore be my preste. And for so moche as thou hast forgottē y lawe of thy God, I wyll

Of Deas.

Jo. cr. vi.

wyll also forget thy chylde. The more they increased in the multitude, y more they synned agaynst me, therefore wyll I charge theyr honoure into shame. * They eate vp the synners of my people, and corage them in theyr wickednesse. * Thus the preste is become lyke the people. Wherefore I wyll punyssh them for their wicked wayes, and rewarde the acordyng to their awne ymaginacyons. * They shall eate, & not haue ynough. They haue vnd whoredome, therefore shall they not prosper: and why? they haue forsaken the Lorde and not regarded hym.

Whoredome, wyne & dronkenesse taketh the herte awaye. * My people aske counsell at their stockes, their staffe must tell the. For an whorpe the mynde hath delcyeued them so that they committe fornicacion agaynst theyr God. * They make sacrificys vpon the hye mountaynes, & burne their incense vpon the hilles, yee, amōg the okes, grones & bushes, for there are good shadowes. Therefore, poure daughters are become harlottes, and poure spouses haue brokē theyr wedlocke. I wyll not punyssh poure daughters for beinge deyled, & poure bydes y became whores: * seynge the fathers the selues haue medled w harlottes, & offered w vntyfftes: but the people y wyll not vnderstāde must be punyshed.

Though thou Iserael art disposed to playe the harlot, yet shuldest not thou haue offended, O Iuda: thou shuldest not haue runne to Gilgal * ner haue gone vp to Bethauen, * ner haue sworne, the Lordyngth. For Iserael is gone backe lyke a wanton cowe. The Lorde therefore shall make her fede, as the lambe that goeth astraye. And where as Ephraim is become partaker of Idols, wel, let him go. Their dronkennes hath put the backe, & brought them to whoredome. Their rulers loue rewardes, bringe, (saye they) to their awne shame. A wynde shall take holde of theyr fetters, and they shall be confounded in theyr offerynges.

The. v. Chapter.

Agaynst the prestes and rulers of Iserael.

O ye prestes: heare this, take hede, O y householde of Iserael: geue care, O thou kyngly house, for it wer poure parte to se Judgement done, but you are become a snare vnto Myzphab, and a spred net vnto the mount of Chabor. They shall sacrifices by heapes, And turne farre fro the Lorde, & I haue bene a rebuker of the all. * I know Ephraim well ynough, & Iserael is not hyd from me: for Ephraim is become an harlot: & Iserael is deyled. They are not mynded to turne vnto their God, for they haue an whorpe bet, so that they cannot knowe y Lord. * But the wynde of Iserael will be rewarde him in hys face, yee, both Iserael & Ephraim shall fall for theyr wickednesse, and Iuda w the also. * They shall come with their shepe and bullockes: to seke the Lorde, but they shall not fynde him, for he is gone from the. As for the Lorde, they haue refused him, and brought by bastarde chylde: a moneth therefore shall deuoure them with their porcyss, blowe with the shawmes at Sibeā, and w the trompet in Ramah, crye out at Bethaue vpon the pōlyde of Ben Jamin. In the tyme of the plage shall Ephraim be layed waste, therefore byd I saythfully warne the trybes of Iserael. Yet are the princes of Iuda become lyke them * that remoue the landemarches, therefore wyll I poure out my wrath vpon the lyke water. Ephraim is oppressed, & can haue no right of the lawe: for why? they folowe the doctrynes of vngodly men. Therefore will I be vnto Ephraim as a moth, and to the house of Iuda as a caterpyller.

When Ephraim sawe hys sycknesse, and Iuda hys dysease, * Ephraim wente vnto Assur, and sent vnto kyng Iareb: yet coulde not be helpe you, ner ease you of your payne. I am vnto Ephraim as a lyon, and as a lyons whelp to y house of Iuda. Euen, I will spoyle them, & go my waye. I wyll take the wyth me, and no man shall rescue the. I will go, and returne to my place, tyll they knowe ledge that they haue synned and seke me.

The. vi. Chapter.

A syncepon causeth a man to returne to God. The wickednes of the prestes.

In theyr aduersite they shall crye seke me, & saye: come, let vs turne agayne to the Lorde: * for he hath syncten vs, and he shall heale vs: he hath wounded vs, and he shall bynde vs vp agayne: after two dayes shall he quyen vs, in the thyrde daye he shall rayse vs vp, so that we shall lyue in hys syght. Then shall we haue vnderstanding, & endeouore oure selues to knowe the Lorde. He shall go forth as the spyng of the dape, & come vnto vs * as the enenynge and moynynge rayne vpon the earth.

O Ephraim, what shall I do vnto the? O Iuda, howe shall I intreate the? seynge poure lone is lyke a moynynge cloude, & lyke a dewe y goeth early awaye. Therefore haue I cut downe the prophetes, and let the be slayne for my wordes sake: so that thy punishment shall come to lyght. * For I haue pleasure in lounge kyndnesse: & not in offeryng: yee, in the knowledge of God, more the in burnt sacrificie. But eue lyke as * Ada byd, so haue they broken my couenaut, and let me as naught. * Gilead is a cite of wicked doers of malycyous people & bloudshedders. And as theues armed wayte for him that passeth by the waye: such is the counsell of the prestes whych with one agreed couell murder euerye suche as kepe the waye: yee they dare do all vnpleasable myschete. * Moysesble * Jer. vi. d. y thynge thynges haue I sene in the house of Israel, there playeth Ephraim the harlot, & Israel is despyled: yee and thou Juda hepest an har- nest for thy selfe, when I retorne the capti- uitie of my people.

The vij. Chapter.

Of the byres and wantonnes of the people.

When I undertake to make Israel who- le, then I vngaciousnesse of Ephraim and the wyckednes of Samaria com- meth to lpyght: then go they aboute w lyes: therfore I theafe robbereth within: & about the spoyler destroyeth. They cōsidre not in their hertes that I remembre all their wickednes. Nowe ther awne inuentys haue beset the whych, I se well ynough. * They make the kyng and the prynces, to haue pleasure in the wyckednes and lyes. All these burne in aduoutry, as it were an ouen that the ba- ker heateth, when he hath left kneadynge, tll the dowe be leuended. Euen so goeth it this daye with oure kynges and prynces, for they begynne to be waddre dionck thezowe wyne: they vse familiarite with such as vil- ceau them. They with the ymaginacyon of their herte are lyke an ouen, their slepe is all pnyght lyke the slepe of a baker, in the mo- nyng is he as hote as the flame of fyre: they are all together as hote as an ouen.

They haue deuoured their awne iudges, all they kynges are fallen: yet is there none of the p calleth vpon me. * Therfore must Ephraim be myrte amonge the heathen: Ephraim is become lyke a cake, & nomā tur- neth, straungers haue deuoured his strength, yet he regardeth it not: he waxeth full of gray heares, yet wyl he not knowe it * and ppyde of Israel is cast downe before they face, yet wyl they not turne to y Lord they God, ner seke hym for all thys.

Ephraim is lyke a doue, that is beggled, and hath no herte. * Now call they vpo the Egyptians, now go they to the Assyri- as: but while they begynge here and there, I shall sprede my net ouer them, & drawe the downe as the foules of the ayre: & accordyng as they haue bene warned, so will I punishe the. * Wo be vnto them, for they haue forsa- ken me. They must be destroyed, for they ha- ue set me at naught, * I am he that haue re- demed the, and yet they dissemble wth me.

They call not vpon me with they hertes, but ye houlpyng vpon they beddes. Where as they come together, it is but for meate & dypnke, and me will they not obeie. I haue taught them, and defended they arme, yet do they ymagin my chere against me. They turne the selues, but not to the most hyest, & are become as a broken bowe. Their prynces shalbe slayne with the swearde, for the mal- ce of they tungen, soche scoornes shal they haue in the lande of Egypt.

The viij. Chapter.

Of the destruction of Iuda and Israel, because of theyr ydolatre.

Set the hozne to thy mouth, and blo- we: swyftly (as an eagle) shall the enemy come against the house of the Lorde: for they haue broke my * couenast, & trasgressed my lawe. Israel shulde haue say- de vnto me: Part my God, we knowe p: but he hath refused the thyng p is good, therfore shall the enemy folowe vpo hym. * They ha- ue ordened kynges, but not thozow me: they haue made prynces, & I must not knowe of it. * Of their syluer & golde haue they made them Images, to byryng them selues to de- struccyon. * They call, O Samaria, shalbe taken awaye, for my wrothfull indignacyō is gone forth agaynst the. Howe longe will it be, or they can be clesed. For the calfe came fro Israel, the worke man made it, therfore ca it be no God, but eue i peaces shal p calfe of Samaria be broke. * They haue for- ne wynde, therfore shal they reape a storme.

Their sede shal beare no corne, there shal no meale be made of they: increafe: though they reape, yet shal straungers deuoure it vp. Israel shal perishe, the Gētilles shal intrea- te him as a foule vessel. Sence they wēt vpo to the Assyriās, they are become lyke a wyl- de asse in the deserte.

* Ephraim geueth rewardes to get louers and though they hyze them amonge the he- then, yet now wyl I gather the vp. They shal begynne to be weeryed wth the bur- then of kynges and prynces. Ephraim hath made many aulters to do wyckednes, hys aulters (I saye) he had to his sinne. Though I thewe the my lawe neuer so moch, they co- unte it but strafige doctryne. Where as they do sacrifice, offerynge the fleshe and eatinge it: the Lorde wyl haue no pleasure therein: but wyl remembre theyr wickednes, & pu- nishe their synnes. * Israel turneth agayne into Egypt, they haue forgotten him y made them, they buylde sayre palaces, and Juda maketh many stronge cyties: * therfore will I sende a fyre into they cyties, and it shal consume their places.

The ix. Chapter.

Of the hunger and captiuitie of Israel.

Do not thou triumphe, O Is- rael, make no boastyng ouer thy opoultre thynges as do the hea- then, for thou hast commytted ad- uoutry agaynst thy God: whoz the rewar- des hast thou loued, more then all the corne- flozes. * Therfore shal they nomore enioye the corne flozes and wyne pressess, and they swete wyne shal slepe them. They will not dwell in the Lordes lande * but Ephraim turneth agayne into Egypte, and eateth vn- cleane thynges amonge the Assyriās: they poure out no wyne for a dyncloffring vnto the Lorde the Lorde, nether geue they hym their slayne offrynges: but they be vnto them as mour- ners meates, wherin all they that eate the, are despyled. For p bread that they haue soch lust vnto, shal not come into the house of the Lorde. * What wyl ye do then in the so- lempne dayes, and in the feast of the Lorde? Lo, they shal get the awaye for the destruc- cyon: Egypt shal receaue them, and Noph shal bury them.

The nettles shal ouergrowe they plea- saunt goodes, and burres shalbe in their ta- bernacles. * Ye ye sure (O Israel) the tyme of visitacyon is come, the dayes of recompen- syng are at hande. And then shal Israell knowe that they were deceyued by a pro- phete folyshe mad, and in a fransey: for the multitude of thyne iniquitye God shal mul- tiplie enemyes agaynst the. Ephraim hath made him self a watchmā of my God, a pro- phete p is become a snare to do hurte in euery strete, and abhominacyon in the house of his God. They be gone to farre, & haue destro- ped them selues, lyke as they dypd afore tyme * at Sabaa therfore they wyckednes shal- be remembred, and their synnes punyshed.

I founde Israell lyke grapes in the wyl- dernes, and saue their fathers as the fyrst * fygges in the toppe of the fygge tre. * But they are gone to Baal Deor, & runne awaye fro me to y shamefull Idoll & are become as abhominable as their louers. * Ephraim flyeth lyke a byrde, so shal their glozy also: In so moch, that they shal nether begette, coceau ner beare chyliden. And though they byryng vpony, yet will I make them chyl- deles amoge men. Yee, wo shal come to the, when I depart from them. * Ephraim (as me thynke) is plāted in welthynges, lyke as Cyprus, but now must the byryng her a wne chyliden forth to the manslayer.

O Lorde thou shalt geue the: what shalt thou geue them: geue them an vnfrutefull wombe & dnye brestes. All their wyckednes is done at * Gilgall, there do I abhorre the. For the vngaciousnes of their awne inu- cyons, I will dypue them out of my house. I will loue them nomore, for all their prynces are vnfaithfull. Ephraim is hewen downe, their rote is dyped vp, so p they shal byryng no more frute, yee, and though they byryng forth eny, yet will I slaye euen the best belo- ued frute of their body. My God shal cast them awaye, for they haue not bene obediēt vnto him, therfore shal they go astraye a- monge the heathen.

The x. Chapter.

Agaynst Israel and hys Idols.

Israil was a goodly * vyne, but he hath brought forth vnprofita- ble frute: yee, & more frute he had, the moaulters he made: the more good I dypd to their lande, the more frend- shype shewed they to their ymages. They herte is deuyded, therfore wyl they be de- stroyed. The Lorde shal breake downe their ymages, he shal destroye they aulters. Then shal they saye: we haue no kyng, for why? we haue not feared y Lord. And what shal then the kyng do to vs? They comen together, and sweare vayne othes: they be confederat together, therfore groweth their punishment, as the wedes in the forowes of the lande.

They that dwell in Samaria haue wor- shippd the calfe of Berhaue: therfore shal the people mourne ouer them, yee, & the pre- stes also, that in they welthyngesse reioyced wth them: and why: it shal passe awaye fro them. It shal be brought to the Assyrian, for a present vnto kyng Iarch. Ephraim shal receaue full punishment. Israel shalbe confounded for hys awne ymaginacyons, Samaria w his kyng shal vanythe awaye as the scomme in the water. * The hye places of Auen where Israel do synne, shal be cast downe: theysles and thoznes shal growe vpo they aulters. * Then shal they saye to the mountaynes: couer vs, and to the hylls: fall vpon vs.

O Israel, thou hast synned as * Sabaa dypd afore tyme, where they remayned: shuld not the batayll then come vpon the wycked chyliden, as well as vpon the Gabaonites? I wyl chasten them, euen after myne awne desyre, the people shalbe gathered together ouer them, when I punyche them for their great wyckednesse. Ephraim was vnto me, as a cowe p is vsd to go to plowe, therfore I lound hym, and fell vpon his sayre necke. I droue Ephraim, Juda plowed, and Ja- cob played y hulbade mā: Sowe vnto rygh- teousnes, and reape the frutes of welldoinge: plowe vp your frethe lande, for it is tyme to seake the Lorde tll he come and rayne righ- tuousnesse vpon you. But you haue plowed vngodlynes: ye haue reped iniquitye, you haue eaten the frute of lyes. Scynge thou puttest thy cōfydence in thyne awne wayes, and leanest to the multitude of thy wor- thynges: there shal growe a sedicyon amoge thy people. All thy strōge cyties shalbe layed waste, euen as Salmana was destroyed with his fampliers, thozowe him that was auenged of Arbell, in the daye of batayll, where the mother perisshed with her chyl- dzen. Euen so shal it go with you (O Be- thell) because of poure malicious wicked- nesse. Lyke as the mozynge goeth awaye, so shal the kyng of Israel passe.

The prophecye

The .xj. Chapter.

Agaynst the unkyndnesse of Israel.

When Israel was yonge, I loued him: * I called my sonne oute of the lade of Egypt. But y more they were called, y more they wete backe, * offeringe vnto Idols of Baal, & censynge Images. * I lerned Ephraim to go, & bare them in myne armes, but they regarded not me, y wolde haue helped them. I led the with cordes of frendshyppe, and with bandes of loue. I was euen he, y laped the pocke vpo their neckes. * I gaue their foder my self that they shulde not go agayne into Egypt. And now is Alur theyr kynge. For they wolde not turne vnto me. Therefore shall the swerde begynne in their cyties, the stoare y they haue laped vp, shalbe destroyed and eaten: and y because of their awne ymaginacions. And my people shal stonde in a doubte whether to tozne them, for when the prophetes called them to the most blest, not one yet wolde geue him his gloze.

What greute thynges haue I geuen the, O Ephraim: howe saythfully haue I defended the, O Israel: haue I dealt with the as with * Adama: or haue I intreated y lyke Schoim? No, my hert is other wise mynded. Pee, my mercy is so feruent: therfore haue I not turned me to destroye Ephraim in my wrothfull displeasure. For I am God and no man, I am euen that holy one in the midst of the, though I came not within the cytie.

The Lorde roareth lyke a lyon, that they maye folowe hym: pee, * as a lyon roareth he, y they maye be afrayed lyke the chyldren of the see: y they maye be scatred a waye from Egypt, as me scarre byrdes: & frayed a waye (as dones vnto be) fro the Assyrians lande: and that because I wolde haue them tarp at home, sayeth y Lorde. But Ephraim goeth aboute me with lyges, and y house of Israel dissembleth. Only Iuda holdeth hym with God, and with the true holy thynges.

The .xij. Chapter.

Agaynst the vayne trust of the people.

Ephraim is fed with ayze, and foloweth after y east winde: he is euer increasynge lyes and destruction. They be confederate with the Assyrians, * their oyle is carped into Egypt. The Lorde hath a courte to holde y Iuda, and wyl punyche Jacob. After their awne wayes and accordynge to theyr awne inuencions, shal be recopense the. * He toke his brother by the hele, whē he was yet in his mothers wombe: and in hys strength he wrestled with God. He * strowe with the angell, and gat the victorie: so y he prayde & desyred hym. * He founde him at Bethell, and there he talketh with vs.

Pee, the Lorde God of hostes, euen the Lorde him selfe remembred him: * He turne to thy God, kepe mercy and equite, & hope styll in thy God. But part lyke y maniche y hath a false weyght in his hande, he hath a pleasure to occuple extorcyō. Ephraim thinketh thus: * Cuth, I am rich, I haue good ynough: In all my worckes shal not one faulte be founde y I haue offended. Yet am I the Lorde thy God, eue as when I brought the out of the lande of Egypt, and sett y in thy tentes, and as in the tye feastes dayes.

I haue spoken thozowe the prophetes, & shewed diuerse visyōs and declared my selfe by the ministracion of the prophetes. But at Gilaad is y abhominacyō, they are fallen to vanyte. At Gilgal they haue slayne oxen: as many heapes of stoness as they had in theyr lade forowes, so many alters haue they made. * Jacob fled ito y lade of Siria, & Israel serued for a wife, & for a wife he kepte thepe.

By a prophete y Lorde brought them out of Egypt, and by a prophet he preserued the. But Ephraim hath poked him to displeasure thozowe his abhominacions, therfore shal his bloude be poured vpo him selfe, and the Lorde hys God shal rewarde hym hys blasphemys.

The .xiii. Chapter.

Of the abhominacion of Israel.

When Ephraim spake, the betten tumbled: and he was exalted amōge the Israelytes, but he is gone backe to Baal, therfore must he dye. And now they synne more and more: * of their spluer, they make the molten ymages, after the ymaginacions of ther awne braynes yis. very ydols, and yet all is nothinge but the worke of the craftesman: Not withstandinge they preache of y same to such as there sacrificeth: who so will kylle y calves, offereth perfectlye. Therefore, they shalbe as y morninge cloude, and as the dewe that early passeth a waye and lyke as dust that y whoyle wynde taketh awaye, fro the floze, and as smoke that goeth out of the chymney.

I am the Lorde God, which brought the out of the lande of Egypt: that thou shuldest knowe no God but me onely, and that thou shuldest haue * no Sauoure but only me. I toke diligent hede of the in the wyldernes y dyde lande. But when they were well fedde and had ynough, they waxed proude, & forgot me: therfore will I be vnto the as a lyd and as a leoparde in y waye to y Assyrians. I will come vpon the as the beare, y is robbed of her whelpes, & I will breake y subburne herte of theirs. There will I deuoure the as a lyon: pee: y wyld beasts shal teare the.

* O Israel, thine iniquite hath destroyed y but in me only is thy helpe. Where are thy kynge now, that shulde helpe the in all thy cyties? Pee, and thy iudges, of whom thou saydest:

Of Joel.

Jo. cxviii.

saydest: * geue me a kynge and princes: well, I gaue the a kynge in my wrauth, and in my displeasure will I take hym fro the agayne. The wychednesse of Ephraim is bounde together, and hys synne lyeth hyd: Therefore, shall sorowes come vpon hym, as vpon a woman that trausyleth. An vndiscrete sonne is he, for he conspydeth not, that he shulde not haue bene able to haue endured in the tyme of hys byrth, had not I defended hym from the graue, and deliuered hym from death.

* O death, I will be thy death: O hell, I wyl be thy kynge. Yet can I se no comfote, for when he is nowe the goodlyest amonge the blyth, the east wynde (euen the wynde of the Lorde) shal come downe fro the wilderness, and dye vphys cōduptes, & dyncke vphys welles: he shal spoyle the treasure of all pleasaunt vessels.

As for Samaria, they shalbe made waste, and why: they are dyobedient vnto theyr God. They shal perthe with the swerde, theyr chyldren shalbe slayne, and their wemē greut with chyldre shalbe epte vp.

The .xiiii. Chapter.

The destruction of Samaria.

Israel, * turne the nowe, vnto y Lorde thy God, & for y hast taken a greute fall thozowe thy wickednes. Take these wordes with you, when ye turne to the Lorde, and saye vnto hym: O, forgeue vs all oure synnes, receaue vs graciously, * & then wyl we offe the bullockes of oure lyppes vnto the: Alur shalbe nomore oure helpet, neither will we ryde vpon horses eny more. As for the worckes of oure handes, we wyl nomore call vpon them: For it is thou that art oure God, thou shewest euer mercy vnto y fatherlesse.

O (yf they wolde do this) I shulde heale theyr sores: pee, with all my herte wolde I loue them: so that my wrauth shulde cleane be turned awaye from them. Pee, I wolde be vnto Israel as the dewe, and he shulde growe as the lylic, and hys rote shulde breake out as Libanus. His braunches shulde sprede out abroad and be as fayre as the olyue tre and smell as Libanus. They that dwell vnder hys shadowe, shulde come agayne, and growe vpon the corne, & flozpe as the vyne he shulde haue as good a name, as the wyne of Libanus.

O Ephraim, what haue I to do wpyth Idols eny more? I wyl graciously heare hym, and lede hym forth. I wyl be vnto the as a grene fyre tre, vpo me shal thou synde thy frute. * Who so is wise, shal vnderstand thys: and he that is ryght entricte, wyl regarde it. * For the wayes of the Lorde are ryghteous, soch as be Godly wyl walke in them. As for the wyched, they wyl stumbe therein.

The ende of the prophecye of Oseas.

The booke of Joel the prophete.

The fyrst Chapter.

A prophecye agaynst the Jewes. He exhorteth the prestes to praye and fastynge for the wycked that was commynge at hande.

Jhs is the worde of y Lorde, that came vnto Joel the sonne of Phathuel. Heare, O yee elders: pondre this well, all ye that dwell in the lande: yf euer there happened soch a thinge in yore dayes, or in the dayes of yore fathers. Tell yore chyldren of it, and lett them shewe it vnto their chyldren, and so they to certifie theyr posterite therof. Loke what the caterpyller hath lefte, that hath the greshoper cate vp: what the greshoper lefte, that hath the locuste cate vp: and what the locuste hath lefte, that hath the blasynge consumed. Wake vp ye dronckardes, and wepe: mourne all ye wyne suppers, because of yore swete wyne, for it shal be taken a waye fro yore mouth. Pee, a myghtye and an innumerable people shal come vp into my lande: these haue teeth lyke the teeth of lyons, and chaffbones lyke the lyonesse. * They shal make my vyne-arde waste, they shal pylle of the darckes of my pyggetrees, strype them bare, cate the awaye, and make the braunches whyte.

Wake thy moone as a vyrgyn doth that gyrdeth her selfe with sacke, because of her byrde grome. For the meate and dynckoffringe shalbe taken awaye from the house of the Lorde, and the prestes the Lordes minystrers shal mourne. The felde shalbe wasted, the lande shalbe in a myserable case: for the corne shalbe destroyed, the swete wyne shal come to confusyon, and the oyle vnterly defolate. The housbandmen and the wyne gardeners shal loke pfeonally and make laime: facyon, for the wheate, wyne and barley, and because the haruest vpon the felde is so clene destroyed. The grapegatherers shal make greute mone, when the vyneyarde and pyggetrees be so vnterly wasted. Pee, all the pyggetrees, palmertrees, apertrees, & the other trees trees of the felde shall wether awaye. Thus the mery cheare of the chyldren of men, shall come to confusyon.

Spyde you, and make poure mone, O ye prestes, moune ye minystris of the auter: god your waye in, and slepe in sack cloth, O ye officers of my God: for the meat & drinke-offeringe shall be taken awaye fro the house of poure God. Proclayne a fastinge, call the congregacyon, gather the elders * and all the inhabitours of the lande together into the house of the Lorde your God, and crye vnto the Lorde: alas, alas for this daye. And why? the daye of the Lorde is at hande, and cometh as a destroyer from the almyghyte. Shall not the meates be taken awaye before oure eyes, & the myrrh also and ioye from the house of our God? The seide shall perishe in the grounde, the garners shall lye waste, the flores shall be broken downe, for the corne shall be destroyed. What a syghynge make the kyne / the bullockes are very euell lpyng, because they haue no pasture: and the shepe are famished awaye.

The Lorde, to the wyll I crye: for the fyre hath consumed the goodly pastures of the wyldernes, and the flame hath bzent vp all the trees of the felde. Yee, the wyld beastes crye also vnto the: for the water riuers are dyed vp, and the fyre hath consumed the pastures of the wyldernesse.

The. ij. Chapter.

He propheseth the commynge and crueltie of the enemyes. An exhortacyon to moue them to conuert.

And crye vpon my holy hyll, that all soche as dwell in the lande, maye tremble at it: * for the daye of the Lorde cometh, and is harde at hande: a darcke daye, a gloomyng daye, a cloudy daye, yee, and a stormy daye, lyke as the morninge spredeth out vpon the hylls. Namely, a greate and myghty people: soch as haue not bene sence the beginninge, neither shall be after them for evermore. Before him shall be a consumynge fyre, and behynde him a burninge flame. The lande shall be as a garden of pleasure before him, but behynde him shall it be a very waste wyldernesse, and there is no man, that shall escape hym: They are to lye vpon lyke barbed horses, & runne lyke horsmen. They skippe vp vpon the hylls, as it were the sounde of charrettes: as the flame of fyre that consumeth the strawe, and as a myghty people redy to the batayll.

The folke shall be afrayed of hym, all faces shall be as blacke as a pot: These shall runne lyke gyauntes, and leape ouer the walles shall kepe hym araye, and not gon out of hym path. There shall not one dyscuse another, but eche shall kepe his awne waye. They shall breake in at the wyndowes, & not be hurte: They shall come into the cyttie, & runne vpon the walles. They shall clyme vp vpon the houses, and sylpe in at the wyndowes lyke a thefe. The earth shall quake before hym, yee, the heuens shall be moued. * The sunne & the moone shall be darchened, and the starres shall withdraue theyr shynne. The Lorde shall shewe hymself before hymself, for his hooft is grete, stronge, and myghty to fulfyll hymself commaundement. This is that greate and maruelous fearfull daye of the Lorde. * And who is able to abyde it?

Howe thefore sayeth the Lorde. * Turne you vnto me with all your hertes, with fastinge, wepyng and mournynge, rete your hertes, and not poure clothes. Turne you vnto the Lorde your God, * for he is gracious and mercyfull, longe sufferynge and of great compassyon: and redy to pardon wickednes. Then (no doute) he also shall turne, and forgieue, and after his chastenynge, he shall lette your increase remayne, for meat and drinke-offrynges vnto the Lorde your God. * Blowe out with the troppette in Syon, proclayne a fastynge, call the congregacyon, and gather the people together: warne the congregacyon, gather the elders, bynng the chyldren & suckylnges together. Lett the bydegrome go forth of his chabze, and the byde out of her closet. Lett the prestes serue the Lorde he twyxt the porch and the auter, wepyng and sayynge: be fauourable, O Lorde, be fauourable vnto thy people: let not thyne heritage be brought to soch confusyon, lest the heathen be lordes therof. * Wherefore shulde they saye amonge the heathen: where is nowe the Lord God.

Then shall the Lorde be gelous ouer his lande, and spare hymself people: yee, the Lorde shall answer, and saye vnto his people: Beholde, I will sende you corne, wyne & oyle, so that ye shall haue plenty of them: and I will nomore geue you ouer to be a reprofe amonge the heathen. Agayne, as for him of the north, I shall dyscuse him farre from you: and shute him out into a drye & waste lande, his face toward the east see, and his hynder partes toward the west see. The synche of him shall go vp, and his fylthy corrupcyon shall fall vpon him selfe, because he hath dealt so proudly. Feare not (O lande) but be glad and reioyse, for the Lorde will do grete thynges. Be not ye afrayed nether (O ye beastes of the felde) for the pastures shall be grene, and the trees shall beare their frute: the fynggetrees and vynyardes shall geue theyr increase.

We glad then (O ye chyldren of Syon) be and reioyse in the Lorde your God, for he hath gauen you a teacher of ryghteousnesse: * he it is that shall sende you downe bouers of rayne, early and late in the fyrst moneth: so that the garners shall be full of corne, and the prestes plenteous in wyne and oyle. And as for the yeares that the gresshoper, locuste, blastynge, and caterpyller (my greate hooft, which I sent amonge you) haue eaten vp, I shall restore them to you agayne. so ye shall haue ynough to eate, & be satysfied: and prayse the name of the Lorde your God, that so maruelously hath deale with you.

And my people shall neuer be confounded any more. Ye shall well knowe, that I am in the myddest of Israell, and that I am your God: yee, and that there is none other, and my people shall no more be brought to confusyon.

After this, will I poure out my sprete vpon all flesh: and your sonnes and your daughters shall prophesy: your olde men shall dreame & dreames, and your yonge men shall se visyons, yee, in those dayes I will poure out my sprete vpon seruautes and maydens. I will shewe wonders in heauyn aboue and tokens in the earth beneth: bloude and fyre, and the vapoure of smoke. The sunne shall be turned into darckenes, and the moone into bloude: before the greate & notable daye of the Lorde come. And the tyme shall come, that * whosoener calleth on the name of the Lorde, shall be saued. For vpon the mounte Syon and at Ierusalem, there shall be a saluacyon, lyke as the Lorde hath promysed: yee, and amonge the other remnaunt, whom the Lorde shall call.

The. iij. Chapter.

Of the iudgement of God agaynst the enemyes of hym people.

Take hede: in those dayes and at the same tyme, when I turne agayne the captiuite of Iuda and Ierusalem: I shall gather all people together, and bynng them in the valley of Josaphat: and there will I reason with the: because of my people and heritage of Israell: who they haue scatered about in the nacjons: and parted my lade: yee, they haue cast lottes for my people, the ponge me haue they set in the bordel house, & solde the damselfs for wyne, that they myght haue to drynke. * Thou Tyrus and Sidon and all ye borders of the Philistines: what haue ye to do with me? Will ye despyse me? well, ye will neddes despyse me, I shall recompence you, euen vpon your heade, & p ryght worthely: for ye haue taken awaye my syluer and golde, my sayre and goodly Jewels, and brought the into your goddes houses. The chyldren also of Iuda and Ierusalem haue ye solde vnto the Gekes, & ye myght bynng them farre from the borders of their awne countrees.

Beholde thefore, I will rayne them out of the place, where ye haue solde them, * and will rewarde you euen vpon your head. Pour sonnes and your daughters will I sell thorowe the handes of the chyldren of Iuda, and so they shall geue them forth to sell, vnto the of Saba, a people of a farre countre: for the Lorde him selfe hath sayde it. Crye out these thynges amonge the Gentyles, proclayne warre, wake vp the gyauntes, let the drawe nye, let them come vp all the lusty warryours of the. * Make you sweardes of your plow-shares, and speares of your sylkes & sythes. Let the weake man saye: I am stronge. Strengthen you, & come, all ye heathen rounde about: gather you together, there shall the Lorde laye all thy gyauntes to the grounde. Lett the people arys, & get the to the valley of Josaphat for there will I set, & iudge all heathen rounde about. * Laye to your sythes, for the sheaf is ripe: come, get you downe: the wyne presse is full, yee, the wyne presses runne ouer, for their wickednes is waken greate.

In the valley appoynted, there shall be many, many people: for the daye of the Lorde is ripe in the valley appoynted. * The sunne & moone shall be darchened, & the starres shall withdraue their lycht. * The Lorde shall roare out of Syon, and crye out of Ierusalem, that the heuens and the earth shall quake withall. But the Lorde shall be a defence vnto hymself awne people, and a refuge for the chyldren of Israell. Thus shall ye knowe, that the Lorde your God dwell vpon my holy mounte of Syon. Then shall Ierusalem be holy, & there shall no straungers go thowowe her any more.

Then shall the mountaynes droye swete wyne, and the hylls shall flowe with mylke. All the ryuers of Iuda shall haue water ynough, and out of the Lordes house there shall flowe a spring, to water the broke of * Sittim: but Egypte shall be layed waste, * and Edom shall be desolate: because they haue deale so cruelly with the chyldren of Iuda, and shed innocent bloude in theyr lande. Agayne, Iuda shall be inhabited for evermore, & Ierusalem for generation to generation: for I will not leaue their bloude vnaucnged. And the Lorde shall dwell in Syon.

The ende of the prophecy of Joel.

The propherye The booke of the prophete Amos,

The fyrst Chapter.

The tyme of the prophery of Amos. The worde of the Lorde agaynst Arab, agaynst Tyre, agaynst Edom, and agaynst the sonnes of Ammon.

I wyll not spare them: because they cryt vp the weimen greatt wpyth chylde in Galaad, to make the borders of their landes the wyder. Therefore, I will kyndle a fyre in y wal-les of Rabbath, that shall consume her palaces: with a greate crye, in the daye of ba-tall, in tempest and in the daye of storme: so that their kyng shall go into captiuyte be-hys prynces together, sayeth the Lorde.

The ij. Chapter.

Agaynst Moab, Zuba, and Israel.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: For thre and a foure wyckednesses of * Moab, I wyll not spare hym: because he bzent the bones of the kyng of Edom to ashes. Therefore, wyll I sende a fyre into Moab, which shall consume the palaces of Cariath: so that Moab shall perishe with noyse and the sounde of a shawme. I wyll rote out the iudge from amonge them, & slaye all hys prynces with him, sayeth the Lorde. Thus sayeth the Lorde: for thre and foure wyckednesses of * Zuda, I wyll not spare him: because he hath cast a lyde flawe of the Lorde, and not kepte hys commaundementes: for why? * they wolde nedes be disceaued with the lyer that they: forsathers folowed. Therefore, will I sende a fyre into Zuda, which shall consume the palaces of Jerusalem.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: For thre and foure wyckednesses of Israel, I will not spare him because he hath solde the ryghteous for money, & the pooze for shoes. They treade vpon pooze mens heades, in the dust of the earth, & croke the wayes of the meke. The sonne and the father go to the harlot, to dishonoure my holp name, they lye belyde euery alter vpon clothes taken to pledge, and in the house of they: goddes they dryncke the wyne of the oppressed. Yet destroyed I the * Amoryte before them, that was as hye as the Cedre trees, and as stronge as the oaks: notwithstandynge I destroyed his frute from aboue and his rote from vnder.

* Agayne, I brought you out of y lande of Egypt, & led you fourty yeaeres thozowe the wilderness, that ye might haue the Amorites landes in possellio. I rayled vp prophetes amonge youre chylzen, and abstepners amonge youre yonge men. Is it not so, O ye chylzen of Israel, sayeth the Lorde? * But ye gaue y abstepners wyne to dryncke, & pee, ye commaunded the prophetes sayinge. Prophery not. Beholde, I will craue you in son-der, lyke as a wayne crasheth, that is full of sheaues: so that the swifte shall not escape neither the stronge be able to do eny thynge:
no, the gyaunte shall not saue his awne lyfe.
The archer shall not abyde, and the swifte of fote

of fote shall not escape. The horsman shall not saue his lyfe, and he that is as manly of stomack as a gyaunte, shall in that daye be sayne to runne his waye naked, sayeth the Lorde.

The iij. Chapter.

The reproche the house of Israel of wyckednes.

Take care, what the Lorde speaketh vnto you (O ye chylzen of Israel) namely, vnto all the trybes, who I brought out of Egypt, and sayde:
* you only haue I accepted fro all the generacions of the earth: therefore, will I viset you in all your wyckednesses. * Hape twayne walke together excepte they be agreed amonge them selues: * Doth a lyon roare in the wodde, except he haue a praye? * Cryeth a spone whelp out of his denne, excepte he haue gotten somthinge? * Doth a byrde fall in a snare vpon the earth where no fowler is?
* Taketh a ma his snare vpon the groude, afore he catche somwhat? * Crye they out Ala-lum with the tropet in the cytie, and y prople not afrayed? * Commeth there eny plage in a cytie without it be the Lordes doyng?
* Howe doth y Lorde God no maner of thin-ge, but he telleth his secrete before vnto hys seruautes the prophetes. When a lyon roareth, who wyll not be afrayed? * Seinge then the Lorde God him selfe speaketh, * who wyll not prophery?

Preach in the palaces at Asdod, and in y palaces of the lande of Egypt, and saye: gather you together vpon the mountaynes of Samaria, so shall ye se greate murder and violent oppresyon amonge the, for why? they regarde not y thinge that is ryght, sayeth y Lorde: they gather together euell gottē goo-des, and laye vpon robbery in their houses.

Therefore, thus sayeth the Lorde God.
This lande shall be troubled and beleaged rounde about, thy strength shall be plucke fro y, and thy palaces robbed. Thus sayeth y Lorde. lyke as an heardman taketh two legges or a pece of an eare out of the spons mouth: Euen so the chylzen of Israel (y dwell in Samaria, haupnge their couches in the corner, their beddes at Damascus, shall be plucke awaye. * * Heare, & heare recorde in y house of Jacob (sayeth y Lorde God of hostes) y when I begynne to viset the wyckednesse of Israel, I will viset y altars at Bethell also: so that the hornes of the altare shall be broken of, and fall to the groude.

As for the wynterhouse & sommerhouse I will smyte them downe: and the houses of puery: pee, and many other houses shall perishe, and be destroyed, sayeth the Lorde.

The iij. Chapter.

Agaynst the gouernours of Samaria.

Heare thys worde O ye fat kyne, that be vpon the hyl of Samaria: ye that do pooze men wronge, and appresse the nedy: ye that saye to your lordes: bypnye hy-ther, let vs drinke. Therefore, the Lorde hath sworne by hys holynes: The dayes shall come vpon you, y the enemyes shall carry you away in shypes, & your postcite shall be carped awaye vpon fyshers hookes. Ye shall get you out at the gappes one after another, eue the kynges palace shall you ouer throwe, to make awaye to escape, sayeth the Lorde.

Ye came to * Bethell for to worcke vngraciously, and haue increased your synnes at * Galgal: ye brought your sacrifices in y mornynge, and youre tythes vnto the thirde daye. Ye made a thankofferynge of leuen, ye promysed frewill offeringes, and proclaimed them. Soch lust had ye, O ye chylzen of Israel, sayeth the Lorde God. Therefore haue I geuen you ydle teeth in all youre cyties, and scarfnesse of byed in all your palaces: yet will ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. Why there were but thre monethes vnto the haruest, * I withelde the rayne from you: ye rayned vpon one cytie: and not vpon another, one pece of grounde was moystured w rayne, and the groude that I rayned not vpon, was drye. Therefore two, yee, thre cyties came vnto one, to drinke water: but they were not satisfied, yet will ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde.

I haue smytten you with drouth & blastynge: and loke howe many orchardes, yv-nepardes, fyggetrees & olyuetrees ye had:
the caterpyller hath eaten them vp. But yet will ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde.
Destylence haue I sent amonge you, * as y dyd in Egypt: your yonge me haue I slayne with the swerde, and caused your horses to be taken captiue: I made the stynkyng sauour of youre tentes to come vnto youre nostrels. Yet will ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. Some of you haue y ouer-throwen, * as y ouerthrowe Sodome and Gomorre: so that ye were as a bronde plucke out of the fyre. Yet wyll ye not turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. Therefore, thus will I handle the agayne, O Israel, ye euen thus will I handle the. Make the ready then to mete thy God, O Israel. For lo, he maketh the mountaynes, he ordeyneth the wynde, he sheweth man what he is aboute to do: he maketh the mornynge and the darkenes, he treadeth vpon the hye places of the earth: the Lorde God of hostes is his name.

alone growde, and no mā shall helpe her vp. For thus sayeth the Lorde God: Where as there dwelt a. 3. in one cytie, there shall be left scarce an hundred therein: & where there dwelt an. 4. there, shall scarce ten be left in the house of Israel. Neuertheles, thus sayeth the Lorde vnto the house of Israel: Seke after me, and ye shall lyue, but seke not after Bethel. Come not at Gilgal, and go not to Beerlabā: for Gilgal shall be carped awaye captiue, and Bethel shall come to naught. Seke the Lorde, that ye maye lyue: lest the house of Ioseph be bzent with fyre and consumed, & lest there be none to quēche Bethell.

Pe turne the lawe to wormwood, & cast downe ryghteousnes vnto y grounde. * Pe forsake the Lorde y maketh the vij. starres & y Qyros, y turneth the nyght into daye, and of y daye he maketh darcknesse. * He calleth the waters of the see, and poureth them out vpon the playne grounde: the Lorde is his name. He rapeth destruction vpon y myghty people, & byngeth downe the strōge holde. But they owe him euell will, y reproūeth them openly: and who so telleth the the playne truth, they abhorre hym. For so moche then as ye oppresse the poore, and robbe him of his best sustenance: * therfore, where as ye haue buylded houses of square stone, ye shall not dwell in the. Maruclous pleasaunt bynepardes shall ye plante, but the wyne of them shall ye not drynke: & why? as for the multitude of youre wyckednesses and poure stoute synnes, I knowe them ryght well.

Enemys are ye of the ryghteous, * ye take rewardes, ye oppresse y poore in iudgement. Therfore, the wyse must now be fayne to holde his tūge, so wycked a tyme is it.

Seke after the thinge that is good, & not euell, so shall ye lyue: yee, the Lorde God of hostes shall be with you, accordinge to your arowne desyre. * Hate the euell, and loue the good: & set vpryght agayne in the porte: and (no doute) the Lorde God of hostes shall be mercifull vnto the remnant of Ioseph. If no (sayeth the Lorde God, y God of hostes) there shall be mournynge in all stretes, yee, they shall saye i euery strete: alas, alas. They shall call the housbandman to lamentacyon, and soch as can mourne to mournynge. In all bynepardes there shall be heynesse, for I will come amonge you, sayeth the Lorde. Wo be vnto them that desyre the daye of the Lorde. Wherefore wolde ye haue it? As for y daye of the Lorde, it shall be darcke and not cleare. Yee, lyke as when a man runneth fro a lyon, and a Beer meteth with him: or whē he cometh into the house, & leaneeth his hāde vpon the wall, a serpent byteth him. Shall not the daye of the Lorde be darcke, & not cleare? Shall it not be cloudy, & no shyne in it? * I hate and abhorre your holy dayes, & where as ye cense me when ye come together, I wyll not accepte it. And though ye offere me bzent offrynges and meat offrynges, yet haue I no pleasure therein. As for your fat thankoffrynges, I wyll not loke vpon them: A waye with that noyse of thy songes, I will not heare thy playes of musyck: but se that equytie flowe as the water, and ryghteousnesse as a myghty streame. O ye house of Israel, * gaue ye me offrynges and sacrificyes those fourty yeres longe in the wyldernes? yet haue ye set vp tabernacles to your * Moloch, and ymages of your Idols, yee, and the starre of your God Rempha, figures which ye made to worshippe them. Therfore wyll I cause you to be carped awaye beyonde Damascus, sayeth the Lorde, whose name is the God of hostes.

The vij. Chapter.
Agaynst the princes of Israel leuynge in places.

Wo be to y proude welthy in Syon to soch as thinke them so sure vpon the mount of Samaria: which holde them selues for the best of the worlde, and rule the house of Israel, euen as they lyst. So vnto Calue, and se: and from thence get you to hemath the great cytie, & so go downe to Gath of the Philistines: be they better at ease then these kyngdomes, or the border of their lande wyder then yours? Pe are taken out for the euell daye, euen ye that syt in the stole of wyfulnesse. Ye that lye vpo beddes of Puery, and vse youre wātonnesse vpon your couches: ye that eate the best lambes of the flocke, & the fattest calves of the drooue: ye that synge to the lute, and in playenge of instrumentes compare youre selues vnto * Dauid: ye that drynke wyne out of goblettes, and anoynte youre selues with the best oyle, but no mā is sozy for Iosephs hurte. Therfore, now shall ye be the fyrst of them, that shall be led awaye captiue, and the lusty chere of the wyfull shall come to an ende.

The Lorde God hath sworne euen by him selfe (sayeth the Lorde God of hostes) I hate the pryde of Jacob, and I abhorre his palaces: and I will geue ouer the cytie, with all that is therein: so that though there remayne ten men in one house, they shall dye. So their nexte kynfolkes and the deed buryers shall take them, and cary awaye they bones, and saye vnto him, that is in the pinnermer house: is there yet eny mo by y? And he shall answer: they are all gone, holde thy tūge (shall he saye) * for * they wolde not remembre the name of the Lorde.

Beholde, the Lorde is mynded to smyte the greate houses, so that they shall decaye: and the lytle houses, y they shall cleue a sūder. Who can runne w hoxles, or plowe with oxen oxen vpo y harde rockes of stone? For why ye haue turned true iudgement into bytternesse & y frute of ryghteousnesse into wormwood: yee, eue ye, that reioyse in wayne thinges: ye y saye: haue not we optayned hoznes in oure awne strength? Wel, take hede, O ye house of Israel, sayeth the Lorde God of hostes: I will brynge a people vpo you, whych shall trouble you, from y waye that goeth towarde hemath, vnto the brooke in the medowe.

The vii. Chapter.

Of the captiue of Israel and Iuda.

The Lorde God shewed me soch a vyssyon: beholde, there stode one that made greshoppers, euen when the corne was thotynge forth, after y king had clypt his shepe. Now when they undertoke to eate vp all the grene thinges in the lande, I sayde: O Lorde God, be mercifull, I beseeche the: who shulde els helpe vp Jacob that is brought so lowe? So the Lorde was gracious therein, and the Lorde sayde: well, it shall not be. Agayne, y Lorde shewed me thys vyssyon: beholde, the Lorde God called the fyre to punyssh wythall, & it deuoured y gre-at depe: yee, it consumed a parte all redy. Then sayde I: O Lorde God, holde thyne hande: for who shulde els helpe vp Jacob y is brought so lowe? So the Lorde was mercifull therein, and the Lorde God sayd: wel, it shall not be.

Moreover, he shewed me thys vyssyon: beholde, the Lorde stode vpon a plastered wall and a masons trowel in his hande. And the Lorde sayd vnto me: Amos, what seest thou? I answered: a masons trowel. Then sayde the Lorde: beholde, I wyll laye the trowel amonge my people of Israel, & wyll nomore ouer se them, but y hye pylchapels of Isaac must be layed waste, and the churches of Israel made desolate, * ad as for the house of Jeroboā, I wyll stande vpagaynst it with the swerde. Vpon thys sent Amasiah the prest to Bethel vnto Jeroboam the kyng of Israel, saye. * Amos maketh the house of Israel to rebel agaynst the, y lāde can not awaye wyth thys wordes. For Amos sayeth, Jeroboā shall dye wyth the swerde, and Israel shall be led awaye captiue out of theyr awne lande. And Amasiah sayde vnto Amos, Gett the hēce * (y y canst se so well) and fle into the lande of Iuda: gett the there thy lyuinge, and prophesy there: and prophesy nomore at Bethell, for it is the kynges chapell, and the kynges courte.

Amos answered, and sayde to Amasiah: * As for me I am nether prophet, ner prophetes sonne: but a keeper of catell. Now as I was breakynge downe molberies, & goig after the catell, the Lorde toke me, & ad sayd vnto me: Go thy waye, and prophesy vnto my people of Israel. And therefore, heare y now the worde of the Lorde: Thou sayest: prophesy not agaynst Israel, ad speake no thyng agaynst the house of Isaac. Wherefore, thus sayeth y Lorde: Thy wyfe shall be defyled in the cytie, thy sonnes and daughters shall be slayne with the swerde, & thy lāde shall be measured out wyth y line. Thou thy selfe shalt dye in an vnclene lāde, * & Israel shall be dyspūen out of his awne contrē.

The viii. Chapter.

Agaynst the rulers of Israel. The Lorde sweareth that he wyll fulfyll the thynges whych he hath decreed agaynst Israel.

The Lorde God: shewed me thys vyssyon: and beholde, there was a mande w sommer frute. And he sayde: Amos, what seyst thou? I answered: a mande w sommer frute. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: the ende cometh vpon my people of Israel, I wyll nomore ouerse them. In y daye shall the songes of the tēple be turned into sorowe, saith y Lorde God, many deed bodyes shall lye in euery place, and be cast forth secretly. * Heare thys, O ye that oppresse the poore, and destroye the nedye i the lande, saying: We will the new moneth be gone, that we maye sell vyttayle, & the Sab both, that we maye haue scarcenesse of coine: to make the byghel lesse, and the sycke greater: We shall set vp false wayghes, y we maye gett the poze vnder vs wyth theyr money, and the nedye also for thoes: yee, let vs sell the chaffe for coine.

The Lorde hath sworne agaynst y pryde of Jacob: these workes of theyr wyll I neuer forget. Shall not the lande tremble, ad all they that dwell therein, mourne for this? Shall not they destruction come vpo the lyke a water streame, and flowe ouer the as y floude of Egypte? * At y same tyme sayeth the Lorde God: I shall cause the Sūne to go downe at none, and the lande to be darcke in the cleare daye. * Your hye feastes wyll I turne to sorowe, & poure songes to mournynge: I will brynge sack cloth vpon all backes, and baldnes vpon euery head: yee, soch a mournynge wyll I sende them. * as is made vpon an only begotten sonne, and they shall haue a myserable ende.

Beholde, the tyme cometh (sayeth the Lorde God) that I shall sende an hunger in to the earth: not the hunger of bred, ner the thyrst of water: but an hunger to heare y worde of the Lorde: so y they shall go fro y one see to y other, yee, fro y north vnto the east, runynge aboute to seke y worde of the Lorde, & shall not fynde it. In y tyme, shall the sayre virgins & the yonge men petysh for thyrst, yee, euen they that sweare in the execrable calfe of Samaria, & saye: as truly as thy God lyueth at Dan, and as truly

The boke of the Prophecie Jonas.

¶ The fyrst Chapter.

¶ Of the flight of Jonas when he was sente to preache.
A tempeste aryseth, and casteth hym in the see for bys dy-sobedience.

Ihe worde of the Lorde came vnto Jonas y sonne of Amphyay, sayng: ¶ Aryse, & get the to Ni-nue that greate cyte: and preache vnto the, how that they: wyckednes is come vpon befoze me. And Jonas made hy ready to fle vnto Charlis from the presence of the Lorde, and gat hym downe to Toppa: where he founde a shyp ready for to go vnto Charlis. So he payde bys fare, & wente aborde, that he myght go with them vnto Charlis, from the presence of y Lorde.
But the Lorde hurled a greate wynde into the see, and there was a myghty tempest in the see: so that the shyppe was in ieo-perdy of gonyng in peces. ¶ Then the maryners were afrayde, and cryed euery man vnto his God: and the goodes that were in the shyppe, they cast into y see, to lyghten it of them. But Jonas gatt hym vnder the hatches, where he layed him downe & sloued.

¶ So the master of the shyppe came to him and sayde vnto him: why slouberest thou?
¶ Up, call vpon thy God: yf God (happely) wyll thynke vpon vs, that we perishe not.
And they sayde one to another: come, let vs cast lottes: that we maye knowe, for whose cause we are thus troubled. ¶ And so they cast lottes, and the lot fell vpon Jonas.
¶ Then sayd they vnto him: tel vs, for whose cause are we thus troubled? what is thy-ne occupacyō: whence comest thou? and wherther goest thou? ¶ What coulde man art thou, & of what nacio? ¶ He answered them: I am an Ebyre, and I feare the Lorde God of heauen, whych made both the see, & dvyne lande.
¶ Then were the men exceedingly afrayed, & sayde vnto hym: why dydest y so? (for they knewe, that he was fled from the presce of the Lorde, because he had tolde the) & sayd moreouer vnto hi: ¶ What shall we do vnto the, that the see maye cease fro troublynge blous) he answered them: Take me, & cast me into the see, so shall it lett you be in rest:

The.ii. Chapter.

Jonas is swallowed of a whale. The prayer of Jonas

But the Lorde prepared a greatesp we, to swallow vp Jonas * So was Jonas in y bely of y fsh, the dayes & thre nyghtes. And Jonas prayed vnto the Lorde hys God, out of the fshes bely, and sayd. * In my trouble I cal led vnto the Lorde, and he herde me: out of y bely of hell I cryed, & thou herdest my voyce. Thou haddest cast me downe depe in the myddest of the see, & the floude copased me about: yee, * all thy waues and roules of water went ouer me, I thought that I had bene cast awaye out of thy syght: but I will yet agayne loke towarde thy holy temple.

The waters compased me, euen to y de-ry soule: the depe laye aboute me, & the we-des were wyapte aboute myue head. I wet downe to the botome of the pylles, and was barred in with earth for euer. But thou, O Lorde my God, hast brought vp my lyfe a-gayne out of corrupcio. When my soule fainted wpythin me, I thought vpon the Lorde: & my prayer came in vnto the, euen ito thy holy temple. * They that hold of vayne va-nyties, wyll forsake his mercy. But I will do the sacrifice with the voyce of thankesgeuyng, & wyll paye that I haue vowed: for why? saluacyon comyneth of the Lorde. And the Lorde spake vnto the fsh, ad it cast out Jonas agayne vpon the drye lande.

The.iii. Chapter.

Jonas is sent agayne to Ninue. The repentaunce of the kyng of Ninue.

nue at the Lordes commaundement. Nin-ue was a greatesp cyte vnto God, namely, of thre dayes iourney.

And Jonas wente to, & entred into the cytie: euen a dayes iourney, & cryed, sayenge:
There are yet .xl. dayes ad then shall Nin-ue be ouerthrowen. * And the people of Ninue beleued God, and proclaymed fa-stynge, and arayed the selues in sack cloth, as well the greatesp as the small of the. And the tydiges came vnto the kyng of Ninue which arose out of hys seate, and dyd hys apparell of and put on sack cloth, and late hym downe in ashes.

And it was cryed & commaunded in Ni-nue, by the auctorite of the kyng and hys Lordes, sayenge: * se that nether man or be-est, ore or shepe taste ought at all: ad y they nether fede ner dryke water: but put on sack cloth both man & beast: and crye myghtely vnto God: * yee, se that euery ma turne fro his euell waye, and from the wyckednesse, te, and cease from his fearce wyath, that we perpsh not. And when God sawe they? wor-kes how they turned from their wicked wa-yes * he repented on the euell, which he sayd he wolde do vnto them, and dyd it not.

The.iiii. Chapter.

Jonas is reproued of God.

Herfore Jonas was soze dyscontent and angrie. And he prayed vnto the Lorde, and sayde: O Lorde, was not thys my sayinge (I praye the) when I was yet in my countre: therfore I halted rather to fle vnto Tharsis, * for I knowe wel ynough that thou art a mercyfull God, full of compassyon, longe sufferyng, and of great kyndnes and repentest when thou shuldest take punysshment. * And now O Lord, take my lyfe fro me (I beseeche y) for I had rather dye then lyue. Then sayde the Lorde: art thou so agrie? And Jonas gat hym out of the cytie, and satt downe on the east syde therof: and there made hym a booth, ad sat vnder it in the shadowe, tyll he myght se, what shulde chaunce vnto the cytie.

And the Lorde God prepared a wyldc vy-ne, whych sprange vp ouer Jonas, that he myght haue shadowe aboue his head, to de-lyuer hym out of his payne. And Jonas was exceedingly glad of the wyldc vyne.

But vpon the nexte morowe agaynst y sprynge of y daye. The Lorde ordered a wor-me, whych smote the wyldc vyne, so that it wythered awaye. And when y Sunne was vp, God prepared a feruent east wynde: & y Sunne bett ouer y head of Jonas, that he faynted agayne, & wyshed vnto his soule, that he myght dye, ad sayd: It is better for me to dye, then to lyue. And God sayd vnto Jonas: Art thou so angrie for y wyldc vy-ne? And he sayd: yee, very angrie am I, eue vnto the deeth. And y Lorde sayd: thou hast compassyon vpon a wyldc vyne, wheron y bestowdest no labour: ner madest it growe whych sprange vp in one nyght & perpshed in another: And shuldest not I then haue copassyon vpon Ninue that greatesp cytie, wher-in there are aboute an. C. & .xx. thousand personnes, that knowe not they? ryght hand from the lefte, belydes moch catell?

Prophecie Micheas.

The fyrst Chapter.

Of the destruccyon of Samaria because of they? Idolatrye.

Thys is the worde of the Lorde, y came vnto Micheas y Mozasti, i the dayes of y Jothan & Ahas ad y Jezechiah kynges of Iuda: whych was shewed hym vpon Samaria & Ierusalem. * Heare al ye people, marcke this well O earth and all that therin is. Yee, y Lorde God hym selfe be wytnesse amonge you euen the Lord fro his holy temple. For why? * beholde, y Lorde shall go out of his place, & come downe, & treade vpon the hye thynge of the earth. The mountaynes shall columbe vnder him, & the valleyes shall cleue asunder: lyke as waxe columeth at the fyre, & as the waters runne downwarde. And all thys shalbe for the wyckednesse of Jacob, and the synnes of the house of Israel.

But what is the wyckednesse of Jacob?
Is not y Samaria? Whych are the hye places of Iuda? Is not y Ierusalem? Therfore I shall make Samaria an heape of stones i the felde, to laye aboute the vyneparde: her stones shall I cast into the valley, and discouer her foundacyons. All her Images shall be broken downe & all her garmentes shall be bzent in the fyre: yee, all her Idols will I destruye: for why? * they are gathered out of y hyre of an whoze, & ito an whozes hyre shall they be turned agayne. Therfore I will mourne & make lamentacio, bare & naked will I go: I must mourne lyke the dragons, and take sorowe as the Estriches: for they? wounde is past remedy: And why? it is come into Iuda, & hath touched the porte of my people at Ierusalem already. * Wepe not, lest they at Geth perceauent it.

Thou at Bataphra, welter thy selfe in y dust & ashes. Thou y dwellest at Sephyr, get the hence with shame. The proude shall boost nomore for very sorowe: and why? her ken from vs?

Neuertheles * there shalbe noman to de-uyde the thy porcyon in the cōgregacyon of y Lorde. Cuth, holde your tūge (saye they)
It shall not fall vpon thys people, we shall not come so to confusyon, sayeth the house of Jacob. As y spere of the Lorde do cleane awaye: or is he so mided? Creuth it is, my wordes are frendly vnto the y lyue ryght:
but my people doth the contrary, therfore take awaye both cote and cloke from the symple.

Ye haue turned poure selues to fyght, the women of my people haue pe shut out from their good houses, & taken awaye my excellent gyftes from they? chyldre. Up, get you hence, for here shall ye haue no rest.

Because of they? Idolatrye they are corrupte, & shal mysferably perpsh. If I were a fleschly felowe, & a preacher of Iyes, ad tolde them that they myght lyt by bypnyng & vol-lyng, & be droncken. O y were a Prophecie for thys people, But I will gather the i dede, O Jacob, & dyspue y remnant of Israel all together. I shal cary them one with another, as a flocke in the folde, and as y catell in they? stalles, that they maye be dysquy-ted of other me. Who so breaketh y gappe, he shal go before. They shal breake vp y porte, & go in & out at it. The kyng shall

Deare,

The prophete

And I sayde: heare, O ye headres of the house of Jacob, & ye leaders of the house of Israel: * Shulde not ye knowe, what were lawfull and ryght: * But ye hate the good, and loue the euill: ye plucke of mennes skynnes, and the flesh from theyr bones: ye eat the flesh of my people, and flay of theyr skynne: ye breake theyr bones, ye choppe them in peces as it were in to a cauldron, & as flesh in to a pot. Now the tyme shall come, * that whē they call vnto the Lorde, he shall not heare the, but hyde hys face from them, because that thow theyr awne Imagynacions they haue dealte so wyckedly.

And as concernynge the prophetes that dysceane my people, thus the Lorde sayeth agaynst them. * When they haue eny thynge to byte vpon, then they preach that all shall be well: but yf a man put not some thig in to theyr mouthes, they preach of warre agaynst hym.

* Therefore poure dyspon shall be turned to nyght, & poure propheteinge to darchnesse. The Sunne shall go downe euer those prophetes, & the daye shall be darcke vnto the.

Then shall the dyspon seers be ashamed, & the sothsayers confounded: yee, they shall be fayne, all the packe of them, to stoppe theyr mouthes, for they haue not Gods woordes. * As for me, I am full of strenght, & of the sperte of the Lorde, full of iudgement & boldnesse: to shewe the house of Jacob theyr wyckednes, and the house of Israel theyr synne.

Heare this ye rulers of the house of Jacob, & ye iudges of the house of Israel, ye that abhorre the thynge that is lauffull, & wyldest alwys the thynge that is strepght. * Ye that buylde vpon Syon with bloude, and Jerusalem w doynge wronge. * O ye iudges, ye geue sentence for gyftes: O ye prelates, ye teach for lucre. * O ye prophetes, ye prophesy for money. Yet will they be taken as those that holde vpon God, and saye: Is not the Lorde amonge vs? Cuss, there can no myfortune happen vs. * Therefore shall Sion (for poure sakes) be plowed lyke a felde: Jerusalem shall become an heape of stones, and the hyll of the temple shall be turned to an hye wodde.

The.iii. Chapter.

Of the callinge of the Gentyles, and conuersion of the Jewes.

At * in the latter dayes it will come to passe, that the hyll of the Lordes house shall be sett vpon hyer then eny mountaynes or hylls: yee, the people shall please vnto it, and the multitude of the Gentiles shall haste them thither, sayeng: Come, * let vs go vpon to the hyll of the Lorde, and to the house of the God of Jacob: that he maye teach vs hys waye, and that we maye walcke in his pathes. * For the lawe shall come out of Sion, & the worde of God from Jerusalem, and shall geue sentence amonge the multitude of the heathen & re- fourme the people of farre countrees: so that of theyr shewardes they shall make plowshares, & lythes of theyr speares.

* One people shall not lyft vp a sword agaynst another, yee, they shall nomore learne to fyght: but euery man shall syt vnder his vineyard & vnder his fygge tre, & no mā to fraye him awaye: for the mouth of the Lorde of hostes hath spokē it. Therefore, where as all the people haue walcked euery man in the name of hys awne God, we wyll walcke in the name of oure God for euer ad euer. * At the same tyme, sayeth the Lorde, will I gather vpon the lame & the out castes, & such as I haue chastened: & wyll geue pssue vnto the lame, & make of the out castes a great people: * and the Lorde hym selfe shall be theyr kynge vpon the mount Syon, from thys tyme forth for euermore. And vnto the. (O tower of * Eder, thou stronge holde of the daughter Syon) vnto the shall it come: eue the lordshipe & kyngdome of the daughter Jerusalem. Why then art thou now so heuy? is there no kynge in the? are thy counsellors awaye that thou art so payned, as a womā in her trayuayle? And now (O thou daughter Syon) be soyr, let it greue the as a wyfe laborynge wth chylde: for now must thou get the out of the ctye, & dwell vpon the playnefelde: yee, vnto Babylon shalt thou go, there shalt thou be delpyered, * and there the Lorde shall lowse the from the hande of thyne enemyes.

Now also are there many people gathered together agaynst the, sayig: what, Sion is curled, we shall se oure lust vpon her. But they knowe not * the thoughtes of the Lorde, they vnderstande not his counsell, that shall gather them together as the sheeues in the barne. Therefore get the vp, O thou daughter Syon, and throspe out the corne: for I wyll make thy horne prync, & thy clawes brasse, that thou mayest grynde many people: theyr goodes shalt thou appropriate vnto the Lorde, and theyr substance vnto the ruler of the whole worlde.

The.v. Chapter.

Of the destruccyon of Jerusalem.

After shalt thou be robbed thy selfe, O robbers daughter: they shall laye sege agaynst vs, & synpte iudge of Israel w a rodde vpon the cheeke. * And Bethleem Ephrata, art lytle amonge the thou- sandes of Iuda, Out of the shall come vnto me, which shall be the gouernoure in Israel: who se out goynge hat bene fro the begynning, & fro euerlastynge. In the meane whyle he plageth them for a season, vntyll the tyme that the (which shall beare) haue borne: then shall the remnaunt of his brethzen be couer- ted vnto the children of Israel. He shall stāde fast, & geue fode in the * strength of the Lorde, and in the victorie of the name of the Lorde his God: and when they be conuerted, he shall be magnified vnto the farthest partes of the worlde.

Then shall there be peace, so that the Assyrian maye come into poure lāde, & treade in poure houses. We shall bringe vpon seuen shepherdes and viii. princes vpon the: these shall subdue the land of Assur w the sword, and the lande of * Assyria w their naked weapens. * Thus shall he deliuer vs from the Assyrian, when he cometh within oure land, and setteth his fote within oure borders.

And the remnaunt of Jacob shall be amonge the multitude of people, as the dewe of the Lorde, and as the droppe vpon the grashe, that tarieth for no man, and wapteth of no body. * Yee, residue of Jacob shall be amonge the Gentiles and the multitude of people, as the lyon amonge the beastes of the wodde, and as the Lyons whelp amonge a flocke of shepe: which (when he goeth thowowe) treadeth downe, teareth in peces, and there is no man that can helpe. Thyne hand shall be lift vpon thyne enemyes, and all thyne ad- uersaries shall perishe.

The tyme shall come also, sayeth the Lorde, that I will take thine horses from the, and destroye thy charrettes. I wil breake downe the ctyes of thy lande, and ouerthrowe all thy stronge holdes. * All witchcraftes wyll I rote oute of thyne hāde, there shall no mo sothsaynges be within the. * Thine Idols and thyne Images will I destroye out of the: so shalt thou nomore bowe thy selfe vnto the workes of thyne awne handes. Thy groues will I plucke vpon by the rotes, & breake downe the ctyes. Thus will I be auenged also, vpon all the heathen that will not heare.

The.vi. Chapter.

An exhortacion to heare the iudgement agaynst the: each beynge vnkynde, what maner of sacrifices do please God.

Erkē now what the Lorde sayeth: * Up, reprove the mountaynes, & lett the hylls heare thy voyce. O heare the punisshment of the Lorde, ye mountaynes, & ye mightie foundacions of the earth: for the Lorde will reprove his people, & reason w Israel. O my people, what haue I done vnto the? or wher haue I hurte the? geue me answere. * Because I brought the from the lande of Egypte, and deliuered the out of the house of bondage: * Because I made Moyses, Aarō and Miriam to lede the: Remember (O my people) what Balach the kynge of Moab had Imagyned agaynst the and what answere that Balaam the sonne of Beor gaue him, from Sethim vnto Galgal, that ye maye knowe the loupng kyn- dnesses of the Lorde.

What acceptable thinge shall I offre vnto the Lorde? shall I bowe my knee to the hie God? shall I come before hym with bzent offrynges, and wyth calues of a yere olde? hath the Lorde a pleasure i many thousand rammes, or innumerable streames of oyle? O shall I geue my fyrst borne for myne of- fences, & the frute of my body for the synne of my soule? I will shewe the, O mā, what is good, & what the Lorde requyrez of the: Namely, to do right, to haue pleasure in lo- uinge kyndnesse, to be lowly, & to walcke w thy God. * The Lordes voyce crieth vnto the ctye, & the man that shall be saued consider the thy name (O Lorde) herken what is your rodde, & here him that warneth you. * Shuld I not be displeased, for the vnyghtuous good in the houses of the wycked, & because I measu- re his mynistred? O shulde I iustifie the false balaunces and the bagge of disceatfull weygh- tes, amonge those that be full of riches vnyghtuously gottē: where the cytelings deale with falshe, speake lyes, & haue disceat- full tunges in their mouthes?

Therefore, I will take in hāde to punishe the, & to make the desolate, because of thy synnes. * Thou shalt eate, & not haue ynough: yee, shalt bringe thy selfe downe. Thou shalt lie, but not escape: & those that thou woldest saue, will I delpyer to the * sword. Thou shalt lōwe, but not reape: shalt presse out olues, but oyle shalt thou not haue to anoynte thy selfe withall: thou shalt treade out swete must, but shalt dryncke no wyne. Ye kepe the ordinaunces of Amri, and all the customes of the house of Ahab: ye folowe their pleasures, therefore wyll I make the waste, and cause thy inhabyters to be ab- horred, O my people: & thus shalt thou beare thyne awne shame.

The.vii. Chapter.

A complaine of the lytell nombre of the ryghteous agaynst the tructh ought we not to holde wth our greatest frendes.

Is me: I am become as one, that goeth a gleanynge in the haruest, There are nomograpes to eate, yet wold I sayne (wyth all my herte) haue of the best frute. * There is not a godly man vpon earth, there is not one rightuous amonge men. They labour all to shed bloud, and euery man hunteth his brother to death: yet they saye they do well whē they do euill. As the prince will, so sayeth the iudge: that he maye do him a pleasure agayne. The greate man speaketh what his herte desireth: & the hearers allowe hi. The best of the is but as a thistle, & the most rightuous of the is but as a hyssop.

The booke of the Prophet Nahum.

Of the destruction of Ninive and of the deluge raunce of Israel.

Nahum is the heavy burthen of Ninive, whych Nahum of Elchos dyd write as he sa-we it. * The Lorde is a gelous God, & a taker of vengeance is the Lorde, and woorthfull. * The Lorde taketh vengeance of his enemyes, and reser-ueth displeasure for his aduersaries. * The Lorde suffereth longe, he is of great power, & so innocent that he leaueth no man faultlesse before him. The Lorde goeth forth in tēpest & stormy weather, the cloudes are the dust of his fete. Whē he reproveth the see, he dryeth it up, & turneth all the floudes to drie lande.

Babylon is desolate, Charnel & the pleasure of Lybanus wasteth awaye. The mountaynes tremble for him, the hylls consume. At the sight of him, the earth quaketh: pee, the whole world, and all y^e dwell therein. * Who maye endure before hys wrath? Or who is able to abide his gryme displeasure? His anger taketh on lyke fyre, and the harde ro-ckes are clouen in sunder before him.

Full gracious is the Lorde, and a stronge holde in the time of trouble, he knoweth the that put their trust in hym: when the floude remneth ouer, and destroyeth the place, and whē the darchnesse foloweth spyll upon his enemyes. What do ye imagin the agaynst y^e Lorde on this maner? (Cush, whē he hath once made an ende, there shall come nomore trouble.) For like as the thornes that stike together, and as the drie strawe, so shall the dröckardes be consumed together, euē when they be full. There come out of the soch as imagin myschefe, & geue vngacious coun-cell agaynst the Lorde.

Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: Let the be as well prepared: pee, & as many as they can, yet shall they be hewe downe, and passe awaye. And as for y^e, I will vexe y^e, but not utterly destroye the. And now wil I breake his rodde from thy backe, & burst thy bödes in sonder. But the Lorde hath geuen a commaundement concernynge the, y^e there shall come nomore sede of thy name. * The carued & casten Images will I rote out of the house of thy God. Thy graue shall I prepare for the, and thou shalt be confounded.

The ii. Chapter.

The destruction of the victorie of the Caldees agaynst the Ninuities.

Beholde

Behold, * upon the mountaynes come y^e fete of him, that bringeth good tydings: & preacheth peace. * Juda, kepe thy holy dayes, perfourme thy pro-myces: for Belial shall come nomore in the,
he is utterly rote out.

The scatterer shall come up agaynst the, & laye sege to the castell. Loke thou well to y^e streets, make thy loynes stronge, arme thy self with all thy myght: for the Lorde shall restore againe the glory of Jacob, lyke as the glory of Israel. The destroyers haue broke them downe, & marred y^e wyne braunches.
The wilde of his grauntes glystereth, hys men of warre are clothed in purple. Hys cha-rettes are as fyre, when he maketh him forward, & his spere shaftes are soaked in venim.
The charettes rolle vpon y^e streets, & welter in y^e hye wayes. They are to loke vpon lyke cresettes of fyre, & go swyftly, as y^e lyghte-ninge. Whē he doth but warne his grauntes, they fall in their araye, & hastily they clym-me vpon the walles: pee, the engins of y^e warre are prepared all ready. The water portes shall be opened, and the kynges palace shall fall. The quene her selfe shall be led awaye captiue, and her gentyl women shall mourne as the dones, & grone within their hertes.

Ninive is like a pole full of water, but the shall they be sayne to fle. Stand, stāde, (shall they crye) & there shall not one turne backe.
Awaye wth the syluer, awaye with the golde for here is no ede of treasure. There shall be a multitude of all maner of costly ornamētes thus must the be spoyled, emptied & clene striped out: that their hertes may be melted awaye, their knees tremble, all their loynes be weake, & their faces blacke as a pot.

Where is now the dwellyng of the lps, & the pasture of y^e lps whelpes? where the lyon & the lyonelle wet wth the whelpes, & no man frayd the awaye? But y^e lyon spoyled ynough for hys yonge ones, & deuoured for his lyonelle: he filled his dēnes wth his praye, & his dwellig place wth that he had rauished.
Beholde, I will vpon the, sayeth the Lorde of hostes, and will set fyre vpon thy charettes y^e they shall smoke with all, & the swerde shall denoure y^e yonge lps. I will make an ende of thy spoyling fro out of y^e earth, & y^e voyce of thy mislangers shall nomore be herde.

The iii. Chapter.

The fall of Ninive.

Wall full of lyes & robbery, & wyll not leauē off fro rauishing. There a man maye heare scourging, rullhyng, the noyse of the wheles, y^e cryenge of the boyes, and y^e rollinge of the charettes. There y^e horse mē gett vpon naked swerdes, & glysteringe spea-res: there lyeth a multitude slayne, & a greate heape of deed bodys: there is no ende of deed coarces: pee, mē fall vpon their bodys, And that for y^e greate and manyfolde whor-dome, of y^e sayre & beutyfull harlot: which is a mactresse of witchcraft: pee, and selleth y^e people thoro her whordome, & the nacyōs thoro her witchcraft.

* Beholde, I will vpon y^e (sayeth y^e Lorde of hostes) and will pull thy clothes out thy head: y^e I maye thewe thy nakednes amōge the heathen, and thy shame amōge y^e kyng-domes. I will cast dyte vpon the, to make the be abhorred, & a gasynge stocke: Pee, all they that loke vpon the, shall starte backe, and saye: Ninive is destroyed.

Who will haue pitie vpon y^e? where shall I seke one to cōforte the? Art y^e better then the greate cite of Alexandria: that laye in the waters, and had y^e waters rōde aboute it: which was strongly fenced & walled with y^e see? Ethiopia & Egypte were her strength & pexceedig great, aboute measure. Aphrica & Lybia were her helpers, yet was she dry-uen awaye, & brought into captiuite, her pōge chylde were smitte downe at the head of euery strete, y^e lottes were cast for y^e most auncient men in her, & all her myghty men were bounde in chaines. Euen so shalt thou also be droncken, & hyde thy selfe, and seke some helpe agaynst thyne enemy. All thy stronge cities shall be lyke fygetrees with ripe figges: whych when a man shaketh, they shall fall into the mouth of the eater.

Beholde, thy people within the, are but wenē: the portes of thy lade shall be opened vnto thyne enemyes, and the fyre shall denoure thy barres. Drawe water now agaynst y^e be besieged, make vpon thy strong holdes go into y^e claye, tēpre y^e mortar, make strong brick: * yet y^e fyre shall consume the, y^e swerde shall destroye the: pee, as the locuste doth, so shall it cate y^e up. It shall fall heuely vpon y^e as y^e locustes: pee, ryght heuely shall it fall vpon the, euē as y^e grethoppers. Thy marchautes haue bene nobred wth the starres of beaue: but now shall they spede abrode as the locustes & fle their waye: Thy lordes are as the gre-thoppers, & thy captaynes as the multitude of grethoppers: whych when they be colde, remayne in the hedges: but whē the Sunne is vp, they fle awaye, & no mā can tel where they are become. Thy shepherdes are a slepe (y^e kyng of Assur) thy woorthyes are layed downe, thy people is scatred abrode vpon the mountaynes, & no man gathereth them together agayne. Thy woude cannot be hyd, thy plage is so soze. All they that heare this of the, shall clappe their hādes ouer the. For what is he, to whom thou hast not alwaye bene doyng hurte?

The ende of the prophecye of Nahum.

The

a bier in the hedge. But when the dape of thy preachers cometh, that thou shalt be visited: the shall they be wasted awaye. * Let no man beleue his frende, ner put hys confy-dēce in a brother. Kepe y^e porte of thy mouth from her that lyeth in thy bosome: * for the sonne shall put his father to dyshonoure, the daughter shall rise agaynst her mother, the daughter in lawe against her mother in la-we: and a mans foes shall be euen they of hys awne houtholde.

Reuerthelesse, I will loke vpon y^e Lorde I wyll patiently abyde God my saupoure: my God shall heare me. * Thou enemye of myne, reioyce not at my fall, for I shall get up agayne: & though I lytt i darchnesse, yet the Lorde is my lyght. I wyll beare the punishment of y^e Lorde (for why, I haue offended hi) tpll he syt i iudgemēt vpon my cause, & se y^e I haue right. He wyll bring me forth to the lyght, & I shall se his rightuousnesse.

He that is myne enemy shall loke vpon it, & be cōfounded, which now saith. * Where is thy Lorde God? Wpne eyes shall beholde her, when she shall be trode downe, as y^e clape in y^e streets. * The tyme will come, that thy gappes shall be made up, & the lawe shall go abrode: & at y^e tyme shall they come vnto the fro Assur vnto the stronge cities, & from the stronge cities vnto the ryuer: fro the one see to y^e other, fro the one mountayne to y^e other.

Not wythstandynge, y^e land must be wasted, because of them that dwell therein, and for the frutes of their awne Imaginations.
Therefore fede thy people with thy rodde, y^e flocke of thine heritage which dwel desolate in the wodde: that they maye be fedde vpon the moūt of Charnell, Balan & Galaad as afoze time. Maruelous thiges wil I thewe the. * lyke as whē they came out of Egypte Thys shall the heathen se, and be ashamed for all their power, * so that they shall laye their hande vpon their mouth, and stoppe their eares. * They shall lyke the dust lyke a serpent, & as the wormes of the earth, that tremble in their holes. They shall be afrayed of the Lorde oure God, & they shall feare the.

Where is there soch a God as thou: that pardonest wyckednes, and forgeuest the offences of the remnaunt of thyne herytage?
He kepeth not his wrath for euer: and why? his delite is to haue cōpassiō: * he shall turne agayne, and be mercifull to vs: he shall put downe oure wyckednes, and cast all oure synnes into the botome of y^e see. Thou shalt kepe thy trust with Jacob, & thy mercy for Abraham, lyke as thou hast swozne vnto oure fathers longe agoo.

The Prophecye

The booke of the Prophet Abacuc.

The fyrst Chapter.

A complaine agaynst Israel.

This is þe heny burthe, which the Prophet Abacuc dyd se. Lorde, how longe shall I crye, & thou wylt not heare: how longe shall I complaine vnto the, suffrynge wronge, & þu wylt not helpe? Why lettest þu me se wepynesse and labour? Euyl & violence are before me, power overgoeth right: for þu lawe is to arme in pecces, & there can not right iudgemēt go forth. And why? the vngodly is more set by then the ryghteous: this is þu cause, that wronge iudgemēt procedeth. Scholde, amonge the heathen, and loke well, wondre at it, and be abashed: for I wyl do a thyng in your ty- me, whych though it be tolde you, ye shall not beleue. For lo, I wil raple vp the Caldees, that bitter and swyfte people: which shall go as wynde as þu land is, to take possessiō of dwelling places, þe not their awne. A grymme and boysterous people is it, these shall sit in iudgemēt & punishe. Their horsen are swyfte then the cattes of the mountayne, & byte faster then þu wolues in the euenyng. Their horsen come by greute heapes fro farre, they sle hastily to deuour as þu Eagle. They come all to spoyle: out of them cometh an east wynde, whych bloweth and gathereth their captiues, lyke as the sande. They shall moke þu kynges, and laughe the princes to scorne. They shall not set by any strōge holde, for they shall lape ordinaunce agaynst it, and take it. Then shall they take a fresh courage vnto the, to go forth & to do more cruel, and so ascribe the power vnto * their God. But thou Lorde my God * my holy one, thou art from the begynnyng, therefore shall we not dye. Lorde, thou hast ordered the for a punisshment, and set the to reprove the myghtye. Thyne eyes are clene, thou mapest not se euil, thou canst not beholde, þu thinge that is wycked. Wherfore the dost thou loke vpon þu vngodly, and holdest thy tunge, when the wycked deuoureth the man þu is better the him selfe? Thou makest men as the fysh in the see, and lyke as þu creppynge beastes, that haue no gyde, they take vp all with their angle, they catch it in their net, & gather it in their parne: wherof they reioice ad are glad. Therfore offre they vnto their net, & do sacrifice vnto their parne: because that thozowe it their porcyon is become so fat, & their meate so plenteous. Wherfore, they cast out their net agayne, & neuer cease to slaye the people.

The ii. Chapter.

Of the vision of the prophete, Agaynst polling, couetousnes, and Idolatrye.

I stode vpon my watch, & set me vpon my bulwourke, to loke and se what he wolde saye vnto me, and what answer he shulde geue him that reproued me. But the Lorde answered me, & sayde: Wryte the vision playnely vpon thy tables, that who so cometh by, maye rede it: for the vision is yet farre of for a tyme, but at the last it shall come to passe, & not fayne. And though he tarp, yet wayte thou for him, for in very dede he will come, & not be slacke. Behold, the vngodly thiketh him selfe in sauegarde as in a strōge holde: but þu iust shall lyue by his sayth. Like as þu wyne disceaueth the bronckarde, euen so þu proude shall fayne and not endure. He openeth his desire wyde vpon the hel, & is as vnfaciable as death. All heathen gathereth he to hym, and heapeth vnto him all people. But shall not all these take vp a prouerbe agaynst him, & moke him with a byworde, & saye: Who vnto him that heapeth vp other mens goodes: how longe will he lade hym selfe with thicke claye? How sodely wyl they stāde vp, that shall byte, & awake, that shall teare þu in peces: þu, thou shalt be their praye. Sceinge þu hast spoyled many heathen, therefore shall the remnaunt of the people spoyle the: because of mens bloude, & for the wronge done in the lande, in the cite and vnto all them that dwell therein. Who vnto him, that couetously gathereth euell gottē goodes into his heule: that he maye set hys nest an hye, to escape from þu power of misfortune. Thou hast deuyfed the shame of thine awne house, for thou hast slayne to moch people, and hast wilfully offended: so that the very stones of the wall shall crye out of it, and the tymber that lyeth betwyxe the ioyntes of the buylding shall answer. Who vnto him, that buyldeth the towne with bloude, & maynteneth the cite with vngodlynes. Shall not the Lorde of hostes bzige this to passe, that the labourers of the people shall be bzēt with a greute fyre, & that the thinge wher vpon the people haue weered the felices, shall be lost? For þu earth shall be full of knowledge of þu Lordes honoure, lyke as the waters prouer the sec. Who vnto him that geueth his neyghboure byncke, puttynge in gall and mayng him broncken, * that he maye se hys preyntes. Therfore with shame shalt thou be filled, in steade of honoure. Dryncke thou also, tyll thou stonbe with all: for the cuppe of the Lordes right hāde shall compasse the aboute, and shamefull speying in steade of thy thy worshyppe. For the wronge that þu hast done in Libanus, shall ouerwhelme the, and the wilde beastes shall make the afraied: because of mens bloude, & for the wronge done in the lande, in the cite, and vnto all soch as dwell therein.

What helpe then wyl þu ymage do, whom the workman hath fashioned? O þu wayne cast ymage, wherby because the craftesman putteth his trust, therfore maketh he dome idols: Who vnto hym, that sayeth to a peece of wod: aryle, & to a domme stone: stāde vp. For what insturcyon maye soch one geue? Behold it is layed ouer with gold & syluer, and there is no bryth in it. But the Lorde in his holy temple is he: who all the worlde shulde feare.

The iii. Chapter.

A prayer of the prophete Abacuc for the ignorant.

Lorde, when I herde speake of þu, I was afraied. The worke that thou hast take in hande, shalt thou perfourme in his tyme, Lorde: & whe thy tyme cometh, thou shalt declare it. In thy very wrath þu thinkest vpon mercy. God cometh from Cheman, & the holy one from the mount of Pharan. Selah.

His glory couereth þu heauens, & the earth is full of his prayse. His shine is as þu sunne, and beames of lyght go out of hys handes, there is his power hyd. Destruction goeth before hym, & a pestilent specknelle goeth from his sete. He standeth, & measureth þu earth he loketh, & the people consume awaye, the mountaynes of þu worlde fal downe to powder, & þu hilles are fayne to bowe the selues, for his goynges are euerlastyng and sure.

I sawe, that the paulyons of the Mo- rians & the tetes of þu land of Madian were vexed for wepynesse. Wast thou not angrie Lorde, in the waters? Was not thy wrath in the floudes, & thy displeasure in þu see: yee when thou sattest vpon thine horse, & when thy charctes had þu victory. Thou thewedst thy bowe openly, lyke as thou haddest promysed w an othe vnto the trybes. Selah.

Thou dydest deuyde þu waters of þu earth. When the mountaynes sawe the, they were afraied, the water streame wente awaye: the depe made a noyse at the lyftynge vp of thyne hand. The Sunne & Moone remayned styll in their habitacyō. Thyne arrowes wente out glisterynge, and thy speares as þu thynne of the lyghtenyng. Thou trodest downe the land in thyne anger, and dydest throzpe þu weathe in thy displeasure. Thou camest forth to helpe thy people, to helpe thine anointed. Thou smotest downe þu head the house of þu vngodly, & disconcredest hys foundaciōs, eue vnto þu necke of him. Selah. Thou dydest stryke thozow w his scepter the heades of his playne people: which come as a stormy wynd to scatre me abroad, & are glad whe they maye eat vp þu poore secretly. Thou makest a waye for thine horsen in the see, eue in þu mudde of great waters. Whe I heare this, my body is vexed, my lippes treble at þu voyce therof, my bones corrupte, I am afraied where I stāde. O þu I myght rest in the dape of trouble, & I myght go vp vnto our people, which are already prepared.

For the fygg trees shall not be greene: & the vynes shall beare no frute. The labour of þu olyue shall be but lost, & the lande shall bring no corne: þu shepe shall be taken out of þu folde, and there shall be no catel in the stalles. But as for me, I wyl be glad in the Lorde, and will reioyce in God my Saupoure. The Lorde God is my strength, he shall make my fete as the fete of herter: & he which geueth the victory, shall bring me to my hye places syngynge vpon my psalmes.

A threapnyng agaynst Iuda & Ierusalem because of their Idolatrye.

This is the worde of þu Lorde, which cam vnto Sophony the sone of Chusi, the sonne of Gedoliah, þu sone of Amariah, the sonne of Iezchiah in the tyme of * Josiah the sonne of * Amō kyng of Iuda. I wyl gather vp all thynges in þu lande (sayeth the Lorde) I wyl gather vp man & beast: I wyl gather vp the foules in þu ayre and the fysh in the see (to þu greute decaye of the wycked) and wyl utterly destroye the men out of the lande, sayeth þu Lorde. I will stretch out myne hāde vpon Iuda, & vpon all soch as dwell at Ierusalem. Thus wyl I rote oute þu remnaunt of Baal from this place, & the names of the * Remurins and prestes: yee, & soch as vpon their house toppes worshyppe and bowe the selues vnto the hoste of heauen: which sweare by þu Lorde, & by their Malchom also: which starte a backe from the Lorde, and nether seke after þu Lorde ner regarde hym.

At þ same tyme (sayeth the Lord) there shal be herde a grete crye from the *fyrst porte and an howlinge from the other porte, and a grete murthure from þ hylls. Howle ye that dwell in þ myll, for all the marchaunt people are gone, & all they that were laden with syluer, are roted out.

At the same tyme wyl I sche thowow Jerusalem with lanternes, & vylet them that continue in their dregges, and save in their herthes: * Cuth, þ Lord wyl do nether good ner euell. Their goodes shal be spoyled, and their houses layed waste: * they shal buylde houses, & not dwell in them, they shal plate vnyardes, but not drinke þ wyne therof.

D For þ grete * daye of þ Lord is at hande, it is herde by & cometh on a pace. Horrible is the tydings of the Lordes daye, the shal the gyaunte crye out: for that daye is a daye of wrath, a daye of trouble and heynesse, a daye of vter destruccion & misery, a darcke & glomyng daye, a cloudy & stormy daye, a daye of the nople of troettes & shawmes, agaynst the stronge cyties & hie towres. I will bringe the people into soch veracion, þ they shal go aboute lyke blinde me, because they haue synned agaynst the Lord. Their bloude shal be shed as the dust, & their bodies as the myre. * Nether their syluer ner their golde shal be able to deliuer them in that wrothful daye of the Lord, but the * whole lande shal be consumed thowow þ fyre of his gelousy: for he shal soone make cleue ryd-daunce of all them that dwell in the lande.

Prophete Aggeus.

The fyrst Chapter.

C The tyme of the Prophecie of Aggeus. An exhortacion to buylde the temple agayne.

In the secōde peare of kyng Darius, in the vi. moneth the fyrst daye of þ moneth, came the worde of the Lord (by the Prophete Aggeus) vnto * zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel þ prynce of Iuda, & to Josua the sonne of Josedeche the hye prest, sayinge. Thus speaketh the Lord of hostes, and sayeth. This people doth saye. The tyme is not yet come to buylde vpon the Lordes house. Then spake þ Lord by þ prophete Aggeus, and sayde. * Pe pour selues can finde tyme to dwell in siled houses, and I shal this house lye wast? Consyder nowe poure a wne wayes in poure herthes (sayeth the Lord of hostes) * pe soue moch, but pe bypnyng lytle in: pe eate, but pe haue not y-nough, pe drynck, but pe are not fylled: pe dekke poure selues, but pe are not warme: and he that earneth eny wages, putteth it in a broken purse.

Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. Consyder poure a wne wayes in poure herthes, get pou vpon þ mountayne, fetch wood, ad buylde vpon the house * that it maye be acceptable vnto me, & that I may dwel w myne honoure, sayeth þ Lord. Pe looked for moch and lo it is come to lytle, & though pe bringe it home, yet do I blowe it awaye. And why so sayeth the Lord of hostes? * Euen because that my house lyeth so waste, and pe ronne euery man vnto hys a wne house. Wherefore, the heauē is forbydden to geue pou eny dew, and the earth is forbydden to geue pou encrease. * I haue called for a drouth, both vpon the lande and vpon the mountaynes, vpon corne, vpon wyne, and vpon oyle, vpon euery thyng that þ grounde bypnyngeth forth, vpon men & vpon catell, yee, and vpon all handy labour.

Now when zorobabel þ sonne of Salathiel, & Josua the sonne of Josedeche the hye prest w the remnaunt of the people, herde the voyce of the Lord theyr God, and the wordes of þ Prophete Aggeus (lyke as the Lord theyr God had sent him) the people dyd feare the Lord. Then Aggeus the Lordes angell sayde in þ Lordes message vnto the people, * I am with you, sayeth þ Lord. * So the Lord waked vpon the spyrete of zorobabel the prynce of Iuda, and the spyrete of Josua þ sonne of Josedeche þ hye prest, and the spyrete of the remnaunt of all the people wherwith I shal vylet the. But neuertheles, they stande vpon early, to folowe the fylthyness of their a wne ymaginacions. Therefore, pe shal wayte vpon me (sayeth þ Lord) vntyll the tyme that I stande vpon: for I am determined, to gather the people & to bring the kingdomes together, that I may poure out myne anger, pe all my wrothfull * displeasure vpon the. * For al the worlde shal be consumed with the fyre of my gelousy. And then wyl I clesse the lypes of the people, that they maye euerychone call vpon þ name of the Lord, and serue him with one shulder. Soche as I haue subdued, and my children also whom I haue scatred abrode, shal bypnyng me ptesentes beyonde the waters of Ethiopia.

In that tyme shalt thou nomore be confounded, because of all thy ymagynacions, wher thowow thou haddest offended me: for I will take awaye the proude boasters of thyne honour fro the, so that thou shalt no more triumphe because of my holy hyl. In þ also wyl I leaue a small pooze simple people, which shal trust in the name of þ Lord. The remnaunt of Israell shal do no wpykednes, ner speake lyes: nether shal there eny disceatfull tunge be foude in their mouthes. For they shal be fed, ad take their rest, and no man shal make them afrayed. Geue thākes, O daughter Spon, be ioyfull, O Israel: reioyce & be glad from thy whole hert, O daughter Jerusalem, for the Lord hath takē awaye thy punishment, and turned backe thyne enemyes. The kyng of Israel, euē the Lord hym selfe is with the: so þ thou nedest nomore to feare eny myffortune.

In that tyme it shal be sayde to Jerusalem: feare not, & to Spon: let not thyne hādes be slacke, for the Lord thy God is with the, it is he that hath power to saue: he hath a speciall pleasure in the, & a marvelous loue towarde the: yee, he reioyseth ouer the w gladnesse. Soche as haue bene in heynesse, wyl I gather together, and take out of thy congregacion: as for the shame and reprofe that hath bene layed vpon the, it shal be farre from the. And lo, in that tyme wyl I destroye al those that vere þ: * I wil helpe the lame, and gather vpon the cast awaye: yee, I wil get them prayse and honour in all landes, where they haue bene put to shame. At þ same tyme wyl I bypnyng pou in, & at the same tyme wyl I gather pou. I wil get pou a name and a good repute amonge all people of the erth, when I turne backe poure captiuite before poure eyes, sayeth the Lord.

people: that they came and laboured, in the house of the Lorde of hostes they God.

The ii. Chapter.

It shewed that the goodlines of the second temple shall exceed the first, because of the coming of Christ.

Vpon the. xliii. daye of the. vi. moneth, in the secōde yere of kynge Darius, the. xxi. daye of the. xliii. moneth, came the word of the Lorde by the prophete Aggeus, sayenge: speake to zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel prince of Iuda, & to Iesua the sonne of Iosedech the hye preste, & to the resydue of the people, and saye: * Who is left among you, & sawe thys house in her fyrst bewtye? But what thynke ye now by it? Is it not in youre eyes, eue as though it were nothinge? Neuerthelesse, be of good chere, & zorobabel (sayeth the Lorde) * be of good conforte, & Iesua & sonne of Iosedech hye preste: take good hertes vnto you also all ye people of the lade, sayeth the Lorde of hostes, & do accordynge to the worde (* for I am with you, sayth the Lorde of hostes) lyke as I agreed with you, when ye came out of the lande of Egypt: & my sprete shalbe amonge you, feare ye not.

For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: * yet once more wil I make heauē and earth, the see, and the drye land, & I wyll moue all heathen, & the conforte of all heathen shal come, & so wyll I fyll thys house wyth honoure, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. * The pyluer is myne, & the golde is myne, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. Thus the glory of the last house shalbe greater then the fyrst, sayth the Lorde of hostes: & in thys place wyll I geue peace, sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

The. xliii. daye of the nynt moneth in the secōde yere of kynge Darius, came the word of the Lorde vnto the prophete Aggeus, sayenge: Thus sayeth the Lorde God of hostes. Aske the prestes concernynge the lawe, and saye: * yf one beare holy flesch in hys coct lappe, & with his lappe do touch the bred potage, wyne, oyle, or any other meate: shal he be holy also? The prestes answered and sayde: No. Then sayd Aggeus: Now yf one beynge defyled w a deede carcase, touch any of these: shal it also be vncleane? The prestes gaue answer, & sayde: * yee, it shalbe vncleane. Then Aggeus answered & sayde: euen so is thys people & thys nacyon before me, sayeth the Lorde: & so are all the workes of theyr handes, yee, and all that they offere, is vncleane.

And now (I praye you) consydre from this daye forth, & how it hath gone w you afore or euer there was layed one stone vpon another in the temple of the Lorde: & when ye came to a coigne heape of. xx. bushels, there were scarce ten: & that when ye came to the wyne presse for to powre out. i. pottes of wyne, there were scarce. xx. For I smote you w heate, blastynge & hable stones in all the labours of youre handes: yet was there none of you, & wolde turne vnto me, sayeth the Lorde. Consydre then from this daye forth & afore: namely, from the. xliii. daye of the nynt moneth, vnto the daye that the foundacyon of the Lordes temple was layed: mark it well, * is not the sede yet in the barn? haue not the vyces, the fyggetrees, the pomgranates, and olyue trees bene yet vncroftfull: but from thys daye forth, I shal make them to prospeere.

Moreouer, the. xliii. daye of the moneth came the word of the Lorde vnto Aggeus agayne, sayenge: Speake to zorobabel the pryncce of Iuda, & saye: I wyll shake both heauen & earth, and ouerthrowe the seate of the kynngdome, yee, & destroye the myghty kynngdome of the heathen. I wyll ouerthrowe the charrettes, & those that syt vpon them, so that both horse and man shal fall downe, euery man thowow his neyghbours swerde. And as for the, & zorobabel (sayth the Lorde of hostes) thou sonne of Salathiel my seruaunt: I wyll take the (sayeth the Lorde) at the same tyme, and make the as a scale, for I haue chosen the, sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

The booke of the Prophete zachary.

The fyrst Chapter.

It sheweth the people to retorne to the Lorde, and to eschue the wickednes of theyr fathers. & to professeth Christ and the Apostles.

In the eyght moneth of the secōde yere of kynge Darius, came the word of the Lorde vnto zacharie the sonne of Barachias, the sonne of Addo, the prophete, sayenge: The Lorde hath bene sore displeased at youre forefathers. And saye thou vnto them: thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: * Turne you vnto me (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) and I wyll turne me vnto you, sayth the Lorde of hostes. * Be ye not lyke your forefathers, vnto who the prophetes cryed afore tyme, sayeng. Thus sayeth the Lorde God of hostes. * Turne you from youre euell wayes, and from youre wycked ymaginacions. * But they wolde not heare ner regarde me, sayeth the Lorde. What is now become of youre forefathers and the prophetes prophetes: are they yet styll alpye? But byd not my wordes and statutes) which I commaunded by my seruantes the prophetes) touche youre forefathers? Upon this, they gaue answer and sayde: lyke as the Lorde of hostes deuised to do vnto vs, accordyng to oure owne wayes and ymaginacions, euen so hath he delt with vs.

Upon the. xliii. daye of the. xi. moneth whych is the moneth Sebah, in the secōde yere of Darius, came the word of the Lorde vnto zachary the sonne of Barachias, the sonne of Addo the prophete, sayeng, I sawe by nyght and lo, there sat one vpon a reddy horse and stode styll amonge the myrtre trees, that were beneth vpon the grounde, and behynde hym were there reddy, speckled, and whyte horses. Then sayde I, my Lorde, what are these? And the aungel that talked wyth me, sayde vnto me. I wyll shewe the what these be. And the man that stode amonge the myrtre trees answered & sayde: These are they whom the Lorde hath sente to go thowowe the world. And they answered the aungel of the Lorde, & stode amonge the myrtre trees and sayde. We haue gone thowowe the worlde: and beholde all the worlde dwell at ease and are carelesse.

Then the Lordes aungel gaue answer and sayde: O Lorde of hostes, howe longe wylt thou be vnmerecyful to Ierusalem and to the cyties of Iuda? * with who thou hast bene dyspleased nowe these thre score & ten yeres. So the Lorde gaue a louynge and a comfortable answer vnto the aungel & talked wyth me. And the aungel that comened with me, sayd vnto me: Crye thou, & speake. Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes. I am exceedinge gelous ouer Ierusalem and syō, and sore displeased at the carelesse heathen: for where as I was but alpye, they byd theyr beste that I myght destroye them. Therefore thus sayeth the Lorde: * I wyll turne me agayne in mercye toward Ierusalem, so that my house shalbe buylded in it, sayeth the Lorde of hostes, yee, and the plommet shalbe layed abroade in Ierusalem, sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

Crye also, and speake thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes. My cyties shalbe in good prosperyte agayne, the Lorde shal pet conforte syō: & chole Ierusalem: Then lyfte I vp myne eyes, & sawe, & beholde foure hornes. And I sayde vnto the aungel, that talked w me what be these? he answered me. * These are the hornes which haue scatered Iuda, Irael & Ierusalem abroade. And the Lorde shew me foure carpenters. Then sayde I: what wylt these do? he answered and sayde: These are the hornes which haue so strowed Iuda abroade, that no man durste lyft vp hys heade: But these are come to fray them awaye: & to caste out the hornes of the Gentiles: whychelyste vpon theyr horne ouer the lande of Iuda, to scatere it abroade.

The ii. Chapter.

The renewynge of Ierusalem and Iuda.

Lift vp myne eyes agayne, and lo I beholde: & beholde a man with a measurynge lync in hys hand. Then sayde I: whether goeste thou? & he sayde vnto me: Come I measure Ierusalem, & I maye se how longe & howe brode it is. And beholde the aungel that talked wyth me, went hys waye forth. Then went there oute another angel to mete him, & sayde vnto hym: Rāne speake to thys ponge man, and saye: Ierusalem shalbe enhabtyd wythout eny wall, for the very multitude of people and catell that shalbe therein: * yee, I my selfe (sayth the Lorde) wyl be vnto her a wall of fyre rounde aboute, and wyl be honoured in her.

Get you forth, & fle from the lande of the north, sayth the Lorde, yee: * whome I haue scatered into foure wyndes vnder heauen, sayth the Lorde. Saue thy selfe, & syon: thou that dwellest with the daughter of Babylon, for thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes. After that glorious power hath he sent me out to the heathen, whych spoyled you, * for who so toucheth you, shall touch the apple of hys owne eye. Beholde, I wyll lyft vp myne hande ouer them: so that they shalbe spoyled of those: whych afore serued them, and ye shall knowe, that the Lorde of hostes hath sente me.

Be glad, & reioyce, O daughter of syon: for lo, * I am come to dwell in the myddest of the, sayth the Lorde at the same tyme there shal many heathen cleue to the Lorde and shalbe my people. Thus wyll I dwell in the myddest of the, and thou shalt knowe the Lorde of hostes hath sente me vnto the. The Lorde shal haue Iuda in possession for hys parte in the holy ground, and shal chole Ierusalem pet agayne. * Let all flesch be styll before the Lorde, for he is rysen oute of hys holy place.

The iii. Chapter.

Of the lawe and hys estate of Christ, vnder the figure of Iesue the prest. A prophecyp of Christ.

Id he shewed me Iesua the hye prest standyng before the angel of the lord: * and Satan stode at his ryght hand to resyst hym. And the Lorde sayde vnto Satan. The Lorde reprove the (thou Satan,) yee, the Lorde that hath chosen Ierusalem, reprove the. Is not thys a brand taken out of the fyre? Howe Iesua was clothed in vncleane raiment, and stode before the aungel whych answered and sayde vnto those that stode before hym, take awaye the foule clothes from hym. And vnto him he sayde. Beholde, I haue taken awaye thy synne from the, and wyl decke the wyth chaung of raiment. Rāne he sayde mozeouer, sett a fapze myter vpon hys heade. So they set a fapze myter vpon hys heade, & put on clothes vpon hym, and angel of the Lord stode there. Then angel of the Lord testifed vnto Iesua, and spake thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. If thou wilt walke in my wayes, & kepe my watch: thou shalte rule my house, & kepe my courtes, & I will geue the place amonge these that stode here. Heare (O Iesua) thou hye preste, thou and thy frends that dwell before the, for they are wonderous people. Behold, I wyl bring forth the bzaunches of my seruaunt: for lo, I stode I haue layed before Iesua: vpon one stone shalbe vii. eyes. Beholde I wyl he-we hym out (sayeth the Lord of hostes) & take awaye the spynne of the lade in one day.

Then shal euery man cal for his neyghbour vnder the vyne and vnder the fygg tre, say-th the Lord of hostes.

The. iiii. Chapter.

The bysion of the golden candelsticke and the crosse of the croce.

And angel that talked with me cam agayne, and waked me vp, as a man that is rayled out of hys slepe & sayd vnto me: what seest thou? And I sayde I haue loked, and beholde: a candelsticke al of golde with a boule vpon it, & his seuen lampes ther in, and vpon euery lape seuen stalkes.

And two olpue trees therby, one vpon the ryght syde of the boule, and y other vpon the lyft syde. So I answered, and spake to the angel that talked w me saying, O my Lord what are these? the angell that talked wth me answered and sayde vnto me: knoweste thou not what these be? and I sayde: No my Lord. he answered & sayde vnto me: This is the worde of the Lord vnto zozobabel, sayinge: * Nether thozow an hooste of men nor thozowe strengthe, but thozowe my sprete, sayeth the Lord of hostes. What art thou thou great mountayne, before zozobabel? *
must be made euen. And he shal bypunge vpon fyste stone, so that men shal crye vnto him good lucke good lucke.

Mozeouer, the worde of the Lord came vnto me sayinge. * The hades of zozobabel haue layed the foundacyon of the house: hys handes, shal also fynysh it, * that ye maye knowe howe that the Lord of hostes hath sent me vnto you. For he that hath bene dispylled a litle season, shal reioyce, when he seeth the tynne weyght in zozobabels hande.
The. vii. eyes are the Lordes whych go tho-row the whole world. Then answered I, and sayd vnto him, what are these two olpue trees vpon the ryght and lefte syde of the candelstick? I spake mozeouer, and sayd vnto him what be these two olpue bzaunches (whych thozow the two golden pyppes) emptye them selues into the golde. he answered me & sayd knowest thou not, what these be? And I sayde, no, my Lord. Then sayd he. * These are the two olpue bzaunches, that stande before the ruler of the whole earth.

The. v. Chapter.

The bysion of the fyinge booke, & fyinge the curse of beues and such as abuse the name of God, by the bysion of the measure, is fyinge the bysion of Iuda to Babylon.

I turned me, lyftynge vpon myne eyes, & loke, & beholde, a fyinge booke. And he sayd vnto me: what seest thou? I answered: I se a fyinge booke of. xx. cubytes longe, and. x. cubytes bryde. Then sayd he vnto me: This is the curse that goeth forth ouer the whole earth: for all theynes shalbe iudged after this booke & all swearers shalbe iudged accordynge to the same, & I wyl bypunge it furth (sayeth the Lord of hostes) so that it shall come to the house of these, & to the house of him, & falsly sweareth by my name: & shall remayne in hys house, & consume it, w the tymbre and stones therof.
Then the angel that talked w me, wente forth and sayd vnto me: lyft vpon thine eyes and se, what is this that goeth forth. And I sayde: What is it? he answered: this is a measure goinge out. he sayde mozeouer: Euen thus are they (that dwell vpon the whole earth) to loke vpon. And beholde, there was lyft vpon a lent of leade: & lo, a woman sat in the myddest of the measure. And he sayde: this is bygodlynes. So he cast her into the myddest of the measure, and threwe the lompe of leade into the mouth of the measure.

Then lyfte I vpon myne eyes, & loke: and behold, there came out. ii. womē, and a wind was in their wynges (for they had wynges lyke the wynges of a stork) & they lyft vpon the measure betwixt the earth and heauen. The spake I to the angel that talked w me: why-ther wyl these beare the measure? And he sayd vnto me: into the lande of * Synear to buyld them an house, whiche when it is prepared, the measure shalbe set there in his place.

The. vi. Chapter.

The four charrettes he describeth the prosperite of four kyngdomes.

Mozeouer, I turned me, lyftynge vpon myne eyes, and loke, & be-holde, there came foure charretes out from betwixt two hylls, whiche hylls were of brasse.
In the fyrst charret were * red horses, in the second charret were black horses, in the third charret were whyte horses, in the fourth cha-ret were horses of dyuers colours and ströge Then spake I, and sayde vnto the angell that talked with me: O lord what are these.
The angell answered, and sayde vnto me:
* These are the. iiii. wyndes of the beauen, whiche be come forth to stande before the ruler of all the earth. That with the blacke horse went

wente into the lande of the north, & the white folowed them, and the speckled horses wete forth towarde the south. These horses were very stronge, and wente out: & sought to go & take the journey ouer the whole earth.
And he sayde: get you hence, & go thozow the world. So they wente thozow out the world. Then cryed he vpon me, and spake vnto me, saying: behold, these that go to-warde the north, shall styll my wrath in the north countre.

And the worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayeng. Take of the prisoners that are come from Babylon: namely, helbai, Tobiah, & Idai: & come thou & same daye, & go into the house of Iosiah, the sonne of Sophony.
Then take golde & syluer, & make crownes therof, and set them vpon the head of Iesua, the sonne of Iosedeh, the hye preste, & speake vnto hym. Thus sayth the Lord of hoo-stes. Behold, the man whose name is * the brastice: & he shall sprynge vp after him, & shall buyld vpon the temple of the Lord, yee, euen he shal buyld vpon the temple of the Lord.
* He shall beare the prayse, he shal syt vpon the Lordes trone, & haue the dominacyon.

A preste shal he be also vpon his trone, & a peaceable counsell shalbe betwixt them both. And the crowncs shalbe in the temple of the Lord, for a remembraunce vnto helem, Tobiah, Idai, and then the sonne of Sophony. And soch as be farre of, shal come & buyld the temple of the Lord, that ye maye knowe, how that the Lord of hostes hath set me vnto you. And this shal come to passe, yf ye wyl herken diligently vnto the voyce of the Lord poure God.

The. vii. Chapter.

The estimacion of castpge without mercede. The byspynge of charpge, & the obspynge of the people.

It happened also in the fourth yere of kyng Darius, the worde of the Lord came vnto zachary in the fourth daye of the fourth moneth, which is called, Callen: what tyme as Saralar & Rogomelech & the men y were w them sent vnto Bethell for to praye before the Lord: and that they shulde saye vnto the prestes, whiche were in the house of the Lord of hoo-stes, and to the prophetes. Shuld I wepe in the * fyfth moneth, & absteyne as I haue done nowe certayne yeres? Then came the worde of the Lord of hostes vnto me sayege. Speake vnto all the people of the land, and to the prestes, and saye: when ye fasted and mourned in the fyfth & seuenth moneth (now this. lxx. yeres) dyd ye fast vnto me?
When ye dyd eate also and droncke, dyd ye not eate & dryncke for poure a wne selues?
Are not these the wordes, whiche the Lord spake by his prophetes afore tyme, whē Je-ru-salem was yet inhabited and welthy, the and the cytyes rounde aboute her: whē there dwelt men, both towarde the south and in the playne countrees?

And the worde of the Lord came vnto zachary, sayenge. Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. * Execute true iudgement: weue mercy & lounge kyndnesse, euery man to hys brother. Do the wyddowe, the father-les, the straunger, & poore no wrong: & let no man ymageneuel agaynst hys brother in hys herte. * Reuerthelesse, they wolde not take hede, but turned theyr backs, and stopped theyr eares, & they shulde not heare: yee, they made theyr hertes as an Adamant stone lest they shulde heare the lawe & wordes, * which the Lord of hostes sent in hys holy sprete by his prophetes afore tyme.

Wherfore the Lord of hostes was very wroth at the. And thus is it come to passe:
* that lyke as he spake and they wolde not heare: euen so they cryed, and I wolde not heare (sayth the Lord of hostes) but scatered them amonge all Gentyles, whom they knewe not. Thus the lade was made so desolate, & there trauayled no man in it nether to, ner fro, for the pleasaunt lande was utterly layed waste.

The. viii. Chapter.

The returne of the people vnto Ierusalem, and of the mercy of God towarde them. Of good wordes, & the callynge of the Gentyles.

The worde of the Lord came vnto me, sayenge. Thus sayth the Lord of hostes. I was in a great gelousy ouer Sion, yee, I haue bene very gelous ouer her in a great dyspleasure thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. I will turne me agayne vnto Syon, & wyl dwell in the myddest of Ierusalem: * so that Ierusalem shalbe called a faythfull & true cytye, & hyl of the Lord of hostes, yee, an holy hyl.

Thus sayth the Lord of hostes. There shall yet olde men & women dwell agayne in the stretes of Ierusalem: yee, & soch as go w itaues in their hades for very age. The stre-tes of the cytye also shalbe full of yonge boyes and damselles, playenge vpon the strates.

Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes: yf ye sydue of this people thynke it to be impossible in these dayes, * shuld it therfore be un-possible in my syght, sayth the Lord of hoo-stes? Thus sayth the Lord of hostes: Be-holde, I will deliuer my people from the lan-de of the east & west, and wyl bypunge them agayne: that they maye dwell at Ierusalem.
* They shalbe my people, & I wyl by the God, in treuth and ryghteousnesse.

Thus sayth the Lord of hostes: let your handes be stronge, ye that nowe heare these wordes by the mouth of the prophetes, whych be in these dayes & the foundacyon is layed vpon

The Prophecy

*Agg. i. a.

upon the Lord of hostes house that the temple may be builded. For why? before the days, neither men nor catel could dwynne any thinge, neither myght any man come in and out in rest, for trouble: but I lett every man go agaynst his neyghboure.

*Agg. ii. c.

Neuertheles, I wyll now intreate presy due of thys people nomore as afore tyme, sayth the Lord of hostes, but they shalbe a sede of peace. The vineyarde shal geue her frute, & grounde shal geue her increase, and the heuens shal geue theyr dewe: and I shal cause the remnant of thys people, to haue all these in possession. And it shal come to passe, that lyke as ye were a curse amonge the heathen (O ye house of Juda, and ye house of Israel) Euen so wil I deliuer you, that ye shalbe a blessing: feare not, but let your handes be stronge.

*Eph. iiii. c.
*ach. vii. b.
*Isa. ii. b.

For thus sayth the Lord of hostes: lyke as I decyded to punyssh you, what tyme as your fathers prouoked me vnto wrath, sayeth the Lord of hostes, & spared not. Euen so am I determined now in these dayes, for to do well vnto the house of Juda & Jerusalem, therefore feare ye not. Nowe & thynge that ye shall do, are these: * Speake euery man the treuth vnto his neyghboure, execute iudgement truly, and peaceably wythyn your portes, none of you ymagin euil in his herte agaynst his neyghboure, and loue no false othes: for all these are & thynge that I hate, sayeth the Lord. And the worde of the Lord of hostes, came vnto me, sayeng: thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. The fast of the fourth moneth, & fast of the fifth, the fast of the seuenth, and the fast of the tenth, shall be ioye and gladnesse, and prosperous hye feastes vnto the house of Juda: Onely, loue the treuth and peace.

*Esa. i. a.
*Isa. xlii. a.
*Jer. xxi. a.

Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. There shall yet come people, and the inhabitants of many cytyes, & they that dwell in one cyte shal go to another, sayeng. * Up, let vs go, & praye before the Lord, let vs seke the Lord of hostes, I wyll go w pou: yee, moche people & myghty heathen shal come & seke the Lord of hostes at Jerusalem, and to praye before the Lord. Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes. In & tyme shall ten men (out of all maner of languages of the Gentyles) take one Jewe by the hemme of his garment, & saye: we wyll go w pou, for we haue herde, that God is amonge you.

The ix. Chapter.

The conuersion of the Gentyles. The coming of Christ to pynge on an asse.

The worde of the Lord shalbe receaued at Adzach, & Damascus shalbe hys offering: for the eyes of all men & of & trybes of Israel shal loke vnto the Lord. The borders of hemath shal be her-de therby, Tyrus also & Sidon, for they are very wyle, * Tyrus shal make her self stronge, heape vp syluer as & sande, & golde as & claye of & stretes. Behold, the Lord shal take her in, & haue her in possession: * he shal smyte downe her power into & see, and she shalbe consumed w fyre. This shal Ascalon se, & be afraied. * Gaza shalbe very forp, so shal Accaron also, because her hope is come to confusion. For & kynge of Gaza shal perishe, & at Ascalon shal no man dwell.

Strangers shal dwell at Asdod, & as for & pynde of the Philistynes, I shal rote it out. * Theyr bloude wyll I take awaye from theyr mouth, & theyr abhominacyons from amonge theyr teeth. Thus they shalbe left for our God, yee, they shalbe as a prince in Juda, & Accaron lyke as a Jebus. And so wyll I copase my house rounde about w my men of warre goynge to & fro: that no oppressoure come vpon the eny more. For that haue I sene now with myne eyes.

* Reioyce & greatly, O daughter Syon be glad, O daughter Jerusalem. For lo, thy kynge, cometh vnto the, euen the ryghteous and sauoure, Lowly & symple is he, herp deth vpon an asse, & vpon & foale of an asse. I will rote out & charrettes fro Ephraim, & the horse from Jerusalem, & batell bowes shalbe destroyed. he shal geue the doctrine of peace vnto & heathen, * & his dominyon shalbe from & one see to & other, & from the floudes to the endes of the worlde.

Thou also thozow the bloude of thy couenaunt: halt let thy prisoners out of the pitte wher i his no water. Turne you now to & ströge holde, ye & be in prison, & longe for to be deliuered. And this daye I byrnyng & worde, & I wyll rewarde & double agayne. For Juda haue I bent out as a bowe for me & Ephraim haue I fylled. Thy sonnes, O Sidon, will I rayse vp agaynst & Grekes, & make & as a gyauntes sworde: & the Lord God shalbe sene aboue them, & hys dartes shal go forth as & lyghtenynge. The Lord God shal blowe the trompet, and shal come forth as a storme out of the south.

The Lord of hostes shal defende them, they shal consume & deuoure, & subdue them with & syng stones. They shal byrnyng & rage, as it were thozow wyne. They shalbe fylled lyke & basens, & as & hornes of & aulter. The Lord their God shal deliuer them in the daye, as & flock of his people: for as precyous stones of a dyademe they shal be lett vpon his lande. O how prosperous and goodly a thynge shal that be! The corne shal make & ponge men chearefull, and the new wyne the maydens.

The v. Chapter.

The people is moued to requyre the doctrine of treuth of the Lord. The Lord promyseth to byset and comforte the house of Israel.

Praye

Of zachary.

No. cxi.

Raye the Lorde then by tymes to geue you & latter rayne, * so shal the Lorde make bright cloudes, ad geue you rayne ynough for all the increase of the felde. For wayne is the answer of Idols. The sothslayers se lyes, and tell but bayne dreames: the conforte that they geue, is no thyng worth. Therefore, go they astraye lyke a flocke of shepe, and are troubled, because they haue no & shepherde. My wroth full displeasure is moued at the shepherdes, & I will byset the goates. For the Lorde of hostes will graciously viset his flock, the house of Juda, and holde them as a goodly fayre horse in the batell. Out of & Juda shal come the helmet & the nayle the batell bowe, ad all the princes together. They shalbe as & gyauntes, which in the batell treade downe the myre vpon the stretes. They shal fyght for the Lorde shalbe wyth them, so that the horsmen shalbe confounded.

I wyll conforte the house of Juda, and preserue the house of Joseph. I wyll turne them also, for I pitie them: and they shalbe lyke as they were, when I had not cast the of. For I the Lorde am their God, ad wyll heare the. Ephraim shalbe as a gyaunt, ad their hert shalbe chereful as thozow wyne: yee, their children shal se it, and be glad, ad their hert shal reioyce in the Lorde. I wyll blowe for them and gather them together, for I wyll redeme them. They shal increase, as they increased afore. I wyll sowe the amonge the people, that they may thynke vpon me in farre countrees: they shal lyue with their children, & turne agayne. I wyll byrnyng them agayne also from the lande of Egypt, and gather them out of Assyria. I wyll carpe them into the lande of Galaad & to Libanus and they shal wante nothinge. he shal go vpon the see of trouble, & smyte the ice waues: so that all the depe floudes shalbe dryed vp. The proude boastyng of Assur shalbe cast downe, and the sceptre of Egypte shal be taken awaye. I wyll conforte the in the Lorde, that they maye walke in his name, sayeth the Lorde.

The xi. Chapter.

The destruction of the temple. The care of the sayth: full is conuertyed to Christ by the father. A greuous byson agaynst Jerusalem and Juda.

Ben thy dozes, O Libanus, that & tyme maye consume thy Cedre trees. Howle ye & fyre trees for the Cedre is fallen, yee, all the proude are wasted awaye. Howle (O ye oke trees of Basan) for the myghty stronge wood is cut downe. When may heare the shepherdes mourne, for their gloze is destroyed. When may heare the Lyons whelpes roare, for the pynde of Jordane is wasted awaye. Thus sayeth the Lorde my God: flete the shepe of the slaughter, whiche shalbe slayne of those & possesse them: yet they take it for no sunne, but they that sell them, saye: The Lord be thacked, I am rich: yee, their a wne shepherdes spare the not. Therefore wyll I nomore spare those that dwell in the lande, (sayeth the Lorde) but lo, I wil deliuer the people, euery mā into his neyghbours hande and into the hande of his kynge: that they maye smyte the lande, and out of their handes I wyll not deliuer them.

I my selfe fedde & slaughter shepe (a poore flocke herely) and toke vnto me two staffes: the one is called lounge mekenesse, the other is called destroyer, ad so kepte the shepe. These shepherdes I putt out of offyce in one moneth, for I myght not awaye wyth the, neither had they eny delityc in me. Then sayde I: I wyll fede you nomore & thynge that dyeth, let it dye: and that wyll perishe, let it perishe, and let the remnant cate, euery one the fleshe of his neyghboure. I toke also my lounge meke staff, and brake it, & I myghte disannull the & couenaunt, which I made wyth all people. And so it was broke in that daye.

Then the poore symple shepe that had a respect vnto me, knewe therby, that it was the worde of the Lorde. And I sayde vnto them: yf ye thynke it good, byng hyther my pyce: yf no, then leaue. * So they wayed downe. xxx. syluer peng, the value & I was pypled at. And the Lorde said vnto me: cast it vnto the potter (a goodly pyce for me to be valued at of them) and I toke the xxx. syluer peng, and cast them to the potter in & house of the Lorde. Then brake I my other staff also (namely destroyer) & I might lowse & brotherhead betwixt Juda and Israel. And the Lorde sayde vnto me. Take & also the staff of a foolyshe shepherde: for lo, I wyll rayse vp a shepherde in the lade, which shal not seke after & thinges that be lost, ner care for such as go astraye: he shal not heale & wounded, he shal not norysh the thinge that is whole: but he shal eate the fleshe of such as be fat, and teare theyr clawes in peeces.

Idols shepherde, that leaueth the flocke. The swerde shal come vpon hys arme and vpon hys ryght eye. hys arme shalbe cleane dryed vp, and hys ryght eye shalbe soze blynded.

The xii. Chapter.

The destruction and buryynge agayne of Jerusalem.

The heuy burthen which the Lorde hath decyded for Israel. Thus sayeth the Lorde * which spred the heauens abrode, layde the foundation of the earth & and geueth man the breath of lyfe. Beholde, I wyll make Jerusalem a cuppe of surfet, vnto all the people that are rounde about her.

RR iii Per,

The Prophecy.

*Zach. xiii. c *Yee, Iuda hym selfe also shall be in the sege agaynst Jerusalem. At the same tyme wyl I make Jerusalem an heuy stone for al people, so that al soch as lyft it vp, shall be toare and rente, and all the people of the earth shall be gathered together agaynst it.

*In that daye, sayeth the Lorde, I wyl make all houses abashed, and those that ryde vpon them, to be out of their wittes. I wyl open myne eyes vpon the house of Iuda, and smyte all the houses of the people with blindness. And the princes of Iuda shall save in their hertes. The inhabyters of Jerusalem shall geue me consolacio in the Lorde of hostes their God. In that tyme wyl I make the princes of Iuda lyke an hote burnynge oue with wood, and lyke a cresset of fyre among the strawe: so that they shall consume all the people rounde aboute them, both vpon the ryght hande & the left. Jerusalem also shall be inhabyted agayne: namely, in the same place where Jerusalem standeth.

*The Lorde shall preserue the tētes of Iuda lyke as a fore tyme: so the glory of the house of Dauid: & the glory of the cytelys of Jerusalem, shall be but lytle regarded, in coparison of the glory of Iuda. In that daye shall the Lorde defende the cytelys of Jerusalem: so that the weakest then amonge the shall be as *Dauid: and the house of Dauid shall be lyke as Gods house, and as the Angell of the Lorde before them.

At the same tyme wyl I go about to destroye all soch people as come agaynst Jerusalem. Moreover, vpon the house of Dauid and vpon the cytelys of Jerusalem *wyl I poure out the sprete of grace & compassion, so that they shall loke vpon me, who they haue feared: & they shall bewepe hi as me moune for their only begotten sone: yee, & be soz for him, as me are soz for their first chyld.

*Then shall there be a great mournynge at Jerusalem, lyke as the lamentacion at Ademnon in the felde of Maggadon. And the lande shall bewaile euery kyndred by the selues. The kyndred of the house of Dauid the selues alone, and their wyues by the selues: The kyndred of the house of *Nathan them selues alone, and their wyues by the selues. The kyndred of the house of Leui them selues alone, and their wyues by the selues. The kyndred of the house of Semei them selues alone, and their wyues by the selues. In lyke maner, all the other generacions euer yphone by them selues alone, and their wyues by them selues.

The xiii. chapter.

Of the well of grace and truth. Of the cleane rebbaunce of Idolatry, and of false prophetes.

*That tyme shall the house of Dauid and the cytelys of Jerusalem haue an open *well, to wash of synne and uncleynesse. And then (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) *I wyl destroye the names of Idoles out of the lade: so that they shall nomore be put in remembraunce.

*As for the false prophetes also, and the vncleyn sprete, I shall take the out of the lande. So that yf any of them prophete any more, his a wone father and mother that begat him, shall saye vnto hi. Thou shalt dye for thou speakest lyes vnder the name of the Lorde: yee, his a wone father and mother that begat him, shall woude him, whē he prophetieth. And then shall those prophetes be confounded, euery one of his visio when he prophetieth: nether shall they were sack clothes any more, to disceane men with all. But he shall be sayne to saye: *I am no prophet: I am an husbandman, for so am I taught by Adam fro my youth vp. And yf it be sayde vnto hym: how came these woundes then in thine handes? he shall answer. Thus am I wounded in the house of myne a wone frendes.

Arise, O thou swearde, vpon my shepherde, and vpon the prince of my people, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. *Smyte the shepherd, and the shepe shall be scatred abrode, and so wyl I turne myne hande to the lytle ones. And it shall come to passe (sayeth the Lorde) that in all the lande two partes shall be roted out, *but the thyrde parte shall remayne therein. *And the same thyrde parte wyl I bringe thorow fire, & wil cleanse the, as the siluer is clenfed: yee, & trye the lyke as golde is tryed. Then shall they call vpon my name and I will heare them: I wyl saye: it is my people. And they shall saye: Lorde my God.

The wallynge of the church vnder the figure of Jerusalem. Of the kyngdome of the Lorde.

*Beholde, the daye of the Lorde cometh, that shall be spoiled and robbed, for I will gather together all the heathen to fight agaynst Jerusalem: so the citie shall be wonne, the houses spoiled, and the weme defiled. The halfe of the citie shall go awaye into captiuite, and the residue of the people shall not be caried out of the citie. After that shall the Lorde go forth to fight agaynst those heathen, as men vse to fyght in the daye of battel. The shall his fete stand vpon the mount olyuete, that lyeth vpon the east syde of Jerusalem. And the mount olyuete shall cleue in two, eastwarde and westwarde, so that there shall be a great valley, and the halfe mount shall remoue towarde the north, & the other towarde the south. And ye shall see vnto the valley of my hylls, for the valley of the hylls shall reach vnto Masal. Yee, he shall see lyke as ye fled for the earthquake in the dayes of Osiab kyng of Iuda. And the Lorde my God shall come, & al saintes with him. In that daye shall it not

The booke of the Prophete Malachy.

The first Chapter.

A complaine agaynst Israel and her prestes.

Ye heuy burthen, which the Lorde hath layd vpon you, sayeth the Lorde: & yet ye saye: wherein haue thou loued vs?

*Was not Esau Jacobs brother, sayeth the Lorde: yet haue I loued Jacob, and hated Esau: * yee, I haue made hys hylls wast and his heritage a wilderness for dragons. And though Edom sayde: well, we are destroyed, we wyl go buyde vpon agayne the places that be wasted, yet (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) * what they buyded, that was called a cursed lande, and a people, whome the Lorde hath euer bene angrye withall.

Poure eyes haue sene it, and ye poure selues must confesse, the Lorde hath brought the lade of Israel to great honoure. * Shulde not a sonne honoure his father, & a seruaunt his master? * Yf I be now a father, where is myne honoure? * Yf I be the Lorde, where am I feared? sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

Now to you prestes, I despyse my name. And ye saye: wherein haue we despyed thy name? In this, ye offere vncleyn bled vpon myne alter. And ye wil saye: wherein haue we offered any vncleyn thinge vnto the? In this ye saye: the alter of the Lorde is not to be regarded. Ye offere the blynde, is not that euell? And ye offere the lame and sycke, is not that euell? * Yee, offere it vnto thy prince, shall he be content with the, or accepte thy person, sayeth the Lorde of hostes?

And now make poure prayer before God, that he maye haue mercy vpon vs: for soche thinges haue ye done. Shall he regard your personnes, thinke ye, sayeth the Lorde of hostes: Yee, what is he amonge you, that wyl do so moch as to shut the doores, or to kinde the fyre vpon myne alter for naught? * I haue no pleasure in you, sayeth the Lorde of hostes: and as for the meat offering, I wyl not accepte it at your hande. * For fro the rising vp of the sonne vnto the going downe of the same, my name is greates amonge the Gentiles: yee, in euery place shall there sacrifice be done, and cleane meat offering offered vnto my name: for my name is great amonge the heathen, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. But ye haue vnhalowed it, in that ye saye, the alter of the Lorde is not to be regarded, and the thyng that is set ther vpon not worthy to be eaten.

Now saye ye: It is but labour and trouble, it not be lyghte, other cleare or dymme.

* This shall be that speciall daye which is knowne vnto the Lorde: nether day nor nyght but about the euynng tyme it shall be light.

* In that tyme shall there waters of lyfe runne out fro Jerusalem: the halfe parte of them towarde the east see, and the other halfe towarde the vntermost see, and shall continue both somer and wynter. * And the Lorde hym selfe shall kyngue ouer all the earth.

At the tyme shall there be one Lord onely, & his name shall be but one. He shall go about the whole erth, as vpon a felde: fro Gibea to Kenō, & fro the south to Jerusalem. He shall be set vp, & inhabited in her place: fro Ben Iamyns porte, vnto the place of the first porte, & vnto the corner porte: & from the tower of Hananeell, vnto the kynges wyne prestes. There shall men dwel, & there shall be no more cursinge, but Jerusalem shall be safely inhabited. This shall be the plage, wherewith the Lorde will smyte all people, ye haue fought agaynst Jerusalem. Namely, their flesh shall consume awaye, though they stāde vpon their fete, their eyes shall be corrupt in their holes and their tynge shall consume in their mouth.

In that daye shall the Lorde make a great sedicion amonge the, so that one man shall take another by the hande, & laye his handes vpon the handes of his neyghboure. * Iuda shall fyght also agaynst Jerusalem, & the goodes of all the heathen shall be gathered together round aboute: golde & syluer & a very great multitude of clothes. And so shall this plage goo ouer horses, mules, camels, asses, & all the bestes: & shall be in the host, lyke as vnder plage was. Euery one shall remayne then of all the people, which cam agaynst Jerusalem, shall go vpon perly, to worshyppe the kyng (cuen the Lorde of hostes) * and to kepe the feast of tabernacles. And loke what generation vpon the earth goeth vp to Jerusalem for to worshyp the kyng (cuen the Lorde of hostes) vpon the same shall come no rayne. Yf the kyndred of Egypte go not vp, & come not, it shall not rayne vpon them nether.

* This shall be the plage wherewith the Lorde wil smyte all the heathen, & come not vp to kepe the feast of tabernacles: yee, this shall be the synne plage of Egypt & the synne plage of al people: & go not vp to kepe the feast of tabernacles.

At that tyme shall the rydynge gere of the horses be holy vnto the Lorde, & the kettels in the Lordes house shall be lyke the basens before the alter: yee, al the kettels in Jerusalem and Iuda, shall be holy vnto the Lorde of hostes: and all they that laye offerings, shall come & take of them, & dyght the there in. And at that tyme there shall be no more Cananites in the house of the Lorde.

The Prophecy.

uaple, ad thus haue ye thought scoone at it (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) offeringe robbery, yee, the lame and the sycke. Ye haue brought me in a meat offeringe, shulde I accept it of your hande, sayeth the Lorde: Curled be the dissembler, which hath in his flocke one that is a male, ad when he maketh a vow, offereth a spotted one vnto the Lorde. For I am a greete kynge (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) and my name is fearfull among the heathen.

The.ii. Chapter.

Threatenings agaynst the prestes beynge seducers of the people.

Ad now (O ye prestes) this comaundement toucheth you: yf ye wyll not heare it, ner regard it, to geue y glorie vnto my name, sayeth the Lorde of hostes, I will sende a curse vpon you, & will curse poure blessinges: yee curse them wyll I yf ye do not take hede. Beholde, I shall corrupte your sede, and cast dunge in poure faces, euen the dunge of poure solemne feastes and it shall cleue fast vpon you. And ye shall knowe, that I haue sent this comaundement vnto you: that my couenaunt which I made with Leui, might stande sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

I made a couenaunt of lye & peace wth him: this I gaue him, that he myght stande in awe of me: and so he dyd feare me, ad had my name in reuerence. The lawe of truthe was in his mouth, ad there was no wickednesse founde in his lippes. He walked with me in peace and equyte, and dyd turne many one awaye fro their synnes. For in the prestes lippes shulde be sure knowledge, y men may like the lawe at his mouth, for he is a messaunger of the Lorde of hostes. But as for you, ye are gone cleue out of y waye, ad haue caused the multitude to be offended at the lawe: ye haue broken the couenaunt of Leui, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. Therefore wyll I also make you to be despyled, and to be of no reputacion amonge all the people: because ye haue not kepte my wayes, but haue bene parciall in the lawe.

Haue we not all one father? Hath not one God made vs? why doth euery one of vs then despise his awne brother, & so breake the couenaunt of oure fathers? Now hath Iuda offended: yee, the abhominacion is done in Israel and in Ierusalem: for Iuda hath despyled the Sanctuary of the Lorde, which he loued, and hath kepte the daughter of a straunge God. But the Lorde shal destroye the ma that doth this: (yee, both the master ad the scoler) out of the tabernacle of Jacob with hym that offereth vp meat offeringe vnto the Lorde of hostes. Now haue ye brought it to this poynte agayne, y the aulter of the Lorde is couered with teares, wepyng and mournynge: so that I wyll nomore regard the meat offeringe, nether wyll I receaue or accepte any thyng at your handes. And yet ye saye: wherefore? Cuse because that where as the Lorde made a couenaunt betwixte y and the wyfe of thy youth, thou hast despyled. Yet is the thynge a wne company and marped wyfe.

So dyd not the one, and yet had he an excellent sprete. What dyd then the one? He sought the sede promised of God. Therefore loke well to your sprete, and let no man despyle the wyfe of his youth. Yf y hatest her put her awaye sayeth the Lorde God of Israel and geue her clothyng for the scoone, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. Loke well then to poure sprete, ad despyle her not. Ye greue the Lorde with your wordes, & yet ye saye: wherewithal haue we greued him? In this, that ye saye. Al that do euil are good in the syght of God, and soch please hym. Or els where is the God that punisheth?

The.iii. Chapter.

Of the messenger of the Lorde John Baptiste, of the dape of the Lorde, and of Elias.

Behold, I will sende my messainger, whiche shall prepare the waye before me: ad the Lorde whom ye wolde haue, shal soone come to his temple, yee, eue the messaunger of the couenaunt whom ye longe for.

Behold, he cometh, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. But who may abyde the dape of his comynge? Who shalbe able to endure, when he appeareth? For he is like a goldsmithes fyre, ad lyke walchers sope. He shal syt him downe to trye and to clesse the syluer, he shal poure the chyldren of Leui, and purifye them lyke as golde and syluer: that they maye bringe meat offerings vnto the Lorde in righteousness. Then shall the offeringe of Iuda and Ierusalem be acceptable vnto the Lorde, lyke as from the begynnyng ad in the yeres, a fore tyme. I wyll come and punyche you, ad I my selfe wyll be a wyf to wytnes agaynst the wyches, agaynst the aduouterers, agaynst false sweaters: yee, & agaynst those that wrongeously kepe back the hyzelynges dewty: which were the wyddowes and the fatherlesse, and oppresse the straunger, and feare not me, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. For I am the Lorde that chaunge not, & ye (O chyldren of Jacob) wyll not leaue of ye are gone awaye from myne ordinaunces, and seng the tyme of your forsaithers haue ye not kepte them.

Turne you now vnto me, and I wyll turne me vnto you, sayeth the Lorde of hostes: ye saye, wherin shal we turne? Shulde a man vse falshed and disceat wth God as ye vse ye vse falshed and disceate wth me: yet ye saye wherin vse we disceate wth the? In theses & beaue offerings. Therefore are ye cursed wth penury, because ye dissemble wth me, all the sorte of you.

Bringe euery tith into my barne, that there maye be meat in myne house: and prouene wythall (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) yf I wyll not open the wyndowes of heaue vnto you, ad poure you out a blessing with plenteousnesse. Yee, I shall reprove the consumer for your sakes, so y he shall not eate vp the frute of poure grounde, nether shall the wynde be bare in the felde, sayeth the Lorde of hostes: In so moch that all people shall saye, that ye be blessed, for ye shall be a pleasaunt lande, sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

Speake harde wordes agaynst me, sayeth the Lorde. And yet ye saye: What haue we spoken agaynst the? Ye haue sayde: It is but lost labour, to serue God: what profyt haue we for keepynge his comaundementes, and for walkynge humbly before the Lorde of hostes? Therefore maye we saye, that y proude are happye, & that they which deale wth vngodlynesse, are sett vp: for they tempte God, and yet escape.

But they that feare God, saye thus one to another: the Lorde conspydereth and heareth it. Yee, it is before him a memoial booke, wyrtten for soch as feare the Lorde, and remembre his name. And in the dape that I wyll make (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) they shalbe myne awne possession: and I will fauoure them, lyke as a man fauoureth his awne sonne, that doth hym scrupce. Turne you therefore, and conspyde what dyfference is betwixte y righteous and vngodly, betwixte him that serueth God, and him that serueth hym not.

For march, the dape cometh that shal burne as an ouen: and all the proude, yee, ad all soch as do wyckednesse, shalbe strawe, & the dape that is for to come, shal burne the vp (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) so that it shal leaue them nether rote ner braunche.

But vnto you that feare my name, shal that Sonne of ryghteousnesse aryse, and health shalbe vnder his wynges: ye shal go forth, ad multiplie as the fat calues, ye shal treade downe the vngodly: for they shalbe lyke the asches vnder the soles of poure fete in the dape that I shal make, sayeth the Lorde of hostes.

Remembre the lawe of Moyses my seruauant, whych I comypted vnto hym in Ierusalem for all Israel, wth the statutes and ordinaunces. Beholde, I wyll sende you Elias the prophet: before the comynge of the dape of the greete and fearefull Lorde. He shal turne the hertes of the fathers to theyr chyldren, and the hertes of the chyldren to theyr fathers, that I come not ad smyte the earth with cursynge.

To the Reader,

Consideracyon that the bo-

Let us before are founde in the hebreue tonge, receaved of all men: & that the other folowynge, which are called Hagiotographa (because they were wont to be reade, not openly and in comen, but as it were in secret and aparte) are nether founde in the hebreue nor in the Calde: in which tonges they haue not of longe bene wrytten (in lesse then it were happily the boke of Sapience) wher upon it were now very harde to repayre & amende them: And that also they are not receaved nor taken as legittimate & leasfull, as well of the hebreues as of the whole Church, as S. Hierome sheweth: we haue separat them, & sett them asyde, that they may the better be knownen: to thyntent that men maye knowe of which boke wrytyn ought to be receaved, and of which not. For the sayde S. Hierome speakynge of the boke of Judith (which is Hagiotographa) sayth, & the auctoritie therof is not esteemed worthy and sufficient to confyrme and stablysh the thynges that lyght in disputacyon. And generally of all the boke called Hagiotographa, he sayth, that men maye reade them to the edifyinge of the people: but not to confyrme & strengthen the doctrine of the Church. I leave oute here the lawe (as they call it) of Canon. c. Sancta Romana. xv. distinc. were he sheweth his iudgement. Lykewys the Glose of c. Canones. xvi. distinc. which sayth, that men reade the, but not in generall: as though he shulde saye, that generally and thorowly they are not allowed. And not wythout a cause: For that they haue bene corrupted and falsified in many places, it appeareth sufficiently by Eusebius in his boke called Historia Ecclesiastica: Whych thyng is easie to be knownen euen now a dayes in certen poyntes, namely in the boke of the Machabees: whose second boke S. Hierome confesseth that he founde not in the hebreue, by the meanes wherof it is become vnto vs the more suspect and the lesse receaved. In lyke manner is it of the thynde and fourthe boke of Esdras, whych S. Hierome protesteth that he wolde not haue translated, esteeming them for dreames: where as Josephus yet in his booke of hys Antiquities declareth & summe of the matter after the manner of a storpe, as well of the boke of Machabees as of the. iii. of Esdras: all though he esteame the boke compyled from the raygne of kynge Artaxerxes vnto hys tyme, to be Hagiotographa.

Wherfore then, whē thou wylt maynteyne any thyng for certen, rendryng a reason of thy sayth, take heade to procede therein by the lypynge and pyththye Scriptures, folowynge S. Peter, whych sayeth: he & speaketh, let hym speake as though he spake the worde of God. he sayeth the worde of God, as a thyng most true and certen, opened by the prophetes and Apostles, inspyred wyth the holy goost: of whom we haue wrytten moare cleare then the dape. Lawers haue greate desyre to confyrme and stablysh theyr oppynions by the lawe of man, saye, that they spake wythout lawe: how moch more feare and drede then ought he to haue, that sayth he is a Chyrtian, the whych holdeth not hym selfe, or reasteth not in the lawes of the lypynge God: but in mennes inuencions, iudgynge of all thynges accordynge to them, and leanyng to an vncerten ymagynacyon and phantasye: Let vs therfore that are buylded on the foundacyon of the holy prophetes and Apostles, and on the head corner stone (on whych they them selues were founded, and whych they preached, that is Iesus Chyrt, the sure stone) leaue the thynges that are vncerten to folowe the certē: holdynge vs and reasynge vs in them, and fastenynge oure ancre there, as in a sure place. For oure Chyrt sayth conspyllyng not in doutfull thynges, but in playne and moost certen assurance, and in moost true perswasyon, taken & confyrmed by infallible verite. In whych God graunte vs to walke perpetuallye, to thyntent that accordynge to it (fulfyllynge his holy wyll in vs, and settinge asyde all inuencions contrary vnto hym) we maye lyue to hys honour, and to the edifyinge of hys Church.

So be it.

Jo. ii.

The thynde boke of Esdras.

The fyrst Chapter.

Josias holdeth pasche. After his death to Jehoias hys sonne made kynge in hys steade: whom the kynge of Egypt putteth out, and setteth in hys brother Achasim. Jerusalem is destroyed, & Sedechias is taken.

Josias helde the feast of Easter in Jerusalem vnto the Lorde, & hys Pascheouer the xiiii. dape of the fyrst moneth. he set the prestes also in ordre (accordynge to theyr dayly courses) beyng arayed in luge garmetes in the temple of the Lorde. And he spake vnto the Levites & holy mynysters of Israel, & they shulde halowe them selues vnto the Lorde, to set the holy arche of the Lorde, in the house of the kynge Salomon the sonne of Dauid had buylded, and sayde. Ye shall no more beare the Arche vpon poure shulders. Now serue poure Lorde, & take the charge of hys people of Israel, after poure byllages and poure trybes: accordynge as kynge Dauid & kynge of Israel, hath ordeined, & accordynge as Salomon hys sonne hath honorably prepared: ye, loke & see al do seruyce in the temple, accordynge to the ordynge & distribucion of the principall men which are appoynted out of the trybes, to do seruyce for the chyliden of Israel. * Kyll the Pascheouer, & prepare offrynges for your brethren, & do accordynge to the comaundement of the Lorde, which was geuen vnto Moyses. And vnto the people of the house of Josias gaue. xxx. thousande of shepe, lambes, kyddes, & goates, & thre thousande oxen. These the kynge (of his kyngly liberalite) gaue vnto the people, accordynge as he had promised: & to the prestes for the Pascheouer, he gaue two M. shepe, & an hundred oxen. Moreover, Jechonias, & Semeias, & Nathanael brethren, & Halabias, Jechiel, & Josabad gaue them to the Pascheouer, fyue thousande shepe & fyue hundred bullockes.

And when these thynges were brought to passe, the prestes & the Levites stode goodly in theyr ordre, & had the vneuened byed thorow out the trybes. And after the ordynge of the principall men in the trybes, they offered vnto the Lorde in the sight of the people accordynge * as it is wrytten in the boke of Moyses, & so they roasted the Easter lambe as accordynge was. As for the thacke offrynges & the other, they dyght them in kettels and pottes, & set them before the people w good wyll, & afterwarde before them selues, and the prestes. For the prestes offered the fatt, vntyll the tyme was expyred, but the Levites prepared for the selues & for theyr brethren the chyliden of Aaron. The holy syngers also & chyliden of Asaph stode in theyr ordre, accordynge as Dauid deuyced. So dyd Asaph zachary & Jothun, whych were appoynted by the kynge. Moreover the porters & doze keepers stode by the dozes & diligently, so none went out of his stadyng & seruyce: for theyr brethren (the Levites) prepared for them. Thus were all thynges performed, that belonged to the offeryng of the Lorde. In the dape they helde the Pascheouer, and offered thankoffrynges besyde the sacrifice of the Lorde, accordynge to the comaundement of the kynge Josias.

So the chyliden of Israel whych were then present helde an honorable Pascheouer & feast of swete bread. vii. dayes luge. Pee soch a Pascheouer was not kepte in Israel, from the tyme of the prophet Samuel. And all the kynges of Israel helde not soch an Easter, as this which kynge Josias helde, & the prestes, the Levites, the Jewes & all Israel, of all them that were at Jerusalem. And in the xviii. yere of the raygne of Josias was this Pascheouer kept. And was a perfecte herte dyd kynge Josias orde all his workes, before the Lorde, & the thynges that were wrytten of hym in tymes past, concernynge those that synned & were vngodly agaynst the Lorde before all people, & that sought not the worde of the Lorde vpon Israel. * After al these actes of the kynge Josias, Pharaos kynge of Egypte wet by the waye and came towarde Carmis by Euphrates, & Josias went to mete hym. Then sent the kynge of Egypte vnto Josias sayng: what haue I to do w the, O kynge of Juda? I am not sent of the Lorde to fyght agaynst the, for my warre is vpon Euphrates, go thou thy waye home agayne in all haste. And Josias wolde not turne agayne vpon hys charret, but undertoke to fyght agaynst hym, & herkened not vnto the worde of the prophet, which he tolde him out of the mouth of God, but pytched a battayll agaynst hym in the felde of Mageddo. And the prynces prested to the kynge Josias. Then sayde the kynge vnto his seruauntes. Carry me awaye out of the battayll, for I am sore wounded. And immediatly his seruauntes toke him awaye out of the front of the battayll. Then sat he vpon the secōde charett, came to Jerusalem, dyed, & was buryed in his fathers sepulchre. And in al Jewry they mourned for Josias, pee the rulers also w theyr wyues made lamentacion for hym vnto this dape. And this was done euer still in Israel.

These thynges are wrytten in the boke of the storpes of the kynges of Juda, namely, all the actes and workes of the kynge Josias, his kyngly power & maiesty, his vnderstandynge in the lawe of God, & what he dyd, pee thynges which are not wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Israel & Juda. * And the people toke Rechomias the sonne of Josias and made hym kyng in steade of Josias his father, when he was xxxiii. yere olde. And he raygned ouer Israel thre monethes. And the kyng of Egypte put him downe, that he shuld not raygne in Jerusalem, & rayled vpon a tere of the people: namely, an. C. talentes of syluer & one talent of golde. The kyng of Egypte also made Joachim his brother kyng of Juda & Jerusalem. As for them of the kynges conseil w^{ch} the kyng him selfe & Zarcles his brother, he toke them, & carped them awayne prisoners into Egypt. It was a twetic yere olde was Joachim, when he was made kyng in the lade of Juda & Jerusalem, and he dyd euell before the Lord. After this, * Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon came vpon, & bounde him with bandes of yron, & carped hym vnto Babylon. Nabuchodonosor also toke all the vessels that were halowed in the temple of the Lord, & all the Jewels, & carped them vnto Babylon, & brought them in to his awone temple at Babylon. Of his vncleines & vngodlynes, it is wrytten in the booke of the actes of the kynges. And Joachim his sonne raygned in his steade. He was made kyng beyng. xviij. yere olde, and raygned but thre monethes & x. dayes in Jerusalem, & dyd euell before the Lord. So after a yere, Nabuchodonosor sent & caused him to be brought vnto Babylon with the holy vessels of the Lord, & made Sedechias his brother kyng of Juda & Jerusalem, whē he was xxi. yere olde: & he raygned. xi. yere.

* Jer. xxi. f. a.

And he dyd euell also in the syght of the Lord, & cared not for the wordes that were spoken vnto him * by the prophet Jeremey at the mouth of the Lord. And where he had made an othe vnto the kyng Nabuchodonosor, he forswore him selfe, & fel from hym hauping a styneck & a hert, & transgressed all the statutes and ordynances of the Lord God of Israel. The rulers also & heades of the people of the Lord dyd moche euell, & became vngodly, more then the heathen, beyng defiled in all maner of abhominacions. Pee & defiled the holy temple of the Lord at Jerusalem. And the God of theyr fathers sent his messengers vnto the, to turne them backe & to call them agayne from theyr synnes: for he wolde sayne haue spared them for his holy tabernacles sake. Neuertheles, they had his messengers in derisyon: & loke what God spake vnto the by his prophetes, they made but a spozte of it. This drewe on so longe, tyll the Lord was wroth wth his people for theyr vngodlynes, & tyll he caused the kynges of the Caldees to come vpon, which slew theyr yonge men wth the sword, & spared no body, nether yonge nor olde, nether mayden nether yonge man: but they were all deliuered in to the power of the kynges of the Caldees, & all the holy vessels of the Lord & the kynges treasures toke they, & carped them vnto Babylon. * As for the house of the Lord, they went vpon it, & brent it, & brake downe the walles of Jerusalem, set fyre vpon her towres, destroyed all her noble buyldinges & brought them to naught, and the people that were not slayne wth the sword they carped vnto Babylon.

Thus became they prisoners and bonde men of the kyng of Babylon, tyll they were deliuered & raygned for them selues, * w^{ch} the wordes of the Lord were fulfilled, whych he promysed them by the mouth of the prophet Jeremey, and tyll the lade had her rest: namely, all the tyme that it laye wayte, had it rest and quyetnes. lxxvii. yeres.

The.ii. Chapter.

¶ Cyrus geueth licence to the Jewes to returne to Jerusalem, and restoreth them the vessels of the temple. After that are there letters sende to Artaxerxes, which accuse the Jewes for buyldinge of the temple: and so is the buyldinge dysuene of vntill the ii. yere of Darius.

Now when kyng Cyrus raygned ouer the Persians, & when the Lord wolde perfourme the word that he had promysed by the mouth of the prophet Jeremey: the Lord rayled vpon the spirit of Cyrus, the kyng of Persians, so that he caused thys wrytynge to be proclaymed thorow oute hys whole realme, sayinge: Thus sayeth the kyng of Persians: The Lord of Israel that hys Lord hath made me kyng of the lande, and comaunded me to buylde hym an house at Jerusalem in Jewry. If there be any now of youre people, the Lord be with hym, and go vpon with hym to Jerusalem. And all they that dwell rounde aboute that place shall helpe them, whether it be with golde, wth syluer, wth gyftes, wth horses, and necessary catell, & all other thynges that are brought with a fre wyll to the house of the Lord at Jerusalem.

Then the principall men out of the tribes and vyllages of Juda and Benjamin stode vpon: so dyd the prestes also and the Levites (whom the Lord had moued) to go vpon, and to buylde the house of the Lord at Jerusalem. And they that were aboute them, helped them with al maner of golde, and syluer, and catell also, and with many liberal gyftes, and thys dyd many one, whose mynde was stered vpon thereto. * Kyng Cyrus also brought forth the vessels and ornamente that were halowed vnto the Lord, (whych Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon had carped awayne from Jerusalem, and consecrated them to hys idoll & ymage) and deliuered them to Mithridatus hys treasurer, and by hym they were deliuered lyuered to Salmanasar the debite in Jewry. And this was the nombre of them: Two thousand. C. syluer boules. xxx. syluer basens. xxx. basens of golde. ii. M. and. iii. C. vessels of syluer, & a thousande besyde. All the vessels of golde & syluer were. v. M. viii. C. & lxx. These were nobred vnto Salmanasar, & to them they were come agayne wth hym to Jerusalem out of the captiuite of Babylon. * Now in the tyme of kyng Artaxerxes the kyng of Persia, these men. Balemus and Mithridatus, Sabellius, Rathimus, Balthemus, Semelius the Scribe, and other that dwelt in Samaria & in other places vnder the domynion therof, wrote a letter vnto the kyng Artaxerxes, wherein they complayned vnto the kyng of them in Jewry & Jerusalem. The letter was made after thys maner.

Syr, thy seruantes Rathimus the story wryter, Sabellius the Scribe, & other iudges of the courte in Celosyria & Phenices. Be it knowne & manifest to oure Lord the kyng, & the Jewes which are come vpon from you vnto vs into the rebellious & wycked cytye, begynne to buylde it agayne, & the walles aboute it, & to sett vpon the temple a new. Now if thys cytye & the walles therof be set vpon agayne, they shall not onely refuse to geue tributes & taxes, but also rebell vnto agaynst the kyng. And for so moch as they take thys in hade now aboute the temple, we thought it reason, to thynke no scozne of it, but to shewe it vnto oure Lord the kyng, & to certifye hym therof: to thynke if it please the kyng, he may cause it to be fought in the bookes of olde: and shall fynde soche warnynge wrytten, & shall vnderstande, that thys cytye hath all waye bene rebellious & dysobedient, & it hath subdued kynges & cytyes, & that the Jewes whych dwell therein, haue euer bene a rebellious, obstynate, vnfaithfull, and fyghtynge people, for the which cause this cytye is wasted. Wherefore now we certifye oure Lord the kyng, & if thys cytye be buylde & occupied agayne, & the walles therof set vpon a new, it canst haue no passage into Celosyria & Phenices.

Then wrote the kyng to Rathimus the story wryter, to Balthemus, to Sabellius the Scribe, & to the other officers & dwellers in Syria and Phenices, after thys maner: I haue red the epistle whych thou sentest vnto me, and haue comaunded to make diligent search, & haue founde, that the cytye hath euer rebelled kynges, & the same people are dysobedient, & haue caused moche warre, & that myghty kynges haue raygned in Jerusalem, which also haue rayled vpon taxes of Syria and Phenices. Wherefore, I haue comaunded those people, that they shall not buylde the cytye, & they make no more in it, and that they procede no farther wth the buyldynge: for so moch as it myght be the cause of warre, and displeasure vnto kynges.

Now when Rathimus and Sabellius the Scribe, & the rulers in the lade had red the wrytynge of kyng Artaxerxes, they gatt them together, & came in all haste to Jerusalem wth an hoost of horsemen, and wth moche people of fote, & forbad the buylde. And so they left off from buyldynge of the temple, vnto the secod yere of kyng Darius.

The.iii. Chapter.

¶ Darius maketh a feast. The thre sentences of the thre yonge men, of whych the story is declared.

Kyng Darius made a great feast vnto his seruantes, vnto all hys courtiers, & to all the officers of Medea and Persia, & to all the debytes and rulers that were vnder hym, from India vnto Ethiopia, an hundred & xxvii. countres. So when they had eaten & dröcken beyng satysfied, and were gone home agayne, Darius the kyng wente into his chambze, layed hym downe to slepe, and so awaked.

Then the thre yonge men, that kepte the kynges personne, & watched hys body, comened amonge them selues, & spake one to another: let euery one of vs saye some thyng, & loke whose sentece is wyser & more excellent then the other, vnto hym shall kyng Darius geue greete gyftes, & clothe hym with purple. He shall geue hym vessels of golde to dryncke in, clothes of golde & coneynges: he shall make hym a costly charret, & a bydle of golde, he shall geue hym a bonnet of whyte sylke, & a cheyne of golde aboute hys neck: & he shall be the secod & principall next vnto kyng Darius, & that because of his wysdome, and shall be called the kynges kynsman.

So, euery one wrote his meanynge, sealed it, & layed it vnder the kynges pelowe, & sayde: when the kyng aryseth, we wyll geue him oure wrytynge, & loke whose worde shall kyng & hys chiefe Lordes iudge to be the moost wysely spoken, & same shall haue the victory. The first wrote: Wyne is a stronge thyng. The second wrote: The kyng is stronger. The thyrde wrote: Wemen haue yet more strength, but aboue all thynges the trouth beareth awayne the victory. Now when the kyng was rylen vpon, they toke theyr wrytynge & deliuered them vnto hym, & so he red the. He sent he forth to call al his chiefe lordes, all the debytes & rulers of the countres of Medea & Persia. And when they were set downe in the conseil, the wrytynge were red before them. And he comaunded to call for the yonge men, & they myght declare theyr meanynge the selues by mouth. So when they were sent for, & came in, the kyng sayde vnto them: shewe vs & make vs to vnderstande what the thynges are that ye haue wrytten.

¶ Aaa iii. Then

D Then beganne ſpyte (which had ſpoken of the ſtrength of wyne) & ſayde: O ye men, * ſpyte is maruelous ſtrōge, & ouercōmeth them ſpyte it: it dyſceaueth the mynde, & bypnyeth both the pooze man & the kyng to botage & vaupte. Thus doth it alſo with the bondman & with the fre, with the pooze & ryche: it taketh awaye theyr vnderſtādyng, and maketh them careleſſe and mery, ſo none of them remembereþ any heynynſſe dett or dewtye: It cauſeth a man to thynke alſo that ſpyte which he doth, is honeſt & good: & remēbreth not ſpyte is a kyng, nor ſpyte is in auctoryte, & that he ought not to do ſuch thynges. Moreover, when men are dyynckynge, they forgett all frendſhip, all brotherly faythfulneſſe & loue: but as ſoone as they are drōken, they drawe out ſpyte from ſpyte, & ſorſen vp agayne, they cannot tell what they byd: iudge ye now, is not wyne the ſtrongeſt? ſo who wolde els take in hand to do ſuch thynges? And when he had ſpoken this, he helde his tonge.

The.iii. Chapter.

The declaration of the.ii. laſt ſentences of the young men, propheſied in the Chapter before: of which the laſt, that is, that verſe beareth the victorie in all thynges, is moſt commended & allowed. Darius wyrteth letters to all rulers vnder hym, that they ſhulde abyde zojobabel to the buyldynge of Jeruſalem.

A Then ſeconde (which had ſayde, that the kyng was ſtrōger) beganne to ſpeake, ſaying: O ye men, are not they ſtrongeſt & moſt excellēt, ſpyte conquere the lande, & the ſee, & all that is in ſpyte, and in the earth? Now is the kyng lord of all theſe thynges, & hath domynyon of the all: and loke what he commaundeth, it is done. If he ſende his me forth a warfare, they go, & breake downe hylles, walles & towres. They are ſlayne, & ſlaue (other men) them ſelues, & ouerpalle not the kynges worde. If they get ſpyte victorie, they bypnye ſpyte all ſpyte. Lyke wyſe, the other ſpyte medle not with warres & ſpyghtynge, but tyll the grounde: when they reape, they bypnye trybute vnto the kyng. And yf the kyng alone do but comaunde to kyll, they kyll: yf he comaunde to forgyue, they forgyue: yf he comaunde to ſmyte, they ſmyte: yf he byd dryue awaye, they dryue awaye: yf he comaunde to buylde, they buylde: yf he comaunde to breake downe, they breake downe: yf he comaunde to plante, they plante. The comen people & the rulers are obedient vnto hym. And the kyng in the meane ſeaſon ſytteth hym downe, eateth, and dyyncketh, and taketh his reſt: then kepe they watch rounde aboute the kyng, & not one of them darre get hym out of ſpyte, to do his awne buſynes, but muſt be obediēt vnto ſpyte at a worde. Judge ye now, O ye men, how ſhulde not he go farre aboue vnto who men are thus obedient? And when he had ſpoken this, he helde his tonge. The thyrde, whoſe name was zojobabel, which had ſpoken of women & of trueth, began to ſaye after this maner: O ye men, it is not ſpyte greates kyng, it is not ſpyte multitude of men, nether is it wyne ſpyte excellēt: Who is it then ſpyte hath the lordſhipp ouer them? Haue not women borne the kyng, and all ſpyte people that rule thoſe thynges? Haue not women borne the, and brought them vp, ſpyte plante the vynges, wherout the wyne cometh? They make garments for all men, they geue honour vnto all men, & without women can not men lyue. If they gather golde, & ſyluer, & all precious thynges, and ſe a ſayze well fauoured woman, they leaue all to gether, and turne theyr eyes onely vnto the woman, & gape vpon her, & haue more deſyre vnto her, then vnto ſpyte & golde, or any maner of precious thyng. * A man leaueh his father & brought hym vp, leaueh his awne natural cōuntee, & cleaueth vnto the woman: yee he ſeopardeth his lyfe with ſpyte woman, & remēbreth nether father, ner mother, ner cōuntee. By thys the ye muſt nedes knowe, that women haue the domynyon ouer you.

Doth it not greue you? A man taketh his ſwerde, & goeth hys waye to ſeale, to kyll, to murder, to ſayle vpon the ſee, and ſeeth a lyon, and goeth in the darcknes: & when he hath ſtollen, diſceaued and robbed, he bypnyeth it vnto his loue. Agayne, a man loueth hys wyfe better then father and mother: yee many one there be, ſpyte rene out of theyr wyrtes, & become bondmen for theyr wyues ſakes: many one alſo haue perished, haue bene ſlayne, & haue ſpyned becauſe of women.

And now belcūe me, I knowe a kyng which is greates in hys power, and all lādes ſtāde in awe of hym, & no man darre laye hande vpon hym: yet byd I ſe, that Apame (the daughter of ſpyte greates kyng Bartacus) the kynges concubyn, ſat beſyde the kyng vpon the ryght hande, & toke of hys crowne from hys head, & ſet it vpon her awne head, and ſmote the kyng wyth her left hande, & moreover, the kyng loked vpon her wyth open mouth: yf ſhe laughed vpon hym, he laughed alſo: but yf ſhe toke any diſpleaſure wyth hym, ſpyte kyng was ſayne to flatter her, & to geue her good wordes, tyll he had gotten her fauour agayne.

O ye men, are not women then ſtronger? Greates is ſpyte earth, & hys is ſpyte heauen. Who doth theſe thynges? Then ſpyte kyng & ſpyte wyces loked one vpon another. So he beganne to ſpeake of ſpyte trueth: O ye men, are not women ſtrōger? Greates is the earth, hys is the heauen, ſwyft is ſpyte courſe of the ſunne, * he compaſeth the heauen rounde aboute, & fetcheth his courſe hys courſe agayne to hys awne place in one daye. Is he not excellēt that doth thys? Yee greates is the trueth, & ſtrōger then all thynge. All the earth calleth vpon ſpyte trueth, the heauen prayſeth it, all wykes ſhake & treble at it, & it is no vnryghteous thyng. Wyne is vnryghteous: ſpyte kyng is vnryghteous: women are vnryghteous: all the chyldren of men are vnryghteous, yee all theyr wykes are vnryghteous, and there is no trueth in them, in theyr vnryghteouſnes alſo ſhall they be deſtroyed & perſhy. As for the trueth, * it endureth, & is all waye ſtrōge: it lyueth and conquereth for euermore worlde without ende.

The trueth accepteth no perſonnes, it putteth no difference betwixte riche or pooze, betwixte the myghtye or ſymple, but doth ryght vnto euery man, whether they be euell or good, and all men are louingly dealt wth all in ſpyte wykes of it. In ſpyte iudgemēt of it there is no vnryghteous thyng, but ſtrength kyngdom & power & maiesty for euermore. Blessed be the God of trueth.

And with that he helde his tōge, and all the people cryed, & ſayde: Great is ſpyte trueth, & aboue all. Then ſayde ſpyte kyng vnto hym: Aſke what thou wylt, more then is appoynted in ſpyte wyrtynge, and I ſhall geue it the, for thou art founde wyſer then thy compaynons: ſpyte ſhalt ſyt next me, and be my kynſman. Then ſayde he vnto the kyng: Remēbre thy promple & vowe, which thou haſt vowed & prompled (in the daye when thou cameſt to the kyng dome) to buylde vp Jeruſalem, & to ſende agayne all ſpyte veſſels and Jewels, ſpyte were taken awaye out of Jeruſalem: which Cyrys ſeparated, whē he offered in Babylon, & wolde ſende them agayne. And thy mynde was to buylde vp the tēple which ſpyte Edomptes bzēt, when Jeruſalem was deſtroyed by ſpyte Chaldees. This onely (ſpyte kyng) is ſpyte thyng that I requyre, thys is ſpyte maiesty, which I deſyre and aſk of the: that thou perfourme the vowe, which thou wyth thyne awne mouth haſt made vnto ſpyte kyng of heauen.

Then Darius the kyng ſtoode vp, and kyſſed him, & wrote a letter vnto all ſpyte deuytes and ſhyenes, to all the Lordes and nobles, that they ſhulde cōuey him forth, and all them ſpyte wolde go vp with him. He wrote a letter alſo vnto all ſpyte ſhyenes that were in Celosyria and Phenices, and vnto Lybanus, ſpyte they ſhuld drawe Cedre trees from Lybanus vnto Jeruſalem, to buylde the cytie withall. Moreover he wrote vnto all ſpyte Jewes ſpyte were gone out of hys realme into Jewry becauſe of the freedome, ſpyte no officer no ruler, nor ſhyene, ſhuld come to theyr doores, and ſpyte all theyr lande which they had cōquered, ſhuld be fre & not tributary. And that ſpyte Edomptes ſhulde geue ouer ſpyte eptyes and villages of the Jewes, which they had taken in: yee & that they ſhulde yearly geue xx. talētes to ſpyte buyldynge of ſpyte tēple, vntyll the tyme that it were ſpyned, and to the dayly halowynge of the bzēt offrynges (as it is commaunded) ten talētes yearly alſo. And ſpyte all they which come from Babylon to buylde the cytie, ſhuld haue fre lyberte, they & theyr chyldren, & all the wyues.

He wrote ſpyte greates alſo, & comaunded that ſpyte holy garment ſhulde be geuen them, wherin they mynſtred: & wrote ſpyte comaundementes ſhulde be geuen to ſpyte Leuites, vntyll the daye, that the houſe were ſynſhed, and Jeruſalem buylde vp: & comaunded that all they that watched the cytie, ſhulde haue theyr porcyons & wages.

He gaue ouer alſo all the veſſels ſpyte Cyrys had ſeparated from Babylon: and all that Cyrys had geuen in comaundemēt, ſpyte ſame charged he alſo, that it ſhulde be done & ſent vnto Jeruſalē. Now when thys ponge man was gone forth, he turned his face toward Jeruſalem, and prayſed ſpyte kyng of heauen, and ſayde: * Of the cometh the victorie, of the cometh wyſdome and cleareneſſe, and I am thy ſeruant. Blessed art thou, which haſt geuen me wyſdome: that wyll I prayſe, O Lord, thou God of oure fathers.

And ſo he toke the letters, & wente vnto Babylon. And when he came there, he tolde thys vnto all his bzethren ſpyte were at Babylon, & they prayſed ſpyte God of theyr fathers, that he had geuen them reſtreynge & lyberte to go vp, and to buylde Jeruſalem & the tēple (wherin the name of the Lord is called vpon) and they reioyſed with instrumentes and gladneſſe ſeuē dayes longe.

The.v. Chapter.

They that returne to Jeruſalem are nōbzēd. They begynne to laye the foundacyon of the tēple, but are lett by the meanes of enemyes: and ſo is the buyldynge dyruen of by the ſpace of two yeres.

After thys were the pryncipall men of all the villages choſen in the trybes and kyndredes, that they ſhuld go with theyr wyues and chyldren, with theyr ſeruautes & maydens, with all theyr catell and ſubſtaūce. And Darius the kyng ſent with them a thouſande hoſmen, to cōuey them ſafely vnto Jeruſalem, and theyr bzethren were glad, playeng vpon instrumentes, and ſyngynge. And theſe are ſpyte names of the men, which wente vp out of the vyllages, accordynge to the trybes. Of the wyces, the ſonne of whicheſ, the ſonne of Aaron: Jeſus the ſonne of Joſedec, Joachim the ſonne of * zojobabel the ſonne of Salathiel (of ſpyte kynred of Dauid, out of the kynred of whares of the trybe of Juda) which ſpake wonderfull thynges vnder Darius. These also are they of Jewry, whych came vpp, and turned agayne vnto Ierusalem, out of y^e captiuyte that Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon had brought vnto Babylon. And euery man sought hys porcyon agayne in Jewry hys cyte, they that came with zoobabel, and with Iesus, Nehemias, Saraias, Raaias, Elimeus, Emmanius, Haradocheus, Weclerus, Wechpila, Rochoz, Oliozius, Emonias, one of theyr prynces.

The sonnes of Carca. ii. C. and xxvii. The Leuytes: The sonnes of Iesus in Caduhel, and Banus, and Serebias, & Edeas, seuentye and foure.

The whole nobye of these from. xii. yeres was. iii. M. iii. C. and lxxii. Of the sonnes, daughters & wyues, the whole summe was. iii. M. ii. C. & xlii. The sonnes of the prestes that prayled God in the tēple: The sonnes of Asaph, of whome there were an. C. & xxviii. But the doze keepers were: The chyldren of Esmenus: the chyldren of Aler: the chyldren of Amon: the chyldren of Acuba, Copa: the chyldren of Tobian hundred and xxxix. in all.

The prestes that serued in the temple: The sonnes of Sel, the sonnes of Gasphe, the sonnes of Tobloch, the sonnes of Caria, the sonnes of Sub, the sonnes of Belu, the sonnes of Sabana, y^e sonnes of Armacha, the sonnes of Acub, the sonnes of Utha, the sonnes of Cetha, the sonnes of Aggab, the sonnes of Obay, the sonnes of Anant, the sonnes of Cana, the sonnes of Geddu, the sonnes of An, the sonnes of Radin, the sonnes of Desanon, y^e sonnes of Rechoba, the sonnes of Casaba, the sonnes of Goza, the sonnes of Dzul, the sonnes of Sinona, the sonnes of Altra, the sonnes of Hasten, the sonnes of Aliana, the sonnes of Hane, the sonnes of Nasim, the sonnes of Accua, the sonnes of Agista, the sonnes of Azui, the sonnes of Hason, y^e sonnes of Phalalon, the sonnes of Weeda, the sonnes of Suta, the sonnes of Cared, the sonnes of Barcu, the sonnes of Sarcu, the sonnes of Coeli, the sonnes of Nasit, the sonnes of Agista, the sonnes of Dedon, Salomon his sonnes, the sonnes of Asophot, y^e sonnes of Phazida, the sonnes of Celi, the sonnes of Dedon, the sonnes of Gaddabel, y^e sonnes of Japheus, the sonnes of Aggia, y^e sonnes of Sacharet, the sonnes of Sabathe, y^e sonnes of Saroneth, the sonnes of Nasit, the sonnes of Ania, the sonnes of Salus, the sonnes of Addus, the sonnes of Suba, the sonnes of Enra, the sonnes of Raboris, y^e sonnes of Phasphat, the sonnes of Malmon. All these ministred in the sanctuary, & were seruantes of Salomon: euen. iii. C. & lxxii.

These folowynge are they, that went vpp from Chelmellat Chelarka (whose prynces were Carmelan and Careth) & myght not thewe forth theyr cytyes and kynredes, how they were of Israel: The sonnes of Dalarus, the sonnes of Tuben, the sonnes of Rechodaicus. Of the prestes that executed y^e offyce of the presthode, and were not founde: The sonnes of Obia, the sonnes of Achilos, the sonnes of Addin, whych married one of the daughters of Phargelen, and were named after hym. The wyptyng of the same kynred was sought in the register of theyr generacyon, but it was not founde: and therefore were they forbydden to execute the office of the presthode. Vnto them sayde Nehemias and Altharas, that they shulde haue no porcyon in the Sanctuary, tyll there rose vpp an hye prest, that were well instruct in the playne cleannes and truethe. (Of all Israel) besyde seruantes and nauntes and maydens) there were. xlii. M. iii. C. and xl. Now were there of seruantes and maydes. vii. M. iii. C. & xxxvi. Of synge men ad synge women there were two hundred, & lxxv. Foure hundred and xxxv Camels. Seuen thousand, & xxxvi. horses. Two hundred thousande and xlv. mules. xlv. M. and xlv. asses.

Their heades also & the rulers in the tribes, when they came to Ierusalem, & wolde buylde and set vpp the tēple of God agayne in his place, they gaue (after their abylyte, vnto the temple, to the treasure & to the seruice of the Sanctuary. xii. M. poundes of golde, fyue thousande of syluer, and an hundred prestes garmentes. And so dwelt the prestes and the Leuytes, & the people that went out to Ierusalem, and in the countre there about, the synge men also & the porters, euery one of Israel in his awne lande.

So when the seuenth moneth came, and when the chyldren of Israel were euery mā at his busynes, they came all wyth one consent into the courte, whiche was before the East doze. And there stode Iesua the sonne of Josedece and his brethren the prestes, ad zoobabel the sonne of Salathiel and hys brethren, setting vpp an auter, to offre hiet sacrifices vpon it, as it is wyrtten in the lawe of Moyses.

There came people also of other countrees, and the heathen out of all lades to set vpp y^e auter in his place, and offred sacrifices ad bent offrynges vnto the Lorde in the morninge. And so they helde the feast of tabernacles, * as it is commaunded in the lawe. And dayly offred they as accordyng was, and made y^e sacrifices appoynted, y^e offrynges also of the Sabbathes & of the new moones, and all holy feastes. * And al they that bowed offrynges vnto the Lorde, beganne at the newe moone of the vii. moneth to offre vnto God, for the temple of the Lorde was not yet buylde. And they gaue vnto y^e Masons and Carpenters, money, meate, & drinke with chearfulnesse. Vnto them of Sidon also and Tyre they gaue carres, that they shulde carry Cedre trees fro Libanus to be iopstes & beames, ad that they shulde make wyppes in the haue of Joppe, accordyng as it was appoynted & ordeyned by Cyrys kynge of the Persians.

And in the secōde yere they came into y^e temple of God at Ierusalem. * In the secōd moneth begane zoobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Iesua the sonne of Josedece and their brethren the prestes and Leuytes, and al they that were come vnto Ierusalem out of the captiuite of Babylō, & layed the foundation of the temple, in the new moone of the second moneth in y^e secōd yere y^e they were come into Jewry & Ierusalem. And they appointed y^e Leuytes (y^e were aboue. xx. yere old) vnto y^e seruice of y^e Lorde: so Iesua & his sonnes and his brethren, al the Leuytes stode together, & perfourmed the lawe and ordynance in the house of the Lorde.

And the prestes stode, & had their garmentes & trompettes, and the Leuytes the sonnes of Asaph had Cymbals, geuyng thanks and prayles vnto the Lorde, accordyng * as Dauid the kynge of Israel had ordeyned. And the song y^e they dyd singe vnto the Lorde, was after this maner. * O synge vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious, & his goodnes vppō Israel endureth for ever. And all y^e people blew out with trompettes, and song with loude voyce, prayling the Lorde together in y^e rearing vpp of the house of y^e Lorde. * There came also from among the prestes and Leuytes the rulers & elders, accordyng to the tribes and kinredes (soch as had sene the house afore) to the buyldyng of thys tēple with great crye and great mourning, many also with trompettes ad great ioye: In somoch, that the trompettes might not well be hearde for the wepyng and mourning. For the comyn people blew goodly vpon the trompettes.

* Then came the enemyes of the tribes of Juda and Benjamin, to knowe what that trompettyng and noyse of shawmes might be. And they perceaued y^e it was they which were come agayne out of captiuyte, & wold buylde the temple vpp a new vnto the Lorde God of Israel. So they went to zoobabel and Iesua, ad to the rulers of the byllages, and sayd vnto the. Shall we buylde wyth you also? For we lyke wise haue heard your Lorde, and we walke after the same maner, from the dayes of Al bazareth the kynge of Assiria, which brought vs hyther. Then zoobabel and Iesua and y^e rulers of the byllages of Israel sayde vnto them. It is not mete, that ye shuld buylde the temple of our God wth vs: we our selues alone wyl buylde vnto the Lorde, lyke * as Cyrys the kynge of the Persians hath commaunded vs.

But the heathen in the lande layed them selues agaynst those y^e were in Jewry, helde vpp y^e buyldyng from the, layed wayte vpon them preuely, stopped such as brought any thyng to them, forbade them to buylde, and hyndered those that made the passage, that the buyldyng shuld not be fynished: ad this continued so longe as kynge Cyrys lyued: and so they put off the buyldyng for the space of two yeres, vntyl the raygne of kynge Darius.

The. vi. Chapter.

Aggeus and zachary prophete. They buylde the temple without let or hynderance, by the commaundement of Darius.

Netwithstandynge in þe secōde yeare of þe raigne of Darius, * Aggeus & zachary the sonne of Addo prophesied vpon them in Jewry and Ierusalem, in the name of the God of Israel. * Then zojobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Iesua the sonne of Iosedec stode vp, and beganne to buylde the house of the Lorde at Ierusalem, whē the Prophetes of the Lorde helped them. At the same tyme came Spsennes the vnder Shreue in Spria and Phenices, wpth the landlordes ad hys companions, and sayd vnto the: Who hath bydden and commaunded you to buylde the house, to make the rofe and al other thinges agayne? And who are the woorkers me, that buyld them? Neuerthelesse the elders of the Jewes had such grace of þe Lorde, that they wolde not be let (though they were prouoked therto) but buylded on styll, vnto the tyme that kynge Darius were certifyed thereof, and an answer receaued from hym. The letter that these men sent vnto kynge Darius, was after this maner.

Spsennes the vnder Shreue in Spria & Phenices, and the landlordes wpth thez companions, which are head rulers in Spria and Phenices, sende their salutacio vnto Darius the kynge. We certifie the lorde the kynge, þe we came into þe lande of Jewry, and went to Ierusalem: where we founde the buylding the great house of God & the temple, with great costely fre stone and w goodly tymbre for þe walles: pec they make great haste with the woorkes, & helpe one another, and it goeth forth prosperously in their handes, and with great dylgence and woorthyp is it made. Then asked we the elders, who had comaunded them to make by the house and the buyldinge, ad this we byd, to the intent that we myght certifie the perfectly, & wyte vnto the, the names of those that were the rulers of the woorkes. So they gaue vs this answer: We are the seruantes of the Lorde, which made heauen and earth: ad as for this house * it hath bene buylded and set vp afore tyme by the great & myghtie kynge of Israel. But when our fathers prouoked God vnto wrath, and synned agaynst the God of Israel, * he gaue them ouer into the power of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon, the kynge of the Caldees, whych brake downe the house & bent it, & carped awaye the people prisoners vnto Babylon. * Neuertheles in the fyrst yeare that kynge Cyrus raygned at Babilō, Cyrus þe big wrote and commaunded to buylde vp this house agayne: and al the ornaments that Nabuchodonosor carped awaye from Ierusalem vnto Babylon, and appropriated vnto his awne temple: these brought Cyrus forth agayne, & deliuered them to zojobabel and to Salmanasar the vnder Shreue, comaunding them þe they shulde bynge those same ornaments agayne to Ierusalem into þe temple and to begynne fro þe tyme forth, to buylde the temple agayne in his awne place. Then Salmanasar layed þe foundaciō of þe Lordes house at Ierusalem, ad euer sence haue they buylded, & yet is it not ended. And therfore Dyrnge, yf thou thinkest it good, let it be sought in the Lybraries & rolles of kynge Cyrus: yf it be foude then, that it is done w the counsell & consent of kynge Cyrus, and yf oure lorde þe kynge be so mynded, let hym wyte vnto vs therof.

* The commaunded kynge Darius, to seke in the Lybraries: ad so at Egbathanis in a lytle cytie in Medea there was foude soche a wyrtynge: In the first yeare of the raigne of Cyrus, the same kynge Cyrus commaunded that the house of the Lorde at Ierusalem shuld be buylded agayne (and odoures to be made there continually vnto þe Lorde) whose heygth shalbe .x. cubites, and the bredeth, thez score cubites, ad foure square with thez hewen stones, with a loft of tymbre of the same countre, pec with a new loft, and the expences therof to be geuen of the house of kynge Cyrus. And the ornaments of golde and syluer, that Nabuchodonosor toke out of the house of the Lorde at Ierusalem, shalbe set agayne in the temple at Ierusalem, where they were afore. Spsennes also the vnder Shreue in Spria and Phenices, the Princes and their companions, & the other that be heade rulers in Spria & Phenices, shall not medlenoz haue any thig to do with þe place.

Cyrus haue commaunded also, þe they shal buylde the house of þe Lorde whole vp ad haue ordeyned them, to helpe those that become out of captiuite: tpe the house of the Lorde be finished: ad out of the trybute and taryng that is yearly rayled vp in Spria & Phenices, diligently to geue them a certayne summe to the offeringe of the Lorde: & the same to be deliuered vnto zojobabel the offyce, that he therewithal maye ordeyne oxe, rammes, lammes, and corne, salt, wyne and oyle, and that continually euery yeare: after the expences * which the Prestes that be at Ierusalem, shew to be made dayly: this shal be geuen vnto them without delaye, þe they maye offer sacrifices dayly to þe hest God, for the kynge and for his seruantes, and to praye for thez lyues. Let it be proclaymed also on euery side, that whosoener breaketh or despyleth this comaundement of the king, shalbe hanged vpon a galows (made of his awne good) ad all his goodes shalbe seafoned vnto þe king. The Lorde therfore (whose name is there called vpon) rote out and destroye all the kynges ad people, that undertake by violence to hinder þe same, or to deale incurrently with the house of the Lorde at Ierusalem. * Darius the kinge haue ordeyned, that these thynges shalbe done with al dylgence.

The vii. Chapter.

The temple is synished and dedycate: and the feast of unleuened breade is holden.

Then Spsennes the vnder Shreues in Celospria, and Phenices, and the other Landlordes wpth their companions, obeyed the thinges þe kynge Darius had ordeyned, and were dylgent in þe holy woorkes, and were felowe helpers with the olde rulers of the Jewes. And so the woorkes of the Sanctuary wente forth and prospered, when Aggeus ad zachary prophesied. And they perfourmed all thinges thozow þe comaundement of the Lorde God of Israel, and after the deuyce of Cyrus, Darius and Artaxerxes kynges of Persia.

And thus was our house synished vnto þe xlii. dape of the moneth Adar, in the vi. yeare of kynge Darius. And the chylde of Israel the prestes and the Leuites, and the other that were come out of captiuite, and soche as were ioyned vnto them, byd accordeynge as it is writen in the boke of Moles. And in the dedicacion of the temple: they offered an hundred oxen, two hundred rammes, foure hundred lammes, & twelue goates, for the synnes of all þe people of Israel, after þe nombre of the trybes of Israel. The prestes also & the Leuites stode arayed in thez prestly garmetes, after the trybes, ouer all the woorkes of the Lorde God of Israel accordeynge to the boke of Moles, and the porters by all the dozes.

And the chylde of Israel (with those þe were come out of captiuite) helde the passeouer the fourtene dape of the fyrst moneth, when the prestes and the Leuites were sanctified. They þe came out of captiuite, were not all sanctified together: but the Leuites were all sanctified together, and so al they that came out of captiuite, killed the easter lambe, for thez brethren, for the prestes ad for them selues. And the chylde of Israel that came out of captiuite, & escaped from al the abominacions of þe heathen, sought the Lorde, and kepte the feast of unleuened breade seuen dayes longe, eatynge and drynkynge and were mery befoze the Lorde: that the Lorde had turned the deuyce of þe kynge of Assyria, and coforted their handes to the woorkes of the Lorde God of Israel.

The viii. Chapter.

Eldas causeth the people to assemble and come together, and then readech them the lawe. They kepe the feast of Tabernacles.

Ad after hym * when Artaxerxes the kynge of the Persians raygned, there wente vnto hym Eldas the sonne of Sarapas, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of helchiah, the sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Sadoch, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amarias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Boccus, the sonne of Ablyu, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron the fyrst preste. This Eldas wente vp from Babylon (for he had good vnderstandynge in the lawe of Moles, that was geue of the Lorde God of Israel, to be taught ad done in dede.) And the kynge fauoured him and byd him great woorthyppe and honoure after all hys despyres. There went vp wpth hym also certayne of the chylde of Israel, of the prestes, of the Leuites, of the singers, porters and minystrs of the temple at Ierusalem.

In the seuenth yeare of the raigne of kynge Artaxerxes, i the fyueyth moneth, that is in the seuenth yeare of the raigne, they wet from Babylon in the new moone of the v. moneth, & came the hys weye to Ierusalem after his comaundement, lyke as the Lorde had prospered thez iourney. For in these Eldas gat great instruccio, that he shulde leaue none of the thynges behinde, which are in the lawe and comaundementes of God. And he taught whole Israel all rightousnes and iudgement.

Then came the Secretaries of kynge Artaxerxes, ad deliuered the wyrtynge (that were come fro Artaxerxes the kynge) to Eldas þe preste & reder of the lawe of þe Lorde: And this is the coppe of the letter: Kynge Artaxerxes sendeth his gretynge vnto Eldas the preste and reder of the lawe of the Lorde. Of frendshyppe and good wyl I haue ordeyned and charged, yf there be eny of the Jewes, of the prestes & Leuites in my realme, which despyreth and is contēt to go with the vnto Ierusalem, þe he maye do it. Therfore, yf eny be mynded to beare the company, let them come together, and go with þe lyke as I am content and my seuen frendes, my counselors) to se what they do at Ierusalem and in Jewry, & kepe the thynges according as thou hast in the lawe of the Lorde: ad to bynge the gyftes vnto God the Lorde of Israel, that I & my frendes haue promysed to Ierusalem, & all the syluer ad golde that is in the countre of Babylon, vnto the Lorde to Ierusalem, with the thyng that is geuen for the people in the Lordes temple at Ierusalem. Pee, that the same syluer and golde maye be gathered, and oxen, rammes, shepe and goates and other that belonge to these thynges: and that they maye offer sacrifices vnto the Lorde, vpon the auter of the Lorde, which is at Ierusalem.

And whatsoeuer thou and thy brethren wyl do with the syluer ad golde, that do after thy mynde, accordeynge to þe comaundement ment of the Lord thy God, & lyke wyse, with the holy vessels that are geuen the, for þe seruyce of the house of þe Lord thy God: & other thinges whatsoeuer is necessary for þe to the worke of the temple, that shalbe geuen the of þe kynges treasure & loke what thou wylt thy brethren wyl do with the golde & syluer, that do after the wyll of the Lord. And I kynge Artaxerxes haue commaunded the keepers of the treasures in Syria and Phenices, that whatsoeuer Ecdas the prestre and reader of the lawe of the Lord doth wyte, it shalbe geue hym: tyll an hundred talentes of syluer, & of golde in lyke maner. Of coyns also an hundred measures, & tyll an hundred vessels of wyne, & other pleynous thynges without nombre. Let all thinges be done after the lawe of the best God, that the wrath of God arys not in the realme of the kynge, and of his sonnes. I commaunde you also, þe requyre no taxe ner tribute of the prestres, Leuytes, syngers, and ministers of the temple, ner of the writers: & that no mā haue auctorite to medle eny thyng against the. As for the (Ecdas) set thou iudges & arbytrers in the whole lande of Syria & Phenices, after the wysdome of God: and learne all soch as are ignorant in the lawe of God thy Lord, and let all them that offend agaynst the lawe, be punysshed: whether it be with death, with payne, to be condemned in money, or to be banished.

*i. Ecd. vii. a

Then sayde Ecdas the wyrtre. * Blessed be þe God of our fathers, that hath geue so good a mynde and wyll into the hert of þe kynge, to magnifye his house that is at Jerusalem, & hath made me to be accepted in the syght of the kynge, of his counsell, of his frendes & of his nobles. And so I was steadfast in my mynde, accordyng as þe Lord my God helped me, & I chose out men of Israel to go vp with me. * And these are þe heades, (after their kynredes & houses of theyr fathers) that went vp with me from Babylon, out of the kingdome of Artaxerxes: Of the sonnes of Phares, Seronius. Of þe sonnes of Siemarith, Amenus. Of the sonnes of Dauid Accus, the sonne of Cecilia.

*i. Ecd. viii. b

Of the sonnes of Phares, zachary: & with him there turned agayne an hundred & fyftie men. Of the sonnes of the captaine of Moabylon, zaraei, & with him. ii. C. ad. l. mē. Of the sonnes of zachnes, Jechonias zecholy, & with hym two hundred and fyftie men. Of the sonnes of Salamaassias, Gotholpe, & ad lxx. with him. Of the sonnes of zaphacia, zarias Mihely, & with hym foure score. Of the sonnes of Job, Abdias Jecheli, and with hym two hundred and twelue men. Of the sonnes of Bania, Salimoth & sonnes of Josaphia, and with hym an hundred and thre score mē. Of þe sonnes of Beer, zachari & Be-hei, & with hym two hundred & viii. men. Of the sonnes of Ezead, Johannes Ezechā, & with him an hundred and tenne men. Of þe sonnes of Abdonicam those that were þe last, and these are theyr names, Eliphalam the sonne of Gebel & Semeias, and with hym lxx. men. All these called I together by the water Chia, where we pitched oure tentes thre dayes, and there I mustered them.

* As for the sonnes of the prestres & Leuites, I founde none there. Then sent I vnto Eleazer, and Eccelom, and Masma, & Malobam, and Enaathan, & ad Samea, & Jozibimathan, Eunagan, zachari, Mosollamū (these were the leaders and men of experience) and I sent them worde, that they shulde come vnto Loddeus, which was by the place of the treasury, & commaunded them that they shulde speake vnto Loddeus & to his brethren and to those that were in the treasury, to sende vs soch men, as myght execute the prestres offyce in the house of the Lord our God. And with the myghtie hāde of our Lord God, they brought vnto vs men of good experience, from amonge the sonnes of Moosius the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israel, Sebebetam and the sonnes and his brethren Albin & Anin, of whome there were. xviii. From amonge the chyldren of the sonnes of Cananens, and their sonnes were xx. men. And of them that serued in the temple, whom Dauid had ordeyned, & the principal men that ministred for the worke vnto the Leuytes in the temple two hundred and twente men, whose names are all toshened vp in wyrtynge.

* Then commaunded I a fastynge vnto the ponge men before the Lord, that I myght desyre of hym a prosperous iourney and a good waye for vs, pee for vs, for oure chyldren and for the catell, because of the layenges a wayte, and I durst not requyre of the kynge men of horse and of fote, to coueys vs safely agaynst our enemies, for we had said vnto the kynge, that the power of the Lord our God shulde be with them, that seke him with theyr whole hert. And theffore we besought God our Lord earnestly because of these thynges, & he was mercifull vnto vs, and hearde our prayer. And I separated frō amonge the rulers of the people, and frō the prestres of the temple. xii. mē and Sebeia & Alania, and ten men of theyr brethren with them. And I weped them the golde and the syluer and all the prestly ornaments of the house of our God, whych the kynge, and his counsell, and his Princes, and whole Israel had geue. And when I had weped it, I gaue them an hundred and fyfty talentes in syluer, and an hundred talentes of syluer vessel, an hundred talentes of golde, and of golden vessel seuen tymes twente, and vessels of other other metal (pee, of good metal) twelue glisterynge as the golde, and laide vnto them: pe are holy vnto the Lord, and the vessels are holy, and the golde and the syluer is prompyd vnto the Lord God of oure fathers. Be diligent now and kepe it, vntyll the tyme that ye deliuer it to the rulers of the people, to the prestres, to the Leuites, and to the principall men of the cities of Israel in Jerusalem, and in the chambze of the house of oure God.

*i. Ecd. viii. d

* So, the prestres and the Leuites which receaued of me the golde, the syluer and the vessel, brought it into Jerusalem into þe temple of þe Lord. And from the ryuer of Chia we bracke vp the twelue daye of the first moneth, tyll we came to Jerusalem. And whē the thyrde daye was past, they weped gold, and syluer was deliuered in the house of the Lord the fourth daye, vnto Marimoth the sonne of Joz the prestre, and with hym was Eleazar the sonne of Whineas, & with them were Josabodus & sonnes of Jersnet, Medias and the sonne of Banus, and certayne of the Leuites to the nombre and to the wayght: & the wayght of them was wyrtten by the same tyme. As for those that were come out of captiuyte, they offred sacrifice vnto þe Lord the God of Israel: euen twelue oxen for all Israel. lxxvi. rammes lxxii. shepe. xii. goates for sume, twelue kynne for a thakoffring, all to the sacrifice of the Lord. And þe kyniges commissiō deliuered they vnto the stewardes and debytes of the kynge, and to the vnderthreues in Celosyria and Phenices.

*i. Ecd. ix. a

* Nowe, when these thynges were done, the rulers came vnto me, and sayd: The generacyō of Israel, the Princes, the Prestres, and Leuytes, the straunge people & indwellers of the lande, haue not put awaye theyr vncleynesse, from the Cananites, Bethytes Phercytes, from the Moabites, Egipcians, and Edomites. For both they & theyr sonnes haue myngled the selues with þe daughters of them, and the holy sede is mixte with the outlandish heathen, & sens the begynnyng of their raygne haue the rulers & heades bene partetakers of theyr wyckednesse.

*i. Ecd. ix. a

* As soone as I had hearde these thinges, immediatly I rente my holy garmentes, & pulled out the heare of my head & my beard, and sat me downe for owfull and heuy. So all they that were moued thowow the word of the God of Israel, came vnto me: & I sat still, full of heynesse vntyll the euenyng sacrifice. Then stode I vp from fastynge, hauyng rente clothes & the holy garment, knelled downe vpon my knees, helde out my handes vnto þe Lord, and sayd: O Lord, I am confounded and ashamed before thy face, for our synnes are become many vpon our heades, and our wyckednesses are exalted vnto the heauen: for syns the tyme of our fathers we are in great synne vnto thys dape. And for the synnes of vs and oure fathers, we w our brethren and with our prestres haue bene deliuered vnto the kinges of the earth, into the sword, and into captiuyte, and became a spoule with confusion and shame vnto this dape. And now, O Lord God, how greates is the mercy that we haue gotten of the: in þe thou hast left vs a rote and a name in þe place of thy Sanctuary, to discouer oure lyght in the house of þe Lord our God, & hast geue vs meat at all tymes of our mynistacyon. And when we were in captiuyte, we were not forsake of the Lord our God: but he made the kyniges of Persia gracious & fauorable vnto vs, so that they gaue vs vntayles and meate, pee and leaue to buylde by þe temple of our Lord God agayne, to repayre the wasted places of Syria, and to dwell in Jewry and Jerusalem. And now, O Lord, what shall we saye hauyng all these thynges in posseltyon? For we haue broken thy commaundementes, which thou gauest vnto vs by the hādes of thy scruauntes þe prophetes, sayinge: The lande that ye go vnto and that is geuen you for an heritage to haue in posseltyō, is despyled with the vncleynesse and fylthynesse of the heathen, & with their abhominacyō haue they polluted it all together. Therefore, shall ye not toyne your daughters, vnto theyr sonnes, ner marry your sonnes vnto their daughters. Moreover, ye shall neuer seke to make peace with them, þe ye maye increase & eate the best in the land, and that ye maye deuyde the inheritance of the lande vnto your chyldre for euermore. As for the thyng that now happeneth vnto vs it cometh all for our wycked wyckes and great synnes. yett hast thou geue vs soch a rote, þe we are come agayne into our aduene lande, & we are so wycked that we haue broken thy statutes & commaundementes agayne, and myngled oure selues with the vncleynesse of the outlandish heathen. O Lord, art thou angrie with vs: wylt thou rote vs cleane out: that our rote & name remayne no more? O Lord God of Israel thou art true for our rote endureth yett vnto thys prestete dape. And beholde, now are we before the in our synnes, now can we not stāde before the in them.

* And whē Ecdas with this prayer had knowledged the synne, wepyng, and lrynge flatt vpon the grounde before the tēple, there gathered vnto hym frō Jerusalem a great multytude of men and women, of pong men and maydens, for there was a very greates wepyng & mournyng in the congregacyon. So whē Jechonias the sonne of Jecheli one of the chyldre of Israel cryed, he sayd vnto Ecdas: we haue synned agaynst the Lord, because because we haue married outlandish women of the heathen. Now art thou over all Israel. We will weare an othe therfore vnto the Lorde, & we will put awaye all our wyues which we haue taken of the heathen, wyth theyr chyldre: lyke as it is appoynted & by oure fore elders. Stande vp then, ope thou it, & declare it playnely vnto vs, accordyng to the lawe of the Lorde: for þ matter belongeth vnto the, and we will helpe the, quyte thy selfe manly. So Eldras arose, and toke an othe of the rulers of the prestes, ad of the Leuytes, and of Israell, to do after these thynges: and they swaue.

The.ii. Chapter.

After Eldras had read the lawe, the people put awaye theyr strange wyues: and then returned euery man meryly vnto his owne dwellinge.

When Eldras stode vp from the court of the temple without, and wente in to the chamber of Ionathas the sonne of Nasabus, and remayned there, ad dyd eate no meate, nor dronke drynke, for the multitude of the wyckednes of the people. And there was made a proclamacion in all Jewry and at Ierusalem, for all soch as were gathered at Ierusalem out of captiuite, that whosoever came not to Ierusalem within two or thre dayes (accordyng to the iudgement of the olde lordes of þ counsel) his goodes shulde be taken from hym, and be excluded from the congregacion of the captiuite. And in thre dayes were all they of the trybe of Juda & Benjamin gathered together at Ierusalem, the twetyeth daye of the nynt moneth. And the whole multitude sat trembl yng in the courte of the temple, for it was winter. So Eldras arose vp, and said vnto the: ye haue done vnrighteously, in that ye haue taken outlandish wyues to mariage and so to increase the synnes of Israel. And now we knowledg the same, and geue prayse vnto the Lorde God of our fathers, ad pefourme his wyll, departyng from the heathen of the lande, and from the outlandish wyues. Then cryed the whole multitude w loude voyce, and sayd: lyke as thou hast spoken, so wyll we do: but for so moch as þ people are many, and the wynter here, we may not stande without the house: agayne, thys worke is not a thyng, that can be finished in a daye or two, for we be many that haue synned in these thynges. Ordeyne therfore that the rulers of the multitude and they þ dwell with vs, and as many as haue outlandish wyues, the prestes also and iudges of euery place maye stāde in the tyme appoynted, tyll they swage the wrath of the Lorde in thys bulynge.

Then Ionathas the sonne of Ezely, and Ozias and Theca receaued þ charge of this matter, ad Bozoramus, and Leius, & Sa-bathus helpe them therto. After this, all they stode vp that were come out of captiuite. And Eldras the preste chose vnto him the principall men from amonge the fathers accordyng to their names, & in the new moneth of the tenth moneth they sat together, to examē this matter. And so the matter was a determyng (concernyng the men that had outlandish wyues) vntyl the new moneth of the fyrst moneth. And of þ prestes that had myrte the selues with outlandish wyues, there were founde. * Of the sonnes of Iesu the sonne of Iosedec and his brethzen, Ma-zeas, Eleazar, Jozibus & Joadeus, whiche offered the selues to put awaye their wyues, and to offre a ramme for theyr ignoraunce. And of the sonnes of Semmeri, Masseas, & Elses, and Jecelech Azarias. Of the sonnes of Mosera, Limolias, Hismaen, Nathanea, Jusio, Jedbus, and Callas. And of the Leuytes Josabbus, Semeis, and Colnis, Caletas, Iactas, Colnas, and Elionas. Of þ syngers of the Sanctuary, Eliarib, zacharus. Of the porters, Sallumus ad Colbanes. And of Israel, of the children of Moro, Oli, and Remias, and Seddias, and Melchias, Michelus, Eleazarus, Jemmebias & Bannas. And the chyldre of Iolamā, Chanias, zachari, Jeizelus, Joddius, Crimoth and Elias. And of þ sonnes of Jathoim, Eliadas, Liathamus, and zochias, Larimoth, Sabbis, and Tebedias. And of the sonnes of zebes, Johannes, Amarias, zabbias, and Emmeus. And of þ sonnes of Bannus, Olamus, Maluchus, Jedbus, Jasub, Alabus, & Jerimoth. And of þ sonnes of Addin, Raatus, and Woolias, and Caleus, ad Raanas Maaluas, Mathathias, Besel, Bannus, & Manasses.

And of the sonnes of Naue, Rones, Afeas, Melchias, Sameas, Simō, Benjamin Malchus ad Marras. And of the sonnes of Alom, Carianeus, Mathathias, Bannus, Eliphalach, Manasses, Semei. Of the sonnes of Bannus, Jeremy, Woddias, Abzamas, Johel, Baneas, Beliaas, Jona, Marimoth, Eliab, Mathaneus, Elialis, Ozias, Dielus, Semebius, zambzis, & Ioseph. Of the sonnes of Robeus, Idelus, Mathathias, Sabadus, zecheda, Sedmi, Jelleus, and Baneas. All these had taken outlandish women to mariage, & they put them awaye with theyr chyldren. The prestes and Leuites, and all they that were of Israell, dwelt at Ierusalem and thowout all the lande, in the new moone of the seuenth moneth, and the chyldren of Israell were in their dwellinges. And the whole multitude came together vpon the floore at the East syde of þ holy port of the tēple. And they spake vnto Eldras the hye preste ad reader, þ he wolde bringe the lawe of Moles, which was geue of the

The fyrst Chapter.

The people is reprobued for their vnthankfulness. God wyll sende another people if these wyll not be reformed.

of the Lorde God of Israel. So Eldras þ hye preste brought þ lawe vnto the whole multitude, to mā & womā, & to all prestes, that they might heare the lawe, * in þ new moneth of the. vii. moneth. And he red in the floore that is before þ holy porte of the temple, from the mornyng early vnto the euynyng, before men and women. And they applyed their mynde all vnto the lawe.

And Eldras þ preste & reader of the lawe stode vp vpo a pulpit of wood, which was made therfore: & vpo his ryght hāde there stode by hi Mathathias, Samus, Ananias, Azarias, Ozias, Ozecchias: and Ballamus: vpon hys lefte hand stode Ialdecus, Misael, Malachias, Abulcas, Sabus, Nabadias & zachary. The toke Eldras þ boke before the whole multitude, for he was the principall, ad had in most honour of them all. And when he had red out the lawe, they stode all straght vpon their fete. So Eldras prayled þ Lord þ moost hye God, the Almyghty God of hostes. And all þ people answered: Amē: & helde vp their hādes, fell downe flat vpon þ earth, & prayled the Lord. And Iesus, Bencas, Sarchias, Iadimus, Accubus, Sabbathus, Calithes, Azarias, Jozadus, Ananias, & Phillias the Leuites lyft their hādes vpwarde, & bowed their faces to þ ground, & prayled þ Lord: Those were they whych taught þ lawe of the Lord, & red the lawe of the Lord, in the congregacyon: & euery man set them before that vnderstode the lawe. The spake Atharates vnto Eldras the hye preste & reader, & to the Leuites that taught the multitude, saying: This daye is holy vnto the Lorde: & all they that had hearde the lawe, wepte. So Eldras sayde: * Departe poure waye then, & eate the best, & drinke the sweetest, & sende gyftes vnto them that haue nothig: for thys daye is holy vnto þ Lord, & be not ye sorry, for the Lorde wyll bring you to honoure. Then wente they their waye euerychone, and dyd eate and drinke, & were mery, and sent rewarde vnto them that had nothing, that they also myght eate wyth gladnesse: for they were exceedingly reioyled, thowow the wordes that were red vnto them in the lawe: And so they were all gathered together at Ierusalem to holde the feast, accordyng to the couenaut of the Lorde God of Israel.

The ende of the thirde booke of Eldras.

The seconde boke of the prophete * Eldras (the sonne of Saraias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Melchias, the sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Sadoc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Achia, the sonne of Phinees, the sonne of Hely Amerias, the sonne of Azarias, the sonne of Maraioth, the sonne of Sarabias, the sonne of Elzi, the sonne of Voccus, the sonne of Abisu, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron, of the trybe of Leui) whych was prisoner in the lande of Medes, in the raygne of Artaxerxes kynge of Persia.

* And the worde of the Lord came vnto me, saying: go thy waye, & speke my people their synfull dedes, and their chyldren their wyckednes, whych they haue done agaynst me, that they may tell theyr chylders chyldre the same: for the synnes of their fathers are increased in them. And why they haue forgotten me, & haue offered vnto strange goddes. Am not I euen he, þ brought the out of the lāde of Egypte, fro the house of bondage? But they haue prouoked me vnto wrath, and despyled my counsels. Pull thou out then the heare of thy heade, & cast all euell ouer them, for they haue not bene obedient vnto my lawe.

It is a people without lernynge & nourture. How longe shall I forbear them, vnto whom I haue done so moche good? * Many kynages haue I destroyed for their sakes: * Pharaos wyth hys seruantes & all his power haue I smytten downe & slayne: All þ nacys haue I destroyed & rote out before the, and in the East haue I brought two landes & people to naught, euen Tyre and Sydon, and haue slayne all their cniues. Speake thou therfore vnto them, saying: Thus sayeth the Lord: * I led you thowow the see, & haue geue you sure stretes sence the begynnyng. * I gaue you Moles to be poure captaynes, & Aaron to be the preste: * I gaue you lyght i a ppler of fyre, & grea-te wonders haue I done amonge you: yet haue ye forgotten me, sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayth the almyghty Lorde: I gaue you quayles to eat, & tentes for your succoure:

course: Neuertheless ye murmured, and ascribed not the victory of your enemies vnto my name: yee, this same daye do ye yet mur-moure. Where are the benefytes, that I haue done for you? When ye were hongrye in the wyldernes, * dyd ye not crye vnto me: Why hast thou brought vs into this wyldernes, to kyll vs? It had bene better for vs, to haue serued p̄ Egyptias, the to dye i this wyldernes. Then had I pytie vpon your mourninges, and gaue you manna to cate:
* Ye dyd cate angels foode. * Why ye were thyrstye, dyd not I beue the hardstone, ad caused water to flowe therout? For p̄ heat I couered you wyth the leaues of the trees
A good pleasur fat lād gaue I you: I cast out the Cananites, the Dhercelytes & Dhilystines befoze you. * What shall I do more for you, sayeth the Lorde?

Thus sayth p̄ Almyghtye Lorde: * Why ye were in the wyldernes, in p̄ water of the Amoyptes, beyng a thyrst, & blasphemynge my name, I gaue you not fyre for your blasphemys, but cast a tree i to p̄ water, & made p̄ ryuer swete. What shall I do vnto p̄, D. Jacob: Thou Juda woldest not obeye me. * I wyll turne me to a nother people & vnto those wyl I geue my name, p̄ they may kepe my statutes. For ye haue forsaken me, I wyl forsake you also. Why ye besyche me to be gracious vnto you, I shall haue no mercy vpo you. * Why ye call vpo me, I wyl not heare you. For ye haue desyled your handes with bloude, ad your fete are swyft to commyt manslaughter. Ye haue not forsake me (in a maner) but your awone selues, sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayth p̄ Almyghtye Lorde: haue I not prayed you, as a father hys sones, as a nother her daughters, & as a nothe her pōg babes, p̄ ye wolde be my people, ad I shuld be your God: p̄ ye wolde be my chyldren, & I shuld be your a wne fathers? * I gathered you together, as an hēne gathereth her chickens vnder her wynges. But now what shall I do vnto you? I shall cast you out fro my face: * Why ye offre vnto me, I shall turne my face from you: for your solemne feast dayes, your new moones, ad your circumcysions haue I forsake. I sent vnto you my seruantes p̄ Prophetes, who ye haue taken & slayne, and torne theyr bodys in peces, whose bloude I wyl requyre of your handes, sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Almyghty Lorde: your house must be desolate. I wyl cast you out as the wynde doth p̄ strawe: your chyldre shall not be fructfull, for they haue despysed my commaundement, ad done the thyng p̄ is enell befoze me. Your houses wyl I geue vnto a people p̄ shall come, and * they p̄ neuer herde me, shall beleue in me: & they vnto whom I neuer shewed toke, shall do the thige that I comaunde the. They haue sene no Prophetes, yet shall they call their synnes to remembraunce, and knowledg the. I repozte me vnto the grace, p̄ I wyl do for p̄ people whych is come, whose chil-dre reioyse in gladnes: & though they haue not sene me wyth bodely eyes, yet in sprete they beleue the thinge p̄ I saye. And nowe brother, beholde what greute worshyppe, & se p̄ people p̄ cometh from the East, vnto who I wyl geue the dukedō. * of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, of Osee, Amos, & Michas, of Joel, Abdij, Jonas, Naum, ad

Abacuc, of Sophony, Aggeus, zachary, ad Malachi, whych is called also an agell (or messenger) of the Lorde.

The.ii. Chapter.

The Synagoge syneth faule wyth deuyls chyliden, The Gentyles are called.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: I brought this people out of bondage, I gaue them my commaundementes by my seruantes the Prophetes, whych they wolde not heare, but despised my counsels.
The mother that bare them, sayeth vnto the. Go your waye ye chyliden, for I am a wyddowe & forsaken: I brought you vp wyth gladnesse, but wyth sorow and heuynes haue I lost you: for ye haue sinned before the Lorde your God, & done p̄ thinge that is euell befoze him. But what shall I now do vnto you? I am a wyddow & forsaken: go your waye, O my chyliden, and aske mercy of the Lorde. As for me, O father, I call vpo the for a wytnesse ouer the mother of these chyliden, which wolde not kepe my couenaunt: that thou byng the to confusyon, & their mother to a spoyle, that she beare no more. Let their names be scattered abroad amonge the heathen, let them be put out of the earth, for they haue thought scozne of my couenaunt.

Who be vnto the Assur, thou that hydest p̄ vnpyghtuous by p̄. Thou wycked people, remembre * what I dyd vnto Sodome and Gomorre, whose lāde is turned to pytch & ashtes. Euen so also wyl I do vnto all the, that beare my not, sayeth p̄ Almyghty Lorde. Thus sayeth p̄ Lorde vnto Edoas: Tell my people, that I wyl geue the the kyngdome of Ierusalem, whych I wolde haue geuen vnto Israel. Their glory also wyl I take vnto me, & geue the p̄ euerlastynge tabernacles, which I had prepared for those. The tree of lyfe shall be vnto the a swete smellige opntemet: they shall nether laboure nor be weery. Go ye your waye, & ye shall receaue it. Praye for your selues a fewe dayes, p̄ they may dwell therein.

Nowe

is the kyngdome prepared for you, therefore watche. Take heauen ad earth to witnesse for I haue broken the euell in peces, & created the good, for I lye sayth p̄ Lorde. Mother embrace thy chyliden, ad byng them wyth gladnesse: make theyr fete as fast as a pyler, for I haue chosen the, sayeth the Lorde.

And those that be deed wyl I raple vp agayne from theyr places, and bynge them out of the graues, for I haue knowne my name I Israell. Feare not thou mother of p̄ chyliden, for I haue chosen the, sayeth the Lorde. And for thy helpe I shall sende the my seruantes Esay & Jeremy, after whose counsell I haue sanctified and prepared for the twelve trees wyth diuerse frutes, and as many welles, flowynge wyth mylk and ho-ny and seuen mountaynes, wher vpon there growe roses and lylpes, wherin I wyl fyll my chyliden wyth ioye. Execute iustye for the wyddowe, be iudge for the fatherles geue to the poore: defende the conforlesse:
clothe the naked: heale the wounded & syck:
laugh not a lame man to scozne: defende the crepe, and let the blynde come i to the lyght of my clarnes: * wheresoeuer thou fyndest the deed, take them, and burye them, and I shall geue p̄, p̄ fyrst place in my resurreccio.
Holde styll O my people, and take thy rest for thy quyetnes is come. Feed thy chyldren, O thou good nothe, stablysh their fete:
As for the seruantes whom I haue geuen the, there shall not one of them perishe, for I wyl se the from thy nombze: vexe not thy selfe.

For when the daye of trouble and heuynes cometh, other shall wepe and be sorow-full, but thou shalt be mery and plenteous.
The heathen shall be gelous, but they shall be able to do nothyng agaynst the, sayth the Lorde. My handes shall couer the, so that thy chyliden shall not se the fyre euerlasting Be ioyfull, O thou mother wyth thy chyldren, for I wyl deliuer the, sayth the Lorde.
Remembre thy deed chyliden, for I shall byng them out of the earth, & shew mercy vnto them, for I am mercyfull, sayth the Lorde almyghty.

Embrace thy chyliden, vntyll I come, & shew mercy vnto them, for my welles runne ouer, and my grace shall not fayle.

I Edoas receaued a charge of the Lorde vpon the mozt Dreb, that I shuld go vnto Israel. But when I came vnto Israel they set me at naught, and deuided the commaundemet of the Lorde. And therfore I saye vnto you, O ye heathen that heare and vnderstande: Loke for your shepheard, he shall geue you euerlastinge rest, for he is nye at hād, that shall come in the ende of p̄ worlde.
Be readye to the rewarde of the kyngdome,

for the euerlastynge lyght shall shyne vpon you for euermore. Ifle the shadowe of thy worlde, receaue the ioyfullnes of your glory. I testifie my fauour opely: O, receaue the gyft that is geuen you, and be glad, ge-uynge thākes vnto hym, that hath called you to the heauenly kyngdome.

Arise vp & stande fast: beholde the nombre of those that be sealed in the feast of the Lorde, which are departed from the shadow of the worlde, and haue receaued gloruous garmentes of the Lorde. Take thy nombze O Syō, and shut vp thy purpyed, which haue fulfilled the lawe of the Lorde. The nombze of thy chyliden whom thou long-edest for, is fulfilled: befeche the power of the Lorde, that thy people which haue bene called from the begynnynge, may be halowed.

* I Edoas sawe vpon the mount Sion a great people, whom I coude not nombze and they all prayled the Lorde wyth songes of thankesgeuyng. And in the myddest of them there was a yonge man of an hyc stature, more excellent then all they, and vpon euerly one of theyr heades he set a crowne, & was euer higher and higher, which I mar-ueled at greatly. So I asked the aungel, and sayd: Syr, what are these? he answered ad saide vnto me: These be they, that haue put of the moztal clothyng and put on the immoztall, and haue testyfyed ad knowleged the name of God. Now are they crowned, & receaue the rewarde.

Then sayde I vnto the aungell: what pōge personne is it, that crowneth them, and geueth them the palmes in theyr handes?
So he answered, and sayde vnto me: It is the sonne of God, who they haue knowledged in the worlde. Then beganne I greatly to commende them, that stode so styfly for the name of p̄ Lorde. And so the aungell sayde vnto me: Go thy waye, & tell my people, what maner of thynges & how greute wonders of the Lorde thy God, thou hast sene.

The.iii. Chapter.

The wonderous workes which God dyd for the people are recyted. Edoas maruelith that God suffereth the Babylonians to haue rule ouer hys people, whyche yet are synners also.

In the thyrtye yere of the fall of the cytie, I was at Babylon, and laye troubled vpon my bed ad my thoughtes came vp ouer my hert: for I sawe the desolacyon of Syon, and the plenteous wealth of the that dwelt at Babylon: and my sprete was sore moued, so that I beganne to speake fearfull wordes to the mozt hyest, and sayde: O Lorde, Lorde, thou spakest at the begynnynge, why thou wylt plantest.

plstedst the earthe (ad that thy selfe alone) and gauest commaundement vnto the people, and a body vnto Adam, which was a creature of thy handes, and hast brythed in hym the bryth of lyfe: and so helped befoze the, and thou leddest hym into paradysse, which garden of pleasure thy ryght hande had planted, or euer the earth was made. And vnto him thou gauest commaundement to loue thy waye, which he transgressed, & immediatly thou appointedst death in hi, and in his generacions. Of hym came nacrons, trybes, people and kynredes out of nombze. * And euer people walked after their awne will, and dyd nyce thynges befoze the: & as for thy commaundementes, they despyed them.

seruaunt called Dauid, * whom thou commaundest to buyde a cyte vnto thy name, and to offre vp incense and sacryfye vnto p therin. Thys was done now many yeaues. Then the inhabyters of the cyte forsoke the, and in all thynges dyd euen as Adam and all his generacions had done: for they also had a wicked herte.

And so thou gauest thy cyte ouer into the handes of thyne enemyes. Are they of Babylon then better ad moze righteous then thy people, that they shall therfore haue the domynyon of Syon? For when I came there and sawe they vngodlynes, and so greete wyckednesse, that it coulde not be nombzed: pce, whē my soule sawe so many euil doers (in the thy tye yeaue) my herte sayled me, for I sawe, how thou sustrest them in such vngodlynes & sparest the wicked doers: but thyne awne people hast thou roted out and preserued thyne enemyes, & thys hast thou not shewed me.

I cannot perceaue how thys happeneth. Do they of Babylon then better, then they of Syon? Or is there any other people, that knoweth the, sayyng the people of Israel? Or what generacion hath so beleued thy couenautes, as Jacob? And yet they rewarde appareth not, ad they labour hath no frute. For I haue gone here & there thorow the heathen, and I se that they be rich and wealthy, and thyncke not vpo thy commaundementes. Wepethou therfore oure wyckednesse now in the balaunce, and theirs also that dwell in the world, and so shall thy name be no where founde but in Israel. Or where is there a people vpo earth, that hath not synned befoze p? Or what people hath so kepte thy commaundementes? Thou shalt finde, that Israel by name hath kepte thy preceptes, but not the other people and heathen.

The fourth Chapter.

The Angell expoweth Eldas, because he seemed to enter into the profounde iudgements of God.

And the Angell that was sent vnto me (whose name was Ariell) gaue me an answer, & sayd: Thy hert hath taken to moch vpo it in thys world, & p thynkest to comprehend the waye of the hyst. Then said I: Pee, my Lorde. And he answered me, and sayde: I am sent to shewe the thez wayes, and to sett forth thre synplytudes, befoze the: wherof pf thou canst declare me one, I wyll shewe the also the waye, that thou despyest to se: and I shall shewe the from whence the wicked herte cometh. And I sayde: Tell on my Lorde. Then sayde he vnto me: So thy waye, wepe me the wepyght of the fyre, or measure me the blaik of the wyde, or call me agayne agayne the daye that is past. Then answered I and sayde: What mā borne is able to do p? Why requirerest thou such of me? And he sayde vnto me: If I shulde aske the, how depe dwelliges are in p see? Or how great water springes are vpo the firmamēt? Or how great water springes are in the begynnyng of the depe? Or which are the outgoinges of paradysse? Paraduēture thou woldest saye vnto me: I neuer wente downe pet into p depe nor hel, nether dyd I euer clyme vp into heauen. Neuerthelesse, now haue I asked the but only of fyre and winde and of the daye, where thorow thou hast traualled, and from the which thou canst not be separated: and yet canst thou geue me no answer of them.

He sayd moze ouer vnto me: Thyne awne thynges, & such as are growne vpo the, canst thou not knowe: how shuld thy vessel then be able to comprehend the waye of the hyst, and now out wardly in the corrupte world, to understāde the corrupciō that is euident in my sight? Then sayd I vnto hym: It were better that we were not at all, then that we shulde lye in wyckednesse, & to suffer, & not to knowe wherfore. He answered me, & sayd: I wente in a wood, & the trees toke such a deuycce ad sayd: Come let vs go, and fyght agaynst the see, that it maye departe awaye befoze vs, and that we maye make vs pet moze woddes.

The floudes of the see also in lyke maner toke thys deuycce, ad sayde: Come, let vs go vp, and fyght agaynst the trees of the wodd that we maye make oure lande the wyder. The thought and deuycce of the wodde was but vayne and nothinge worth, for the fyre came and consumed the wodd: The thought of the floudes of the see came lyke wyle to naught also, for the sādē stode vp and stopped them.

If thou were iudge now betwixte these two, whom woldest thou iustifie, or whom woldest thou condemne? I answered & sayd: Cereply it is a folysh thought that they both haue deuyced. For the grounde is geuen vnto the wodd, & the see also hath hys place to beare his floudes. Then answered he me, ad sayde: Thou hast geuen a ryght iudgement, why iudget thou not thy self also? For lyke as the ground is geuen vnto the wodd, and the see to his floudes: euen so * they p dwell vpon earth, may understāde nothinge, but that which is vpon earth: and he that dwelleth aboue the heauens, may only understāde the thynges, p are aboue the heauens. Then answered I, and sayd: I beseeche p, O Lorde, let me haue understandyng: for it was not my mynde to be curyous of thy hye thiges, but of such as we dayly medle withall, namely, wherfore that Israel is blasphemēd of the heathē, and for what cause the people (whom thou euer hast loued) is geuen ouer, to be punyshed of vngodly nacrons: & why p lawe of our fathers is brought to naught and the witten couenautes come to none effecte, and we passe awaye out of p worlde as the greschoppers, ad our lyfe is a very feare, & we are not worthy to optayne mercy. What wil he do then vnto his name, which is called vpon ouer vs: Of these thynges haue I asked question.

Then answered he me, & sayd: The moze thou searchest, the moze thou shalt maruell for the world hasteth fast to passe awaye, & cannot comprehend the thynges, p are promysed for the righteous i tyme to come, for * thys world is full of vnrightheousnes ad weaknes.

* i. Jobn. b. e.

But as concernyng the thynges wherof thou askest me, I will tell the. The euell is sowen, but the destruccion therof is not yet come. If the euell now that is sowen, be not turned vpsyde downe, and pf the place wher the euell is sowen, passe not awaye, then canot the thyng come p is sowen v good. For the corne of euell seide hath bene sowen in the hert of man from the begynnyng, and how moch vngodlynes hath he brought vp vnto thys tyme? and how moch shal he yet bryng forth, vntill he come into the barne?

Bondre now by thy self, whē the corne of euell seide is cutt downe, how greete a barne shal it fyll? I answered and sayd, how and whē shal these thynges come to passe? Wherfore are our yeaues fewe & euell? And he answered me, sayyng: Hast not thou to moch vpo the hyst, for thy hastyness to be aboue him is but vaine, thou makest to moch a do. Did not the soules also of p righteous aske questyon of these thynges in they holynes sayig: * How longe shall I hope of thys fauour? Whē cometh the frute of my barne, and my rewarde? And vpo this Jeremiel p Archāgel gaue the answer, and sayd: Eue whē the nombze of the sedes is fylled i you, for he hath weped the world i the balaunce: in measure and nombze hath he measured p tyme, & moueth it not, vntill the same measure be fulfilled. Then answered I & sayde: O Lorde, Lorde, now are we all full of synne, and for our sake paraduēture it is not, the barne of the ryghteous shal not be fylled, because of the synnes of them that dwell vpon the earth.

So he answered me, & sayd: So thy waye to a womā wyth chylde, and aske of her whē she hath fulfilled her tyme monethes, pf her childebed maye kepe p byrth any longer with in her. Then sayde I: No Lorde, that can she not. And he sayde vnto me: In hell p secret places of soules are lyke the pryuy chamber of a woman. For lyke as a woman that trauapleth, maketh haste, when the tyme & necessyte of the byrth is at hande. Euen so doth he haste to deliuer it that is commyt- ted vnto her. Loke what thou desirest to se, it shalbe shewed the from the begynnyng. Then answered I, and sayde: If I haue founde fauoure in thy syght, and yf it be possible, and yf I be mete therfore, shewe me then, whether there be more to come then is past, or more past then is for to come. What is past, I knowe: but what is for to come, I knowe not.

And he sayde vnto me: Stande vp vpon the ryght syde, and I shall expounde the symplitude vnto the. So I stode, and behold, an whote burnynge ouen wete ouer before me: and it happened that when the flamme was gone by, the smoke had yf vpper hāde. After thys there went ouer before me a watery cloude, & sent downe mochrayne wth a storme: & whē the stormy rayne was past the droppes remayned still. Then sayde he vnto me: lyke as the rayne is more then the droppes, and as the fyre exceedeth the smoke, euen so the measure of the thynges that are past, hath the vpperhande. Then wente the droppes and the smoke aboue: ad I prayed ad sayde: May I lyne (thynkest thou) vntill that tyme? Or what shal happen in those dayes? he answered me, ad sayde: As for the tokens wherof I askest me, I maye tell the of them in parte: but as touchynge thy lyfe, I may not shewe the, for I am not sent therfore.

The. v. Chapter.

The. v. Chapter. The Angell commen to: ther.

Euer thelesse, as concernig the tokens, marke thys: Beholde, the dayes shall come, that they which dwell vpon earthe, shalbe take in a great nōbre, & the waie of the trouth shalbe hyd, and the lande shalbe baren fro fayth: but * unquyte shal haue the vpperhande, lyke as thou hast sene now, ad as thou hast hearde longe agoo. And the lāde that thou seist now to haue rule, shalt thou shortly se waste. But yf God graunte the to lyue, thou shalt se after the thyrd trompet, that yf sunne shall sodely hyne agayne in the nyght, & the moone thre tymes i the dape, and blood shall droppe out of wodd, and the stone shall geue his voyce, & the people shalbe unquyte: and euen he shall rule, who they hope not that dwell vpon earth, and the foules shall flyt, & the Sodomytys shal cast out his fish, and make a noyle in the nyght, whych many shal not knowe, but they shal all heare the voyce therof.

Ther shalbe a confusyon also in many places, & the fyre shalbe oft sent agayne, ad the wyld beasts shal go theyr waie, and menstruous women shal beare monsters, & salt waters shalbe founde in the swete: one frende shal fyght agāst another: then shal all witt and vnderstādyng be hyd and put asyde into theyr secrete places, and shalbe sought of many, and yet not be founde: then shal vncyghtousnes and voluptuousnes haue the vpperhande vpon earth. One land also shal aske another, and saye: Is ryght- trounkes gone thozow the? And it shal saye No. At the same tyme shal men hope, but nothyng optayne: they shal labour, but theyr wayes shal not prospeere.

To shewe the soche tokens I haue leue, & yf thou wylt praye agayne, & wepe as now and fast seuen dayes, thou shalt heare yet greater thinges. Then I a waked, and a fearfulness wente thozow all my body, and my mynde was feble and carefull, so that I almost sowned withall. So the aūgel that was come to talke with me, helde me, comforted me, and set me vpon my fete.

And in the seonde nyght it happened, that Salathiel the capytayne of the people came vnto me, sayng: Where hast thou bene? and why is thy countenance so heuy? I knowest thou not, that Israel is commytte vnto y, in the lande of theyr captyuite? Up then ad eate, and forsake vs not, as y shepherde that leaueh his flocke in the handes of wycked wolues. Then sayde I vnto hym: So thy waie fro me, and come not nye me: and he hearde it, ad as I sayd: so wete he his waie fro me. And so I fasted seuen dayes, mourning and wepyng, lyke as Uriel the aū- gell commaunded me. And after seuen dayes it happened, that y thoughtes of my herte were very grenous vnto me agayne, ad my soule receaued y sprete of vnderstandyng, and I began to talke with the moost hiest agayne and sayde: O Lorde, Lorde, of euery wood of the earth ad of all the trees thereof, thou hast cholen the one onely vyneyard: & of all landes of the whole worlde thou hast cholen one pyt: and of all flourcs of the grounde thou hast cholen the one lyne: and of all the depthes of the see thou hast fylled the one ryuer: ad of all buylded cytyes thou hast holowed Sion vnto thy selfe: ad of all y foules that are created, thou hast named the one doue: & of all the catell that are made thou hast prouided the one shepe, & among all the multytudes of folkes thou hast gotten the one people, & vnto thys people who thou louedest, thou gauest a lawe, that is proued of all.

And now, O Lorde, why hast thou geuen this one people ouer vnto many? and vpon the one rote thou hast prepared other and why hast thou scatred thy one only people amonge many? which treade them downe, yee whych haue euer withstande thy promyses, and neuer belueuē thy counsautes? And

And though thou werest enemy vnto thy people, yet shuldest thou punysh them with thyne a wne hādes. Now whē I had spokē, these wordes y Angel y came to me y nyght afore, was sent vnto me, & sayde vnto me: Heare me, and herken to the thynges that I saye, and I shal tell the more. And I sayde: Speake on my Lorde. Then sayde he vnto me: Thou art sore vexed & troubled for Israels sake. Louest thou that people better then hym that made the? And I sayd: No Lorde, but of very grete & compassyon haue I spoken. For my reynes payne me euery houre, because I wolde haue experie of y waie of the most hyst, ad to seke out parte of hys iudgement. And he sayde vnto me: y mayest not. And I sayde: wherfore Lorde? wher vnto was I borne then? Or why was not my mothers chyldbed then my graue? So had I not sene y mysery & trouble of Jacob, and the trauaple of my people of Israel.

And he sayd vnto me: Romyze the thynges that are not yet come: gather me together the droppes, y are scatred abroad: make me the flours grene agayne, y are withered: open me the thynges that is closed: and byngge me forth the wyndes, that are shut vp: Shewe me the ymage of a voyce, and then shall I declare the thynges, that thou labourrest to knowe. And I sayde: O Lorde, Lorde, who maye knowe these thinges, but he that hath not hys dwellyng with men? As for me, I am vntowse: how may I then speake of these thynges wherof thou askest me? Then sayde he vnto me: like as y canst do none of these thynges that I haue spokē of, euen so canst thou not fynde out my iudgement, or in the ende the loue that I haue promysed vnto my people. And I sayd: We holde, O Lorde, yet art thou nye vnto them that haue no ende: and what shal they do, y haue bene before me, or we that be now, or they that shal come after vs? And he sayde vnto me: I wyl lyken my iudgement vnto a ryng. Lyke as there is no slacknesse of y last, eue so is there no swyftnesse of y fyrst. So I answered and sayd: couldest thou not make those (that haue bene made, & be now, and that are for to come) in one, that thou myghtest shewe thy iudgement the sooner? Then answered he me, and sayde: The creature maye not haste aboue y maker, neether maye the worlde holde them at once, that shalbe created.

And I sayde: How hast thou sayde then vnto thy seruante, that thou lyngge maker, hast made the creature lyngge at once & the creature bare it: eue so myght it now also heare them that be present, at oec. And he sayde vnto me: Aske the chyldbed of a woman, & saye vnto her: If thou bynggest forth chyldren, why doest thou it not to gether, but one after another? Praye her therfore, to byngge forth ten chyldren at once. And I sayde: she cannot, but must do it one after another.

Then sayde he vnto me: Euen so haue I geue a chyldbed vnto the earth, for those y be sown vpo it by processe of tyme. For lyke as a ponge childe maye not byngge forth y thynges that belonge to the aged: eue so haue I ordened the worlde which I made.

And I asked and sayde: Seyng thou hast now geuen me a waie, I will speake before the: for oure mother of whom thou hast tolde me, is yet ponge, & now she draweth nye vnto age. He answered me, and sayde: Aske a woman that beareth chyldren, & she shal tel y. Saye vnto her: wherfore are not they (whom thou hast now brought forth) lyke those that were before y, but lesse of stature? And she shal answer the: They that be borne in the pouth of strength, are of one fast wyd and they that are borne in the tyme of age, (when the chyldbed fayleth) are other wyse. Consyde now thy selfe, how that ye are lesse of stature, then those that were before you, and so are they that come after you, lesse then ye: as the creatures which now begynne to be old, & haue passed ouer y strength of pouth. Then sayde I: Lorde I beseeche y, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy syght, shewe thy seruante, by whom doest thou viset thy creature?

The. vi. Chapter.

The Angell instructeth Eldras, and geueth hym answer to hys questions.

Ad he sayde vnto me. In the begynnyng when y grounde was made: before the worlde stode, or euer the wyndes blew, before it thondred and lyghtened, or euer y foundacyōs of Paradys were layed, before the fayre flourcs were sene, or euer the moueable powers were stablyshed, before the innumerable multitude of angels were gathered together, or euer the hyghnesses of the ayre were lyfted vp, afore y measures of the firmament were named, or euer y chymneys in Syon were hote, ad or the presente peares were sought out, and or euer the inuēcyōs of them that now synne, were put asyde, before they were sealed that now gather fayth for a treasure: then byd I cōsyde and pondre all these thynges, and they all were made thozow me, and thozow none other: by me also they be ended, and by none other. Then answered I & sayd: which shal be y partynge asunder of y tymes? Or when shalbe the ende of the fyrst, & the begynnyng of y foloweth? And he sayd vnto me: From Abraham vnto Isaac, when Jacob and Esau were borne: Abba iii. of hym of hym, Jacobs hande helde fyrst the hyle of Esau: for Esau is the ende of thys worlde and Jacob is the begynnyng of it that foloweth. The hande of man betwixte the hyle and the hande. Other questyon (Esdras) aske thou not.

I answered then, & sayd: O Lord, Lord, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy syght, I beseech the, shewe thy seruauit the ende of thy tokens, wherof thou shewdest me parte the last nyght. So he answered ad sayde vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete, and heare the perfecte voyce and soude. There shall come a grete moeyon, but the place where thou standest shall not be moued. And therfore when thou hearest þy wordes, be not afraied: for of the ende shall the worde and foundacyon of the earth be vnderstande. And why? the word therof trembleth and quaketh, for it knoweth, that it must be chaunged at the ende. And it happened, þy whē I had hearde it, I stode vp vpon my fete, and hearkened: & behold, there was a voyce that spake, and þy founde of it was lyke þy founde of many waters, and it sayde: Beholde, the dayes come, that I will begynne to drawe nye, & to vyset them that dwell vpon earth, and wil begynne to make iniquityon of them, what they be that haue hurt egypte with vnyghteousnes, and when the lowe estate of Spō shall be fulfilled: and when the worlde, that shall vanysh awaye, shall be ouerlealed, then wyll I do these tokens.

The bookes shall be opened before the firmament, and they shall se all together, & the chyldre of a yere olde shall speake with their voyces: the women with chyldre shall bring forth vntymely chyldre of thre or foure monethes olde, and they shall lyue, and berayfed vp: & sodenly shall the lowen places appeare as the vnlowen, the full store houses shall sodenly be founde emptye, & the trompett shall geue a soude, which whē euery mā heareth, they shall be hastily afrayed. * At þy tyme shall frendes fyght one agaynst another lyke enemyes, and the earth shall stande in feare with them.

The spynges of the welles shall stande styll, and in thre houres they shall not rene. Whosoeuer remayneth from all these thynges that I haue told the, shall escape, ad se my saluacyon, and the ende of your worlde. And the men that haue receaued, shall se it, they that haue not tasted death from theyr byrth, and the hert of the indwellers shall be chaunged, & turned into another meanyng: for euell shall be put out, and dysceate shall be quenched. As for sayth, it shall flozpysh, corrupcyon shall be overcome: & þy truelyth, which hath bene so longe without frute, shall be declared. And it happened when he talked w me, that I looked demurely vpon hym, before whom I stode, and these wordes sayde he vnto me: I am come to shewe the, the tyme of the nyght for to come.

If thou wilt praye yet more, and fast seuen dayes agayne, I shall tell the more thynges, and greater then befoze: for thy voyce is heard before the hyst: for whyp þy myghty hath sene thy ryghteous dealyng, he hath sene also thy chastite, which thou hast had euer sence thy yowth: and therfore hath he sent me to shewe the all these thynges, ad to saye vnto the: Be of good conforte, and feare not, and haste not with þy tymes that are past to thyncke vayne thynges, and make not hast of the latter tymes.

And it happened after this, that I wepte agayne, and fasted seuen dayes in lyke maner, & I myght full þy thre weekes: which he told me. In þy eyght nyght was my hert vexed with me agayne, & I begane to speake befoze þy hyst, for my sprete was greatly sett on fyre, & my soule was i dysstresse, & I sayd: O Lord, thou spakest vnto thy creature fro the begynnyng (euē the fyrst daye) and saydest: * Let heauen & earth be made, and thy worde was a perfecte worcke. And then was there the sprete, and þy darckenesses were yet on euery syde, and splence: there was no mans voyce as yet from þy. Then commaundedst þy a fayre lyght to come forth out of thy treasures, that thy worck myght appeare and be sene.

Vpon the seconde daye thou madest the sprete of the firmament, and comaundedst it to part a sunder, and to make a deuytyon betwixte the waters, that the one part myght remayne aboue: and the other beneth. Vpon the thyrde daye thou broughtest to passe, þy the waters were gathered i the senenth part of þy earth: Sixe partes hast thou dryed vp, and kepte them, to thyntent þy men myght fowre & occuppe husbandrye therein. As loone as thy worde wente forth, the worcke was made. For imedyatly there was grete innumerable frute, and many vyuerse pleasures & desyres of tēptacyon, floures of chaungeable couloure and smell, and this was doge the thyrde daye.

* Vpon the.iiii. daye þy commaundedst þy the Sunne shuld geue his thynne, & the moone her lyght: þy starres dydest thou set in ordre: and gauest them a charge: to do scrupce euery vnto man, that was for to be made.

Vpon þy fyft daye thou saydest vnto the senenth part (where the * waters were gathered) that they shulde byrnye forth diuerse bestes, foules and fyshes. And so it came to passe, that the domme water and without soule, brought forth lypunge bestes, at þy commaundement of God, that all people myght prayse thy wonderous worckes.

Then dydest thou preserue two soules, the one one thou calledst Enoch and the other Lelathian, ad dydest separate the one fro the other: for the senenth parte (namely, where þy water was gathered together) myght not holde them bothe. Vnto Enoch thou gauest one parte, which was dryed vp the thyrde daye, that he shulde dwell i the same parte, wherin are a thousand hilles. But vnto Lelathian thou gauest the senenth part, namely the moyst, and hast kepte hym to deuoure what thou wyll, and whan. Vpon the sixte daye thou gauest commaundement vnto the earth, that befoze the, it shulde byrnye forth bestes, catell, and all that crepe, and (belydes this) Adā also, whō thou madest Lord of all thy creatures, Of hym come we all, & the people also, whom thou hast chosen specially vnto thy selfe. All thys haue I sayde now & spoken befoze þy, that I myght shewe how that the worlde is made for oure sakes. As for the other people which also come of Adā thou hast sayd that they are nothyng, but be lyke a spetle, & hast lykened þy abouidance of them vnto a droppe (that falleth) from the rose of the houle.

And now, O Lord, the heathen which haue euer bene reputed as nothyng, haue begone to be lordes ouer vs, and to deuoure vs: but we thy people (whom thou hast called the fyrst bozne, thy only begotten, & thy feruent louer) are geuen into theyr handes and power. Yf the worlde now be made for oure sakes, why haue we not the inheritaunce in possession with the worlde: how longe shall thys endure?

The. vii. Chapter.

The Angel sheweth Esdras many thynges to come.

And it happened after that I had spoken out these wordes, there was sent vnto me an Angell, which had bene by me also the nightes afore, and he said vnto me: Up Esdras, and heare the wordes þy I am come to tel the. And I sayd: speake on Lord my God. Then sayd he vnto me. The see is set in a wyde place, that it myght be depe and grete: but the entraunce is narrow and small lyke a ryuer. For who wolde go to the see, to loke vpon it, and to rule it: If he wente not thorow þy narrow, how myght he come into the brode?

Item another: A cyte is buylded and set vpon a brode felde, and is full of all goodes the entraunce is narrow & sodayne, lyke as yf there were a fyre at the ryght had, and a depe water at the left and as it were onely one strapte path betwixte the both, so smal that there coulde but one man go there.

Yf thys cyte now were geue to an heye, & he neuer wete thorow the paelous waye, how wolde he receaue his inheritaunce? And I sayde: It is so Lord, Then sayd he: Euē so is Israel also a porcion. And why? for their sakes haue I made the worlde: & whē Adam transgressed my statutes, then was the thyng iudged þy was done. Then were the entraunces of the worlde made narrow, ful of sorow & trauayle. They are but few & euell, full of parcels and laboure. For the entraunces of the fore worlde were wyde and sure, and brought immortall frute.

If they now which are entred into thys worlde, maye not cōprehende these strapte and vayne thynges, moche lesse maye they cōprehende and vnderstande the secrete thynges: Why disquietest thou thy self the, seing thou art but a corruptible man: And what woldest thou knowe, where as thou art but mortall? And why hast thou not receaued into thyn herte the thyng that is for to come, but that is present?

Then sayd I: O Lord, * thou hast ordeyned i thy lawe, þy the ryghteous shuld inheret these thynges, but that þy vnsaythfull and vngodly shulde perperthe. Neuertheless, the righteous shall suffre strapte thynges, and hope for wyde: for they that haue lyued vngodly and suffered strapte thynges shall not se the wyde.

And he sayde vnto me: There is no iudge aboue God, and none that hath vnderstandyng aboue the hyst. For there be many that perperthe, because they despyse the lawe of God þy is sett befoze them. For God hath geuen strapte commaundement to such as come, that they knowe what they do, and how they shuld lyue: and yf they kepte this they shuld not be punyshed.

Neuertheless, they were not obedient vnto hym, but spake agaynst hym: ymagyned vayne thynges, and purposed to synne, and sayd mozeouer, that there was no God, and that God regarded it not. Hys wayes haue they not knowne, his lawe haue they despyed, and denyed hys promyses: in hys statutes & ordynances haue they not bene saythfull and stedfast, and haue not perfourmed hys worckes.

And therfore Esdras: vnto the full, plenty: and to the emptye, emptynesse. Beholde the tyme shall come, that these tokes which I haue tolde the, shall come to passe, ad the byrde shall appeare, and the earth that now passeth awaye, shall be shewed: and whosoeuer is deliuered fro the fore sayde euells, shall se my wonders. For my sonne Iesus shall be openly declared, with those that be with hi: & they that remayne, shall be mercy in foure hundred yeaers.

After these same yeaers shall my sonne Chryst dye, & all men that haue lyfe, and þy worlde shall be turned into the olde sylere seuen dayes, lyke as in the fore iudgements, so þy no man shall remayne. And after seuen dayes, the world that yet a waiked not, shall be rayled vp, and shall dye corrupte. And the earth shall restore those þ haue slepte in her, and so shall the dust those that dwell in it: ce, and the secrete place shall deliuer those þ be corrupted vnto the. And the most hyest shall be openly declared vpon þ seate of iudgemēt, and all mysery shall vanysh awaye, & longe suffryng shall be gathered together. But the iudgemēt shall continue, the treuth shall remayne, and sayth shall ware strong, the worcke shall folowe, & the rewarde shall be shewed: the ryghteousnes shall watch, & the vnyghteousnes shall beare no rule.

James. v. c.

Then sayde I: * Abraham prayed fyrst for the Sodomites, & Moses for þ fathers that sinned in the wyldernes, & he that came after hym for Israel, in þ tyme of Ahas and Samucl: and * David for the destruccyon, and Salomon for them that came in to the Sanctuary, & helias for those þ receaued rayne, & for þ deed, that he myght lye, and Ezechias for the people in the tyme of Sennacherib: and diuerse other lyk maner, which haue prayed for many.

Euē so now, sepyng the corrupte is growne vp, & wyckednes increased, and the ryghteous haue prayed for the vngodly, wherfore shall it not be so now also?

He answered me, and sayd: Thys present world is not the ende, there remaineth moche honoure in it, therefore haue they prayed for the wrake. But the daye of dome shall be the ende of thys tyme, and the begynning of the immortalite for to come, wherin all corrupcyon vanyshed, all voluptuousnes is louscd all mysbelue taken awaye, ryghteousnes growne, and the veryte spronge vp. Then shall no man be able to saue hym that is destroyed, ner to opresse hym þ hath gotten þ victory. I answered then, and sayd: This is my first and last sayig: þ it had bene better, not to haue geuen the earthe vnto Ada: or els when it was geuen hym, to kepe hym þ he shuld not synne. For what profit is it for men now in thys present tyme to lye in heynes, & after death to loke for punyshment. O thou Adam, what hast thou done? For though it was thou that synned, þ art not fallen alone, but we all that come of þ. For what profit is it vnto vs, yf there be promysed vs an immortal tyme, where as we medle wyth deadly wyckednes, and that there is promysed vs an euerlastyng hope, where as our selues are euil & vayne, and þ there are layed vp for vs dwellynges of health & freedom, where as we haue lpyued euell, & þ the wyckednes of the hyest is kepte to defende them, which haue led a pacient lyfe, wher as we haue walcked in the most wycked wayes of all: And that there shall be shewed a paradys, whose frute endureth for euer, wherin is freedom and medycyne, where as we shall not go in: for we haue walcked in vnpleasunt places: And that the faces of them, which haue absteyned, shall synne a-boue the starres, where as oure faces shall be black and parche: For whyle we lpyued & dyd vnyghtcously, we consydered not that we shuld suffre therfore after death.

Then answered he me, and sayde: Thys is the consyderacion & thought of the bat-tayle, which man hath vpon earth: that yf he be ouercome, he shall suffre as thou hast sayde. But yf he gett the victory, he shall receaue the thyng that I saye. For thys is þ lyfe, wher of Moses spake vnto the people, whyle he lpyued, sayinge: * Chose the lyfe, that þ mayest lye. Neuertheles, they beleued hym not, nether þ prophetes after hym. No ner me which haue spoken vnto them þ heynnes shulde not reach vnto them to thez destruccyon, lyke as ioye is for to come ouer those that haue suffred them selues to be enfourmed in saluacyon.

*Deu. xxxii.

I answered then, & sayde: I knowe Lorde, that the hyest is mercyfull, in that he hath mercy vpon them, whych are not yet in the world, and vpon those also that walcke in his lawe: and that * he is pacient and longe sufferynge towarde those that haue synned in thez wyckednes, and that he is liberrall to geue where as it requyeth: and that he is of great mercy, for he multiplid hys louyng kyndnesse towarde those that are present and that are past, & to them whych are for to come. For yf he multiplie not hys mercyes, the world shall not be made lpyunge, wyth those that dwell therein. He geueth also, for yf he gaue not of hys goodnes, that they whych haue done euell, myght be cased from thez wyckednes, the ten thousande parte of men shulde not be made lpyunge. And yf the iudge forgaue not those that be healed w hys worde, & yf he wold destroye þ multitude that stryuet, there shulde be ver-few left in an innumerable multitude.

The. viii. Chapter.

¶ Eldas prayeth God rather to loke vpon hys awne merce, then on the synnes of the people.

And he answered me, sayinge. The most hyest made thys worlde for many, but the worlde to come for fewe. I will tell the a symplite, Eldas: As when thou askest the earth, it shall saye vnto þ, that it geueth moche moulde, whereof earthen vessels are made, but litle of it that golde cometh of. Euē so is it with the worlde of thys worlde. * There be many created, but fewe shall be preserued. Then answered I and sayde: The walowe by the wytt (thou soule) and deuoure the vnderstanvnderstandyng, for thou art agreed to her-ken and to geue eare, and wyllynge to pro-physe: for thou hast no longer space geuen þ, but onely to lye. O Lorde, wilt thou not geue thy seruaut leaue, that we maye praye be fore the, and that thou mayest geue scde vnto oure herte, & buyde oure vnderstandyng, that there maye come frute of it: & that euery one which is corrupte, and beareth þ sta-te and place of a man, maye lye.

For thou art alone, & we all are one worckman of thy hādes, lyke as thou hast sayd, and lyke as the body is fashioned now in the mothers wōbe, & thou geuest the me-hies, and thy creature is preserued in fyre & water: & ix. monethes doth thy worke suffre thy creature, which is fashioned in her: but the thyng that preserued, and it that is pre-serued, shall both be kepte together: and whē tyme is, the wombe deliuereth the thyng that is kepte and growne in her.

For thou hast commaunded þ bestes to geue mylk vnto the frute, that the thyng which is created and fashioned, maye be no-ryshed for a tyme: and then thou dysposest & ordrest it with thy mercy, bynyngest it vp w thy ryghteousnes, nuturest it in thy law, & refourmest it with thy vnderstandyng, moztifitest it as thy creature, & makest it lpyuge as thy worke. Sepyng then that thou destroyedst hi, which with so great labours is created and fashioned thowowe thy com-maundment, thou couldest lyghly ordeyne, also, that the thyng which is made, myght be preserued.

And this I speake now of all men in general: as þ knowest: but of thy people: for whose sake I am sorowful: and of thy inheritance: for whose cause I mourne: and of Israel, for whom I am woofull: and for Jacob, for whose sake I am greued, therefore begynne I to praye before the, for my selfe & for the, for I fe the fall of vs, euē of vs, that dwell vpon earth. But I haue herde the wyftnes of the iudge, which is to come: therefore heare my voyce, and vnderstande my wordes, and I shall speake before the.

This is the begynninge of the wordes of Eldas, before he was receaued: O Lorde, thou that dwellest in euerlastynesse, whose eyes are lyft vp i the ayre, whose scole is exceeding hye, whose glozy & maiesty maye not be comprehended, before whom the hostes of heauen stande with tremblpyng, whose keepinge is turned in wynde & fyre, whose worde is true, whose talchpyng is stedfast, whose commaundement is stronge, whose ordinaunce is fearfull, whose loke dyeth by the depthes, whose wraath maketh the mou-taynes to melt awaye, and whose tructh beareth wytnes: O heare the prayer of thy seruaut, and marck with thyne eares the petition of thy creature.

For whyle I lye, I wyl speake, and so longe as I haue vnderstandyng, I wyl an-swere: O loke not vpon the synnes of thy people, whych serue in the treuth. Haue no respecte vnto the wicked studies of the hea-then, but to the desire of those that kepe thy testymones wyth sorowes. Chynke not vnto those that haue walcked fapnedly befo-re the, but vpon them, which with will haue knowne thy feare.

Let it not be thy wyl to destroye them, which haue had beastyly maners, but to loke vnto the that haue clearly taught thy law. Take thou no indignaciō at the, which are worse then bestes: but loue them, that all waye put theyz trust in thy ryghteousnes & glozy: for we & oure fathers haue all the sa-me sycknes and dyscase, but because of oure synnes thou shalt be called mercyfull.

For yf thou hast mercy vpon vs, þ shalt be called mercyfull, where as we haue no wyckednes of ryghteousnes: for þ ryghteous whych haue layed vp many good wyckednes together, shall out of theyz dedes receaue re-warde. For what is mā, that thou shuldest take displeasure at hym? O what is the cor-ruptible mortall generaciō, that thou shuldest be so rough towarde hym?

* For of a truthe there is no man amōge them that be bozne, but he hath dealt wyck-edly: and amōge the saythfull there is no-ne, which hath not done amysse. For in thys (O Lorde) thy ryghteousnes and thy good-nes shall be prayled and declared, yf thou be mercyfull vnto them, which are not ryche in good wyckednes.

*ii. cor. v. c.
1. John. i. b.

Then answered he me and sayde: Some thynges hast thou spokē a ryght, and accordyng vnto thy wordes it shall be. For I wil not verely consyde the wyckednes of them, which haue synned before death, before the iudgement, before destruccyon, but * I wyl reioyse ouer the wyckednes and thought of the ryghteous. I will remēbre also the pylgre-mage, the holy makynge and the rewarde. Lyke as I haue spoken now, so shall it come to passe. For as the husbāde man soweth moche seede vpon the groude, and planteth many trees, and yet alwaye the thyng that is sowne or plantid is not all kepte safe, ne-ther doth it all take rote: Euē so is it: if the that are sowne in the worlde, they shall not all be preserued.

*Senc. iiii. a

I answered then and sayde: If I haue founde grace, the let me speake. Like as the husbāde mans seede perissheth, yf it receaue not rayne in due season, or yf there come to much rayne vnto it: Euē so perissheth man also, which is created with thy handes, and is lyke vnto thyn awne ymage and to thy selfe, for whose sake thou hast made all then

Abb v gcs, and

ges, and lykened hym vnto the husbunde mans sede. Benot wroth at vs, O Lorde, but spare thy people, and haue mercy vpon thyne awne inherytaunce: O be mercyfull vnto thy creature.

D Then answered he me & sayde. Thynges present are for the present, and thynges to come for soch as be to come. For thou lackest yet moch, seynge I mayest loue my creature aboue me: I haue oft tymes drauone nye vnto the, but neuer to the vnrpyghteous. In this also thou art maruelous before I hest in that thou hast humbled thy selfe, as it becometh the, and hast not regarded thyne awne selfe, that thou art had in soch honoure amonge I rpyghteous. Therfore shal great wechednes and mysery come vpon the, that in the latter tyme shal dwell in the worlde because they haue walched in grete pryde.

But vnderstand thou for thy selfe, and seke out glozy for soch as be lyke the: for vnto you is paradysc opened, the tre of lyfe is planted, the tyme to come is prepared, plentyfines made ready, a cytie is buylded for you, & a rest is prepared, yee perfecte goodnes and wysdome. The rote of euell is marked from you, I weaknes, and moth is hyd fro you, & into hell flyeth corrupcion in forgetfulness. Sorowes are vanyshe awaye, and in the ende is shewed the treasure of immortallite. And therfore aske thou nomore questions concernynge the multitude of the that perishe. For they haue taken libertye: despyled the hest, thought scoyne of his lawe, and forsaken his wayes.

Moreouer, they haue troden downe hys rpyghteous, and I sayde in theyr herte, that there is no God, yee and that wyttynly, for they dye. For lyke as the thyng that I haue spoken of, is made ready for you: Eue so is thyrt & payne prepared for them. For it was not hys wyll that man shulde come to naught, but they which be created haue despyled the name of hym that made them, and are vnrhachfull vnto hym, which prepared lyfe for them. And therfore is my iudgement now at hand. These thynges haue I not shewed vnto all men, but vnto fewe, namely vnto the, and to soch as be lyke the.

Then answered I and sayd: Beholde O Lorde, now hast thou shewed me the multitude of the tokens, which thou wylt begyn to do at the last: but at what tyme & when, thou hast not shewed me.

The. ix. Chapter.

Of howe the woman that appeareth vnto hym comen together.

A answered me then and sayd: Measure thou I tyme diligently in it selfe, when thou seest that one parte of the tokens come to passe, whych I haue tolde I before: so shalt thou vnderstande, that it is the very same tyme, wherein the hest wylt begynne to vylset the worlde, which he made. And whē there shalbe sene earth quake and vproare of the people I the worlde, the hest thou well vnderstande, that the most hest spake of those thynges, from the dayes that were before the, euen from the begynnyng.

For lyke as all that is made in the worlde hath a begynnyng and ende, and the ende is manifest: Eue so the tymes also of I hest haue playne begynnynges in wonders and tynges, and the ende in workyng and in tokens. And euery one that shalbe saued, and shal be able to escape by hys workes and by faith, wherein ye haue beleued, shal be preserved from the sayde perils, and shal se my sauyoure in my lande, and wythin my borders, for I haue halowed me fro the worlde. The shal they be in carefulnesse, which now haue abused my wayes: and they I haue cast the oute despitely, shal dwell in paynes.

For soch as in theyr lyfe haue receaued benefytes, and haue not knowne me, & they that haue abhorred my lawe, whyle they had yet fredome, and whē they had yet open leysure of amendement and conuersyon, and vnderstode not, but despyled it: I same must knowe it after death in paine. And therfore be thou nomore carefull, how the vngodly shalbe punished, & how the rpyghteous shalbe saued, and whose the worlde is, & for who the worlde, and when it is. Then answered I and sayde: I haue talched before & now I speake, ad will speake also her after, that there be many moos of them whych perishe, the shalbe saued, lyke as the floude is greater then the droppe.

And he answered me, sayinge: lyke as the felde is, so is also the sede: as the floures be, so are the coulours also: soch as the workman is, soch is also the worcke: and as the husband ma is hym selfe, so is hys husbandrye also, for it was the tyme of the worlde. And when I prepared for them that are now, or euer the worlde was made, where in they shulde dwell, then was there no man that wythstode me. Now when euery one was, and the maker also in the worlde which is now prepared, and the moneth that ceaseth not, and the lawe whych is vnsearchable, theyr maners were corrupte. So I consydered the worlde, & beholde, there was parcell, because of the thoughtes that were come in to it. And I saw, and spared them greatly, and haue kepte me a wynebery of the grapes, and a plante from amonge many generacions. Let the multitude perishe thou, whych are growne vp in wayne, and lett my grape and wynebery be kepte: euen my plante: for wyth greute labour haue I made it vp.

Neuertheles

Neuertheles, yf thou wylt take vpon the yet seuen dayes mo (but thou shalt not fast in them) goo thy waye then into the felde of floures, where no house is buylded, and eate onely of the floures of I felde, taste not flesh, dryncke no wyne, but eate floures onely. Praye vnto the hest continually, so wyl I come, and talke with the.

E So I went my waye and came into the felde which is called Ardath (lyke as he commaunded me) and there I sat amonge the floures, & dyde eate of the herbes of the felde, and the meate of I same satisfied me. After seuen dayes I sat vpon the grasse, and my herte was vexed within me lyke as afore: & I opened my mouth, and beganne to talke before the hest, and sayde: O Lorde, thou that shewest thy selfe vnto vs, * thou hast declared and opened thy selfe vnto oure fathers in the wyldernes, in a place where no man dwelleth, in a baren place, when they came out of Egypt, and thou spakest, sayinge: heare me O Israel, and marke my wordes thou sede of Jacob: Beholde, I sowe my lawe in you, and it shal byynge frute in you & ye shalbe honoured in it for euer. For oure fathers which receaued I lawe, kept it not and obserued not thy ordinaunces and statutes, and the frute of thy lawe was not declared: for it myght not, for why? it was thyne. * For they that receaued it, perished, because they kepte not the thyng that was sowne in them.

It is a custome when the ground receaueth sede, or the see a ship, or a vessell meate and dryncke, that whē it perissheth or is broken wherein a thing is sowne, or wherein any thyng is put: the thynges also perishe and are broken, which are sowne or put therein. But vnto vs it hath not happened so: for we that haue receaued the lawe, perishe in synne & oure herte whych also receaued the lawe: notwithstanding * the lawe perissheth not, but remayneth in his labour.

And when I consydered these thynges in my herte after thys maner, I looked aboute me with myne eyes, and vpon the right syde I sawe a woman, which mourned sore, made greute lamentacyon, and wepte with loud voyce: her clothes were rent in peeces, and she had asches vpon her heade.

Then let I my thoughtes go, that I was in, and turned me vnto her, and sayd. Wherefore wepest thou? why art thou so sorow and discomforted? And she sayde vnto me. Syr, lett me be wayle my self and take yet more sorow: for I am sore vered in my mynde, & brought very lowe. And I sayde vnto her: what apleth I? Or who hath done any thing to I tell me. She sayde: I haue bene vnfructfull and baren, and haue had an husband thyrtie yeres. And these. xxx. yeres I do nothyng els daye and nyght & all houres, but make my prayer to I hest. After thyrtie yeres God herde me thy handmayden, looked vpon my misery, consydered my trouble, and gaue me a sonne, and I was glad of him, so was my husband also & all my neyghbours, & we gaue greute honoure vnto the hest. And I noyshed hym with greute traunple. So when he grew vp, and came to I tyme, that he shuld haue a wyfe, I made a feast.

The. x. Chapter.

Of howe the woman that appeareth vnto hym comen together.

And it happened that when my son I wente into hys chamber he fell downe, and dyed: then ouerthrew we all I yghtes, and all my neyghbours rose vp to comforte me. Then toke I my rest vnto the seconde daye at nyght: and whē they had all rested, that they might comforte me, I rested and also rose vp by nyght, and fled, & am come hyther in to thys felde, as thou seest: and am purposed not to come in the cite, but to remayne here, and nether to cate ner dryncke, but continually to mourne and to fast, vntyll I dye.

Then let I my meditacions & thoughtes fall, that I was in, & spake to her in displeasure: Thou fooly woman, seest thou not oure heynnes and mournyng, & what happeneth vnto vs: how syon oure mother is all wofull and sorow, and how she is cleane brought downe and in mysery: seynge we be all now in heynnes, & make oure monne (for we be all sorowfull.) As for I heynnes that thou takest, it is but for one sonne. Demande the earth, & she shal tell the, that it is the which ought (by reason) to mourne, for the fall of so many that growe vpon her.

For from the begynnyng all me are borne of hir, and other shal come: & beholde, they walke all most all in to destruccion, and many of them shalbe roted out.

Who shulde then (by reason) make more mournyng, then she, that hath lost so great a multitude: & not thou, which art sorow, but for one. But yf thou woldest saye vnto me: My mournyng is not lyke the mournyng of the earth, for I haue lost the frute of my body, which I bare w heynnes: but I earth is accordinge to the maner of the earth, and the present multitude goeth againe into her as it is come to passe. Then saye I vnto the: lyke as thou hast borne with traunple & sorow, eue so I earth also fro the begynnyng geueth her frute vnto man, for hym I made her. And therfore with holde thy sorow and heynnes by thy selfe: & loke what happeneth vnto the, beare it strongly. For yf thou iudgeth the marcke and ende of God to be rpyghteous be ryghteous and good, & receauest his cell in tyme, & shall be comended therein. So thy waye then into the cytye to thy husbnde. And she sayde vnto me: that wyll I not do, I wyll not go in to the cytye, but beare wyll I dye. So I commened moze with her and sayde: Do not so, but be counceled, and folowe me: for how many falles hath Spō? We of good comforte because of the sorowe of Jerusalem. For thou seyst that our Sanctuary is laped waste, our alter broken, our temple destroyed, our playnge of instruments and syngynge laped hohne, the thakelgeyunge put to spylene, our myrth is vanyshed a waye, the lyght of our candelstick is quēched, the arcke of the couenaunt is taken from vs, all our holy thynges are defyled, and the name that is called vpon ouer vs, is dishonoured: our chyldre are put to shame, our prestes are byent, our Leuites are caried a waye into captiuite, our virgins are defyled, and our wyues rauished, our ryghteousnes spoiled, and our chyldren destroyed, our pongemen are brought in bondage, and our stronge worthyes are become weake: and Spō (which seale is the greatest of all) is lowled vp from her wypp: for she is deliuered into the handes of them that hate vs.

And therfore make of thy great heynes, and put a waye the multitude of sorowes: & the myghte maye be mercifull vnto the, & that the byest maye geue the rest from thy labour and trauaile. And it happened, that when I was talkyng with her, her face dyd wyne and glyster, so that I was afrayed of her, and mused what it myght be. And immediately she cast oute a greete voyce, very fearfull, so that the earth shoke at the noyse of the woman: and I looked, and beholde, the womā appeared vnto me nomoze: but there was a citie builded, & a place was shewed from the grounde and foundacyon.

Then was I afrayed, and cryed wyth loude voyce, and sayde: where is Ariel the angell, * which came to me at the fyrst? For he hath caused me to come in many confidencys and hys thoughtes, and myne ende is turned to corrupciō, and my prayer to rebuke. And as I was speakynge these wordes, he came vnto me, and looked vpon me, & I sape as one that had bene deed, and myne understanding was altered, and he toke me by the ryght hande, and cōforted me, and set me vpon my fete, and sayde vnto me: what ayleth the? and why is thine vnderstanding vexed? and the vnderstanding of thy herte, & wherfore art thou sorow? And I sayd: Because thou hast forsake me: and I haue done * accordinge vnto thy wordes, I went in to the felde, and there haue I sene thynges that I am not able to expresse. He sayde vnto me: Stande vp and be manly, and I shall geue the exhortacion.

Thene sayd I: speake vnto me my Lord forsake me not, lest I dye in wayne: for I haue sene that I knewe not, and herde that I donot knowe. And he sayd: But now I beseeche the, that thou wyll shewe thy seruante of this word. He answered me ther: & sayd: heare me, and I shall enfourme the, and tell the wherfore thou art afrayed, for the byest hath opened many secreete thynges vnto the. He hath sene that thy waye is ryght, and that thou takest sorowe continually for thy people, and makest greete lamentacyon for Syon: and therfore vnderstande the vision which thou sawest a lytle whyle agoe after this maner: Thou sawest a woman mourning, and thou hast comforted her: neuertheles now seyst thou the lykenes of a woman nomoze, but thou thoughtest there was a citie builded: and like as she tolde of the fall of her sonne, so is this the answer: The woman whom thou sawest, is Syon, and where as she tolde the, that she hath bene thyrtie yeres vnfrutefull and bare, those are the xxx. yeres, wherein there was no offerynge made in her.

But after xxx. yeres Salomō builded her, & offred, and then bare she bare a sonne. And where as she tolde of: that she noyshed hym with labour, that was the dwellinge of Jerusalem. But where as she tolde the of her sonne dyed whā she came into her chamber, that is the fall of Jerusalem. And thou sawest her lykenesse, how she mourned for her sonne: and what els happened vnto her, I haue shewed the. And now God seyth, that thou art sorow in thy mynde, and suffrest fro thy herte for her, & so hath he shewed the her cleynesse, and the faynes of her bewtye.

And therfore I had the remayne in a felde where no house is builded. For I knew that the byest wolde shewe this vnto the, therfore I commaunded the to goo into the felde, where no foundation ner buildynge is. For in the place where the byest wyll shewe hys cytye, there shall be no mans buildynge. And therfore feare not, and let not thyne herte be afrayed, but go thy waye in, and se the glorious and fayre buildynge, and how greete it is, and how greete thou thinkest it after the measure of thine eyes, and the shal thou heare as moch as thine eares maye comprehend. For thou art blessed above many other, and art called with the byest, as the fewe. But tomorrow at nyght thou shalt remayne here, and so shall the byest shewe the the vision of hys thynges, which he wyll do vnto the, that dwell vpon earth in the last dayes. So I slepte the same nyght lyke as he commaunded me.

The

The. xi. Chapter.

In this chapter and in the. ii. next ensynge, he encreaseth of reueren bysons and of the interpre: racyons therof.

When sawe I a dreame: and beholde there came vp from the see an Aegle which had. xii. wynges and thre heades: And I sawe, and beholde, he spred hys wynges ouer all the earth, and all the wyndes of the ayre blew in the, and so they were put together agayne. And I behelde, & out of hys fethers there grew other lytle cotrary fethers: the heades rested, the head in the myddest was greater then the other, yet rested it with the residue.

Moreover I sawe, that the Aegle flew w hys wynges, and raygned vpon earth, and ouer all them that dwell vpon the earth: and I sawe that all thynges vnder heauen were subiecte vnto hym, & no man spake against hym, no not one creature vpon earth. I sawe also that the Aegle stode vpon hys clawes, & gaue a soude with his fethers, and a voyce sayynge after this maner: watch not all together, slepe euery man in hys awne place, and watch for a tyme, but let the heades be preserued at the last. Neuertheles I sawe, that the voyce wente not oute of hys heades, but from the myddest of hys body. And I nombred hys cotrary fethers, and beholde, there were epyght of them. And I looked, and beholde vpon the ryght syde there arose one fether, & raygned ouer all the earth. And it happened, that when it raygned the ende of it came, and the place therof appeared nomoze. So the nexte folowynge stode vp, and raygned, and had greete tyme: and it happened, that when it raygned, the ende of it came also lyke as the fyrst, so that it appeared nomoze.

Then came there a voyce vnto it, & sayd heare thou that hast kepte in the earth so longe, thys I sape vnto the, before thou begynnest to appeare nomoze: There shall none after the attayne vnto thy tyme. Then arose the thyrde, and raygned as the other afore, & appeared nomoze also. So went it with all the residue one after another, so that euery one raygned, and then appeared nomoze. Then I looked, and beholde, in processe of tyme the fethers that folowed were set vp vpon the ryght syde, that they myght rule also: & some of the ruled, but within a whyle they appeared nomoze: for some of the were set vp, but ruled not. After this I looked, and beholde the. xii. fethers appeared nomoze, and the two wynges: & there was nomoze vpon the Aegles body, but two heades that rested, and thre fethers. The sawe I also, that the thre fethers were parted in two, and remained vnder the head, that was vpon the ryght syde, for the foure continued in the thre place.

So I looked, & beholde, they that were vnder the wynges, thought to set vp the selues, & to haue the rule. Then was there one set vp but shortly it appeared nomoze, & the secōde was sooner a waye then the fyrst. And I behelde & lo, the two thought also by the selues to raygne: & when they so thought, beholde, there waked one of the heades that were at rest, namely, it that was in the myddest, for that was the greater of the two heades. And the I sawe, that the two heades were filled with hym, and the head was turned wyth the that were by hym, and dyd cate vnto the two vnder wynges, that wolde haue raygned.

But this head put the whole earth in feare, & bare rule in it, ouer all those that dwell vpon earth w moch labour, and he had the gouernance of the worlde, ouer all the foules that haue bene. After this I looked, & beholde, the head that was in the myddest sodenly appeared nomoze, lyke as the wynges: then came the two heades, which ruled vpon earth, & ouer those that dwell therein. And I behelde, & lo, the head vpon the ryght syde, deuoured it that was vpon the left syde. And I herde a voyce, which sayde vnto me: loke before the, and consydre the thyng that thou seyst. The I sawe and beholde, as it were a lyde roareth, rennyng hastely out of the wod, & he sent out a mas voyce vnto the Aegle, & sayd: heare thou, I will talke with the, & the byest shal sape vnto the: Is it not thou that hast the victory of the foure beastes, whom I made to raygne vpon earth & in my worlde, and the childe of theyr tymes myght come thowow the?

And the fourth came, and our wanne all the beastes that were past, and had power ouer the worlde with great fearfulness, and ouer the whole copasse of the earth with the most wicked labour, & so longe tyme dwell he vpon the earth with disceate, & the earth hath thou iudged not with truerth. For thou hast troubled the meke, thou hast hurte the peaceable & quete, thou hast loued lypers, & destroyed the dwellinges of the that brought forth frute, and hast cast downe the walles of soch as dyd the no harme. Therfore is thy wrongeous dealynge and blasphemye come vp vnto the byest, and thy pryde vnto the myghty. The byest also hath looked vpon the proude tymes, and beholde, they are ended, and theyr abhominaciōs are fulfilled. And therfore appeare nomoze thou Aegle, & thy horrible wynges, and thy wycked fethers, & thy vngacious heades, and thy synfull clawes, and all thy wayne body: that the earth maye be refreshed, and come agayne to her selfe, whā she is deliuered from thy violence, and that she maye hope for the iudgemēt and mercy of hym that made her.

The. xii. Chapter.

And it

Ad it happened when the Lyō spake these wordes vnto p̄ Agle, I sawe, & beholde, the head that afore had the vpperhand, appeared nomore: nether dyd p̄ foure wynges appeare any more, that came to him, and were set vp to raygne: and their kyngdome was small and full of vppoure. And I sawe, and beholde, they appeared nomore, and the whole body of the Agle was b̄t, and the earth was in greute feare. The awaked I out of the traunce of my mynde, & from greute feare, & sayde vnto my sp̄re: Lo, this hast thou geuen me in that thou searchest out p̄ wayes of the h̄p̄st: lo, yet am I weery in my mynde, & very weake in my sp̄re, and lytle strenght is there in me, for p̄ greute feare p̄ I receaued this nyght. Therefore wyll I now beseeche the h̄p̄st, that he wyll cōforte me vnto the ende: and I sayde, Lozde Lozde, p̄ I haue founde grace before thy syght, and p̄ I am iustified with the befoze many other, and p̄ my prayer be come vp before thy face, comfōrte me thē, and shewe me thy seruaunt the interpretacion and playne differēce of thys horrible syght, that thou mayest perfectly cōforte my soule: for thou hast indged me woꝛthy, to shewe me the last of tymes.

And he sayde vnto me: thys is the interpretacyon of thys syght. The Agle whom thou sawest come vp frō the see, is the kyngdome* which was sene in the visyon of thy brother Daniel, but it was not expounded vnto hym, for now I declare it vnto p̄. Beholde, p̄ dayes come, that there shall ryse vp a kyngdome vpon earth, and it shall be feared aboue all the kyngdomes that were befoze it. In p̄ same kyngdome shal. xii. kyn- ges raygne, one after another. For the secōde shall begynne to raygne, and shall haue more tyme then the other twelue: and thys do the twelue wynges signifye, which thou sawest. As for p̄ voyce that spake, and that thou sawest go out from the heades, but not from the body, it betokeneth, that after the tyme of p̄ kyngdome there shall arysse great stryppynge, and it shall stande in parell of fallynge: neuertheles it shall not yet fall, but shall be set into his begynnynge. And p̄ cyght vnder wynges whych thou sawest hāge vnto the wynges of hym, be token, that in him there shall arysse cyght kynge, whose tyme shall be but small, and they peares wyff, & two of thē shall beare. But when the myddelst tyme cometh, there shall be foure kepte in the tyme, whē his tyme begynneth to come p̄ it maye be ended, but two shall be kepte vnto the ende.

And where as thou sawest thre heades re-aynge, this is the interpretacyō: In his last shall the h̄p̄st rapse vp thre kyngdomes, &

call many agayne into thē, & they shall haue the dominion of the earth, and of those that dwell therein, w̄ moch labour aboue all those that were befoze thē. Therefore are they called p̄ heades of the Agle: for it is they that shall byrynge forth hys wyckednes agayne, and that shall perfoyme and fynish his last. And where as p̄ sawest, that p̄ greute head appeared nomore, it signifyeth, that one of them shall dye vpon his bed, and yet w̄ payne, for the two that remaine, shall be slayne with the swerde. For the swerde of the one shall deuoure the other, but at p̄ last shall he fall thozow the swerde hym selfe.

And where as p̄ sawest two vnder wynges vpon the head that is on the ryght syde, it signifyeth that it is they, whom p̄ h̄p̄st hath kepte vnto the p̄ ende: thys is a small kyngdome, and full of trouble. The Lyō whō thou sawest rysinge vp out of p̄ woodd, and roarynge, and speakynge vnto the Agle, & rebukynge him for hys vnrightheousnesse, is the wynde, which p̄ h̄p̄st hath kepte for them, & for they wyckednesse vnto the ende: he shall reprove thē, and rete them asunder befoze them. For he shall set the ly- upynge befoze the iudgement, and shall rebuke them: for the residue of my people shall be deliuer with trouble those that be preserued ouer myne endes: and he shall make thē ioy- full vntill the commynge of the daye of iudgement, wherof I haue spoken vnto the frō the begynnynge. This is the dreame p̄ thou sawest, & thys is the interpretacyon. Thou onely hast bene mete to knowe the secretes of the h̄p̄st.

Therefore write all these thynges p̄ thou hast sene in a booke, and hyde thē, and teach thē the wyse i the people, whose hertes thou knowest maye comprehend and kepe these secretes. But wayte p̄ here thy selfe yet seuen dayes moo, that it maye be shewed the, whatsoeuer it pleaseth the h̄p̄st to declare vnto the, and with that he went his waye.

And when all the people perceaued, that the seuen dayes were past, and I not come agayne into the cytie, they gathered thē all together from the least vnto p̄ most, and came vnto me, and sayde: what haue we offended the? & what euell haue we done agaynst the, that thou forsakeest vs, and lyttest here in thys place? For of all people thou onely art left vs, as a grape of the vyne, and as a candell in a darcke place, & as an haue & ship preserued from the tēpest. Haue we not clād aduersite ynough, but thou must forsake vs? Were it not better for vs, that we had bene bzent wyth Syon? For we are not better, then they that dyed there: and they wepte w̄ loude voyce. Thē answered I them & sayd: Be of good comfōrte O Israell, and be not heuy thou house of Jacob: for p̄ h̄p̄st hath you in you in remembraunce, and the myghtye hath not forgottē you in temptacion. As for me, I haue not forsake you, nether am I departed from you, but am come into thys place to praye, because of the mysery of Israell: p̄ I myght seke mercy for the lowe estate of poure Sactuary. And now go poure waye home euery mā, and after these dayes wyll I come vnto you. So the people went their waye in to the cytye, lyke as I commaunded them: but I remained styll in the felde seuen dayes, as the Angell bad me, and dyd eate onely of the floures of the felde, and had my meate of the herbes in those dayes.

The. xiii. Chapter.

Ad it happened after the seuen dayes, that I dreamed a dreame by nyght. And beholde, there arose a wynde from the see, that it moued all the cloudes therof. And I looked, & beholde, the mā was strong and increased wyth the cloudes of heauen. and whē he turned his countenaunce to consider, all the thynges trebled that were sene vnder hym: and whē the voyce went out of hys mouth, all they bzent that herde hym, lyke as the earth when it feleth the fyre.

After these I sawe, & beholde, there was gathered together a multitude of mē out of nombze from the foure wyndes of the heauen, to fyghte agaynst the man, that came oute from the see. And I looked, and beholde he graued hym selfe a greute mountayne, & flew vp vpon it. But I wolde haue sene the border of place, wherout the h̄p̄st was grauen, and I coulde not.

I sawe after these, that all they which came to fyght agaynst him, were soze afrayed and yet durst they fight. Neuertheles, when he sawe the fearnesse and violence of the people, he nether lyft vp his hāde ner helde swerde, ner eny weape: but onely (As I sawe) he sent out of hys mouth as it had bene a blast of fyre, and out of hys lyppes the wynde of the flamme: and out of his tonge he cast out sparkes and stormes, & they were all myrte together: the blast of fyre, the wynde of the flammes, and the greute storme, & fell with a rushe vpon the people, which was prepared to fyght and bzent them vp euerychoue: so that of the innumerable multitude there was nothynge sene, but onely dust & smoke. When I saw this, I was afrayed.

After warde sawe I the same man come downe from the mountayne, and callynge vnto hym another peaceable people: and there came moche people vnto hi: some were glad some were soꝛy, some of them were bounde, so that they were caried and brought forth.

Then was I sp̄ck thozow greute feare, and I awaked, and sayde: thou hast shewed thy seruaunt all thy wonders from the begynnynge, and hast counted me woꝛthy, that thou mightest receaue my prayer, shewe me now yet the interpretacion of this dreame. For thus I considre in my vnderstandynge: Who vnto thē that shall be left i those dayes ad moch more vnto thē that are not left behynde: for they that were not left, were in heuynes.

Now vnderstande I the thynges that are layed vp in the latter dayes which shall happe vnto them, and to those that are not left behinde. Therefore are they come into great paretles, and many necessites, lyke as these dreames declare. Yet is it easier, p̄ he which suffreth hurte, come in these, then to passe a waye as a cloude out of p̄ woꝛlde, & now to se the thynges that shall happen in the last.

Then answered he me, & sayde. The interpretacion of the syght shall I shewe the, and I will open vnto the, the thynges p̄ thou hast required. For thou hast spoke of them that are left behynde, and thys is the interpretacion. He that taketh a waye the parell in that tyme, hath kept him self. They that be fallen into harme, are soch as haue woꝛkes and sayth vnto p̄ Most myghtie. Knowe thys therfore, that they which be left behinde are more blessed, thē they that be deyd. This is the meanynge of the vpsyde. Where as thou sawest a man commynge vp from p̄ depe of the see, the same is he whom God the h̄p̄st hath kepte a greute season, which by his a wne selfe shall deliuer his creature, and he shall orde thē that are left behinde. And where as p̄ sawest, that oute of hys mouth there came a blast of wynde, fyre & storme, and how that he lyft vp nether swerde nor weape, but that the rusheynge in of him destroyed the whole multitude that came to fyght agaynst him: it signifyeth, that p̄ dayes come, whā God will deliuer them that are vpon earth, and in a traunce of mynde shall he come vpon them, that dwell in the earth.

And one shall vnder take to fyght agaynst another, one cyte agaynst another, one place agaynst another* one people agaynst another, and one realme agaynst another. Whē this cometh to passe, thē shall the tokens come, that I shewed the befoze: and thē shall my sone be declared, whō thou sawest clime vp as a man. And when all the people bea- re hys voyce, euery man shall in their a wne lande leaue the battayll that they haue one agaynst another, & an innumerable multitude shall be gathered together, as they that be wyllinge to come, & to ouercome him by fyghting. But he shall stāde vpo the toppe of the mount Syon. Neuerthelesse Syon shall come, and shall be shewed, beyng prepared and buylded for all men, lyke as thou sawest the h̄p̄st graue forth without any bā- des,

* Dani. vii. c

* mat. xxi. lita

God appeareth vnto Moyses in the bush, and sheweth hym what he shall do.

Mo the thyrtyd dape I sat vnder an oke tree, then came there a voyce vnto me out of the bush, & sayde: Eldras, Eldras: And I sayde: here am I Lorde, and stode vpon my fete. Then spake he vnto me: * In the bush dyd I appare vnto Moyses, & talked with hym when my people serued i Egypte, and I sent hym, and led my people out of Egypte, and brought him vpon the mount Syon, where I helde hym by me a longe season, and tolde hym my wonderous workes, and shewed hym the secretes of the tymes and the ende, and commaunded hym, saying: These wordes shalt thou declare, & not hyde them. And now I saye vnto the, that thou laye vp in thine herte the dreames that thou hast sene, and p interpretacyōs whych I haue shewed the: for p shalt be receaued of all, thou shalt be turned and remayne with my coucel, and with soch as be lyke the, vntill the tymes be ended. For p worlde hath lost his youth, and the tymes begine to ware olde. For the tymes is deuided into twelue partes, and ten partes of it are gone all ready, and half of p tenth parte: yet remayneth there p which is after the half of the tenth parte.

Therefore, prepare and ordre thy house, and reforme thy people: comforte soch of them as be i trouble: and tell now of the destrucciō: let go from the mostall thoughtes: cast awaye the burthens of man: put of the weake nature: laye vp in some places the thoughtes that are most heuy vnto the, and haste the to flye from these tymes: for soch euell and wyckednesse as thou hast now sene happē, shall they do yet moch worse. * For the weaker that the worlde ad the tymes is, the more shall synne and wickednesse increase in them that dwell vpon earth. For the trueth is fled farre awaye, & lesynge is hard at hande. For now hasteth the vislon to come that thou hast sene.

Then answered I before the, and sayde: Beholde Lorde, I wyll go as thou hast commaunded me, and reforme the people which are present. But they that shall be borne after warde, who wyll exhorde or rebuke them: Thus the worlde is set in darcknes: & they that dwell therein, are without lyght: for thy lawe is kyndled, because no mā knoweth the thyges that are done of the, or that shalbe done. If I haue founde grace before the, sēde the holy goost into me, and I shall wyrite all that hath bene done in the worlde sens the begynnyng, which was wrytten in thy lawe, that mē maye fynde the path, and that they which will lyue in p latter dayes, maye lyue.

And he

And he answered me, sayinge: God thy maye, gather the people together, and saye vnto them, that they seke p not for fourtye dayes, but loke thou gather p manye bore trees, & take with the Sarea, Dabyla, Selemia, Scanus and Asiel, these fyue, whych are ready to wyrite swyftly, & come hyther, and I shall lyght a candle of vnderstādnyng in thynne hert, which shall not be put out, tyll the thynges be perfourmed which thou shalt begynne to wyrite. And the shalt thou declare some thynges openly vnto the perfecte, and some thynges shalt thou shew secretly vnto the wyse. Tomorrow this house shalt thou begynne to wyrite.

Then wente I forth (as he commaunded me) and gathered all the people together, and sayde: Heare these wordes O Israel, Oure fathers at p begynnyng were straingers in Egypte, from whence they were deliuered, & receaued the lawe of lyfe * which they kepte not, which ye also haue transgressed after them. Then wasthys lande & the lande of Syon parted amonge you by lott to possesse. But your fathers & ye your selues also haue done vnryghteoulnes, and haue not kepte the wayes which the hyst commaunded you. And for so moch as he is a ryghteous iudge, he toke from you in tymes p thynges p he had geuen you. And now are ye here & youre brythren amonge you. Therefore p so be that ye wyll subdue your ayme vnderstādyng, and reforme youre herte, ye shall be kepte alpye, & after death shall ye opteyne mercy. For after death shall the iudgemēt come, when we shall lyue agayne: and then shall the names of the ryghteous be manifest, and the workes of the vngodly shall be declared. Let no man therefore come now vnto me, ner aske eny questyon at me these fourtye dayes.

So I toke the fyue men (as he comaūded me) and we wente in to the felde, & remayned there. The next dape a voyce called me sayinge: Eldras * open thy mouth, & dryncke p I geue the. Then opened I my mouth, & beholde, he reached me a full cuppe, which was full as it were with water, but the colour of it was lyke fyre. And I toke it and drancke. And when I had broncken it, my hert had vnderstādnyng, & wyldome grewe in my brest: for my sprete was kepte in remembraunce, and my mouth was opened and shut nomoze. The hyst gaue vnderstādnyng vnto the fyue men, that they wrote the hyst thynges of p nyght, which they vnderstode not. But in the nyght they dyd eate bred: as for me, I spake in the dape & helde not my tounge by nyght. In .xl. dayes, they wrote two hundred and foure bookes.

And it happened when the fourtye dayes were fulfilled, that p hyst spake, saying:

The fyrst that thou hast wrytten, speake openly, p the worthy & vnderstādyng maye rede it. But kepe the .lxx. last, that thou mayest shew it onely to soch as be wyse amonge thy people. For in them is p spryng of vnderstādyng, the fountayne of wyldome, and the streame of knowledge. And I dyd so.

The punishment that euell people shal haue, which God commaūded Eldras to shew vnto them.

Behold, speake thou in the eares of my people the wordes of prophete, which I wyll put in thy mouth, sayeth the Lorde: and cause the to be wrytten in a letter, for it is the trueth. Feare not the ymaginacyōs agaynst the, let not p vnfaithfulness of them trouble the, that speake agaynst the. For all the vnfaithfull shal: dye in theyr vnfaithfulness. Beholde sayeth the Lorde, I wyll brynge plagues vpon the worlde, the swerde, hunger, death and destrucciō, for wyckednes hath the vpper hand in all the earth, and theyr shamefull workes are fulfilled.

Therefore sayeth the Lorde: I wyll holde my tounge nomoze vnto theyr wyckednesse, whych they do so vngodly: nether wyll I suffre them in the thynges, that they deale with all so wyckedly. Beholde * p innocent bloud of the troubled cryeth vnto me, & the foules of the ryghteous complayne continually: and therefore (sayeth p Lorde) I wyll surely auenge, & receaue vnto me all the innocent bloude from amonge them.

* Beholde, my people, is led as a flock of shepe to be slayne. I wyll not suffre them now to dwell in Egypte, but wyll brynge them out with a myghty had & a stretched out arme, & smyte it with plagues as afore and wyll destroye all p lande of it. Egypte shall mourne, and the foundacyōs of it shalbe smytten with the plague and punyshment, that God shall brynge vpon it.

They that tyll the grounde, shall mourne: for theyr sedes shall be destroyed thorough the blastynge and hayle, and an horrible starre. No worth the worlde and them that dwell therein, for the swerde and theyr destrucciō draweth nye, and one people shall stande vp to fyght agaynst another, and swerdes in theyr hādes. For men shall be vnstedfast, & some shall do vyolence vnto other: they shall not regarde theyr kyng and prynces, the wayes of theyr doynges and handelynges in theyr power. A man shall despyze to go into the cpyte, and shall not be able. For because of theyr pryde the cpytes shalbe brought in feare, the houses shal shake, and men shalbe afrayed. A man shall haue no ppyte vpon hys neyghbour, but one shall prouoke another vnto battayll to spoyle theyr goodes because of the hunger of bred, and because of the greate trouble.

Behold, I gather and call together all the kynges of the earth which are from the vpyrling, from the South, from the East and Lybanus to turne vnto them, & restore the thynges þ they haue geuen them. Lyke as they do yet thys daie vnto my chosen, so wyl I do also, & recōpense them in theyr bolome. Thus sayeth the Lord God: my ryght hād shall not spare the synners, & my swerde shall not cease ouer them, that shed the innocēt bloud vpon earth. The feare is gone out from hys wraath, & hath consumed the foundacyōs of þ earth, & the synners lyke the straw þ is kyndled. Wo worth them that synne, & kepe not my cōmaundemētes, sayeth the Lord. I wyl not spare them, so poure wape þe chyldren from violence despyle not my Sactuary: for the Lord knoweth all them that synne agaynst hym, & therfore deliuered he them vnto death and destruccyon: for now are the plagēs come vpon þ worlde, & þe shall remayne in them. For God shall not deliuer you, because þe haue synned agaynst hym.

Behold, an horryble vpyrling cometh from the East, where generacyōs of dragons shall come out, and þ people of þ Arabes with many charettes, and þ multitude of them shall be as þ wynde vpon earth, that all they which heare them ragynge in theyr wraath, maye feare and be afrayed, and as the wynde bores oute of the wod, so shall they go out, and wpyth greate power shall they come, and stāde fyghtynge wpyth them and shall waste the porcyon of the lande of the Assyrians.

And then shall the Dragons haue the vpper hande, not remēbyng theyr byrth, and shall turne aboute swearynge together in greate power, to persecute them. But these shall be afrayed, & kepe sylce at theyr power and shall fle: and one out of the lande of the Assyrians shall besedge them, & consume one of them, & in theyr hoost shall be feare and drede, and stryfe amonge theyr kynges.

Behold cloudes from þ East, and from the North vnto the South, and they are very horryble to lōke vpon, full of wraath & storme. They shall smyte one vpon another, & they shall smyte at the greate starre vpon earth and theyr starre, and the bloude shall be from the swerde vnto the bely, and the smoke of man vnto the Camels lytter: And there shall be great fearfulness, & trembling vpon earth, and theyr þe the wraath, shall be afrayed, and a trembling shall come vpon them.

And then shall there come greate raphes from the South, & from the North, & parte from the West, and from the storm wynde from the East, & shall shut them vp agayne and þ cloude whych he raphed vp in wraath, & the starre to cause feare toward the East & West wynde, shall be destroyed: & the greate cloudes shall be lyft vp, & the myghtye cloudes full of wraath, and the starre, that they maye make all the earth afrayed and them that dwell therein, & that they maye poure oute ouer all places an horryble starre, fyre and hayle, and spenge swordes, & many waters: that all felbes maye be full, and all ryuers, & they shall breake downe the ctytes and walles, mountaynes & hylles, all trees, wood, & the grasse of þ meadowes, & all theyr frute. And they shall go stedfast vnto Babylon, and make her afrayed, they shall come to her & besedge her: þ starre & all wraath shall they poure out vpon her.

Then shall the dust & smoke go vp vnto the heauen, and all they that be aboute her, shall bewaile her: & they that remayne vnder her, shall do scrupce vnto them that haue put her in feare: And thou Asia þ confortest thy selfe also vpon þ hope of Babylon, and art a woorthyp of her personne: Wo be vnto the thou wretch, because þ hast made thy selfe lyke vnto her, and hast deckte thy daughters in whordome, that they myght triumphe & please thy louers, whych haue all wape despyred to committe whordome wth the: thou hast folowed the abhominable ctyte in all her woorkes and inuēcyōs.

Therfore sayeth God: I wyl sende plagēs vpon þ, wpydhowhode, pouerte, hunger, warres, and pestilence, to waste thy houses with destruccyon, & death, and the glorie of thy power shall be dryed vp as a floure, when the heate rapheth that is sent ouer the: Thou shalt be lyk as a poore wyfe þ is plagued & beaten of women: so that the myghtie and louer shall not be able to receaue the. Woide I so hate þ sayeth þ Lord: If thou haddest not all wape slayne my chosen, exaltinge þ stroke of thy hādes, and sayde ouer theyr death, when þ wast drycken: sett forth the betwte of thy countenance.

The reward of thy whordome shall be recompensed the in thy bolome, therfore shalt thou receaue rewarde.

Lyke as thou hast done vnto my chosen (sayeth þ Lord) euen so shall God do vnto the, and shall deliuer þ into the plage. Thy chyldren shall dye of hōger, and thou shalt fall thorow the swerde. Thy ctytes shall be broken downe, & all thyne shall perishe with the swerde in the feld. They that be in the mountaynes shall dye of hunger, and eate their awne flesh, & drinke their awne bloud for very hōger of bred and theyr of water. Thou

Thou unhappie shalt come thorow the see, and receaue plagēs agayne.

In the passage they shall cast downe the slayne ctyte, and shall rote out one parte of thy lande, and consume the porcyon of glorie. They shall treade the downe lyke stubble, and they shall be thy fyre, and shall consume the: thy ctytes and thy lāde, thy wood and thy frutefull trees shall they burne vp with the fyre. Thy chyldren shall they carry awaye captiue, and loke what thou hast, they shall spoyle it, and marre the bewtpe of thy face.

The. xvi. Chapter.

The heathen shall be punyshed.

Woe vnto the Babylon & Asia, wo be vnto the Egypt and Syria: gyde pour selues with clothes of sack & hearre, and mourne poure chyldren, be soyr, for your destruccyon is at hand. A swerde is sent vpon you, and who wyl turne it back? A fyre is kyndled amonge you, & who wyl quench it? Plages are sent vnto you, and what is he that wyl dryue them awaye? Maye eny man dryue awaye an hongric lyon in the wod? Or maye eny man quench the fyre in stubble, whan it hath begonne to burne? Maye one turne agayne the arrowe, that is shot of a strōg archer. The myghtye Lord sendeth þ plagēs, & what is he þ wyl dryue the awaye? The fyre is kyndled and gone forth in his wraath, & what is he that wyl quench it? He shall cast lyghtninges, and who shall not feare? He shall thunder, & who shall not be afrayed? The Lord shall threaten, & who shall not vterly be beaten to poulder at his presence? The earth quake, & the foundations therof: the see aryseth vp with waues from the depe, and the floudes of it are vniquite & the fshes therof also before the Lord, and before the glory of his power. For stronge is his ryght hand that holdeth þ bowe, his arrowes that he shoteth, are sharpe, and shall not mysse, when they begynne to be shot into the endes of the worlde.

Behold, the plagēs are sent, & shall not turne agayne, tyll they come vpon earth. The fyre is kyndled, & shall not be put out tyll it consume þ foundacyōs of þ earth. Lyke as an arrowe which is shot of a myghtye archer, returneth not backward: euen so the plagēs þ shall be sent vpon earth, shall not turne agayne. Wo is me, wo is me, who will deliuer me in those dayes? The beginninge of sorowes & greate mourninge: the beginninge of darth and greate death, the beginninge of warres, and þ powers shall stand in feare: the beginninge of euels, and they shall tremble euery one. What shall

I do in these thynges, when þ plagēs come? Beholde, hōger & plage, trouble & anguyth are sent, as scourges for amendement. But for all these thynges they shall not turne fro their wyckednesse, ner be all wape mynde-full of the scourges.

Beholde, vitayles shall be so good cheape vpon earth, that they shall thinke them selues to be in good case: and euen then shall myschefe growe vpon earth, warres, darth and great disquietnes. For many of them that dwell vpon earth shall perishe of hōger, and þ other that escape the hunger, shall the swerde destroye: & the deed shall be cast oute as donge, & there shall be no man to conforthe them. For the earth shall be wasted, and þ ctytes shall be cast downe: there shall be no man left to tyll the earth & to sowe it. The trees shall geue frute, and who shall plucke them of & gather them? The grapes shall be ryppē, & who shall treade them? For all places shall be desolate of men, so þ one man shall despyre to se another, or to heare his voyce. For of one whole ctyte there shall be ten left, and two in the feld, which shall hyde them selues in the thycke bushes, and in þ clyffes of stones: lyke as when there remayne thre or foure olyues vpon þ olyue tre, or as whē a vineyarde is gathered, there are left some grapes, of them that diligently sought thorow the vineyarde.

Euen so in those dayes there shall be thre or foure left, for them þ search their houses with the swerde. And the earth shall be left waste, and þ felbes therof shall ware olde: and her wapes and all her pathes shall growe full of thornes, because no man shall trauallye there thorow. The daughters shall mourne, hauing no bydegromes: the women make lamētacyon, hauing no husbandes, their daughters shall mourne, hauing no helpe of their bydegrome. In the warres shall they be destroyed, and their husbandes shall perishe of hōger. O ye seruantes of the Lord, heare thesē thynges, and marck them. Beholde, þ worde of the Lord, & receaue it: beholde, the plagēs drawne, & are not slack in tariēge. Lyke as a traunaylinge woman, which after þ. ix. moneth bringeth forth a sonne, when þ houre of the byrth is come, an houre two or thre afore that the paynes come vpon her body, and when the chyld cometh to the byrth, they tary not the twynckling of an eye. Euen so shall not the plagēs be slack to come vpon earth, and the worlde shall mourne, and sorowes shall come vpon it on euery syde.

O my people, heare my worde, make you redy to the battayll: and in all euell be euen as pylgryms vpon earth. * He that selleth, lett hym be as he that speth his wape: and he that byeth as one that will lese. Whoso occupieth marchaundies, as he that wyn-neth not: & he that buyldeth, as he that shall not dwell therein: he þ soweth, as one that shall not reape: he þ twyffeth the wynepar-de, as he þ shall not gather the grapes: they that mary, as they þ shall get no chyldren:

and they that mary not, as the wyddowes:
and therfore * they that labour, labour in vayne. For straungers shall reape theyr fru-tes, & spoyle their goodes, ouerthrowe their houses, & take their chyldren captiue, for in captiuite & hunger shall they get chyldren.
And they that occupie theyr marchaundies with robbery, how longe deke they theyr eyties, theyr houses, theyr possessiōs, & personnes: þ more wyll I punyssh the for theyr synnes, sayeth the Lord. Lyke as an whoze enuyeth an honest woman, so shall ryghteousnes hate iniquyte, when she dekech her selfe, and shall accuse her to her face, when he cometh that defendeth, which shall make inquisycion for all synne vpon earth. And therfore be not ye lyke therunto, ner to the worckes therof: for oʒ euer it be lōge, inquit-te shall be taken awaye out of the earth, and ryghteousnes shall raygne amonge you.

¶ Let not the synner saye, that he hath not synned: for coles of fyre shall burne vpo his head, which sayeth before þ Lord God and his glory: I haue not synned. Beholde, the Lord knoweth all þ worckes of men, theyr pynagacions, theyr thoughtes and theyr hertes. * For he spake but þ worde: lett the earth be made, and it was made: lett þ heauen be made, and it was made. In his wo-de were the starres made, & he knoweth the nōbre of them. He searcheth the grounde of the depe, and the treasures therof: he hath measured the see, and what it conteyneth.
He hath shut þ see in þ myddest of þ waters, & with his worde hath he hanged the earth vpon þ waters. He spiedeth out the heauen lyke a vawte, vpon þ waters hath he founded it. In þ deserte & drye wyldernes hath he made springes of water, and poles vpon the toppe of þ mountaynes, that þ floudes myght poure downe from the stony rockes to water the earth. He made man, & put his herte in the myddest of the body, and gaue hym bʒeth, lyfe and vnderstādyng, yee and the sprete of þ Almyghty God, which made all thynges, and hath searched þ ground of all the secretes of the earth.

He knoweth youre pynagacions & in-uencyōs, and what ye thynke when ye syn-ne, and wolde hyde youre synnes. Therfore hath the Lord searched and sought out all your worckes, & he shall bewraye you all.
And when your synnes are brought forth, ye shall be ashamed before me, & youre awne synnes shall be youre accusers in that daye.
What wyll ye do? O how wyll yee hyde your synnes before God and his Angells?
Beholde, God him selfe is the iudge, feare him, leaue off from youre synnes, and forget your vnyghteousnes, & medle nomore with the: so shall God leade you forth, and delyuer you from all trouble. For beholde, the heate of a great multytude is kyndled ouer you, & they shall take awaye certayne of you, & fede þ ple with Idols: & they that consent vnto them, shall be had in dyspōn laughed to scorn, & troden vnder fote.

¶ For vnto the places there shall be a place, & and in the next cyties a greates insurreccyon vpon those that feare þ Lord. They shall be lyke mad men, they shall spare no man: they shall spoyle and waste soch as feare the Lord, theyr goodes shall they take fro the,
and shutte them out of theyr houses. Then shall it be knowne who are my chose, & they shall be tryed as the golde in the fyre. Heare O ye my belouch, sayth þ Lord: beholde, the dayes of trouble are at hāde, but I wyll deliuer you from þ same. Be not ye afayred dispayre not, for God is youre captayne.

¶ Whoso kepeth my commaundementes and pʒceptes (sayeth the Lord God) lett not your synnes weye you downe, and lett not youre vnyghteousnesse be lyft vp. Wo be vnto them that are subdued vnto theyr synnes, and tangled in theyr wyckednesse:
lyke as a felde is hedged in with buf-fles, and the path therof couered with thornes, þ no man maye trauaple thorow: and so is he taken, and cast in the fyre,
and bʒent.

The ende of the.iiii.
booke of Esdras.

Of Tobias.

To. xix.

The first Chapter.

Tobias beyng taken pʒsoner, forsaeketh not the lawe of truerie. The mercy and charite of Tobias and the maners of hym in hys yowthe. He taketh Sar-ra to wyfe, by whome he hath a sonne named Tobias. He succoureth Gabell with money. He & his are sayne to fyre, but after the deeth of Sennacherib they retourne agayne.

Tobias was of the trybe and cy-tie of Nephtali, which lyeth in þ hye countrees of Galile aboue Naason the waye towarde the West, haupnge þ cytie of Sephet vpon the left syde.

¶ Though he was taken pʒsoner in the dayes of Salmanasar kyng of þ Assyriās neuertheles beyng in captiuite, he forsoke not the waye of truerie: In so moch þ what soeuer he myght get, he parted it daylie w his felow pʒsoners & bʒethren, that were of his kynred. And though he were ponger then all in þ trybe of Nephtali, yet dyd not he behaue hym selfe chyldeishly in hys wor-ckes. And when all the other wente to the golden calues, whych Jeroboam the kyng of Israel had made, he hym selfe alone fled all theyr companies, and gat him to Jerusalem vnto the temple of the Lord, and there worshipped the Lord God of Israel, saythfully offerynge of all his fyrst frutes & ty-thes, so that in þ thyrde yere he minystrēd all the thynges vnto the straungers and con-uerteres. These and soch lyke thynges dyd he obserue accordinge to þ lawe of God, when he was yet but yonge.

¶ But when he was a man, he toke oute of his awne trybe a wyfe called Anna, and of her he begat a sonne, whom he called after his awne name, and taught hym from hys youth vp, to feare God, & to refrayne from all synne.

¶ Now when he with hys wyfe, hys sonne and with all his kynred was come in capti-uite vnto the cytie of Ninie, what tyme as they all dyd eate of the meates of the heathen, he kepeth his soule, and was neuer defy-led in theyr meates. And for so moch as he was myndfull of the Lord in all his hert, God gaue hym fauoure in the syght of Sal-manasar þ kyng, which gaue hym power to go where he wolde, and so had he lyberte to do what soeuer hym lyst.

¶ So wente Tobias vnto all them þ were in pʒson, and comforted them, & gaue them whollome exortacyōs. And when he came to Rages a cytie of the Medes, haupng ten talentes of syluer (of the thynges where w þ kyng had honoured hym) & saue among a greates company of people of hys kynred, one Gabelus (which was of hys awne try-be) beyng in necessite, he gaue hym the sayd weyght of syluer vnder an hād wyptynge.

¶ After a longe season when Salmanasar the kyng was deed, and Sennacherib hys sonne repgned in his steade, which hated the chyliden of Israel. Tobias wēt daylie tho-row out all his kynred, and cōforted them, & gaue of hys goodes to euery one of them, as moch as he myght: he fed the hōgric, clothed the naked, and buried þ deed and flayne, and that diligently.

¶ And when Sennacherib the kyng came agayne and fled out of Jewry (what tyme as God punysshed hym for hys blasphemie) and in hys wʒath slew many of the chyliden of Israel. Tobias buried their bodies. But when it was tolde the kyng, he cōmaunded to slaye him, & toke awaye all his goodes.
Neuertheles, Tobias with his sonne and w his wyfe fled his waye, and was hyd naked, for there were many that loued hym. But after .xlv. dayes þ kyng was slayne of his awne sonnes. Then came Tobias agayne to his house, and all his goodes were restored vnto hym.

The ii. Chapter.

Tobias hyddeth soche of his frpndes as feare God, to a banquet of feast. He is reproued of his frpndes.
He seareth God moare then the kyng. He becommeth blynde by the peryng of an and substance of God. Hys kynfolkes mocke hym.

¶ After these thynges vpon a solmpne daye of þ Lord Tobias made a good feast in his house, and sayde vnto his sonne: Soo thy waye & byng hyther some of oure tribe, soch as feare god, þ they maye make mery with vs. And when he was gone, he came agayne, & tolde his father that one of þ chyliden of Israel laye slayne vpo the strete. And immediatly he leapte from his table, left the feast, came fastynge to the deed coarfe, toke hym and bare him pʒuely in to his house, that when the Sunne was downe, he myght safely burye hym. And when he had hyd the coarfe, he dyd eate hys meate with mourninge & feare, remēbyng the wordes, that the Lord sayeth by þ pʒophet Amos: poure hys feastes shall be turned to sorowe and heynnes.

¶ But when þ Sunne was downe, he wēt his waye & buried hym. Then all his neygh-bours reproued hym, saying: It is not lōge, sens it was cōmaunded to slaye the because of this matter, and hast scarce escaped the daunger of death, and burpest thou the deed agayne? Neuertheles, Tobias fearige God moare then þ kyng, toke the bodies of the flayne, and hyd them in his house, & buried them at mydnyght.

¶ It happened vpon a daye, that he had buryed þ deed, and was wery, cam home, and layed hym downe by the wall & slepte. And Eccl iii Whyte

Whyle he was asleepe, there fell downe vpon hys eyes warme donge out of the swaloes nest, so that he was blynde. This tempta-cion dyd God suffre to happen vnto hym, that they which came after, myght haue an example of his pacifce, lyke as of holy Job.
For in so moch as he euer feared God from his yowth vp, & kepte his comaundementes, he grudged not agaynst God, that p plage of blyndnes chaunced vnto hym, but remayned stedfast in the feare of God, and thaked God all the dayes of his lyfe.

For lyke as blessed Job was had in derision of kynge, euen so was he laughed to scorne of his elders and kynfolkes, which sayde vnto hym: where is thy hope, for the which p hast done allmes & buryed p deede?
But Tobias rebuked them, & spake: Hane not so, for we are the chyldren of holy men, and loke for the lyfe, which God shall geue vnto them, p neuer turne theyr beleue from him. Anna his wyfe wente daylye to the weeuinge worcke: & loke what lpyunge she coude get with the labour of her handes, she brought it. And it happened p she toke a kynd, and brought it home.

And when her husbände herde it crye, he sayd: loke p it be not stolen, restore it agayne to the owners: for it is not lawfull for vs to eate or to touch eny thyng of theft. The was hys wyfe angrie, & sayde: Now is thy hope become vayne openly, and thy allmes deedes are manifest. With these & loch lyke wordes dyd she cast him in the tethre.

The.iii. Chapter.

The prayer of Tobias. Sara the daughter of Ra-guel is claudred of her fathers seruante. The prayer and fastyng of Sara, and also the innocency and chastite of her. The prayres of Tobias and of Sara are hearde.

When Tobias toke it henely, and with teares beganne to make hys prayer sayinge: O Lorde thou art ryghte-ous, and all thy iudgements are true, pee all thy wayes are mercy, faythfulnes and iudgement. And now O Lorde be myndefull of me, and take no vengeaunce of my synnes, nether remembre my mysdoedes, nether the mysdoedes of my elders. For we haue not bene obedient vnto thy commaunde-mentes, therfore are we spoyled, brought into captiuyte, into death, into derisyon and shame vnto all nacjōs, among whom thou hast scatred vs. And now O Lorde, thy iudgements are great, for we haue not done accorpyng to thy comaundementes, nether haue we walcked innocēly befoze the. And now O Lorde, deale with me accorpyng to thy wyll, and commaunde my sprete to be receaued in peace, for moze expedēt were it for me to dye, then to lyue.

At p same tyme it happened, that Sara the daughter of Raguel at Rages a cytie of the Medes was claudred of one of her fathers handmaydes, namely, that she shulde haue had seuen husbādes, which as soone as they were gone in vnto her, were slayne of the deuell called Asmodeus. Therfore, when she reproued p mayden for her faute, she answered her, sayge: God lett vs neuer se sonne ner daughter of p more vpon earth thou kylle of thy husbādes. Wylt p slay me also, as p hast slayne seuen men? At this voyce wente Sara into an hye chamber of her house, and thre dayes & thre nyghtes she nether ate ner dracke, but continued i prayer and besought God with teares, p he wolde delyuer her from thys rebuke.

Vpon p thyrde dape it chaunced, p when she had made an ende of prayer, she prayled p Lorde sayge: Blessed be thy name O God of oure fathers, which when p art wroth, she west mercy, & in tyme of trouble p forgeuest p synnes of them, p call vpon the. Vnto the O Lorde turne I my face, vnto the lyft I vpmynce eyes. I beseeche p O Lorde, lose me out of the bondes of thys rebuke, or els take me vterly awaye from of the earth.
Thou knowest Lorde, p I neuer had desyre vnto man, and that I haue kepte my soule cleane fro all vnclenly lust. I haue not kepte cōpany with those p passe theyr tyme in lpyrte, nether haue I made my self parta-ker w them p walcke in lpyghte behauour.
Neuertheles an husbād haue I consented to take, not for my pleasure, but in thy feare.

Now peraduenture ether I haue bene vnworthy of them, or els were they vnmete for me, for p happily hast kepte me to another husbād. For why? thy counsell is not in p power of man. But whosoever loueth the and serueth the a ryght, is sure of thys, that p hys lyfe be tempted & proued, it sta-deth in p trieng, and p he endure in pacpce he shall haue a rewarde, and be hylpe crowned: and p he be in trouble, that God (no doute) shall delyuer hym: and p hys lyfe be in chastenynge, p he shall haue leaue to come vnto thy mercy.

For thou hast no pleasure in oure dāpna-cion: and why? after a stōrme thou makest the wether fayre & styll: after wepyng & he-uynes thou geuest greate ioye. Thy name O God of Israel, be prayled for euer. At p same tyme were both theyr prayers hearde in the lpyght of p magesty of p hyst God.
And Raphael p holy Angell of the Lord was sent to helpe the both, whose prayers came at one tyme toget her befoze God.

The.iiii. Chapter.

Tobias thynkynge to dye geueth a godly exhortacion and monycon to hys sonne.

When Tobias thought his prayer to be herde, that he myght dye, he called vnto hym his sonne Tobias and sayde vnto him: My sonne, heare the wordes of my mouth, and laye them in thyne herte as a foundacion. When God taketh awaye my soule, burye p my body, & holde thy mother in honoure all the dayes of her lyfe. For p oughrest to remember, what and how greate pears she suffred for p in her wombe. And when she also hath fulfilled p tyme of her lyfe, burye her beyside me. Haue God in thy thought all the dayes of thy lyfe, & beware, lest at eny tyme thou consent vnto synne, & lest p lett slpye the comaundementes of the Lorde oure God.

Geue allmes of thy goodes, & turne neuer thy face from the poore: and so shall it come to passe, that the face of the Lorde shall not be turned awaye fro the. Be mercyfull after thy power. If thou hast moch, geue plenteously: p thou hast lpytle, do thy diligence, gladly to geue of p lpytle. For so gatherest thou thy selfe a good rewarde in the dape of necessite. For mercy delyuereth fro all syn-ne and from death, and suffreth not the soule to come in darkenes. A greate conforte is mercy befoze the hye God, vnto all them that shew it.

My sonne, kepe the well from all whor-dome, and (besyde thy wyfe) se that no faute be knowne of the. Let neuer pryde haue rule in thy mynde ner in thy worde, for in pryde beganne all destruccyon.

Whosoever worketh eny thyng for the, immediatly geue hym his hyre, & loke that thy hyred seruautes wagies remayne not by the ouer nyght. Loke that thou neuer do vnto another man, the thyng p thou wol-dest not another man shulde do vnto p. E-ate thy bred with the hongrie and poore, and couer the naked with thy clothes. Set thy bred and wyne vpon p vuriell of the ryghteous, and do not thou eate & dryncke therof with the synners. Aske euer counsell at the wyse.

We allwaye thanckfull vnto God, and beseeche hym, that he wyll ordre thy wayes, and that what soeuer thou deuylest or fakest in hāde, it maye remayne in him. I certyfye the also my sonne, that (when p wast yet, but a babe) I delyuered ten talentes of syluer vnto Gabelus, at Rages a cytie of p Medes, & his hand wyrtynge haue I by me.
And therfore seke some meanes, how thou mayest come by hym, and receaue of hym the sayde weyght of syluer, & geue hym his band wyrtynge agayne.

My sonne, be not afrayed: truneth it is, we leade here a poore lyfe: but greate good shall we haue, p we feare God, and departe from all synne, and do well.

The.v. Chapter.

The obedience of ponge Tobias to his father, which is sent in to Rages. An Angell accompanieth with hym in hys iourney.

Then answered Tobias his father, and sayde: father, all that thou hast commaunded me, wyl I do, and that diligently. But how I shall require this money I can not tell: Nether doth he know me, ner I hym. What token shall I geue hym? And as for the waye thyther, I neuer knewe it. Then hys father answered hym, and sayde: I haue hys hād wyrtynge by me which when thou shewest hym, immediatly he shall paye the. But goo thy waye now, and get p some faythfull man to goo with the for an hyre, that thou mayest receaue the money, whyle I am yet lpyunge. Then went Tobias out, & vpon the strete he foun-de a fayre pōge man standynge, gyrded vp, and as it were one ready to take hys iour-ney. And he knewe not that it was an angell of God, but saluted hym, and sayde:
From whence art thou, p good pōge man?
He answered: Of the chyldren of Israel.

And Tobias sayd vnto hym: knowest p the waye, that ledeth vnto p countre of the Medes? He answered: I knowe it well, and all those stretes haue I gone oft tymes, and haue lodged w oure brother Gabelus, that dwelleth in Rages a cytie of the Medes, which lyeth vpon the moūte Egbathanis.
Tobias sayd vnto him: I praye p, tary for me, tyll I haue tolde my father these thyn-ges. Then wete Tobias in, and tolde his father all. At p which his father marueled, ad prayed, that he wolde come in vnto him.

Now when the angell came in, he saluted him, and sayd: Ioye be with the for euer moze. And olde Tobias sayd: what ioye can I haue that syt here in darknes, and se not the lpyght of heauen? The ponge man sayde vnto him: Be of good cheare, God shall helpe the shortly. And Tobias sayd vnto him: Canst thou byrnyng my sonne to Gabelus, vnto p cytie of Rages in Medea? And whe thou comest agayne, I shall paye p thy hyre. And the Angell sayd vnto him: I shall leade thy sonne, and bringe him to p agayne. Then Tobias answered him: tell me I praye the, of what house, or of what trybe art thou? The Angell Raphaell sayde vnto hym: Asketh thou after the kynred of an hyrlyng, or sekest p a gyde for thy sonne to go with him? But that I make p not ca-refull, I am Azarias the sonne of great Ja-nanius. And Tobias answered: thou art come of a greate kynred: but I praye p, be not displeased, that I despyred to know thy kynred. The Angell sayd vnto him: thy sonne shall I leade forth safely, and byrnyng him whole to the agayne.

When answered Tobias, and sayde: Well, go on your waye, & God be in your iourney, and his Angell beare you company. So when they had prepared all thynges, that they wolde take with them in their iourney: Tobias had his father & his mother fare well, and they went on their waye both together. Now when they were gone: his mother beganne to wepe, & sayde: The staffe of our age hath thou taken awaye and sent hym from vs.

Wolde God that money had neuer bene, for the which thou hast sent hym awaye. If we had bene content with our pouerte, thys had bene greates riches vnto vs, that we sawe our sonne here. Then sayde Tobias vnto her: Wepe not, our sonne shall come to vs agayne safe and sounde, and thynne eyes shall se him. For I trust, that the good Angell of God shall beare hym company, & orde well all the thynges that he doth: so that he shall come to vs agayne with lope. At these wordes his mother left of fro wepyng, and helde her tongue.

The. vi. Chapter.

Young Tobias is deliuered from the fythe, by the Angell. The Angell exhorteth Tobias to take Sara to his wyfe.

Tobias wete on his waye, and a dogge folowed hym, and fyrst nyght they abode by the water of Cygris. Then wet he out to wash his fete, & beholde, there came forth an horrible fyth to deuoure hym. Of whome Tobias was afrayed, and cryed with a loude voyce, sayenge: Lorde, he cometh vpon me. And the Angell sayde vnto hym: Take hym by the gyll, and draw him to the. And he dyd so, and drew him vpon the lande. And the fyth beganne to leape at his fete.

Then sayde the Angell vnto him: take out the boweles of thys fyth, and as for the herte, the gall & the leuer, kepe them by the. For these thynges are necessary & good for medycyne. Tobias dyd so, & rosted the fyth, and they toke him with them in their iourney: & retyred they salted, as moch as was sufficient for them, tyll they came to Raguel a cytie of the Medes. Then Tobias asked the Angell, & sayde vnto him: I praye thy brother Azaria, tell me, wher to are these thynges good of? & fyth & thou hast bydden me kepe.

The Angell answered hym and sayde: If thou layest a pece of the hert vpon thy coales, the smoke therof dyspucheth awaye all manner of euell sprytes, whether it be fro man or from woman, so that from thence forth the same shall come nomore vnto the. The gall is good to anoynte eyes that are stryken with the fyth, where as there is any blemish in them, so that they shall be whole.

And Tobias sayd vnto him: wher shal I thou? & we remayne? The Angell answered & sayd: Here is a nye kynsman of thynne, one Raguel by name, which hath a daughter called Sara, and hath nether sonne nor daughter but her. All his good belongeth vnto the, & thou must marry her, & therfore desyre her of her father, & he shall geue her to thy wyfe. Then answered Tobias & sayde: As I vnderstande, she hath bene maryed vnto seuen husbundes, & they all are deed; and I haue herde saye, that thy deuell slewe them. I am afrayed therfore, lest soch thynges happen vnto me also: which yf it came to passe (seynge I am the onely sonne of my father & my mother) I shoulde byynge the in thy age with sorowe to thy graues.

Then sayde the Angell Raphael vnto him: Heare me, & I wyll tell thee what they be, of whom the deuell hath power. Namely, they preceue maryage of soch a fashion, & they shut God out fro them & from their hert, & geue them selues to thynges awayne lust, euen as it were an horse & mule, which haue no vnderstandinge: vpon soch hath thy deuell power. But when thou takest her, & art come in to the chamber, withholde thy selfe from her thre dayes, and geue thy diligēce vnto no thyng but vnto prayer with her.

And in thy fyrst nyght, roste thy leuer of the fyth, and the deuell shal be dyspuched awaye. The seconde nyght shalt thou be receaued into the company of the holy patriarches. The thyrde nyght shalt thou opteyne thy blessing of God so that whole chyldren shal be borne of you. After the thyrde nyght take thy mayden in the feare of God, and more for the desyre of chyldren, then for any fleschly lust: & in the fede of Abraham thou mayest optayne the blessing in chyldren.

The. vii. Chapter.

Young Tobias and the Angell come to the house of Raguel. He requiteth Raguels daughter to wyfe and obtayneth her.

When wete they to Raguel, which receaued the ioyfully. And when Raguel looked vpon Tobias, he sayde vnto Anna his wyfe: How lyketh this younge man vnto my systers sonne? And when he had spoken this, he sayde: Whence be ye good bretheren? They sayd: Of the trybe of Nephtali, out of the captiuite of Babilone. Then sayde Raguel vnto them: knowe ye my brother Tobias? They sayde: yee, we knowe hym well. And when he had spoken moch good of hym, the Angell sayde vnto Raguel: Tobias of whom thou askest, is thys younge mans father. Then Raguel bowed hym selfe downe, and wepte, toke hym aboute the neck, and kysed hym, and sayde: Gods blessinge haue thou my sonne, for thou arte the sonne of a good good verteous man. And Anna his wyfe & Sara his daughter wepte also.

Now when they had talked together, Raguel had kyll a wether, & to make a feast. And when he prayed them to syt downe to dynner, Tobias sayd: I wyll nether eate nor dryncke here thys dape, excepte thou fyrt graunte me my petition, & promise me to geue thy daughter Sara. Wher Raguel herde this he was astonnyed, for he knewe, what had happened vnto the other seuen men, that wente in vnto her: and he beganne to feare, that it shuld chaunce vnto hym also in lyke maner.

And whyle he stode so in doute, and gaue the younge man no answer, the aungell saide vnto him: feare not to geue him thy daughter, for vnto this man that feareth God, beloggeth thy daughter to wife, therfore might none other haue her.

Then sayde Raguel: I doute not, but God hath accepted my prayers and teares in his sight: and I trust he caused you to come vnto me for the same intent, & this daughter of myne myght be maryed in her awne kynred, accordyng to the lawe of Moses. And now doute thou not, but I wyll geue her vnto the: So he toke the ryght hande of his daughter, and gaue her into the ryght hand of Tobias, and sayde: The God of Abraham, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob be with you, ioyne you together, and fulfyll his blessing in you. And they toke a letter, and made a wytyng of the mariage. And the made they mery, & prayed God. And Raguel called Anna his wyfe vnto hym, and bad her prepare another chamber, and thither he brought Sara his daughter, and she wepte. Then sayde he vnto her: We of good cheare my daughter, & Lorde of heauen geue the ioye, for the henuines that thou hast lustred.

The. viii. Chapter.

The Angell byndeth the deuell. Tobias exhorteth his wyfe to praye, and they praye thre dayes before they lye together.

Now after that they had supped they brought the younge man into her. The thought Tobias vpon the wordes of the aungell, and toke out of his bagge a pece of the leuer of the fyth, and layed it vpon the hote coales. So the aungell Raphael toke holde of the deuell, & sent hym awaye and bounde hym in the wyldernes of the hyer Egypte. Then spake Tobias vnto the virgyn, and sayde: Up Sara, let vs make our prayer vnto God to dape, to morow, & ouer morow: for these thre nyghtes wyll we reconyle our selues wyth God: and whan the thyrde holy night is past, we shall ioyne together in the dutye of marriage. For we are the chyldren of holy men, and we maye not come together as the heathen that knowe not God.

Then stode they by both together, and besought God earnestly, that he wolde preserue them. And Tobias sayde: O Lorde God of our fathers, prayed be thou of heauen and earth, of the see, welles & foudes, & of all thy creatures that be therein. Thou madest Adam of the mould of the earth, & gauest him Eua for an helper. And now Lorde thou knowest that it is not because of voluptuousnes, & I take this systre of mine to wyfe, but only for the loue of chyldren, in whome thy name be blessed for euer. And Sara sayd: haue mercy vpon vs (O Lorde) haue mercy vpon vs, and let vs both come whole and sounde together to a good age.

And aboute the cock crowyng, it happened, that Raguel called his seruantes, & they wente with him, to make a graue. For he sayde: it is chaunced now vnto hym peradventure, as it did vnto the other seuen men, that went in vnto her. Now when they had made the graue, Raguel came agayne to his wyfe, and sayde vnto her: sende one of thy maydens, to loke yf he be deed, that I maye burye him afore it be lyght dape. So she set a mayden to se, which when she came into the chamber, founde them whole and sounde, slepyng together. And so she came agayne, and brought good tydinges. Then Raguel and Anna his wyfe prayed the Lorde and sayd: Prayed be thou, O Lorde God of Israel, for it is not happened vnto vs, as we thought. For thou hast dealt mercifully wyth vs, and put awaye fro vs the enemye that persecuted vs, and hast shewed mercy vnto our two beloued. O Lorde, cause the to magnifye the more perfectly, & to offere the sacrifice of thy prayse, & of their helth: that all people maye knowe, that thou only art God in all the earth.

And immediatly Raguel commaunded his seruantes, to fyll the graue, that they had made, wyth earth, afore it was lyght, and had his wyfe prepare a feast, & to make readye all thynges that were necessary for meate, to soche as went by the waye. He caused two fat kyne also, & foure wethers to be slayne, and meates to be prepared for all his neyghbours and frendes. And Raguel charged Tobias, to remayne with him two weekes. As for al the good that he had gaue Tobias the halfe of it, & made this wytyng, that the halfe which remayned, shuld fall vnto Tobias after their death.

The. ix. Chapter.

The Angell goeth to Gabellis, at the desyre of Tobias: which deliuereth the letter, and receaueth the money.

Ecce v. Then

Athen Tobias called vnto hym p' Angel, whom he thought to haue bene a man, and sayde vnto hym: Brother Azarias, I praye the herken vnto my wordes: For I shulde geue my selfe to be thy seruante, I shall not deserue thy prouidence. Neuerthelesse I beseeche the, that thou wylt take the bestes and the seruantes, and go vnto Gabelus in ragges the cyte of Medes, and deliuer him his hand wytyng, and receaue the money of hym, and praye hym to come to my maryage. For I knowest thy selfe, that my father doth nōbre the dayes: and p' I tary one daye to long, he wyl be sorry in his mind. Now leist thou how earnestly Raguel hath requyred me, so that I cannot saye hym nay.

Then toke Raphaell foure of Raguels seruantes, and two Camels, and wete vnto Ragges the cyte of the Medes: and when he had founde Gabelus, he gaue him his hand wytyng, & receaued all the money. He tolde him also of Tobias the sonne of Tobit, how all thynges had happened, and caused hym to come w' hym to the mariage. Now when he came into the house of Raguel, he founde Tobias sytting at the table: and he leaped vp, and they kyssed one another, and Gabelus wepte, and prayesd God, and sayde: the blessing of the God of Israel haue thou, for thou art the sonne of a ryght vertuous and iust man, and of one that feareth God, and geueth great almes. And blessing haue thy wyfe, and your elders, that ye maye se your chyldren and poure chylders chyldren, vnto the thyrde and fourth generacion, and your seide be blessed of the God of Israel, whych repyneth wo'ld without ende. And when they all had sayd Ame, they went to p' feast, but with the feare of the Lord held they the feast of the mariage.

The .x. Chapter.

Tobias & his wyfe are sadde for the taryance of their sonne. Raguel sendeth agayne Tobias w' his wyfe.

Now whyle ponge Tobias made longe taryng, by reason of p' mariage, hys father was full of care and heynnes, and thought: what shuld be the cause, that my sonne taryeth so long? Or why shuld he be kepte so long there? Peradventure Gabelus is deed, and no man wyl geue hym the money. Thus began he to be very sorowfull, he and Anna his wyfe with hym, and beganne to wepe both together, because they sonne was not come agayne vnto them at the daye appoynted. As for hys mother, she wepte w' th' discomforable teares, ad sayd: Who is me, my sonne? Oh what ayled vs to sende the a waye in to a straunge countre, p' light of our eyes, thou staff of oure age, thou comforte of oure lyfe, thou hope of our generacion? Seyng all the thynges p' we haue are only in the, we shuld not haue sent the a waye from vs.

Then Tobias comforted her, and sayde: holde thy tounge, and be not discomforted, our sonne is whole and soude: the man that we sent hym w' thall, is saythfull ynough. Neuerthelesse, he might in no wyse be comforted: but daylye went out, looked aboute, and went about all the stretes, wherby he thought he shulde come agayne: that (p' it were possible) he myght se hym commynge a farre of.

But Raguell sayde vnto hys sonne in lawe: O tary here, and I shall sende a messenger vnto thy father Tobias, to tel him that thou art in good health. Tobias sayde vnto him: I am sure, that my father ad my mother counte euery daye, and that they hertes are sorry.

So when Raguel prayed Tobias with many wordes, and wolde in no wyse heare hym, he deliuered Sara vnto hym, and the halfe part of all his good: in seruantes and handmaydens, in shepe, in Camels, and in kyne and moch money, & so sent him a waye from hym with peace and ioye, and sayde: The holy aungell of the Lord be with you in poure iourney, and byynge you forth safe and soude, that ye maye fynde all thynges in good case w' th your elders, & that myne eyes maye se your chyldren afore I dye. So the elders embraced they daughter, kyssed her, ad let her go, exhortinge her to honoure her father and mother in lawe, to loue her husbunde, to rule well her housholde, to kepe her house in good ordre, and to shewe her selfe fautelesse.

The .xi. Chapter.

Ponge Tobias leuynng hys wyfe and housholde in the myddes waye, commeth befoze with the Aungell. The dreame of his mother lokynge after her sonne. He is fully receaued of hys father and mother. Sara cometh seuen dayes after.

As they now were going home warde agayne, vpon the .xi. daye they came to Charra, whych lyeth in the halfe waye towarde Antioch. And the Aungell sayd: Brother Tobias, thou knowest how thou hast left thy father: therefore p' it please the, we two wyl go befoze, and let the housholde with thy wyfe and the catel come soft and sayly after vs. And when Tobias was content that they shuld go befoze, Raphaell sayde vnto hym: Take of the gall of the fysh with the, for it shal be necessary. So Tobias toke of the gall, ad they went their waye. But Anna the mother of Tobias sat dayly by the waye syde vpon the toppe of an hyll, from whence she myght se farre aboute her. And whyle she was waytynge there there for his commynge, she looked a farre of: and anon she perceaued her sonne commynge, and ranne and tolde her husbunde, sayinge: Behold, thy sonne commeth. And Raphaell sayde vnto Tobias: As soone as thou comest into the house, immediatly worshippe the Lord thy God, and geue thanks vnto hym: then go to thy father, and kyss him: & dryke his eyes ouer with the gal of the fysh that thou hast brought with p'. For be sure, that his eyes shal straght waye be opened, and thy father shal se the lyght of heauen, & shal reioyse at the sight of p'. The dogge that had ben with the in they iourney, ranne befoze, and came as a messenger, & wagged with his taylor for gladnesse.

So the blynde father arose, and beganne to runne, and stombled with hys fete, & gaue a seruant hys hande, ranne to mete hys sonne, receaued hym, and kyssed him, he and his wyfe, ad they beganne to wepe for ioye.

Now when they had worshypped & thanked God, they satt downe. Then toke Tobias of the fyshes gall, and anoynted his fathers eyes: and taryed half an houre, & then beganne the blemish to go out of hys eyes, lyke as it had bene the whyte skynne of an egge: whiche Tobias toke and drewe from hys eyes, and immediatly he receaued hys syght.

Then they prayesd God, he and his wyfe, and all they that knewe hym. And Tobias sayde: O Lord God of Israel, I geue the prayse and thanks, for thou hast chastened me, and made me whole. And lo, now do I se my sonne Tobias. After seue dayes came Sara his sonnes wyfe also whole & soude with al the household and catel, with camels and moche moneye of hys wyues, and w' th the money that he had receaued of Gabelus: and he tolde hys father and his mother al p' benefytes, which God had done for hym, by the man that led hym. Achior also and Nabath Tobias sister sones came, & were glad and reioysed with hym, by reason of all the good that God had shewed vnto hym. And so for the space of seue dayes they made mery, and were ryght ioyfull euerychone.

The .xii. Chapter.

Ponge Tobias reckened by vnto his father the pleasures that the angell byd hym. He offered vnto the angell halfe the goodes that he brought with hym.

Athen Tobias called hys sonne vnto hym, and sayd: What maye we geue thys holy man, that went w' th the? Tobias answered his father, and sayd: Father, what rewarde shall we geue hym? Or what thyng can deserue hys benefytes? he hath bene my gyde, and brought me safe agayne: he receaued the money fro Gabelus, he caused me to get my wyfe, he droue p' euell spete from her, he hath bene an occasyon of gladnesse to her father & mother: he deliuered me, that I was not deuoured of p' fythe, he hath made the to se the lyght of heauen, pee we all haue receaued great good of him. How shulde we worthelely deserue these thynges vnto hym? But I praye the my father, that thou wylt deliuer hym, p' happily he wyl vouch safe, to take w' th hym p' halfe of all that we haue brought.

So the father and the sonne called hym, & toke hym a syde, and beganne to praye him, p' he wolde be content to take in good worth, the halfe parte of al that they had brought. Then sayde he secretly vnto them: Prayse ye the God of heauen, and geue thanks vnto hym befoze all men luyng, for he hath shewed his mercy vnto vs. It is good to hyde p' thynges secrete, but to shewe & to prayse the workes of God, it is an honorable thing. Prayer is good with fastinge, & mercy is better, then to hooorde vp treasures of golde. For mercy deliuereth fro death, clenseth synne, and causeth to fynde euerylastyng lyfe. But they p' do sinne and vnryghteuousnes, are the enemyes of they awne soule.

Wherefore I tell you the trueth, and will hyde no thyng from you. When thou prayest with teares, and burydest the deed, and ledest thy dynner, ad hydest the deed in thy house vpon the daye tyme, that thou myghtest burye them in the nyght, I offered thy prayer befoze the Lord. And because thou wast accept and beloued of God, it was necessary, that tentacyon shulde trye the. And now hath the Lord sent me to heale the, ad to deliuer Sara thy sonnes wyfe from the euell spete. For I am Raphaell an Aungell one of the seuen that stande befoze God.

When they hearde thys, they were sore afrayed, and trembled, and fell downe vpon they faces vnto the grounde. Then sayde the Aungell: Peace be w' th you, feare not. Where as I haue bene w' th you, it is the wyll of God: geue prayse and thanckes vnto hym.

You thought that I dyd eate and drinke with you, but I vse meat that is multiplyble, and drynke that cannot be sene of men.

Now therefore is the tyme that I must turne agayne, vnto him that sent me: but be ye thankfull vnto God, and tell out all his wonderful workes.

And when he had spoken these wordes, he was taken a waye out of they syght, so that they sawe hym nomore. Then fell they downe flat vpon their faces by the space of thre houres, and prayesd God: when they rose vp, they tolde all his wonderful workes.

The .xiii. Chapter.

Tobias the eld' geueth thanckes vnto God.

Then

When olde Tobias opened his mouth and prayd the Lord, & sayd: Great art thou O Lord for evermore, and thy kyngdome wolde withoute ende: for thou scourgest and healest: thou ledest vnto hell, and byngest out agayne, and ther is none that may escape thyne hande. O geue thanckes vnto the Lord, ye chyldre of Israel, and prayse hym in the syght of hea-then. For amonge the heathen which knowe hym not hath he scattered you, to thynke ye shuld shew forth his maruelous workes: and cause them for to knowe, that there is none other God almyghty but he. He hath chastened vs for our myddes, and for his awne mercy sake shall he saue vs.

Consydre then, howe he hath dealt with you, and prayse him with feare and drede, & magnifye the euerglastyng kyng in youre workes. I wyll prayse him euē in the land of my captiuitie, for he hath shewed his maiestie vnto a synful people. Turne you therefore O ye synners, and do ryghteousnes before God, and be ye sure, that he wyll shewe his mercy vpon you. As for me, and my soule, we will reioyce in God. O prayse ye Lord al ye his chosen, holde ye dayes of gladnesse, and be thankfull vnto hym. O Jerusalem cytie of God, the Lord hath punyshed ye for the workes of thine awne handes. O prayse the Lord in thy good thinges, and geue thanckes to the euerglastyng God, that he may buyld vp his tabernacle agayne in the, that he maye call agayne vnto the, all soch as be in captiuite, and that thou mayest haue ioye for evermore. With a fayre light shalt thou shyne, and all the endes of the world shall honoure the. The people shall come vnto ye fro farre, they shall byng gyftes, and worship the Lord in the, and thy lande shall they haue for a Sanctuary, for they shall call vpon the great name in the.

Cursed shall they be that despyse the, and all that blasphem the, shall be condemned: but blessed shall they be that buyld the vp. As for the, thou shalt reioyce in thy chyldre for they all shall be blessed, and gathered together vnto the Lord. Blessed are they all that loue the, and that be glad of thy peace. Prayse thou the Lord, O my soule, for the Lord our God hath deliuered his cytie Jerusalem from all her troubles. I will count my self happy, yf my sede remaine to se the cleannes of Jerusalem.

The gates of Jerusalem shall be buylded with Sapphyre and Smaragde, and all the copasse of her walles with pteppous stones. All her stretes shall be paved with white marble stone, and in all stretes shall Alleluya be songe. Praysed be the Lord, which hath exalted her, that his kyngdom maye be vpon her for evermore. Amen. And so Tobias made an ende of his talkyng.

The. xliii. Chapter.

Tobias propheseth the destruction of Ninue, his soune returned to Raguel, after the decease of his father and mother.

After that Tobias had gottē his sight agayne, he lyued .xlii. yeres, & sawe his childers chylde. Now when he was .C. and .ii. yere olde, he dyed: & was buried honorably in Ninue. For when he was sixe and fyfthe yeres of age he lost the sight of his eyes, and when he was thre score yere olde, he gat his sight agayne. The residue of his lyfe led he in ioye, and increased wel in the feare of God, & departed in peace.

But in the houre of his death he called vnto hym his sonne Tobias, and seuen yonge springaldes his sonnes chylde, and sayde vnto them: The destruction of Ninue is at hand, for ye worde of the Lord cannot faile, and our brethren that are scattered out of the lande of Israel, shall come thither agayne. And the whole land of it ye hath bene wast, shall be fylled: and the house of God that was bzēt in it, shall be buylded agayne: & al soch as feare God, shall returne thither: the heathen also shall forsake their Idols, & come to Jerusalem, and dwell there, and al the kynges of the earth shall be glad of her, and worship the Lord God of Israel.

C And therefore my chyldre, heare your father: Serue the Lord in the trueth, seke after his wil, and do the thynges that please hym. Comaunde your chyldre that they do right, geue almes, be myndeful of God, and euer to be thankfull vnto hym in trueth and with all theyr power. Heare me now therefore my chyldren, and abyde not here: but in what daye soeuer ye haue buried your mother besyde me, get you from hence. For I fe, that the wyckednesse of it shall byng it to destruction and ende.

D After the death of his mother, Tobias departed awaye fro Ninue, with his wyfe and chylde, and with his childers chylde, and came agayne to his father and mother in lawe, and founde them whole and in a good age, and toke the care of them. And he closed their eyes, and was heyre vnto al Raguels goodes, and sawe the fyfth generacion, and his childers chylde. And when he was .xcix. yere of age, he dyed in the feare of the Lord, and his kynfolkes buried him. And al his posterite continued in good lyfe, and holy conuersacion: so that they were loued and accepted both of God and men, and of all the people of the lande.

The ende of the booke of Tobias.

The booke of Judith.

The fyrst Chapter.

The buyldyng of Egbathanis. The bytch of Nabuchodonosor agaynst Arpharat. The messengers of Nabuchodonosor are despyed.

Arpharat the kyng of Mesedes subdued many people vnto his domynion, & buylded a noble stronge cite whyche he called Egbathanis: The walles of it made he of free stone, four squared, seuty cubytes hee ad thre cubytes brode. He made towres there vpon an hundred cubytes hee. But vpon the foure corners euery side was twenty forte brode. He made the portes in the heygth, lyke as the towres. This kyng trusted in his myghty host, and in his glorious charrettes. So in the twelfth yere of his raygne it happened, that Nabuchodonosor the kyng of the Assirians (which raygned in the great cite of Ninue) fought agaynst Arpharat, and ouercame him in the great felde called Ragau, besyde Euphrates and Tigris and Jadason in the felde of Crioth the kyng of the Elykes.

C Then was the kyngdome of Nabuchodonosor exalted, and his herte was lyft vp: and he sent vnto all them that dwelt in Celicia, in Damascus, in Libanus, & vnto the heathen that dwelt in Carmel and Cedar, and to soch as dwelt in Galile in the greates felde of Eldelon, to all them ye were in Samaria, and beyonde the water of Iordane vnto Jerusalem and the whole lade of Iesse vnto the mountaynes of Ethiopia. Vnto all these dyd Nabuchodonosor the kyng of the Assirians sende messangers. But they all with one consent wolde not agree vnto hym, & sent the messangers agayne empty, and put the awaye without honour. Then Nabuchodonosor the kyng toke indignacion at all those landes, and swore by his trone, and by his kyngdome, that he wolde be auenged of all those countrees.

The. ii. Chapter.

Holofernes is sent of Nabuchodonosor, to subdue all the world. The preparation and pursute of Holofernes.

In the thirtenth yere of kyng Nabuchodonosor, vpon the .xii. daye of the fyrst moneth, it was deuysed in the courte of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of the Assirians, that he wolde defende hym selfe. So he called vnto him al the elders, all his captaynes, and men of warre, and shewed them his secret counsell, and tolde the that his purpose was to byng the whole earth vnder his domynion. Now when they were all content with this sayng, Nabuchodonosor the kyng called Holofernes & chefe captayne of his warres, & sayde vnto hym: Go thy waye forth agaynst all the kyngdomes of the west, and specially agaynst those that haue despised my comaudemēt. Thou shalt spare no realme, al stronge cyties shalt thou byng in subieccion vnto me.

When Holofernes called together all the captaynes and rulers of all the power in Assiria, and mustred the souldyers vnto the hoste (lyke as the kyng commaunded him) namely, an hundred and twenty thousande fightyng men vpon fote, and twelue thousande archers vpon horsebacke. All his ordinaunce sent he before with an innumerable multitude of camels, so that the host was well provided for with oren, and smal catell, and that without nombre. He caused corne to be prepared out of all Syria for his host. Moche golde and syluer also toke he out of the kynges house. So he toke his iourneye, he and all his host, with charettes, horsmen, and archers: of whome there were so many, that they couered the grounde of the lande, lyke the grethoppers.

And when he was gone past the borders of the Assirians, he came towarde the great mountaynes of Ange, which lye vpon the left syde of Celicia: & so he went vp into al their castels, and wanne euery stronge holde. As for the welthy cytie of Holothus, he brake it downe, & spoyled all the chyldre of Charis and the Ismaelites, which laye towarde the wilderness, and vpon the South syde of the land of Chelon. He went ouer Euphrates also, and came into Mesopotamia, and brake downe al the hye citis that were there, from the broke of Hambric tyll a man come to the see: and he toke the borders in fro Celicia vnto the coastes of Zaphet towarde the South. He carped awaye al the Madianytes, and spoyled all theyr goodes, & whosoever withstode hym, he slew the with the swerde. After this he went downe into the felde of Damascus in the tyme of harvest, & bzēt vp all the corne and all the trees, and caused the vynes to be cut downe. And the feare of hym fell vpon all them that dwelt in the earth.

The. iii. Chapter.

Kynges become willingly subject to Holofernes: The tyrannye and crueltie of hym.

In the kynges & prynces of all cyties and landes sent theyr Embassytours: namely, they of Syria, & Mesopotamia, Siria Sobal, and Lybia, and Celicia, which came to Holofernes, and sayd: Let thy wrath cease toward vs: For us: It is better for us to serue þ great kyng Nabuchodonosor with our lyues, and to be subiecte vnto the, then þ we shulde dye, and be slayne, and receaue greater hurte. All our cyties and possessions, all mountaynes and hylles, all felde, great & small catell, shepe goates, hoxes, and camels, al our goodes & householdes, be in thy power, vnder thy subiection be it al together. We our selues also and our chyldren wylbe thynne a wone, come vnto vs a peaceable lord, and vse our seruyce at thy pleasure.

¶ Then came Holofernes downe from the mountaynes with hoxmen & great power, and conquered all stronge fenced cyties, and all that dwelt in the land. And out of all cyties he toke stronge men, and such as were mete for the warre, to helpe hym. There came soch a feare also vpon those countrees, þ the indwellers of all the cyties, the Princes and rulers, and the people together, wente forth to mete hym as he came, and receaued hym honorably with garlandes and tozcles, with daunces, tabrettes and pyper.

¶ Neuertheless, though they dyd thys, yet myght they not swage hys rgyorous stomach: but he destroyed their cities, & hewed downe theyr woddes. For Nabuchodonosor the kyng had commaunded him, that he shuld rote out all þ Goddess of the lande: to the intent that he only myght be called and taken for God, of the nations whych Holofernes with his power brought vnder hym. So went he thowow Syria Sobal, ad thowow all Appamia, and all Mesopotamia, & came to the Idumeans, in the lande of Gabaa and Scythopol, and toke theyr cyties, and remayned there thyrtye dayes, wherun he caused all the whole multitude of hys host to be gathered together.

¶ The. iiii. Chapter.

¶ Israel requyryth helpe of God agaynst Holofernes. They fast and praye.

¶ When the chyldren of Israel þ dwelt in Iewry heard thys they were sore afrayed of him. There came soch tremblunge also and feare vpon them, that they sorowed he shulde do vnto the ctyte of Jerusalem, and the temple of the Lorde, as he had done to other cyties & their temples. So they sent into all Samaria rounde aboute vnto Jericho, toke in and occupied al the toppes of the mountaynes, & made fast the towines with walles, ad prepared corne for them agaynst the battayll.

Eliachim also the Preste wrote vnto all them that dwelt towarde Esdrelon (whych lyeth ouer agaynst þ great felde by Dothaim) and vnto all those by whom men might haue passage vnto them, that they shuld take in the wayes of the mountaynes, wher-by there might be any waye and passage to Jerusalem, and that they shulde holde diligently watch where any strayt was betwixt the mountaynes. And the chyldren of Israel dyd, as Eliachim the prest of þ Lorde had commaunded them. And all the people cryed earnestly, and humbled theyr soules with fastynges and prayes, they and theyr wyues. The Prestes put on hearrie clothes, ad layed the yonge babes before the temple of þ Lorde, and couered the aulter of the Lorde with an hearrie cloth. And with one accord they cryed vnto þ Lorde God of Israel, that theyr chyldren shuld not be geuen into a praye, and their wyues into a spoyle, that their cyties shuld not be layed waste, & that theyr Sanctuary shuld not be vnhallowed, and so they to be a shame and rebuke vnto the heathen.

¶ Then Eliachim the hys Preste of þ Lorde wente rounde aboute all Israel, and spake vnto the, sayinge: Be ye sure, that þ Lorde will heare youre petitions, yf ye contynue stedfast in fastynges & prayes in the syght of the Lorde. Remembre Moyses the seruant of the Lorde, whych ouerthrewe the Amalechites (that trusted in theyr might & power in their host, in theyr wyldes, in theyr charrettes and hoxmen) not with weapens, but with holy prayers. Euen so shall al the enemies of Israel be, yf ye continue in this worke, that ye haue begonne. So vpon this exhortacion they continued in prayer before þ Lord. In so moche þ they which offered burnt sacrificys vnto the Lorde, offered the offeringes vnto the Lorde, beynge arayed in hearrye clothes ad had as theyr vpon theyr heades. And they all besought God fro theyr whole hert, þ he wolde vylet his people of Israel.

¶ Holofernes is discontent with the Jewes. Achior sheweth vnto Holofernes the meruelles of God done vnto the Jewes, for which thynge the rulers vnder Holofernes were very angry wth hym.

¶ And worde came to Holofernes the Prynce of the warres of the Assyrians that the chyldren of Israel prepared them selues to make resistance, and howe they had stopped the wayes betwixte the mountaynes. Then was he exceeding wroth, and called all the Princes of Moab, and the Captaynes of Ammon, and sayde vnto them. Tell me what people is thys, that kepeth in the mountaynes? Or what maner of cyties are they? What is their power? Or what maner of host haue they? who is theyr Captayne? And why do they despyse vs (more then all those that dwel in the East) and come not forth to mete vs, þ they myght receaue vs wth peace? Then Achior the Captayne of al the Ammonites answered, and sayd: Syr, yf it please the to heare heare, I wyl tell the treuth before the, concerninge thys people that dwell in the mountaynes, and there shall no lye go out of my mouth.

¶ Thys people is of the generacion of the Caldees, they dwelt first in Mesopotamia, for they wolde not folowe þ goddess of their fathers that were in the lande of þ Caldees, and so forsoke they the customes of their fore fathers (whych had many goddesses) & worshipped one God, that made heauen & erth: whych also commaunded them, þ they shuld go from thence, and dwell at Haran. Nowe whē there came a dearth into þ whole land, they wēte downe to Egypte, and there they dwelt foure hondreth yeres, in the whiche they multiplied so greatly, that their host might not be nombred. And when the king of Egypte oppressed them, and subdued the in buyldynge of his cyties with makynge of claye and bryck, they cryed vnto God theyr Lorde, whiche punished the whole lande of Egypte with diuerse plagues.

¶ Now when the kyng of Egypte let the go their waye, and the plage ceased, & then folowed after them, to take the, & to brynge them agayne into hys seruyce, whyle they were flyenge a waye, the God of heauē opened the see, so that the waters stode fast vpon both the sydes as a wal, and these went thorow the botome of the see drye shod. In the whiche place whē an innumerable people of the Egyptians folowed vpon them, they were so ouerwhelmed with þ waters: that there remayned not one, to tel them that came after, how it happened. So when thys people was passed thowow the reed see, they came into the wyldernes of the mount Synai, where neuer man myght dwell afore, & where þ sone of mā had neuer rested. There were the bitter waters made swete for the, that they myght drynke, and forty yeres had they meate from heauen. Wherelocuer they went (without bowe and arrowe, without bulker or swerd) theyr God fought for them, and caused them to haue the victory. Yee, no man was able to hurte thys people, except it were so, þ they departed vnfaithfully from the worshyppe of the Lorde theyr God. But as oft as they worshipped any other besyde theyr God, he gaue them ouer to be spoyled, to be slayne, ad to be put to confusyon. Neuertheless, as ofte as they were sorowful for departynge from the worshyppe of theyr God, the same God of heauē gaue them power and strength to withstande theyr enemies.

¶ Moreover, they slewe the kyng of þ Canaanites, Jebusites, Pherezites, Hethites, Guites, and Amorites, and all the myghtye in Hesebon, and toke their landes ad cyties in possession: and so longe as they sinned not in the syght of theyr God it went wel with them, for theyr God hateth vnyrghteousnesse. For in tymes past whē they went out of the waye, whych God had geuen the, that they shulde walke in it, they were destroyed in dyuerse bataylles of many nations: and many of the were carped awaye prelsoners vnto a straunge countre. But now latelý they haue turned them selues agayne vnto the Lorde theyr God, ad are come together agayne out of the countrees where they were scatred abroad: and thus haue they conquered these mountaynes, and dwell therein: and as for Jerusalem where theyr Sanctuary is, they haue it agayne in possession.

¶ And therfore my lord, make diligent inquisicio, yf thys people haue done wyckednesse in the syght of their God, then let vs go vp agaynst the, for doutles theyr God shall deliuer them into thy handes, and subdue them vnto thy power. But yf thys people haue not displeased theyr God, we shal not be able to wythstande them, for theyr God shall defende the, and so shall we be ashamed to all the worlde.

¶ Now when Achior had spoken out these wordes, al the great men of Holofernes were wroth, and thought to slaye hym, & sayde one to another: what is he this, whych darre saye, that the chyldren of Israel are able to withstande Nabuchodonosor the kyng and his host: where as they are an vnwepten people, without strength or vnderstanding of the feates of warre? That Achior therfore maye knowe that he hath discaued vs we wyl go vp into the mountaynes: & whē the myghtye men of them are taken, he also shalbe stycke with the swerd, that al people maye knowe, that Nabuchodonosor is the God of the earth, and that there is none other without hym.

¶ The. vi. Chapter.

¶ Achior is committed into the handes of the Jewes by Holofernes. He is tyed to a tree, but is loosed of the Jewes. The prayer of the people. Achior is comforted of the Jewes.

¶ When they had left of speaking, Holofernes toke soze indignacion, and said vnto Achior: For somoch as thou hast prophesied vnto vs, sayinge: that the people of Israel shalbe defended of theyr God, I wyl geue the, that there is no God but Nabuchodonosor. Yee, when we slaye them all as one man, thou also shalt perishe with them thowow the swerd of the Assyrians, & all Israel shalbe destroyed with the, and then shalt thou fele, that Nabuchodonosor is þ Lorde of the whole erth. Then shall the swerd of my knyghthode go thowow thy sydes, and thou shalt fall downe stycke amonge the wounded of Israel, and shalt thalt not come to thy selfe agayne but be utterly destroyed with them. But if thou thinkest thy prophesie to be true, why dost thou then chaunge thy colour? why arte thou afrayed? Thinkest thou that my wordes are not able to be performed? But that thou mayest knowe, I thou shalt see these thynges with them, beholde, fro this houre forth I will sende the vnto ponder people, that when the punishment of my swerde (which they haue worthely deserued) falleth vpon them, thou mayest be punished with them.

So Holofernes commaunded his seruantes to take Achior, & to carry hym vnto Bethulia, & to deliuer hym into the handes of the childre of Israel. Then Holofernes seruantes toke hym, and went thowse I playne felde. But when they drew nye vnto the mountaynes, the spyng casters came out agaynst them: neuertheless they gat the awaye by the syde of the mountayne, ad vnto Achior hande and fote to a tree, and so left hym boude with withyes, and turned agayne vnto the Lord.

Notwithstandinge I chyliden of Israel went downe fro Bethulia, came vnto hym, lowsed hym, brought him into Bethulia, set hym in the myddest of the people, and asked him what the matter was, that I Assyrians had left hym bounde?

Asias the sonne of Micha of the trybe of Symeon, and Charmin (which is also called Gothoniell) were the principal rulers at the same tyme. Nowe when Achior stode in the myddest of the people, and before them all he tolde them, what answere he gaue Holofernes, to the thyng that he asked hym, and how Holofernes people wolde haue slayne hym for so sayinge, and how Holofernes hym selfe was wroth, & commaunded hym for the same cause to be deliuered vnto the Israelites: that when he ouercame the childre of Israel, he myght commaunde Achior also to be put to death with diuerse tormetes, because he sayde: the God of heauen is their defender. And when Achior had playnely tolde out all these thynges, all the people fell downe vpon their faces, prayng the Lord, and poured out their prayers together vnto the Lord, with a general complaynte and wepyng, and sayde: O Lord God of heauen & of earth, beholde their pride and loke vpon our lowlynnes, and consyde how it standeth with thy sayntes, and make it to be knowne, that thou forsakest not those, which holde them fast by the, ad how that thou vpyngest the lowe, that presume of the selues, and make theyr boast in theyr awne strength. So when the wepyng and prayer of the people (whych they had made the whole daye longe) was ended, they commaunded Achior, sayinge: The God of our fathers, whose power and strength thou hast prayled, shal so rewarde the, that thou shalt rather see theyr destruccio. When the Lord our God then shall geue his seruantes thys lybertie, God be also with the amoge vs, that if it please the, thou with all thynne mayest dwell with vs.

Now when Asias had ended the counsell, he toke him into his house, ad made a great supper, called the elders to it, and so they refreshed them selues after the fastynge. And afterwarde was all the people called together, which made their prayers at the night longe in the congregacion, and besought the God of Israel for helpe.

The vii. Chapter.

Bethulia is besieged of Holofernes. The people requyreth helpe of God. They of Bethulia wolde geue ouer the ctyte for wante of water. The prayer of the people with teares and lamentacion.

The next daye, Holofernes commaunded his host to go by agaynst Bethulia. There were an hundred & twenty thousande fyghtynge men on fote and two and twenty thousande horsmen, beside the the preparynge of the that were wonne: and came to them on euery syde out of the countrees and ctytes whiche he had taken. All these prepared them selues vnto the battail agaynst the Israelites, and came on by the hill syde, vnto the toppe that loketh ouer agaynst Dothaim, from the place which is called Belma, vnto Chelmon that lyeth toward Ezelon.

Now when the chyliden of Israel sawe so great a multitude of the Assyrians, they fel downe flat vpon the grounde, strawed althes vpon their heades, and prayed with one accord, that I God of Israel wolde shew his mercy vpon his people, and so they toke their weapens, and sat betwixt the mountaynes in the narrow place, and kept the waye daye and nyght. But whyle Holofernes was gone aboute, he founde the water spyng, which fro the South syde was conueyed into I ctyte by a codyte: this commaunded he to be direct another waye, & to cut their codyte in sunder. There were welles also not farre from the walles, wher they bled secretly, more for pleasure then for necessity.

Then wente I Ammonites & the Moabites vnto Holofernes, & said: The chyliden of Israel trust nether in speare nor arrowe, but haue taken in, ad kepe the mountaynes and hilles. That thou mayest ouercome the therfore without I stryking of any batayl, set men to kepe the welles that they drawe no water out of the: so shalt thou destroye the without swerd, or at I least they shall be so feble, that they must be sayne to geue ouer the ctyte: whych they thynke not able to be wonne, for so moche as it lyeth in the mountaynes.

mountaynes. These wordes pleased Holofernes well & all his men of warre, & he set an hundred at euery well rounde aboute.

And when thys watch had endured twelue dayes, the Cisternes & all that had water, fayled them that dwelt in I ctyte of Bethulia, so that in I whole ctyte they had not dryncke ynough for one daye, for the people had water geuen them daylye in a measure. Then came the men and women, ponge per sonnes ad chyliden all vnto Asias, & sayde all with one voyce: God be iudge betwixte vs and the, for thou hast dealt euell with vs thou woldest not speake peaceably with the kynge of the Assyrians, therfore hath God solde vs in theyr handes, and there is no man to helpe vs where as we are brought downe before theyr eyes I thirst & great destruccyon. Therfore gather now together all I people that be in the ctyte, that we maye all pelde oure selues wyllyngly vnto I people of Holofernes: for better it is that we be captiue and prayse the Lord with our lyues, then to be slayne and perishe, and to be laughed to scoorne and shamed of euery man, when we see our wyues and chyliden dye before oure eyes. We take heauen and earthe thys daye to recorde, and the God of our fathers (whych punisheth vs accordyng to I descripyng of our synnes) and geue you war nyng, that ye geue vnto the ctyte now ito I power of Holofernes host, that oure ende maye be shorte with the swerde, whych els shall endure longe, for wante of water and for thyrst.

When they had spoken out these wordes there was a grete wepyng and howlyng in the whole congregacion, and that of euery man, and they cryed an whole houre longe vnto God with one voyce, sayenge: we haue synned with oure fathers, we haue done a myse, we haue dealt wyckedly. Thou that art gracious, haue mercy vpon vs, punish our vnyghtousnes with thynne awne scourge, and geue not those ouer that knowlege the, vnto a people whych knowe the not, lest they saye amoge the heathen: where is theyr God?

And when they were so weery with this cryenge and wepyng, that they helde theyr tinges, Asias stode vp with watrye eyes, and sayde: O take good hertes vnto you, (deare brethren) and be of good cheare, and let vs wayte yet these fyue dayes for mercy of the Lord: peradventure he shall cut awaye hys indignacyon, and geue glory vnto hys name. But if he helpe vs not when these fyue dayes are past, we shall do as ye haue sayde.

The viii. Chapter.

Of the deuotione woman Judith, which reproveth the ancientes because they tempted the Lord. She also moueth them to encorage and herten the people, and sheweth her counsell agaynst the enemyes of the Jewes.

And it happened when these wordes came to I ears of Judith, a wyddowe, which was the daughter of Merari, the sonne of Idor, I sonne of Joseph, the sonne of Asias, the sonne of Clay, the sonne of Jammo, the sonne of Je deon, the sonne of Raphoim, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Melchia, I sonne of E-uam, the sonne of Nathania, the sonne of Salathiel, the sonne of Symeon, the sonne of Ruben. And her husband was called Hannas, which dyed in the dayes of the barlye harvest. For whyle he was byndynge the sheues together in the felde, the heate came vpon his head, & he dyed at Bethulia his ctyte & there was he buried besyde his fathers. Now was Judith hys desolate wyddowe thre yeares and six monethes. And in I hyer partes of her house she made her selfe a pre-up chambze, where she dwelt, beyng closed in with her maydens. She ware a smock of heare, and fasted all the dayes of her lyfe, excepte the Sabbathes, and newe mones and the solemne dayes that I people of Israel kepte. She was a very fayre and bewtifull persone. Her husband also had left her greater riches, a plenteous housholde, great vnumeable possessions and many catell. This Judith was a woman of a very good reporte with euery one, for she feared I Lord greatly, ad there was no body that spake an euell worde of her.

When thys Judith hearde, how Asias had promysed the people, that after the fyfte daye he wolde geue vnto the ctyte vnto the Assyrians, she sent for the elders Chambriz and Charmy, and when they came to her, she sayde: what thyng is thys, wherein Asias hath consented, that if God helpe not with in fyue dayes, he will geue ouer the ctyte to the Assyrians? What are ye, that ye tempte the Lord? This deuoyce optayneth no mercy of God, but prouoketh him vnto wrath and displeasure. Will ye set the mercy of I Lord a tyme and appoynte hym a daye after poure will?

Neuertheless, for so moche as the Lord is pacyft, lett vs rather repent, pourynge out teares, and beseechig him of grace. For God threateneth not as a man, nether will he be prouoked vnto wrath as the chyliden of men. And therfore lett vs bertely fall downe before hym, and serue hym with a meke spete, and with wepyng eyes saye vnto the Lord, that he deale with vs accordyng to hys awne will and mercy: that lyke as oure herte is now vexed, and brought lowe thowse the pryde of them, it maye so be comforted thowse hys grace: in so moche as we folowe not the synnes of our fathers, which forsoke their God, & worshipped other gods: for the which synne they perished with the sword, were spoiled & brought to shame of all their enemies. As for vs, we knowe none other God but onely he, for whose comfort lett vs tary with mekenesse. he shall requyre and make inquisiciō for our blood from the veracions of our enemyes: he shall bringe downe all the hepten, that ryle vp agaynst vs, & put them to dishonour, euen the Lorde oure God.

Therefore deare brethren, seynge ye are honorable and elders in the people of God, vnto whom all the people haue respecte, ad vpon whom the lyfe of the people standeth, lyft vp their hertes with poure exhortaciō, that they may call to remembraunce, how oure fathers also in tymes past were tempted, that they myght be proued, yf they worshipped the Lord God a ryght. They ought to remembre, how oure father Abraham beinge tempted, and tryed thow many trybulacions, was founde a louer and frende of God. So was Isaac, so was Jacob, so was Moses, and all they that pleased God, beinge tryed thow many troubles, were founde stedfast in fayth. Agayne, they that receaued not theyr tētiōs wpyth the feare of God, but put the selues forth with vn-pacency and murmuringe agaynst God, perished by the destroyer, and were slayne of seruauntes. Therefore shuld not we vnderstande our ouercomynge, for the wyng that is done vnto vs: but to consyde, that all these punysshmentes are farre lesse then oure synnes and mysdedes. Seleuige also that thys correcciōn cometh vnto vs (as to the seruauntes of God) for amendement, and not for oure destrucciōn.

Then sayde Olias & the elders vnto Iudith: All that thou speakest, is true, and no mā can reprove thy wordes. Praye thou for vs now therfore vnto God, for thou art an holy woman, and fearest God. And Iudith sayd vnto them: Seyng, ye knowe that my wordes are of God, then proue my counsell & deuice, yf it be of God: & beleche God, that he wyl byng my counsell to good ende.

Thus haue I deuyled: he shall stāde this nyght before the porte, and I wyl go forth with Abrahams mayden. Praye ye therfore vnto God, that he wyl graciously remembre his people of Israel within fyue dayes, as ye haue sayd. As for the thyng that I go in hande with all, aske ye no questyōs of it, tyll I open it vnto you my self: do ye nothing els but praye vnto the Lord poure God for me. Then Olias the prince of the people of Iuda sayde vnto her: So thy waye in peace the Lorde be with the, that we maye be auēged of our enemyes. And so they wete from her agayne.

The ix. Chapter.

The prayer of Iudith for the hystorie.

Now when they were gone they wape, Iudith wente into hir closet, put on an hearrype smock, drawed ashes vpon hir head, fell downe before the Lord, & cried vnto hym, sayyng, O Lord God of my father. Smead, which gauest hym a swerde for a defence agaynst the enemyes, yf used vpolēce and wyllfulnes and that rauished yf vyrgine & put her to dys-honesty. Thou ygauest theyr wyues into a praye, and theyr daughters into captiuyte, ad all theyr praye for a spoyle vnto thy seruantes, which bare a zeale vnto y, helpe me wyddow, O Lorde my God, I beleche the. For thou hast done all thinges from the begynnyng: and loke what thou hast taken in hand ad deuyled, it came euer to passe. For all thy wayes are prepared, and thy iudgements are done i thy euerylastyng forknowledge. O loke now vpon the armyes of the Assyrians, lyke as it was thy pleasure somtyme to loke vpo the hoost of the Egyptians, when they beinge weapened, persecuted thy seruantes, and put theyr trust i theyr charrettes, horsmen, & in the multitude of theyr men of warre. But thou lokedest vpo their host, castyng a thyck darchnes before the: and when they came into the depe, the waters ouerwhelmed them.

Euen so Lord, lett it go with these, that trust in the power & multitude of theyr me of warre in theyr charrettes, arrowes & speares, and knowe not, that thou onely art our God, which destroyest warres fro y begynnyng, and that thou art the Lord. O lyft vp thyne arme now, lyke as euer from y begynnyng, and i thy power byng the power to naught, caule theyr myght to fall in thy wrath. They make theyr boast, y they will vnhalowe and desyle thy Sanctuary, and to wayst the tabernacle of thy name, & to cast downe the horne of thyne auter w theyr swerde, wyl to passe (O Lorde) that the pryde of the enemye maye be cut downe with his awne swerde, that he maye be take with the snare of hys eyes in me, and that I mayest smyte hi with y lypyes of my loue. O geue me a stedfast mynde, that I maye despyle him ad hys strength, & that I maye destroye hym.

Thys shall byng thy name an euerylastyng remembraunce, yf the hande of a woman ouerthrowe hym. For thy power (O Lord) stādeh not in y power of men, nether hast y eny pleasure i the strength of horses. There was neuer proude personne y pleased the, but in the prayer of the humble and meke hath thy pleasure bene euermore.

O thou God of the heauens, thou maker of the waters, and Lorde of all creatures, heare heare me poore woman, callyng vpo the, & puttyn my trust in thy mercy. Remembre thy couenaunt, O Lord, and mynister wordes in my mouth, and stablysh this deuice in my hert, that thy house maye cōtynue styll in holynes, and that all the hepten maye knowe, that thou art God, ad that there is none other but thou.

The x. Chapter.

Iudith beareth her selfe to go to Holofernes. The deuising that the elders gaue Iudith. Holofernes is in loue with Iudith.

Now when she had left of cryeng vnto the Lorde, she rose vp from the place, where she had lye flat before the Lorde, & called her mayden, wet downe into her house, laped the hearrype cloth from her, put of the garmentes of hir wyddowhode, washed her body, anointed hyr selfe with precyous thinges, of swe-re sauoure, broyded and platted her heare, sett an hoone vpon hir heade, and put on soche apparell as belongeth vnto gladnesse, slippers vpon hir fete, armelletes, spages, earynges, synger rynges, ad decked her selfe with all hir best arape.

The Lorde gaue her also a specyall bewtye ad faynesse (for all this deckyng of hyr selfe was not done for eny voluptuousnesse and pleasure of the flesh, but of a ryght dyscrecyōn and vertue, therfore dyd the Lorde increase hir bewtye) so that she was exceadynge ampyable and wel sauoured in all mē eyes. She gaue hyr mayde also a botell of wyne, a pot with oyle, pottage, cake bred & chese, and wente hir waye.

Now when she came to the porte of the cytie, she founde Olias and the elders of the cytie waytyng there. Which whā they sawe her, they were astōnyed, & marueled greatly at her bewtye. Neuerthelesse, they asked no questyō at her, but let her go, sayyng: The God of oure fathers geue the his grace, and with his power perfourme all the deuyce of thy herte: that Ierusalē maye reioyse ouer the, and that thy name maye be in the nombre of the holy and ryghteous. And all they that were there, sayde with one voyce: so be it, so be it. Iudith made hir prayer vnto the Lorde, and wente oute at the porte, she and hir mayde.

And as she was goyng downe the mountayne, it happened that aboute the spyng of the dape, the spyres of the Assyrians met with her, and toke her, sayyng: whence comest thou? O whither goest thou? She answered: I am a daughter of the hebrues, ad am fled fro the, for I knowe, y they shal be geuen vnto you to be spoiled: because they thought scozne to yelde the selues vnto you that they myght fynde mercy i poure sight. Therfore, haue I deuyled by my selfe after this maner: I wyl go before the prince Holofernes, and tell hym all the secretes, and wyl shew hym, how he maye come by them and wyne them, so that not one mā of hys hoost shall perishe.

And when these mē had hearde hir wordes, and consydered hir fayre face they were astōnyed (for they wondred at hir excellēt bewty) & sayd vnto her: thou hast saued thy lyfe by fyndyng out this deuyce, y thou woldst come downe to oure lorde: and be thou sure, that when thou comest vnto hym, he shall intreate the well, and thou shall please hym at the herte. So they brought her into Holofernes pauplyon, and tolde him of her. Now when she came in before hym, immediately he was ouercome ad taken with hir bewty. The sayd his seruantes: who wolde despyse y people of the Jewes, that haue so fayre wemen? Shuld we not by reaso fyght agaynst the for these? So when Iudith sawe Holofernes syttinge in a canapy, that was wrought of purple, sylke, gold, smaragde and precyous stones, she looked fast vpon hi, & fell downe vpon y earth. And Holofernes seruantes toke her vp agayne, at their lordes commaundement.

The xi. Chapter.

Holofernes requyeth of Iuda the cause of her comynge, wherby geueth hym a sutell answer.

Then sayd Holofernes vnto her: Be of good chere, & feare not in thyne hert, for I neuer hurte mā, y wold serue Nabuchodonosor y kinge. As for thy people, yf they had not despyled me, I shulde not haue lyft vp my speare agaynst y. But tell me now, what is the cause that y art departed from them, & wherfore art thou come vnto vs?

And Iudith sayde vnto hym: Spyr, vnderstande y wordes of thy handmayden: for yf y wylt do after the wordes of thy handmayden, the Lorde shall byng thy matter to a prosperous effecte. As truly as Nabuchodonosor a lorde of the lande lyueth, and as truly as his power lyueth, which is in y to the punysshment of all men that go wrogg, all men shall not onely be subdued vnto him thow the, but ad the bestes also of y feld. For all people speake of thy prudent actyuyte, and it hath euer bene reported, how y onely art good & myghtie in all his kyngdome, & thy discrecyōn is comended i al lādes. The thig is manifest also, y Achior spake, & it is wel knowne, what y comādest to do vnto him. For this is playne & of a suretye, y our God is so wroth w vs (by y reason of our synnes) y he hath shewed by hys prophetes vnto y people, how y for their synnes he wyl deluyne the ouer vnto y enemye. And for so moch as y chylde of Israel knoweth it, wethat we that they haue so displeased they? God, they are soze afrayed of the.

They suffre greate hunger also, and for wante of water, they are ded now in a manner. Whereouer, they are appoynted to slaye all they? catell, that they maye dyyncke the bloude of them: and are purposed to spende all the holy dynammes of their God, which he hath forbydden them to touch, for coine, wyne and oyle. Sepyng now, that they do these thynges it is a playne case that they must nedes be destroyed. Which whē I thy handmayden perceaued, I fled from them, as the Lord hath sent me vnto the, to shew the these thynges. For I thy handmayden worshyppe God euen here now besyde the, and thy handmayden shall go forth, and I will make my prayer vnto God, as he shall tell me, when he wyll rewarde them they? synne, then shall I come and shewe the and hyunge the thozow the myddest of Ierusalem, so that thou shalt haue all the people of Israel, as I thepe without a shepherde: there shall not so moch as one dogg bark agaisst the, for these thynges are shewed me by the prouidence of God: and for so moch as God is displeased with them, he hath sent me to be the same.

These wordes pleased Holofernes & all his seruantes, which marueled at the wysdome of her, and sayde one to another: there is not soch a woman vpon earth, in bewtye and discrecion of wordes. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: God hath done well, that he hath sent the hyther before thy people, that I mayest geue the to our hādes. And for so moch as thy promyse is good, yf thy God perfourme it vnto me, he shall be my God also, and thou shalt be excellent and greate in the courte of Nabuchodonosor, and thy name shall be spoken of in all the lande.

The. xii. Chapter.

Holofernes commaundeth that Judith be well treated. She despyeth licence to go out in the night season to praye, and obtayneth it. Agao is sent vnto her, to moue her to come into Holofernes to a banquet, and she cummeth. Holofernes is droncken.

When commaunded he her to goi whe-Ure hys treasure laye, and charged that she shulde haue her dwellynge there, and appoynted what shulde be geuen her from hys table. Judith answered hym and sayde: As for the meate that thou hast commaunded to geue me, I maye not eate of it as now (lest I displease my God) but will eat of soch as I haue brought with me. Then sayde Holofernes vnto her: If these thynges that thou hast brought with the sayle, what shall we do vnto the? And Judith sayd: As truly as thou lyuest my lord, thy handmayden shall not spende all thyng, yll God haue brought to passe in my hand, the thynges that I haue deuyfied.

So hys seruantes brought her into the tent, where as he had appointed. And as she was goynge in, she despyed that she myght haue leue to go forth by night & before daye to her prayer and to make intercessio vnto the Lord. Then commaunded Holofernes his Chamberlaynes, that she shulde go out and in at her pleasure, to praye vnto God those thre dayes.

And so in the nyght season she wete forth into a valley of Bethulia, and washed her selfe in the well water. Then wente she vp, and besought the Lord God of Israel that he wolde prospere her waye, for the deliuerance of hys people. And so she wente in, & remayned cleue in her tent, tyll she toke her meate in the eueninge.

Upon the fourth daye it happened, that Holofernes made a supper vnto hys seruantes, and sayde vnto Agao his chamber layne: Go thy waye, and counsell thys he-bzuelle, that she may be wyllyng to consent to kepe company with me. For it were a shame vnto all the Assyrians, that a woman shulde so laugh a mā to scorn that she were come from hym vnnedled with all. Then wente Agao vnto Judith, & sayde: Let not the good daughter be afrayed, to come to my lord, that she maye be honoured before hym, that she maye eate and dryncke wyne, and be mery with hym. Vnto whom Judith answered: Who am I, that I shulde saye my lordenape? whatsoeuer is good before hys eyes, I shall do it: and loke what is hys pleasure, that shall I thyncke well done, as longe as I lyue.

So she stode vp, and deckt her self wyth her apparell, and wente in, and stode before him. And Holofernes herte was whole moued, so that he bzent in desyre towarde her. And Holofernes sayd vnto her: Drike now and sytt downe, and be mery, for thou hast founde fauoure before me. Then sayde Judith: Syr, I wyll dryncke, for my mynde is merper to daye, then euer it was in all my lyfe. And she toke, and dyde eate, and dranke before hym, the thynges that her mayden had prepared for her. And Holofernes was mery with her, and drake more wyne, then euer he dyd afore in hys lyfe.

The. xiii. Chapter.

Holofernes sleapeth for very dronkenes, and Judith cutteth off hys heade, and goeth therwith to her auncle people of whom she is rescued with hope. They geue thanks vnto God, for they? deliuerance. Judith speaketh vnto Achior, which misseisth at her state done to Holofernes.

When it was late in the nyght, hys seruantes made haste euery man to hys lodgige. And Agao put the chamber dozes, and went hys his waye, for they were all ouerladen with wyne. So was Judith alone in the chamber. As for Holofernes he laye vpon the bed all droncken, & of very dronkenes fell a slepe.

Then commaunded Judith her mayden, to stāde without before the doze, & to wayte. And Judith stode before the bedd, makinge her prayer with teares, and moued her lyp-pes secretly, and sayde: Strengthen me, O Lord God of Israel, and haue respecte vnto the workes of my handes in this houre, that thou mayest set vp thy ctye of Ierusalem, lyke as thou hast promysed: O graunte that by the I may perfourme this, which I haue deuyfied thozow the belcue that I haue in the,

And when she had spoken this, she wente to the bedstede, and lowled the swerde that hanged vpon it, and drew it out. Then toke she hold of the bearye lockes of hys heade, and sayde: Strengthen me, O Lord God in thys houre, and with that, she gaue hym two strokes vpon the neck, and smote off hys head. Then toke she the canapp a waye, and rolled the deed body asyde. Immediately she gat her forth, and deliuered the head of Holofernes vnto her mayden, and bad her put it in her wallet.

And so these two wente forth together after they? custome, as though they wolde praye, and so passed by the hoost, and came thozow the valley vnto the porte of the ctye. And Judith cryed a farre of vnto the watchmen vpon the walles: Ope the gates (sayde she) for God is with vs, which hath shewed his power in Israel. And when they heard her voyce, they called the elders of the ctye together. And they came al to mete her, lytle and greate, yonge & olde, for they thought not that she shulde haue come so soone. So they lyghted candels, and gathered aboute her euerychone: but she wente vp in to an hye place, and caused sylence to be proclaimed.

When euery man now helde hys tonge, Judith sayde: O prayse the Lord our God, for he hath not despyed, nor forsaken them, that put they? trust in hym, & in me his handmaide he hath perfourmed his mercy, which he promysed vnto the house of Israel: yee in my hand thys same nyght hath he slayne his enemy of hys people.

And with that she toke forth the head of Holofernes out of the wallet, and shewed it them, sayinge: Beholde the heade of Holofernes the captayne of the Assyrians, & this is the canapp, wherein he laye in his dronkenes: where the Lord oure God hath slayne him by the hande of a woman.

But as truly as the Lord liueth, his Angell hath kepte me, goynge thither, remaynyng there, & comynge hyther agayne from thence. And the Lord hath not suffred me to be handmayde to be despyed, but without any fylthines of synne hath he brought me agayne vnto you: & that is greate victorie, so I am escaped, and ye deliuered. O geue thanks vnto hym euerychone, for he his gracio and hys mercy endureth for euer.

So they praysed the Lord altogether, & gaue thākes vnto hi. And to her they sayd: The Lord hath blessed the in hys power, for thozow the he hath brought our enemies to naught. And Dias the cheferuler of the people of Israel, sayd vnto her: Blessed art thou of the Lord the hye God, aboue all women vpon earth.

Blessed be the Lord, the maker of heauen & earth, which hath gyded a ryght to woude and to sympte of the head of a Captayne of oure enemies. For this daye he hath made thy name so honorable, & thy prayse shall neuer come oute of the mouth of men, which shall all waye remembre the power of the Lord, seige: thou hast not spared thynne a wne self, but put the in icopardy, considering the anguyth and trouble of thy people, and so hast helped they? fall before God our Lord. And all the people sayde: Amen, Amen.

Achior also was called, & he came. Then sayde Judith vnto him: The God of Israel vnto who I gauest witness, & he wolde be aūged of his enemies, eue he hath thys nyght thozow my hād smytten off the head of all the vnfaythfull. And that I mayest se it sois, beholde this is the head of Holofernes, which in his presumptuous pryde despyed the God of the people of Israel, & threatened the destruction, saying: whē the people of Israel is taken, I shall cause also to be stycke with the swerde. When Achior sawe Holofernes head, he fell downe vpon his face to the ground for very anguyth & feare, so he sowned w all. But after he was come agayne to himself, he fell downe before her, & prayled her saying: Blessed art thou of thy God in all the tabernacles of Jacob: for al the people that heare of thy name, shall prayse the God of Israel because of the.

The. xiiii. Chapter.

The counsell of Judith. Achior being an Heathen mā, turneth to God. The Assyrians are afrayed of the Jewes.

Judith sayd vnto all the people: Brethren, heare me. Styck vp thys heade vpon our walles, and when I shal cryse, take euery man hys waye, and fall out vpolently: not as though ye wolde go besyde them, but to renne vpon them, with violence. When the spyes in the tentesle this, they shall of necessity be compelled to fle backward, & to rāple vp they? captayne to the battayll. So whē their captaynes come into Holofernes pauphyon, Wdd iii and

and fynde the deed body wrapped i þ bloud, fearfulness shall fall vpon them: and whē ye perceauē that they flye, folowe thē without all care, for God shall deliuer thē vnto you to be destroyed.

Then Achioz seynge the power of God which he had shewed vnto the people of Israel, fell off from his heathenish belefe, and put his trust in God, and let hym selfe be circumcised: and so was he nombred among þ people of Israel, he and al his posterite vnto thys daye.

Now as soone as it was daye, they sticke vpon Holofernes head vpon the walles, and every man toke hys weapon, & so they wente out with an horrible cry. Whē the spyes sawe that, they ranne vnto Holofernes tent. And they that were within the tente, came before hys chamber, and made a greate rushig to wake hym vp, because they thought with the noyse to haue rased him. For there durst not one of the Assyrians knocke, go in or open.

But when the captaynes and bypnces and all the chefe in the kynge of the Assyrians hoost came together, they layde vnto the Chamberlaynes. So poure waye in, ad wake him vp, for the myse are crepte out of theyr holes, and darre prouoke vs vnto battayll.

Then wente Agao into hys chamber, stode before the bed, and clapped with hys handes, for he thought he had bene slepyng with Judith.

But whē he had hearkened perfectly with hys eares, and coulde perceauē no steryng, he wente nyr to the bed, and lyft it vp, and thē sawe he þ deed body of Holofernes lyge there with oute a head, wel-tred in his bloud vpon the earthe. Then cryed he wth loude voyce, and with wepyng rent hys clothes, and wente into Judiths tent, and found her not: And so he leapte out vnto the people & sayd: oue woman of þ Jewes, hath brought all Nabuchodonosors people to shame. For lo, Holofernes lyeth vpon the ground and hath no head.

When þ chefe of the Assyrians hoost herd that, they rente theyr clothes, and there fell an intolcrable feare and tremblng vpon them, so þ theyr myndes were soze afrayed, And there was an excedyng greate crye in the whole hoost.

The. xv. Chapter.

The sight of the Assyrians. The pursute of Israel after them. Israel becometh reche, by the spynges of the Assyrians. Judith is praised of Joachim and of the people.

Now when all þ hoost herde þ Holofernes was headed, their mynde & counsell fell from them: and soch a feare came vpo them, that they undertoke to defende them selues by flyng a waye: one spake not to another, but hanged downe theyr heades, left all behynd them, and made haste to escape from the Hebrewes: for they herde, that they were hastig to come after with theyr weapons, and so they fled by the wayes of the feldest, & thorow all the fote pathes of the dales.

And when the chyldren of Israel sawe that they fled, they folowed vpon them and wente downe with trompettes, blowyng and makynge a greate crye after them. As for the Assyrians, they had no ordre, & kept not the selues together, but fled theyr waye. Neuertheles, the chyldren of Israel fell vpo them with one company and ordre, and discomforted as many as they myght gett. And Olias sent messagers vnto all the cyties and countrees of Israel.

So all the regyons and euery cytye sent out theyr best men after them in harnesse, & smote them with the swerde, tyll they came to þ vttemost parte of theyr borders. And the other that were in Bethulia came into the tentes of the Assyrians, and toke all þ they which were fled had left behynd them, and so they founde greate good. And they that came agayne to Bethulia from þ battayll, toke with them soch thinges as had bene theyrs: there was no nombre of the castell, and of all costly Jewels, so that from the lowest vnto the hiest, they were al made ryche of the spoyles of them. And Joachim the hys preste at Jerusalem, came to Bethulia with all the elders, that they myght se Judith.

Now when she came out vnto them, they beganne all to prayse her with one voyce, sayinge: thou worshyppe of the cytye of Jerusalem, thou ioye of Israel, thou honoure of oure people, thou hast done manly, & thy herte is confortyd, because thou hast loued clenlynes and chastyte, ad hast knowne no man but thyne awne husbād: therfore hath the hande of the Lorde confortyd the, & blessed shalt þ be for ever. And all people sayde: so be it, so be it.

In thys ty dayes coulde the people of Israel scarce gather vp the spoyles of þ Assyrians. But all that beloged vnto Holofernes, and had bene hys, specially (whether it were of gold, of syluer, precyous stones, clothynge, and all ornaments) they gaue it vnto Judith. And al the people reioyced, both women, maydens, and yonge people, with pypes and herpes.

The. xvi. Chapter.

The songe of Judith for the victorie. After the victorie obtained, the people cometh to Jerusalem, to worshyp and prayse God.

Then

Then longe Judith thys songe vnto þ Lorde. Begynne vnto the Lorde vpo the tabyettes, syng vnto the Lorde vpon the cymbales. O syng vnto hym a new songe of thankesgeyng, be ioyfull & call vpon hys name. It is the Lorde that destroyeth warres, euen the Lorde is hys name. Which hath pitched hys tentes i the myddest of hys people, that he myght deliuer vs from the hand of all oure enemyes. Alur came out of the mountaynes of the North in the multitude of hys strenght. His people stopped the water brokes, and theyr horses couered the valleyes. He purposed to haue bent vp my lande, and to slaye my yonge men with the swerde.

He wolde haue carped a waye my chyldre and virgyns into captiuite, but þ almyghty lorde hyndred hym, and deliuered hym into the hādes of a woman, which brought hym to confusyon. For theyr myghtie was not destroyed of the yonge men. It was not the sonne of Titan that slew hym, nether haue the greate gyauntes set them selues agaynst hi: but Judith þ daughter of Merari with her sayre betwyte hath discōfited hym, and brought hym to naught. For she layed a waye her wyddowes garment, and put on the apparel of gladnesse to the reioyng of the chyldre of Israel. She anoynted her face, and bounde vp her heare in an hooue, to begyle hi. Her sylppers rauyned his eyes, her bewtie captiuated his mynde, with the swerde smote she of hys neck. The Persians were astonied at her stedfastnes and the Medes at her boldnes. Then howled the armyes of the Assyrians, when my symple appeared, dyde of thys. The sones of the daughters haue pearled thē thoroowe and slayne them as fugytyue chyldren: they perished in the battayll, for the very feare of the Lorde my God. Let vs syng a songe of thankesgeyng vnto the Lorde, a new songe of prayse wyll we syng vnto oure God.

Lorde, Lorde, thou arte a great God, myghty in power, whom no man may ouercome. All thy creatures shulde serue the: for thou spakest but the worde, and they were made: thou sentest thy spyte, and they were created, and no man can withstande thy voyce. The mountaynes shall moue from the foundations with the waters, the stonye rockes shall melt before the lyke ware. But they þ feare the: shall be greate with the i all thynge. Mo vnto þ people that ryle vp agayst my generacyon, for the Almyghty Lorde will auenge hym selfe of them, and in the daye of iudgement wyll he vset them. For he shall geue fyre and wormes into theyr flesh, that they may burne and sele it for euermore.

After thys it happened, that after the victorie, all the people came to Jerusalem, to geue prayse and thankes vnto the Lorde. And when they were purposed, they offred all theyr bent sacryfices and theyr promysed offrynges. And Judith offred all Holofernes weapons, and all þ Jewels, that the people had geuen her, and the canopy that she toke from his bed, and hanged them vp vnto the Lorde. The people was ioyfull, as the vse is: and this ioye by reason of the victory with Judith, endured thre monethes.

So after these dayes, euery man wente home agayne, and Judith was i greate reputacyon at Bethulya, and ryght honoably taken in all the lād of Israel. Vnto her vertue also was chastyte ioynd, so tyat after her husbāde Manasses dyed, she neuer knewe man all the dayes of her lyfe. Vpon the hys solempne dayes she wente out with greate worshyppe. She dwelt in her husbādes house an hundred and fyue yere, & left her handmayden fre, and dyed, and was buryed belyde her husbāde in Bethulya. And all the people mourned for her seuen dayes. So longe as she lyued there was none that troubled Israel, and many yeres also after her death.

The daye wherein this victory was gotten, was solemply holden, and reckened of þ Jewes in the nombre of the holy dayes, and it is yet greatly holden of the Jewes euersence, vnto thys daye.

The. xi. Chapter, after the Latyn.

The dreame of Mardocheus.

Mardocheus p sonne of Jair, the sonne of Seime, p sonne of Cisei of the trybe of Benjamin, a Jewe: which had his dwelling in the ctyte of Susis, a man of greate reputacyon, and excellent amōge al them that were in the kynges court. (Ne-uertheles, he was one of the prisoners, who Nabuchodonosor p kyng of Babylon had caried a waye from Ierusalem vnto Babylon with Iechonias the kyng of Iuda.) In the seconde yere of the raygne of great Artaxerxes in the fyrst daye of the moneth Nisan, had this Mardocheus such a dreame: he thought he herde a greate tempest, horrible thoderclappes, earthquakes & greate vpyoure in the lād, and that he sawe two greate dragons, ready to fyght one agaynst another.
They crye was greate. At the which roa-ryng and crye al heathen were vp, to fyght agaynst the ryghteous people. And p same daye was full of darknes ad very vnclaere, full of trouble and angush, pec a greate fearfulnes was there in all the lande. The ryghteous were amased, for they feared the plage and euil that was deuyled ouer them, and were at a poynte w them selues to dye.
So they cryed vnto God: and whyle they were cryenge, p lytle well grewe into a great ryuer and into many waters. And with p it was daye, and the sunne rose vp agayne.
And the lowly were exalted, and deuoured the gloriously and proude.

Now when Mardocheus had sene thys dreame, he awoke, & mused stedfastly in his herte, what God wolde do: ad so he desyred to knowe all the matter, & his mynde was therupon vntyll the nyght.

The. xii. Chapter.

Mardocheus biterech the treason deuyled agaynst the kyng, and is therefore rewarded of hym.

At the same tyme dwelt Mardocheus with Bagatha and Tares i the ky-nges court the kynges Chamberlay-nes and porters of the palace. But when he hearde they deuyce, & had dyligently considered they ymagynacions, he perceiued that they wente aboute, to laye they cruell handes vpon the kyng Artaxerxes and so he certifyed the kyng therof. Then caused the kyng to examen the two gelded wyth tormentes. And when they had graunted it, they were put to death.

This the king caused to be put in p Cranycles for an euerlastyng remembraunce, & Mardocheus wrote vp p same matter. So the kyng commaunded that Mardocheus shulde remayne in the court, and for thys faythfulnesse of his, he gaue him a rewarde.
But Aman p sonne of Amadathu the Aga-gite, which was holden in greate honoure & reputacion in the kynges court vnder toke to hurte Mardocheus and hys people, because of the two Chamberlaynes that were put to death.

The. xiii. Chapter.

The coppe of the letters of Artaxerxes agaynst the Jewes. The prayer of Mardocheus.

The great big Artaxerxes which raigneth fro India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred and seuē and twenty lādes, sendeth his frēdly salutation vnto all p Princes and deuytes of the countrees, which be sub-iecte vnto his domynion. Whē I was made lord ouer many people, and had subdued the whole earth vnto my domynion, my mynde was not with crueltie and wronge to exalte my selfe by p reason of my power: but purposed with equyte alwaye and gentlynnes, to gouerne those that be vnder my iurisdiccyn, and wholy to set them i a peaceable lyfe, and therby to bypunge my kyngdome vnto tranquillite, that mē myght safely go thorow on euery syde, and to renue peace agayne, which all men desyre. Now whē I asked my counsellors how these thyn-ges myght be brought to a good ende, there was one by vs, excellent in wysdome, whose good will, tructh, & faythfulnes hath oft bene shewed and proued (which was also p pyncipall and next vnto the kyng). Amā by name: which certifyed vs, how that i all lādes there was scatred abrode a rebellyon folke, that made statutes & lawes agaynst the proclaimed commaundementes of kynges: ad how that for thys cause it were not to be suffred, that such rule shulde contynue by you and not to be put downe. Seynge: now we perceaue the same, that this people alone are contrary vnto enery man, vsinge straunge and other maner of lawes, & withstande oure statutes and doynges, ad go a-boute to stablish shrewed matters, that our kingdome shuld neuer come to good estate, ded, that all they p are appoynted in wytyng and shewed vnto you by Amā (which thys shalbe done the. xiii. daye of p moneth (called Adar) of this yere, that they which of olde (and now also) haue euer bene rebellious, maye in one daye wyth vyolence be thrust downe into the hel, to p intēt that after this maner, oure empire maye haue peace and tranquillite.

But Mardocheus thought vpon all the woykes and noble actes of the Lorde, and made his prayer vnto him, saying: O Lord Lorde, thou valeant and almyghtie kyng (for all thynges are i thy power,) and yf thou wilt helpe & deliuer Israel, there is no man that can withstande ner lett p: for thou hast made heauen and earth, and what wonderous thynges so euer is vnder the heauē: thou art Lord of all thynges, and there is no man that can resist thy maicstie (O Lord) Thou knowest all thynges, thou wotest Lorde, p it was nether of malice, ner presumptiō, ner for eny desyre of glory, & I wolde not bowe downe my selfe ner worshyp poud proude presumptuous Amā (for I wolde haue bene content, & that with good will, yf it myght haue done Israel eny good, to haue kyte cue his fotesteppes) but that I dyd it, because I wolde not lett the honoure of a man in the steade of the glorye of God, and because I wolde worshyp none but onely p my Lorde.
And thys haue I done in no pryde ner pre-sumpcyon.

And therefore O Lorde thou God & kyng, haue mercy vpo thy people for they ymagin how they maye bypunge vs to naught, yee they mynde and desire is to destroye and to ouerthrowe thy people, that hath euer bene thyne inheritaunce of olde. O despyse not thy poynt, which thou hast deliuered & brought oute of Egypte for thyne awne selfe. Heare my prayer, and be mercypfull vnto thy people, whom p hast cholen for an heretage vnto thy selfe. Turne oure complaynte and so-rowe into ioye, p we maye lyeue O Lord, and prayse thy name. O Lord, suffre not p mou-thes of the that prayse the, to be destroyed.
All the people of Israel in lyke maner cryed as earnestly as they coude vnto the Lorde, for they death and destruccyn stode before they eyes.

The. xiiii. Chapter.

The prayer of Esther for the deliuerance of her and her people.

Elene Esther also beyng in the battayll of death, resorted vnto the Lorde, layed a waye her gloriously apparell, and put on the garmentes that serued for syghthige and mournyng. In the steade of precious oymntment, she scatred asches and donge vpo her head: and as for her body, she dumbled it wyth fastyng, and brought it very lowe. All p places where she was won-te to haue ioye afore, those fylled she wyth p heare, & the plucte of her selfe. She prayed also vnto the Lorde God of Israel wyth these wordes.

O my Lorde, thou onely art oure kyng, helpe me desolate woman, whych haue no helper but the, for my misery and destruccyn is harde at my hāde. Fro my yowth vp I haue herde oute of p kynred of my father, that thou tokest Israel from amonge all people (& so haue oure fathers of their fore elders) p they shulde be thy perpetuall inheritaunce, and loke what thou didest promise the, thou hast made it good vnto them.

Now Lorde, we haue synned before the,
therfore hast thou geuen vs into the handes of oure enemyes, because we worshypped they goddes. Lorde, thou art ryghteous.
Neuertheles it satisfieth them not, that we are in bytter and heuy captiuite and oppressed amonge them, but thou hast layed they handes vpon the handes of they goddes: so that they begynne to take a waye. p thyng that thou with thy mouth hast ordeyned and appoynted, to destroye thyne inheritaunce, to shut and to stoppe p mouthes of the that prayse the, to quench the glory & worshyp of thy house and thine aulter, and to open p mouthes of the heathen, p they may prayse the power and vertue of the goddes, and to magnific the fleshy kynges for euer.

O Lord, geue not thy scepter vnto them that be nothing, lest they laugh vs to scoone in oure misery & fall: but turne they deue vpo them selues, and punyssh him, that hath begone the same ouer vs, and sett him to an example. Thyncke vpon vs O Lorde, and shew thy selfe vnto vs in the tyme of oure distres and of oure trouble. Strenght me O thou kyng of Goddes, thou Lord of all power, geue me an eloquent & pleasant speech in my mouth before the Lyeon. Turne hys hert into p hate of oure enemye, to destroye him, and all such as consent vnto hym. But deliuer vs with thy hande, and helpe me thy hand mayde, which haue no defence ner helper but onely the. Lorde, thou knowest all thynges, p wotest that I loue not the glory and worshyp of the vnyghteous, and that I hate and abhorre the bed of the vncircumcysed and of all heathen.

Thou knowest my necessity, that I hate the token of my preeminence and worshipp, which I beare vpon my head, what time as I must shew my selfe and be sene, and that I abhorre it as an vncleane cloth, and that I weare it not when I am quyte and alone by my selfe. Thou knowest also that I thy hande mayden haue not eaten at Amā's table, and that I haue had no pleasure nor de-lyte

lyte in the kynges feaste, that I haue not drinke the wyne of the drinckoffringes, and that I thy hāde mayden haue no ioye sence the dape that I was brought byther, vnto this dape, but onely in the Lord. O thou God of Abraham, O mighty God aboue al, heare the voyce of them, & haue none other hope, and deliuer vs out of the hande of the wicked, and deliuer me out of my feare.

The xv. Chapter.

Mardocheus moueth Hester, to go into the kynges, and make intercession for her people, and the perses: meth hys request.

Mardocheus also had Hester go in vnto the kyng, and praye for hyr people and for hyr countre. Remembre (sayeth he) p dapes of thy lowe estate, how thou wast noryshed vnder my hande: For Aman which is next vnto the kyng, hath geuen sentence of death agaynst vs. Call thou therfore vpon the Lorde, and speake for vs vnto the kyng, and deliuer vs from death. And vpon p thyrde dape it happened, that Hester layed a waye the mourninge garmentes, and put on her gloriuous apparell, & deckte her selfe goodly (after p she had called vpon God, which is p beholder and Sanyoure of all thynges) toke two maydes with her: vpo the one she leane her selfe, as one p was tender: the other folowed her, and bare the trayne of her vesture. The bypne of her bewtie made her face rose colour. The similitude of her face was chearful and amiable, but her herte was sorowfull for greate feare. She wete in thozow all the dozes, and stode before the kyng. The kyng satt vpon the trone of hys kyngdome, and was clothed i his goodly arape, all of golde and set with precious stones, & he was very terrible. He lyft vphys face, that shone in p clearnes, and loket grmly vpo her. Then fell the Quene downe, was pale and faynt, leane her selfe vpo the heade of the mayde that wente with her.

Neuertheles, God turned p kynges mynde that he was gentle, & he leaped out of hys seate for feare, & gat her in his armes, and held her vpo tyll she came to her selfe agayne. He gaue her lounge wordes also, and sayd vnto her: Hester, what is the matter? I am thy brother, be of good cheare thou shalt not dye: for oure commaundement toucheth the comos and not p. Come nye. And with p he helde vpo his golden rodd, and layde it vpon her neck, and embraced her frendly, and sayd: talke with me. The sayd she: I saue p (O Lord) as an Angell of God, & my hert was troubled for feare of thy maiesty and clearnesse: For excellent and wonderfull art thou (O Lord) and thy face is full of ampte. But as she was thus speakyng vnto him, she fell downe agayne for fayntnes: for the which cause the kyng was afrayed, and all his seruantes comforted her.

The xvi. Chapter.

The coppe of the letters of Artaxerxes, wherby he reuoketh those which he fyrst sent forth.

The greate kyng Artaxerxes, which raigned fro India vnto Ethiopia ouer an hundreth & xxvii. landes, sendeth vnto the Bynces and rulers of the same landes, soch as loue him, hys frendly salutation. There be many p for the sondre frendshippes and benefites which are diuersly done vnto the for theyr worthyp, be euer the moze proude and hys mynded, and vnder take not onely to hurte our subiectes (for plentous benefites maye they not suffre, and begynne to ymagin some thing agaynst those that do them good, & take not onely all vnthankfulnes a waye from men) but in pryde and presumptio (as they that be vnmynedfull and vnthankfull for the good dedes) they go about to escape the iudgement of God, that seyth all thynges, which (iudgement) hateth & punyssheth all wyckednes. It happeneth oft also, that they which be set in offyce by p hys power, and vnto whom the busyness and causes of the subiectes are committed to be handled, waxe proude, and despyle them selues wyth sheddyng of innocent bloude, which byngeth them to intollerable hurte. Which also with false & disceatfull wordes and with lyeng tales, disceau and betraie the innocent goodnes of Bynces.

Now is it profytable and good, that we take hede, make search therat ter, and consider, not onely what hath happened vnto vs of olde: but the shamefull vnhonest, & norysome thynges, that the debites haue now taken in hande before oure eyes, and therby to beware in tyme to come, & we maye make the kyngdome quyte and peaceable for all men, and that we myght some tyme drawe it to a chaunge: and as for the thyng that now is present before oure eyes, to wythstande it, and to put it downe, after the moost frendly maner.

What tyme now as Aman the sonne of Amadathu p Macedonian (a straunger verely of the Persians bloude, and farre from oure goodnes) was come in amonge vs as an aleaunt, and had optayned the frendship that we beare towarde all people, so that he was called oure father, and had in hys honoure of euery man, as the next and principall vnto the kyng, he coude not for benete hym selfe from hys pryde, hath vnder taken not onely to robbe vs of the kyngdome, but of oure lyfe.

With many folde disceate also hath he desired to destroye Mardocheus oure helper & preferer,

The booke of wysdome,

The fyrst Chapter.

How we ought to searche and enquire after God, who be those that fynde hym. Of the holy goost, we ought to fyre from backbitynge & murmure, &c.

Sett poure affeccyō vpo rygh- teousnesse, pe that be iudges of the earth. Haue a good opinion of the Lorde, and seke hym in p synglenesse of herte. For he wil be founde of them p tempte him not, & appeareth vnto soch as put their trust in him. As for frowarde thoughtes, they separate from God, but vertu (p it be allowed) refourmeth the vnwyse. And why? wysdome shall not entre into afrowarde soule, ner dwell in the body that is subdued vnto synne. For p holy goost abhorreth fawnded nortoure, & withdra weth hym selfe from the thoughtes that are without vnderstandyng: and where wyckednes hath the vpper hāde, he flyeth from thence. For the sprete of wysdome is lounge, getle and gracypous, & wyll haue no pleasure in hym that speaketh euill wyth hys lyppes. For God is a wytnesse of hys repnes, a true searcher out of hys herte, and an hearer of hys toge. For the sprete of p Lorde fylleth the rounde compasse of the worlde: & the same that vpholdeth all thynges, hath knowledge also of the voyce.

Therfore, he that speaketh vnryghteous thynges, can not be hydd, nether maye he escape the iudgement of reproofe. And why? iniquyfiction shall be made for the thoughtes of the vngodly, and the reporte of hys wordes shall come vnto God, so that his wickednes shall be punished. For p care of gelousy heareth all thynges, and the noyse of the grudginges shall not be hydd. Therfore, beware of murmure, which is nothyng worth, and refrayne poure tonge from sleaude. For there is no worde so darch and secrete, p it shall goo for naught: and the mouth that speaketh lyes, slayeth the soule.

Deske not pour awne death in the erroure of your lyfe, destroye not your selues thorow the workes of your awne hādes. For God hath not made death, nether hath he pleasure in the destruccyon of the lounge. For he created all thynges, that they myght haue their beyng: pee all the people of the earth hath he made p they shuld haue health that there shulde be no destruccyon in them, and that the kyngdome of hell shulde not be vpo earth (for righteousnesse is euylastyng and immortall, but vnryghteousnesse byngeth death.) Neuertheles the vngodly call her preferer, whych hath done vs good in all thynges: and innocēt Hester the lyke partaker of oure kyngdome, with all her people. For his mynde was (when he had taken the oute of the waye, and robbed vs of them) by this meanes to translate p kyngdome of the Persians vnto the of Macedonia. But we fynde, that the Jewes (which were accused of the wicked, that they might be destroyed) are no euell doers, but vse reasonable and right lawes: and that they be the chylde of the most hye lounge God, by whom the kyngdome of vs & oure progenitours hath bene well ordred hitherto. Wherfore, as for the letters and comaundementes, that were put forth by Aman the sonne of Amadathu, pe shall do well, yf pe holde them of none effect: for he that lett them vp and inuenced the, hāgeth at Sulis before the porte, with all his kynred, & God (which hath all thynges in his power) hath rewarded hym after hys deseryng.

And vpo thys pe shall publish and set vpo the cōpy of this letter in all places, that the Jewes maye feely and without hinderaunce holde them selues after the p awne statutes, and that they maye be helped, and that vpon the xiii. dape of the xii. moneth. Adar, they maye be auenged of them, which in the tyme of theyr anguysh and trouble, wolde haue oppressed them. For the God that gouerneth all thynges, hath turned to ioye the dape, where in the chosen people shulde haue perished.

Moreouer, amonge the hye solēpne dapes yf pe haue, pe shall holde this dape also with all gladnesse: that now and in tyme to come thys dape maye be a remembrance to good, for all soch as loue p prosperite of the Persians: but a remembrance of destruccyō to those that be sedycious vnto vs.

All cityes & landes that do not this, shall horribly perishe and be destroyed wyth the swerde and fyre, and shall not onely be nomore inhabited of men, but be abhorred also of the wyld beasts and foules.

The ende of the reast of the boke of Esther, her vnto them both with wordes & workes: and whyle they thynke to haue a frende of her, they come to naught: for the vngodly that are confederate with her and take her parte, are worthy of death.

The.ii. Chapter.

The pynnyng of the wicked, and the councell agaynst the fapthfull.

And the vngodly talke and pynnyng thus amonge them selues (but not ryght:) The tyme of oure lyfe is but shott and teduous: and when a man is once gone, he hath no more ioye ne pleasure, nether knowe we any mā that turneth agayne from death: for we are borne of naught, and we shall be hereafter as though we had neuer bene. For oure byeth is as a smoke in oure noses, and the wordes as a sparck to moue oure herte. As for oure body, it shall be very asches that are quenched, and oure soule shall vanish as the soft ayre. Oure lyfe shall passe awaye as the trace of a cloude, and come to naught as the myst that is drine awaye with the beames of the Sonne, and put downe with the heate therof. Oure name also shall be forgotten by lytle & lytle, and no man shall haue oure workes in remembraunce.

For oure tyme is a very shadow & passeth awaye, & after oure ende there is no returning, for it is fast sealed, so that no man cometh agayne. Come on therfore, let vs enioye the pleasures that ther are, and lett vs soone vse the creature lyke as in yowth. Let vs fyll oure selues with good wyne & opyntment, and let there be no floure of the tyme go by vs. Let vs crowne oure selues with roses afore they be wythered. Let there be no fayre medowe, but oure lust go thorow it. Lett euery one of you be partaker of oure voluptuousnes. Let vs leaue some tokē of our pleasure in euery place, for that is oure porcion, els get we nothyng. Lett vs oppresse the pooze ryghteous, let vs not spare the wyrdow ner olde mā: let vs not regarde the heaues that are gray for age. Let vs laue of vnyghteousnesse be our auctorite, for þing that is feble is nothing worth. Therfore let vs defraude the ryghteous, and why? he is not for oure profyt, pee he is cleane contrary to oure doynges. He checketh vs for offending agaynst þ law, and schaundereth vs as trasgressours of all nurtour. He maketh his boast to haue the knowledge of God, pee he calleth him self Goddes sonne. He is the bewayer of our thoughtes: He greueth vs also to loke vpon him, for his life is not like other mens, his wayes are of another fashyon. He counteth vs but vayne personnes, he withdraweth hym selfe from oure wayes as fro fylthynes: he commedeth greatly the latter ende of the lust, and maketh his boast that God is his father. Let vs se then yf his wordes be true, lett vs proue what shall come vpon hym: so shall we knowe what ende he shall haue. For yf he be þ true sonne of God he wyll receaue hym, and deliuer hym from the handes of his enemyes. Let vs examen hym with despytfull rebuke and tormentyng, that we maye knowe his dignite, ad proue his pacience. Lett vs condemne hym with the most shamefull death: for lyke as he hath spoken, so shall he be rewarded.

Such thynges do the vngodly pynnyng, and go astraye, for their awne wyckednes hath blynded them. As for the mysteries of God, they vnderstande the not: they nether hope for the rewarde of ryghteousnesse, ner regarde þ worship that holy soules shall haue. For God created mā to be vnderstode, pee after þ ymage of his awne lykenesse made he hi. Neuerthelesse thorow enuye of the deuill came death in to the worlde: and they that holde of his lyde, do as he doth.

The.iii. Chapter.

The conseruacion and assurance of þ ryghteous. The rewarde of the fapthfull.

At the soules of the ryghteous are in the hande of God, and the payne of death shall not touch the. In the syght of þ vntowse they appeared to dye, and they ende is taken for very destruction. The waye of the righteous is indaged to be vter destruction, but they are in rest. And though they suffre payne before men, yet is they hope full of immortalte. They are punished but in fewe thynges, neuerthelesse in many thynges that they be well rewarded. For God proueth them, and synedeth them mete for him selfe: pee as þ golde in the forname doth he trye them, and receaueth the as a bzent offeringe, and when the tyme cometh, they shall be looked vpon.

The ryghteous shall wyne as þ sparkes that renne thorow the red bushe. They shall iudge the nacyns, and haue dominion ouer the people, and they Lord shall raygne for cuer. They that put they trust in him, shall vnderstande the trueth, and soch as be fapthfull, will agree vnto him in loue: for his choicē shall haue gyftes and peace. But the vngodly shall be punished accordyng to they awne pynnyngs, for they haue despyled the ryghteous, and forsaken the Lorde.

Who so despyseth wyldome & nurtour, he is vnhappye, and as for the hope of soche, it is but vayne, they labours vnfrutefull, & they workes vnprofitable. They wyues are vndiscrete, and they chyldren most vngodly. They creature is cursed: Blessed is rather the baren and vnderfyled, which hath not knowne the synfull bedd: she shall haue frute frute in the rewarde of the holy soules. And blessed is the gelbed, which with his handes hath wrought no vnryghteousnes, ner pynnyng wicked thynges agaynst God. For vnto him shall be geue þ speciall gift of fapth, and the most acceptable porcion in the temple of God. For glorious is þ frute of good laboure, and the rote of wyldome shall neuer fade awaye. As for the chyldren of aduouterers, they shall come to an ende, & the sede of an vnryghteous bedd shall be roted out. And though they lyue longe, yet shall they be nothing regarded, and their last age shall be without honoure. Yf they dye hastily they haue no hope, nether shall they be spokē to in the daye of knowledge. For horrible is the death and ende of the vnryghteous.

The.iiii. Chapter.

Of the chaste generacion of the fapthfull, and of they felicity. Of the death of þ ryghteous, and of the conseruacion of the vntapthfull.

How fapth is a chaste generacion with vertue: The memorie of the-ros is immortal, for it is knowne with God and with men. When it is present, me take example there at: and yf it goo awaye, yet they despye it. It is all waye crowned and holden in honour, and wynteth the rewarde of the vnderfyled batayll. But þ multitude of vngodly chyldren is vnprofitable, & the thynges that are planted with whordome, shall take no depe rote, ner lape any fast foundation. Though they be grene in þ braunches, for a tyme, yet shall they be shaken with þ wynde: for they stande not fast, and thorow þ vehemencie of the wynde they shall be roted out. For þ vnperfected braunches shall be broken, they frute shall be vnprofitable and sowre to eate, pee mete for nothyng. And why? all þ chyldren that are borne of the wicked, must beare record of þ wyckednesse agaynst their fathers & mothers, when they be asked. But though the ryghteous be ouertaken with death, yet shall he be in rest.

Age is an honorable thyng: neuertheles it standeth not onely in the length of tyme, ner in the multitude of yeares: but a mans wyldome is the graye heare, and an vnderfyled lyfe is the olde age. He pleased God, & was beloued of him: so that where as he lyued amonge synners, he translated him. Pee sodenly was he taken awaye, to the intent that wyckednesse shulde not alter his vnderstandyng, & that ypocrysie shulde not begyle his soule. For the craftye bewitchyng of lyes make good thynges darck, the vntedfastnesse also and wyckednes of voluptuous despye turne asyde the vnderstanding of the symple. Though he was soone deed, yet fulfilled he moche tyme: For his soule pleased God: therfore hastened he to take hym awaye from amonge the wycked. This the people se, and vnderstande it not, they lape not by soche thynges in they hertes, how that the lounge fauoure and mercie of God is vpon his sainctes, and that he hath respect vnto his chosen.

Thus the ryghteous that is deed cometh: neth the vngodly which are lyupnge: and þ yowth that is soone brought to an ende, the longe lyfe of the vnryghteous. For they se þ ende of the wyse, but they vnderstande not what God hath deuyed for him, and wherfore the Lord hath taken hym awaye. And why? they se him and despyse him, therfore shall God also laugh the to scorne: So that they the selues shall dye here after (but without honour) yee in shame among the deed for cuer more. For without any voyce shall he burst those that be puffed vp, & remoue the from the foundacyons, so that they shall be layed waste vnto þ pest. They shall mourne, and they memozyall shall perpye. So they beynge afrayed shall remembre they synnes, and they awne wyckednesse shall be wyre them.

The.v. Chapter.

The constancy of the ryghteous before they perit: cures. The hope of the vntapthfull is vnderstandable and bapne. The blessednes of the fapthfull and godly.

When shall þ ryghteous stāde in great stedfastnesse agaynst soche as haue dealt extremely wyth them, and taken awaye they labours: When they se it, they shall be vexed wyth horryble fear, and shall wonder at the hastynesse of þ sodayne health: growinge for very distresse of mynde and shall sape within them selues, haunyng inwarde sorowe, and mournyng for very anguysh of mynde.

These are they, whom we somtyme had in derision, & icked vpon. We foolles thought they lyfe very madnesse, and they ende to be with out honour. But lo, how they are counted among þ chyldre of God, & they porcion is amonge the sayntes. Therfore we haue erred fro the waye of trueth, the lyght of ryghteousnesse hath not wynded vnto vs, and the sonne of vnderstanding rose not vpon vs. We haue wried our selues in the waye of wyckednesse and destruction. Tedious wayes haue we gone: but as for the waye of the Lorde we haue not knowne it.

What good hath oure pyde done vnto vs? What profyt hath the pompe of ryches brought vs? All those thynges are passed awaye lyke a shadow, and as a messenger rennyng before: as a wypp that passeth ouer the waues of the water, which when it is gone by, the trace therof cannot be foude nether the path of it in the floudes. As a byde.

bynde that sleeth thowow in the ayre, and no man can se eny token where she is slouen, but onely beareth the noyse of her wynges, bratinge the lyght wynde, partinge p ayre, thowow the vehemence of her goynge, and flyeth on bakynge her wynges, where as after warde no token of her waye can be founde. As lyke as when an arrowe is shot at a mark, it parteth p ayre, which immediatly cometh together agayne, so that a mā can not know where it wete thowow. Eue so we in lyke maner as soone as we were bozne, be ganne immediatly to drawe to oure ende, & haue shewed no token of vertue, but are consumed in oure awne wyckednesse.

C Soch wordes shall they that haue synned speake in the hell: for the hope of p vngodly is lyke a drie thysell floure (or dust) that is blowen awaye with the winde: lyke a thynne scomme that is scatred abrode with the storme: lyke as the smoke which is disperfed here and there w the winde, & as the rement braunce of a straunger p taricth for a dape, and the departeth. But the ryghteous shall lyue for euermore: their reward also is with the Lord: and their remembraunce with the best. Therefore, that they receaue a glorio⁹ kyngdome, and a bewtyfull crowne of the Lordes hande: for w hys ryght hande shall he couer the, and with hys awne holy arme shall he defende the. His gelouly also shall take awaye the harness, & he shall weapen the creature to be auēged of p enemies. He shall put on ryghteousnes for a breast plate, and take sure iudgement in steade of an helme. The inuincible shilde of equite shall he take, his cruell wrath shall he sharpen for a speare and the whole compase of the worlde shall fyght wth hym agaynst the vntowse.

D Then shall the thonder boltes go out of the lightnings, and come out of the rayne bowe of the cloudes to the place apoynted: out of p hearde stony indignacion there shall fall thyck hayles, and the water of the see shall be wroth agaynst them, and the floudes shall renne roughly together. Pee a mighty wynde shall stande by agaynst them, and a storme shall scatter them abrode. Thus p vnyghteous dealynge of the shall byynge all the lande to a wilderness, & wyckednes shall ouerthrowe the dwellinges of the myghtye.

The. vi. Chapter.

The callenge of kynge, wynges, and iudges: which are also exhorted to seache wysdome.

A Wysdome is better then strength, and a man of vnderstandynge is more worth then one p is strong. Heare therefore (O ye kynge) & vnderstande: O lerne pe that be iudges of the endes of the earth. Gene eare pe that rule the multitudes, & desire in moch people. For the power is geuen you of the Lord, and the strength fro the best: which shall tepe poure worck: & searce out poure pmaginacions: how that pe beinge officers of his kingdome, haue not executed true iudgement, haue not kepte p lawe of rightcon-

B nes, nor walked after p wyll of God. Horribly & that ryght soone shall he appeare vnto you: for an harde iudgement shall they haue that beate rule. Wherepe is graunted vnto the symple, but they that be in auctorite shall be soze punished. For God which is lord ouer all, shall excepte no mans personne, ne ther shall he stāde i awe of any mans greatnesse. For he hath made the small & greates, & careth for all a lyke. But the myghty shall haue the sozer punishment.

Vnto you therefore (O ye kynge) do I speake, that pe mape lerne wysdome and not go amysse. For they p kepe hys ryghteousnes shall be ryghteously iudged, & they that are lerne in righteous thinges, shall fynde to make answer. Wherefore, set poure lust vpon my wordes, and loue them, so shall pe come by nourtour. Wysdome is a noble thinge, and neuer faydeth awaye: pee she is ealysene of the that loue her, and founde of soche as seke her. She preuenteth the that desire her, & she mape fynd shewe her selfe vnto the. Who so awaketh vnto her by tymes, shall haue no greates trouaple, for he shall fynde her syttinge readye at hys doores. To thynke vpon her, is perfecte vnderstandynge: and who so watcheth for her, shall be safe, ad p soone. For she goeth aboute, sekynge soch as are mete for her, she weth her selfe cherteth vnto them in their goynge, and meteth the wth all diligēce. For the vnfayned desire of reformation is her begynnynge: to care for nourtour is loue, and loue is the kepynge of her lawes. Now the kepynge of the lawe is perfeccion and an vncorrupte lyfe, and an vncorrupte lyfe maketh a man familiar with God. And so p desire of wysdome ledeth to the kyngdome euerlastynge. If poure delyte be the in royall seates and cepters (O ye kynge of the people) set poure lust vpo wysdome, that pe mape raygne for euer more. O loue the lyght of wysdome, all pe that be rulers of the people. As for wysdome what she is, and how she came vp, I wyll tell you, and wyll not hyde the mysteryes of God from you: but wyll seke her out from the begynnynge of the natuite, and byynge the knowledge of her into lyght, & wyll not kepe back the tructh: Nether wyll I haue to do wyth consumynge enuye, for soch a man shall not be partaker of wysdome. But the multytude of the wyse is the welfare of the worlde, & a wyse kyng is the vpholdynge of the people. O receaue nourtoure then thowow my wordes, and it shall do you good.

The

The. vii. Chapter.

Wysdome ought to be preferred before all thynges.

I My selfe also am a mortall mā, lyke as all other, and am come of the earthy generacyon of hym that was fyrst made, and in my mothers wombe was I shapened to be fleshy. In the tyme of ten monethes was I brought together in bloude thowow the seide of man, and the commodious apertye of slepe. Wth I was bozne, I receaued lyke ayre as other men, & fell vpo the earth (which is my nature) cryng and wepyng at the fyrst, as all other do. I was wrapped in swadlyng clothes, and brought vp with greates cares. For there is no kyng that hath had eny other begynnynge of byrth. All mē then haue one entraunce vnto lyfe, and one goynge out in lyke maner.

Wherefore I desyred, and vnderstanding was geuen me: I called, and the sprete of wysdome came into me. I sett more by her then by kyngdomes and royall seates, and counted ryches nothyng in comparison of her. As for precio⁹ stone, I compared it not vnto her: for all golde is but grauell vnto her, and syluer shall be counted but clape before her sight. I loued her aboue wellfare & beutye, & purposed to take her for my lyght for her lyght cannot be quenched. All good thynges came to me with her, & innumerable ryches thowow her handes. I was glad in the all, for thys wysdome went before me, ad I knew not that she is the mother of all good thinges. Now as I my selfe learned vnfaynedly, so do I make other men partakers of her, and hyde her ryches fro no man, for she is an infinite treasure vnto me, which who so vse, become partakers of the loue & frendshype of God, and are accepted vnto hym for the gyftes of wysdome.

God hath graunted me to talke wysely, and conueniently to handle the thiges that he hath graciously let me. For it is he, that ledeth vnto wysdome, and teacheth to vse wysdome a ryght. In his hand are both we & oure wordes: pee all oure wysdome, oure vnderstandynge and knowledge of all oure wordes. For he hath geuen me the true sciēce of these thinges: so that I knowe how the worlde was made, ad the powers of the elementes: the begynnynge, endynge and myddest of the tymes: how the tymes alter how one goeth after another, and how they are fulfilled, the course of the peare: the ordinaices of the starres: the natures & kyndnes of beastes: the furionnesse of beastes: the power of the wyndes: the pmaginacions of men: the diuersities of ponge plantes: p vertues of rotes, ad all soch thynges as are secrete & not loked for, haue I learned. For the workmaster of all thinges hath taught me wysdome. In her is the sprete of vnderstandynge, which is holy, manyfolde, one onely, sotyll, curteous, discrete, quyk, vndepleyde, playne, swete, lounge the thynges p is good, sharpe, which forbiddeth not to do well, gentle, kynde, stedfast, sure, fre: haupnge all vertues, circumspecte in all thynges: receaupnge all spretes of vnderstandynge beynge cleane and sharpe. For wysdome is nymbler then all nymble thinges: she goeth thowow & attayneth to all thynges, because of her clenness. For she is the bryeth of the power of God, and a pure cleane expresyng of the clearnes of Allmyghtie God. Therefore can no vndepleyde thyng come vnto her: for she is the byghthenes of the euerlastynge lyght, the vndepleyde myrroure of the maiesty of God, and the pimage of his goodnesse. And for so moch as she is one, she maye do all thinges: and beynge stedfast her selfe she renueth all, and amonge the people conueryeth she her selfe into the holy soules. She maketh Godes frendes and prophetes for God loueth no man, but hym in whom wysdome dwelleth. For she is more beutye-ful then the Sunne, and geueth more lyght then the starres, and the dape is not to be compared vnto her: for vpon the dape cometh nyght. But wyckednesse cannot overcome wysdome, and foolishnes maye not be w her

The. viii. Chapter.

The effectes of wysdome.

Wysdome reacheth from one ende to another mightly, & lounge doth she orde all thinges. I haue loued her, and laboured for her, euen fro my youth vp: I did my diligēce to mary my selfe with her, soch loue had I vnto her beutye. Who so hath p company of God, commendeth her noblyte, pee the Lord of all thynges him selfe loueth her. For she is the scole maistrisse of the nourtour of God, and the choler out of his wordes. If a man wold desyre ryches in this lyfe, what is richer then wysdome, that worketh all thiges? Thou wylt saye: vnderstandynge worketh. What is it amoge all thinges, that worketh more then wysdome? If a man loue vertue and ryghteousnes, let him laboure for wysdome, for she hath great vertues. And why? she teacheth sobernes & prudence, righteousnes and strenght, which are soch thinges as men can haue nothyng more profitable in their lyfe. If a mā desire moch knowledge, she can tell p thinges that are past, and discerne thynges for to come: she knoweth the soteltyes of wordes, and can expounde darcke sentēces. She can tell of tokens and wonderous thynges, or euer they come to passe, and p endes of all tymes and and ages. So I purposed after this maner: I wyll take her vnto my company, and com- me lounge with her: no doute she shall ge- ue me good counsell, and speake comforta- bly vnto me in my carefulnes & grefe. For her sake shall I be well and honestly taken amonge the comens and lordes of the coun- cell. Though I be ponge, yet shall I haue sharpe vnderstandynge, so that I shall be mar- uelous in the syght of grete me, and the fa- ces of princes shall wonder at me. When I holde my tonge, they shall byde my leasure, when I speake, they shall loke vpon me, and yf I talke moch, they shall lape their hādes vpon thei mouth. Moreover, by the mea- nes of her I shall obtayne immortallite, and leaue behynde me an euerlasting memoriall amōge them that come after me. I shall set the people in ordre, and the nacyns shall be subdued vnto me. Horrible tyrantes shall be afrayed, when they do but heare of me, a- mong the multitude I shall be counted good and myghty in batayll. When I come ho- me, I shall fynde reste with her: for her com- pany hath no bitternes, & her felouship hath no tedynousnes, but myght and ioye.

C Now when I considered these thynges by my selfe, and pondered them in my herte how that to be ioyned vnto wysdome is im- mortalyte, and grete pleasure to haue her frendshype: how that in the workes of her handes are infinite ryches: how that, who so kepeth company with her shall be wyle: & that he which talketh with her, shall come to honoure: I wente aboute sekynge, together vnto me. For I was a ladd of a rypp wytt, and had a good vnderstandynge.

But whē I grew to moze vnderstandyn- ge, I came to an vnderfyled body. Neuerthe- les when I perceaued that I coude not ke- pe my selfe chaste, excepte God gaue it me (and that was a poynte of wysdome also, to knowe whose gift it was) I stepped vnto f Lord, and besought him, and with my who- le herte I sayde after this maner.

The ix. Chapter.

A prayer of Salomon to obtayne wysdome.

God of my fathers, and Lorde of mercyes (thou that hast ma- de all thynges with thy worde, and ordeyned man thozow thy wysdome, that he shulde haue domynyon ouer the creature which thou hast made: that he shulde orde the worlde accordinge to equite and ryghteousnes, and execute iudgement with a true hert) geue me wysdome, which is euer about thy seate, and put me not out from amonge thy chyldren: for I thy seruauit and sonne of thy hande mayden, am a feble personne, of a shorte tyme, and to pouge to the vnderstandynge of iudgement and lawes. And though a man be neuer so perfecte amonge the chyldren of me, yet yf thy wysdome be not with him, he shall be nothig regarded. But thou hast cho- sen me to be a kyng vnto thy people, and the iudge of thy sonnes and daughters.

Thou hast commaunded me to buylde a temple vpon thy holy mount, & an aulter in the cite wherin thou dwellest: a lyknesse of thy holy tabernacle whych thou hast prepared from the begynnyng, & thy wysdome wyth the, which knoweth thy workes, which also was with the, when thou madest the world & knewe what was acceptable in thy syght and ryght in thy commaundementes. I sende her out of thy holy beaues and fro the trōne of thy maiesty, that she maye be with me, & laboure with me: that I maye knowe, what is acceptable in thy sight. For she knoweth and vnderstandeth all thynges: and she shall lede me soberly in my workes, and preserve me in her power. So shall my workes be ac- ceptable, and then shall I gouerne thy peo- ple righteously, and be worthy to syt in my fathers seate. For what mā is he, that may knowe f counsell of God? Or, who can thin- ke what the will of God is? For f thoughtes of mortall men are miserable and oure- forcastes are but vncertayne. And why? a mortall and corruptible body is heuy vnto the soule, and f earthy mansyon kepeth do- wne that vnderstandynge that muleth vpon many thynges. Very hardly can we discer- ne the thynges that are vpon earth, & grete labour haue we, or we can fynde f thynges which are before oure eyes. Who wyll then seke oute the groude of the thynges that are done in heauen? Oh Lorde, who can haue knowledge of thy vnderstandynge and mea- nyng, excepte thou geue wysdome, and sen- de thy holy goost from aboue: f the wayes of them which are vpon earth, maye be re- fourmed: that men maye learne the thynges that are pleasaunt vnto the, and be preser- ued thozow wysdome.

The x. Chapter.

The deliuerance of the ryghteous cometh through wysdome

Wysdome preserved the fyrst man, whom God made a father of the worlde, whē he was created alone brought hi out of his offence toke him out of the *moulde of the earth: & gaue hym power to rule all thynges. * When the vnyghteous wete a waye in his wrath fro this wysdome, f brotherhed perished tho- row the wrath of murthur. Agayne, when the *water destroyed f whole worlde, wyl- dome preserved f righteous thozow a poore tre, wherof he was gouerner her selfe. Mo- reouer whē wyckednes had gotten f vpper hande, hande so f f naciōs were puffed vp w ppyde she knewe the ryghte, preserved him fault- lesse vnto God, and layed vpon sure mercy of his chyldren. She preserved the ryghteous, * whē he fled fro the vngodly that perished, what tyme as f fyre fell downe vpon the. v. cyties: Lyke as yet this dape f vnfrutefull waste, and smokyng lād geueth testimony of thei wyckednesse: yee, the vnyrpe & vn- timely frutes that growe vpon the trees.

And for a token of a remembraunce of the vnfaythfull soule, there standeth a pylle of salt, for all such as regarded not wysdome gat not onely this hurte, f they knewe not the thynges which were good, but also left behynde the vnto men, a memoriall of their foolishnes: so that in f thynges wherin they synned, they coude not be hydd. But as for such as take hede vnto wysdome, she shall de- lyuer them from sorowe.

* When the ryghteous fled because of hys brothers wrath, wysdome led hi the ryght waye, shewed him the kyngdome of God, gaue him knowledge of holy thynges, made him riche i his laboures, & brought to passe the thynges that he wente aboute. In f dis- ceatfulness of such as defrauded him, she sto- de by him, & made him ryche. She saued hi from the enemies, & defended him from the disceauers. She made hym stronge in bat- taily & gaue him the victorie, that he myght knowe, how that wysdome is stronger then all thynges. * When f ryghteous was sold, she forsoke him not, but deliuered hym fro synners. She wente downe with hym into the dongeon, and sayled him not in the ban- des: * tyll she had brought hym the scepter of the realme, ad power agaynst those that oppressed him. As for them that had accu- sed hym, she declared them to be lyers, and brought hym to perpetuall worshyp.

* She deliuered the ryghteous people ad faultlesse seide, from f naciōs that oppressed them. She entred into the soule of the ser- uauit of God, and stode by him in wonders and tokens agaynst the horrible king. She gaue the ryghteous the rewarde of thei la- bours, & led them forth a maruelous waye: on the dape tyme she was a shadowe vnto them, ad a lyght of starres in the night sea- son. * She brought the thozow f reed see, & carped them thozow the grete water. She drowned thei enemies i the see, & brought them out of the depe. So the ryghteous to- ke f spoyles of the vngodly. * and prayled thy holy name, O Lorde, & magnified thy victorious hand w one accorde. * For wyl- dome openeth the mouth of the domine, ad maketh the tonges of babes to speake.

The xi. Chapter.

The miracles done for Israel: The vengeance of synners. The grete power and mercy of God.

She ordeed thei workes in f hādes of the holy prophet: * so f they went thozow f wyldernes that was not inhabited, and pitched their tentes in f wast deserte. They stode agaynst their enemies, & were auēged of their aduersaries. * When they were thirstye, they called vpon the, ad water was geue the out of f most hye rock and thei thyrst was quēched out of f harde stone. For by f thynges, wher thozow their enemies were punyshed, were f chyldre of Israel helped in thei nede, to thei cōfort. For vnto the enemies f gauest mā's bloud in steade of liuynge water. And where as they had scarcenelle i f rebuke, whē the chyl- dren were slayne, thou gauest vnto thyne awne a plētous water vnloked for: decla- ryng by the thyrst that was at that tyme, how thou woldest byng thyne awne vnto honoure, and slape thei aduersaries.

* For when they were tryed and noztured with fatherly mercy, they knowledged how the vngodly were iudged, ad punyshed tho- row the wrath of God. These hast thou ex- hortet as a father, and proued the: but vnto the other f hast bene a boysterous kyng, layed hard to thei charge, & condēd the. Whether they were absent or present, their punyshmet was a lyke. For their grefe was double: namely, mournynge, and the remē- braunce of thynges past. But whē they per- ceaued f thei punyshmentes dyd the good, they thought vpon the Lorde, and wonde- red at f ende. For at f last they helde moch of hym, of whō i f out casting they thought scozne, as of an abiecte. Neuertheles, the ryghteous dyd not so when they were thyr- stie: but eue lyke as f thoughtes of f foolish were, so was also ther wickednes. * Where as certayne men now (thozow errour) dyd worshipe dome serpentes ad vayne beastes thou sendest a multitude of domine beastes vpon them for a vengeance: that they myght knowe, that loke where withall a man syn- neth, by the same also shall he be punyshed. * For vnto thy allmyghty hande, f made f worlde of naught, it was not vnpossible, to sende amonge them an heape of Beeres, or woode Lyons, or cruell beastes of a straunge kynde, loch as are vnkowne, or spoutt fire or cast out a smokyng breth, or spote horri- ble sparkes out of their eyes, which myght not onely destroye them with hurtyge, but also kyll the with their horrible syght. Yee, without these beastes might they haue be- ne slayne with one wynde, beyng persecu- ted of their awne workes, & scattered a broa- de thozow the breth of thy power.

Neuertheles, thou hast ordeed all thynges in measure, nōbre & weight. For f hast euer had great strength & might, & who maye w stande f power of thyne arme? And why? See lyke as lyke as þe small thing þe the balaunce weyeth so is the worlde before þe: þe, as a droppe of þe morning dew, that falleth downe vpon þe earth. Thou hast mercy vpon all, for thou hast power of all thynges: * & makest the as though thou sawest not the synnes of men, because they shuld amende. For thou louest all the thynges that are, and hatest none of them whos þe hast made: nether dydest thou ordeyne or make any thyng, of euell wyll.

How might any thing endure, if it were not thy will? Or how coulde any thyng be preserued, excepte it were called of the? But thou sparest all, for all are thyne (O Lord) thou louest of soules.

The. xii. Chapter.

The mercy of God towarde synners, the workes of God are vntrepassable. So geueth scripture to rememb. us.

O Lord, how gracious and swete is thy sperte in all thynges: Therefore chastnest thou them measurably þe go wyse, and warrest the cōcerninge the thynges wherin they offende: thou spakest vnto the (O Lord) & exhorte the to leaue theyr wickednes, and to put theyr trust in þe. * As for those olde inhabytors of thy holy lāde, thou myghtest not awayne the, for they comitted abhominable workes agaynst the: as witchcraft, sorcery, ad-olatry, they slew theyr awne children without mercy: they dydeate vpon mens bowels, & denoured the bloude: þe, because of soch ab-hominaciōs, mysbelues & offeringes, thou slewest the fathers of the desolate soules by the handes of oure fathers: þe the land which thou louest aboue all other, might be adwel-lynge for the children of God.

Neuertheles, thou sparedst them also (as men) & sendest þe forerunners of thyne hoost euē hornettes to destroye them out by lytle ad lytle. Not that þe wast unable to subdue the vngodly vnto the ryghte i battayle, or w cruell beastes, or with one rough word to destroye the together: * But thy mynde was to dyue them out by lytle ad lytle, ge-uynge the tyme & place to amende: knowig well, that it was an vnryghteous nacō & wicked of nature, ad þe their thought might neuer be altered. For it was a cursed sede fro þe begynnynge, & feared no man: Yet hast thou pardoned their synnes. For who wyll saye vnto the: why hast thou done that? Or who will stāde agaynst thy iudgment? Or who wyll come before thy face an auenger of vnryghteous men? Or who wyll blame the, if the people perish, whom thou hast made? For there is none other God but þe,
* that carest for all thynges: that þe mayest declare how that thy iudgment is not vn-ryght. There darre nether kynge, ner tyraunt in thy sight require accomptes, of the who thou hast destroyed.

For so moch then as thou art ryghteous thy selfe, þe ordrest all thynges ryghteously * & punishest euē him that hath not deser-ued to be punished, & takest him for a strai-ger and an aleant in the lande of thy power.
For thy power is the begynnynge of ryghteousnes: and because thou art Lord of all thynges, therfore art thou gracio vnto al.
When men thynke the not to be of a full strength, thou declarest thy power: ad boldly deliuerest thou them ouer that knowe þe not. But thou Lord of power iudgest quietly, and ordrest vs with great wyldom, for thou mayest do as thou wylt.

By soch workes now hast thou taught thy people, that a man also shulde be iust & louynge: and hast made thy chyldre to be of a good hope: for euē when thou iudgest, þe geuest roome to amende from synnes.
For in so moch as thou hast punished, and with soch diligēce deliuered the enemyes of thy seruantes, which were worthy to dye (where thou sawest thou gauest them tyme and place of amendement that they might turne fro theyr wickednes) with how greate diligence then punishest þe thyne awne children vnto whole fathers thou hast sworn & made couenauntes of good promyses: So where as thou doest but chasten vs, thou punyshest our enemyes diuerse wayes, to þe intēt that when we punishe, we shuld remembre thy goodnesse: & when we our selues are punyshed, to put oure trust in thy mercy.

Wherefore, where as men haue lyued ignorantly & vnryghteously, thou hast punished the soze, euē thou sawest þe same thynges þe theyr workes. * For they wete astraye very longe in the waye of errour, & helde þe beastes (which euē theyr enemyes despyled) for goddes, lyuinge as children of no vnderstandynge. Therefore hast thou sent a scozne full punishment amonge the, as amonge the children of ignorance. As for soch as wolde not be reformed by those scoznes ad rebukes, they felt the worst punishment of God For the thynges that they suffered, they bare them vnpatiently, beinge not content in them but vnwillinge. And when they perished by the same thynges that they toke for goddes, they knowledged then, that there was, but one true God, whome afore they wolde not knowe: therfore came the ende of theyr damnacyon vpon them.

The. xiii. Chapter.

All thynges be vayne, excepte the knowledge of God. Idolaters and Idols are mocked.

Vayne are all men, which haue not knowledge of God: * as were they that out of the good thynges which are sene, knewe not hym, þe of hym selfe is euē lastynge. Nether toke they so moch regarde of þe workes that are made, as to

as to knowe, who was the craftermā of the but some toke the fyre, some the wynde or ayre, some the course of the starres, some the water, some toke Sunne ad Moone, or the lyghtes of heauen which rule the earth, for goddes. But though they had soch pleasure in their beuty, that they thought the to haue bene goddes: yet shulde they haue knowne, how moch more sayre he is that made the.
For the maker of beuty hath ordened all these thynges. Or if they marueled at the power and workes of them, they shulde haue perceaued thereby, that he which made these thynges, is myghtyer then they.

For by the greatnesse and beuty of the creature, the maker thereof may playnely be knowne. Notwithstandynge they are the lesse to be blamed, that seke God, ad wolde fynde hym, and yet myse. And why? for so moch as they go about in hys workes and seke after them, it is a token, þe they regarde and holde moch of his workes that are se-ne: howbeit they are not wholy to be excused. For if they vnderstandynge & knowledge be so greate, that they can diserne the worlde and the creatures, why do they not rather fynde out the Lord thereof?

But vnhappye are they, and amonge the deed is theyr hope, that call them Goddes which are but the workes of mens hādes: golde, syluer, and the thinge that is founde out by conynge, the similitude of beastes, or any vayne stōne that hath bene made by hande of olde. * Or as whe a carpenter cut-teth downe a tree out of the wodd, and pareth of the bark of it conynge: and so with the one parte maketh a vessel to be vsed, & dresleth meate with the resydue. As for the other parte that is left, which is profytable for nothyng (for it is a croked pece of wodd and full of knobbes) he carueth it diligently thorow hys vanite, and accordynge to the knowledge of hys conynge he geueth it some propozcion, fashioneth it after the simi-litude of a mā, or maketh it lyke some beast straketh it ouer with redb, and paynteth it, & loke what foule spot is in it he casteth some coloure vpon it.

Then maketh he a conuenient tabernacle for it, setteth it in the wall, & maketh it fast with yron, prouidyng so for it, lest it happen to fall: for it is well knowne, that it can not helpe it selfe: And why? it is but an yma-ge, and must of necessity be helped.

Then goeth he & offereth of his goodes vnto it, for his chyldren and for his wyfe: he se-keth helpe at it, he asketh coucell at it: he is not ashamed to speake vnto it that hath no soule: for health, he maketh his petitiō vnto him þe is lycke: for lyfe, he prayeth vnto him that is deed: he calleth vpon hi for help that is not able to helpe him selfe: & to sende him a good iourneye, he prayeth him þe may not go. And in all the thynges that he taketh in hāde (whether it be to optayne any thyng, or to worcke) he prayeth vnto hym, that can do no maner of good,

The. xiiii. Chapter.

The detestacyon and abhominacyon of ymages.
A curse of them, and of hym that maketh them. The ruelles that come of Idolatrye.

Ayane, another mā purposing to sayle, and begynnynge to take his iourneye thorow the ragynge see, calleth for helpe vnto a stock, that is farre weaker then the tree that beareth hi. For as for it, coueteousnesse of moneye hath soude it out, & the craftermā made it with his conynge.
But thy prouidence, O father, gouerneth all thynges fro the begynnynge: * For thou hast made a waye in the see, and a sure path in the myddest of þe wanes: declaryng ther-by, that thou hast power to helpe i all thin-ges, yee though a man wente to the see with out shyp, neuerthelesse, that the workes of thy wyldome shulde not be vayne, * thou hast caused an arke to be made: and therfore do men committe theyr lyues to a small pece of wodd, passynge ouer the see in a shyp, and are lauchd.

* For in the olde tyme also whe the proude gyauntes perished, he in who the hope was left to increse the worlde) wente into the shyppe, which was gouerned thorow thy hand, and so leste sede behinde him vnto the worlde. For happye is þe tree, where thorow ryghteousnes cometh: but cursed is þe ydol that is made with hādes, * yee both it and he that made it. He, because he made it: and it, because it was called God where as it is but a fraple thyng. * For the vngodly and hys vngodlynes are both lyke abhominable vnto God, Euē so þe worcke and he that made it also, shalbe punished together. Therfore shal there a plage come vpon þe ydoles of the heathen: for out of the creature of God they are become an abhominacyon, a temptacion vnto the soules of men, and a snare for the fete of the vnwylle. And why, þe sekyng out of ydoles is the begynnynge of whoredome, and the bypnyng vpon of the is the destruccyon of lyfe. For they were not from þe begynnynge, nether shal they continue for euer. The welthy ydelnes of men hath founde them out vpon earth, therfore shal they come shortly to an ende. When a father mourned for his sonne þe was taken awaye fro hym, he made hym an ymage (in all þe hāse) of hys deed sonne: & so begane to worshyp hi as God, which was but a deed man, & ordened his seruantes to offere vnto hi. Chy by processe of tyme & thorow an vngracious custome, this erroure was kepte:

as lawe, and tyrantes compelled men by violence to honour ymages. As for those þ were so farre of that men myght not wor- shipp them presently, they picture was brought fro farre (lyke the ymage of a king whom they wolde honour) to the intent þ with grete diligence they might worshipp him which was farre of, as though he had bene present. Agayne, the singular connyge of the craftesman gaue the ignorant also a great occasion to worshipp ymages. For þ workman willing to do hym a pleasure þ set him a worke, laboured with all his con- nyinge to make þ ymage of the best fashon. And so, thorow the beauty of the worke, the comen people was disceaued, in so moche þ they toke him now for a God, which a lytle afore was but honored as a man. And this was the erroure of mans lyfe, when men (ether for to serue theyr awne affectio, or to do some pleasure vnto kynge) ascribed vnto stones and stockes þ name of God, which ought to be geuen vnto no man.

Moreover, this was not ynough for the that they erred in the knowledge of God: but where as they lyued in the grete war- res of ignorance, those many & grete pla- ges called they peace. For ether* they flue theyr awne chyldren, & offered them, or dyd sacryfyce in þyngh season, or els helde vn- reasonable watches: so that they kepte ne- ther lyfe ner marriage cleane: but ether one flue another to death maliciously, or els gre- ued hys neyghboure wyth aduoutrye. And thus were all thynges mixte together, bloud, manslaughter, theft, dissimulation, corrup- tion, vnfaithfulness, sedycion, perjury, dis- quietynge of good men, vnthankfulness, de- filynge of soules, chaungynge of byrth, vn- stedfastnesse of marriage, ynorder of aduou- trye and vnclemesse. And why? the honou- ringe of abhominable ymages is the cause, the begynnyng and ende of all euell. For they that worshype Idols, ether they are mad when they be mercy, or prophetic lyces, or lyue vngodly, or els lyghtly forswear them selues. For in so moche as their trust is in þ Idols (which haue nether soule ner vn- derstandynge) though they sweare falsely, yet they thynke it shal not hurte them.

Therefore cometh a grete plage vpon them, and that worthely: for they haue an euell oppinion of God, geuynge hede vnto Idols, wearynge vniustly to disceauce, and despying ryghteousnes. For theyr swea- ringe is no vertue, but a plage of them that synne, and goeth cuer with the offence of the vngodly.

The xv. Chapter.

The voyce of the saythfull, prayenge the mercy of God, for whose graces sake they serue not Idols.

Blessed thou (O our God) art swete, lōg A sufferynge and true, and in mercy oꝝ. Drest thou all thynges.

Though we synne, yet are we thyne, for we knowe thy strength. If we synne not, then are we sure, that thou regardest vs. For to knowe þ, is perfecte ryghteousnes: Pec, to knowe thy ryghteousnes ad power, is the rote of immortalite. As for the thyng that men haue foude out thorow their euell science, it hath not disceaued vs: as the payn- tinge of the picture (an vnprofitable laboure) and carued ymage, with diuerse colours, whose syght entyseth the ignorant: so that he honoureth & loueth the picture of a deyd ymage that hath no soule.

Nevertheless, they that loue soch euell thynges, are worthy of death: they that trust in them, they that make them, they that loue them, and they that honoure them. The potter also taketh ad tempereth soft earth, laboureth it, and geueth it the fashon of a vessel, whatsoeuer serueth for oure vse: and so of one pece of claye he maketh some clea- ne vessel for seruike, & some contrary. But where to euery vessel serueth, that knoweth the potter him selfe. So with his wayne la- boure he maketh a God of the same claye: this doth euen he, which a lytle afore was made of earth hym selfe, and within a lytle whyle after (whē he dieth) turneth to earth agayne.

Notwithstandinge, he careth not the more because he shal labour, ner because his lyfe is short: but stryuethe to excell goldsmithes, the syluer smythes and coper smythes, & ta- keth it for an honour to make wayne thynges. For hys herte is athes, hys hope is but wayne earth, & his life is more vile the claye for so moche as he knoweth not his awne ma- ker, that gaue him hys soule to worke, ad bryethed in him the bryeth of lyfe. They coun- te oure lyfe but a pastyme, and oure conuer- sacion to be, but a market, and that men shulde euer be gettynge, and that by euell meanes. Now he that of earth maketh frag- le vessels and ymages, knoweth him selfe to offende aboue all other.

All the enemyes of thy people & that holde the in subieccio, are vnwyle, vnhappye, and excedyng proude vnto theyr awne soules, for they iudge all the Idols of the heathen to be goddes, which nether haue eye sight to se, ner noses to smell, ner eares to heare, nor fynge of hādes for to grope: & as for theyr fete, they are to slowe to goo. For mā made them, & he that hath but a borrowed sprete, fashioned them. But no mā cā make a God lyke vnto him: for seynge he is but mortall hym selfe, it is but mortall that he maketh with vnryghteous handes. He hym selfe is better then they who þe worshyppeth, for he lyued he lyued though he was mortall, so dyd ne- uer they. Pec, they worshyppye beastes also, which are most miserable: for compare thi- ges that cannot fele vnto them and they are worse then those. Yet is there not one of these beastes, that with his syght can be- holde eny good thing nether haue they geue prayse ner thankes vnto God.

The xvi. Chapter.

The punishment of idolaters, and the benefy- tes done vnto the saythfull.

And these and soch other thynges ha- ue they suffered worthy punishment and thorow the multitude of bea- stes are they rote oute. In steade of the which punishmentes thou hast gra- ciously ordred thyne awne people, and geue the theyr desyre þ they longed for: a newe & straunge taste, * preparing the quayles to be theyr meate: to þ intent that (by the thynges which were thewed and sent vnto the) they that were so greedy of meate, might be withdrawen euen from the desyre that was necessary. But these withi thorte tyme we- re brought vnto pouerte, ad tasted a newe meate. For it was requisite þ (without eny excuse) destruccions shulde come vpon those which vled tyzanny, & to shewe onely vnto þ other, how theyr enemyes were destroyed.

For when the cruell woodnesse of the beastes came vpon them, they perished tho- row the stynges of the cruell serpentes.

Not withstandinge, thy wrath endured not perpetually, but they were put in feare for a lytle seasō, that they myght be reform- ed, haupnge a toke of saluacion, to reme- bre the comaundement of thy lawe. For he þ conuerted, was not healed by the thyng þ he lawe, but by the, O sauoure of all. So in this thou thewedst thyne enemyes, þ it is thou, which delyucrest from al euell. As for the * whē they were byttē w grethoppers and flies, they dyed, for they were worthy to perishe by soch. But nether the teeth of dra- gons ner of venimous wormes ouer cā thy chyldre, for thy mercy was cuer by the & hel- ped the. Therefore were they punished to re- membre thy wordes, but halfely were they healed agayne, lest they shuldfall ito so depe forgetfulness, þ they myght not vse thy hel- pe. It was nether herbe ner playster þ resto- red the to health, but thy worde (O Lord) which healeth all thynges. It is þ (O Lord) that hath the power of lyfe & death: thou leddest vnto deathes doze, and byngest vp agayne. But mā thorow wickednes flateh his awne soule, and when his sprete goeth forth, it turneth not agayne, nether maye he call agayne the soule that is take awaye. It is not possible to eschape thy hande. For the vngodly that wolde not knowe þ, were punished by þ strength of thyne arme: with straunge waters, hayles and raynes were they persecuted, and thorow fyre were they consumed. For it was a wonderous thyng that fyre myght do more then water which quencheth all thynges: but the worlde is the auēger of the ryghteous. Some tyme was the fyre so tame, that þ beastes which were sent to punish the vngodly, bent not: and that because they shulde se and knowe, that they were persecuted with the punishment of God. And some tyme bent the fyre i the water on euery lyde, that it might destroye þ vnryghteous nacyon of þ earth. * Agay- ne, thou hast fed thyne awne people w sun- gels fode, & sent the byrd ready from heaue (without theyr laboure) beyngue very plea- sant and of good taste. And to shewe thy ry- ches & swetnesse vnto thy chyldren, thou ga- uest euery one theyr desyre, so þ euery man might take what lyked hym best. But the snowe and pleabode the violence of the fyre & melted not: that they myght knowe, that the fyre burnyng in the hayle and rayne, de- stroyed the frute of the enemyes: þ fyre also forgat his strength agayne: that the rygh- teous myght be noyshed. For the creature that serueth the (which art the maker) is se- arse in punishyng þ vnryghteous, but is ea- sy & gentle to do good, vnto soch as put their trust in the. Therefore dyd all thynges alter at the same tyme, and were all obedient vnto thy grace, which is the noyse of all thynges, accordynge to the desyre of them that had nede therof: that thy chyldre (O Lord) whom thou louest, myght knowe, * þ it is not nature and the growinge of frutes that fedeth men, but that it is thy worde, which preserueth them that put theyr trust in the. For loke what myght not be destroyed with the fyre, as soone as it was warmed with a lytle sunne beame, it melted: þ al mē might knowe, that thā kes ought to be geuen vnto the before the sunne ryse, and that thou oughtest to be worshipped before the daye springe. For the hope of þ vnthankfull shall melt awaye as the wynter ple, and perishe as water, that is not necessary.

The xvii. Chapter.

The iudgements of God vpon the Egyptians.

Create are * thy iudgements (O Lord) and thy counceils cā not be expressed: therefore mē do erre, that will not be reformed w thy wyldome. * For when þ vnryghteous thought to haue thy holy people i subieccio, they were bounde with the bandes of darcknes and longe nyght, vnto the rofe, thynkynge to escape the cuerlastynge wyldome. And whyle they thought to be byd i þ darcknesse of theyr synnes, they were scattered abrode i the very myddes of the darck couerpyng of forgetfulness, put to horrible feare and

Ecc iii wonderously

wonderously vexed: for the corner where they myght not kepe them from feare (because the sounde came downe and vexed them) yee, many terrible and straunge visions made them afrayed.

No power of the fyre myght geue them lyght, nether myght the cleare flammes of p starres lyghten p horrible nyght. For they appeared vnto them a sodayne fyre, very dzedeful: At the which (when they sawe no thig) they were so afrayed, p they thought the thig which they sawe, to be the moze fearfull. * As for p sozery & enchaute-mēt that they vied, it came to derision, and the proude wysdome was brought to shame.

For they that promised to dyue awaye the fearfulness and dzed from the weake soules, were lyk for feare themselves, and that with scozne. And though none of the wonderfeared the, yet were they afrayed at the beastes which came vpon them, & at p hyf-synge of the serpetes. In so moch that with t-eblyng they sowned, ad sayde they sawe not p aye, which no man yet maye escape.

For it is an heuy thynge, when a mans awne conscience beareth recorde of his wyckednes and condemneeth hym. And why? a vexed and wounded conscience, taketh euer cruell thynge in hād. * Fearfulness is nothing els, but a declaring that a mā seeketh helpe and defence, to anwere for hym selfe. And loke how moch lesse the hope is withi. the moze is the vncertentye of the mater, for the which he is punyshed. But they that came in the myghty nyght: slepte the slepe fell vpon them from vnder and from aboue: somtyme were they afrayed thozow the feare of the wonders, and somtyme they were so weake that they sowned with all: for an hasty & sodayne fearfulness came vpon the.

After warde, p eny of them had fallen, he was kepte and shut in prison, but without chaynes. But p eny dwelt in a byllage, p he had bene an hearde or husbandman he suffered intollerable necessite: for they were all bounde with one chayne of darknesse.

Whether it were a blasynge wynde, or a swete songe of the byrdes amonge the thynke branches of the trees, or the vehemence of hasty rynyng water, or greates noise of the fallynge downe of stoness, or the playenge and runnyng of beastes whom they sawe not, or the myghty noise of roaryng beastes, or the sownde that answereth agayne in the hye mountaynes: it made them sowne for very feare. For all the earth synned with cleare lyght, and no man was hyndered in his labour. Onely vpon them there fell a heuy nyght, an ymage of darknesse that was to come vpon the. Yee, they were vnto them selues the most heuy & horrible darknesse.

The fyre lyght that the Israelites had in Egypte The persecucion of the saythfull The Lord smote all the first borne of Egypte The synne of the people in the wilderness. Aaron stode betwixt the lyue and the dede, with his censoure.

Nevertheless, thy sayntes had a very greate lyght (p enemyes herde theyr voyce, but they sawe not the figure of them.) And because they suffred not p same thynge, they magnified p: ad they p were vexed afoze (because they were not hurte now) thanked the, and besought the (O god) that there myght be a difference. * Therfore had they a burnynge pyler of fyre to lede them in the vnkowne waye, and thou gauest them the Sunne for a fre gyft without eny hurt. Reason it was that they shulde want lyght, & be put in the prison of darknes, which kepte thy chyldre in captiuyte, by who the vncorrupte lyght of the lawe of the worlde was for to be geuen. * When they thought to slaye the babes of the ryghteous (one beinge layed out, and pserued to be leader vnto the other) * thou broughtest out p whole multitude of the chyldren, and destroyedst these in the myghty water. Of that nyght were oure fathers certified afoze that they knowynge vnto what othes they had geuen credence, myght be of good cheare. Thus thy people receaued the health of the ryghteous, but p vngodly were destroyed. For lyke as thou hast hurte oure enemies, so hast thou promoted vs whom thou caldest afoze. For the ryghteous chyldren of the good men offred secretly, & ordred the lawe of ryghteousnes vnto vntite: that p iust shulde receaue good and euell in lyke maner, synngng prayles vnto the father of all men. Agayne, there was herde an vnconuenient voyce of the enemyes, and a pyteous crye for chyldren that were bewayled. The master and the seruauant were punyshed in lyke maner. For they all together had innumerable that dyed one death.

Nether were p lpyng sufficient to bury p deed, for in p twinklyng of an eye, p noblest nacyō of them was destroyed. As oft as God helped them afoze, yet wolde it not make the beleue: but i the destruccō of the fyrst borne they knowledged, that it was p people of God. For whyle all thiges were still & whē the nyght was i the myddest of her course, thy Almyghty worde (O Lord) leapt downe from heauē out of thy royall trone, as a rough man of warre, i the myddest of the lāde that was destroyed: & p sharpe swerde perfourmed theyr straitē comādemēt, standynge and fylling all thynge with death: yee, it stode vpon the earth & reached vnto the heauē. Then the syght of the euell euell dreames vexed them sodely, and fearfulness came vpon them vnauayres.

Then laye there one here, another there, half deed, half quyk, and shewed the cause of his death. For the visyō that vexed the shewed the these thinges afoze: so that they were not ignorant, wherfore they perished.

The tentacyō of death touched the ryghteous also, and amonge the multitude in p wilderness there was insurreccion, but thy wrath endured not longe. For the blamelesse man wente in all the hast, and toke the bat-tayll vpon him, brought forth the weape of his ministracyō: euen prayer and the censours of reconcilinge: sett him selfe agaynst the wrath, and so brought the misery to an ende: declaringe therby that he was thy seruauant. For he ouercame not the multitude with bodely power, ner with weapens of myght: but with the worde he subdued him that vexed him, puttyng them in remembrance of the othe and couenaunt made vnto the fathers. For when the deed were fallen downe by heapes one vpon another, he stode in the myddest, pacified the wrath, and parted the waye vnto lpyng. * And why? in his longe garment was all the beauty, and in the foure rowes of the stoness was the glory of the fathers grauen, and thy maiesty was wyrtten in the crowne of his heade. Vnto these the destroyer gaue place, ad was afrayed of them: for it was onely a tē-tacion worthy of wrath.

The .xix. Chapter.

The death of the Egyptians, and the greates hope of the Hebrewes. The meate that was geuen at the de-syre of p people. The elementes serue not onely to p will of God, but also to the will of man.

For the vngodly, the wrath came vpon them without mercy vnto the ende. For he knew before what shulde happen vnto them: how that (when they had consented to lett them go, and had sent out with greates diligence) they wolde repēte, and folowe vpon them. * For when they were yet moornyng and makynge lamentacion by the graues of p deed, they deuyled another foolysnes: so that they persecuted them in theyr flyng, whom they had cast out afoze with prayer. Moztly necessitye also brought them vnto thys ende, for they had cleane forgotten the thynge that happened vnto them afoze. But the thynge that was wantynge of theyr punyshment, was requysite so to be fulfilled vpon them with tormentes, that thy people myght haue a maruelous passage thozow, & that these might fynde a straunge death.

Then was euery creature fastyned agayne of newe, accordyng to p will of theyr maker, obepenge thy commaundementes that thy chyldre myght be kept without hurte. For the cloude ouershadowed theyr tentes, & the drye earth appeared, where afoze was water: so p in the reed see there was a waye without impediment, & the greates depe became a grene felde: wher thozow all p people wente p were defended wpth thy hand, seige thy wonderous and maruelous workes. For as p hozles, so were they fedd, and leapte lykelambes, praylinge p (O Lord) which haddest deliuered the: and why? they were yet myndefull of thy thynge, p happened whyle they dwelt in p lande: how the grounde brought forth flycs in steade of cattell: & how the rpuer scrawled with the multitude of frogges in steade of fpyshes.

But at the last they sawe a new creaton of byrdes, what tyme as they were discaued with lust, and despyed delicate meates. For when they were speakinge of theyr appetite, the quayles came vnto them fro the see, and punyshmentes came vpon the synners, not without the tokes which came to passe afoze by the vehemence of the streames: for they suffred worthely accordyng to theyr wickednes, they dealt so abhominably and churlyshly w straungers. Some receaued no vnkowne gesses, some brought the straungers into bondage that dyd them good. Besyde all these thynge there were some, that not onely receaued no straungers with theyr willes, but persecuted those also, & dyd them moch euell, that receaued them gladly. Therfore were they punyshed with p vlyndnesse, lyke as they that were couered with sodayne darknesse at the dores of the ryghteous, so p euery one sought the entraunce of hys doze.

Thus the elementes turned into them selues, lyke as when one tyme is chaunged vpon an instrument of musyk, and yet all the residue kepe theyr melody: which maye easely be perceaued, by the syght of the thynge that are come to passe. The drye lande was turned into a watery, and the thynge that afoze swamme i the water, wete now vpon p drye grounde. The fyre had power in the water (contrary to his awne vertue) & the water forgot his awne kynde to quenche. Agayne, the flammes of the noysome beastes hurte not the flesh of them that wete with them, nether melted they the ple, which els melteth lyghtly. In all thiges hast thou promoted thy people (O Lord) and brought them to honour: thou hast not despyed the, but all waye & in all places hast thou stande by the.

The boke of,
The boke of Jesus the sonne of Syrach/which is called in latyn/Ecclesiasticus,

The Prologe of Jesus the sonne of Syrach vnto hys boke.

Any and grete me haue declared wysdome vnto vs out of the lawe, out of the Prophetes and out of other that folowed them. In the which thynges Israell ought to be commended, by the reason of doctryne and wysdome: Therefore, they that haue it and reade it, shuld not onely them selues be wylle there thorow, but serue other also with teachyng and wyrtynge.

After that my graunde father Iesus had geue diligent labour to reade the lawe, the Prophetes and other boke that were left vs of oure fathers, ad had well exercysed hym selfe therein: he purposed also to wyrtynge some thyng of wysdome & good maners, to the intent that they which were wyllynge to learne and to be wysse, myght haue y more vnderstandyng, and be the more apte to leade a good conuersacyon.

Wherfore, I exhorte you to receaue it louyngly, to reade it with diligence, & to take it in good worth, though oure wordes be not so eloquent as the famous oratours. For the thyng y is wyrtyn in the hebreue tonge, soundeth not so well when it is translated into another speache. Not onely this boke of myne, but also the lawe, the Prophetes ad other boke sounde farre other wysse, then they do, whē they are spokē in their awne language.

Now in the xxxviii. yere When I came into Egypte in the tyme of Ptolomy Euergetes & continued there all my lyfe, I gat libertye to reade and wyrtynge many good thynges.

Wherfore, I thought it good and necessary, to bestowe my diligence and trauaile to interprete this boke. And consyderynge that I had tyme, I laboured and dyd my best to perfourme thys boke, and to wyrtynge it vnto lycht:

that the straungers also which are dysposed to lerne, myght applye them selues vnto good maners and lyue accordyng to the lawe of the Lorde.

The fyrst Chapter.

Wysdome procedeth and cometh of God. A prayse of the feare of God. A pte of the booke of Syrach.

* iiii. re. iii. b
and. iiii. b
Job. xxi. c
Jacob. i. a

Al wysdome cometh of God, the Lorde, and hath bene euer with hym, and is before all tyme. Who had nombred the sande of the see, y droppes of prayne, & the dayes of tyme? Who hath measured y heygth of heauen, y bredth of the earth, & the depnesse of the see? Who hath sought out y grounde of Goddes wysdome, which hath bene before all thynges?

* i. roma. xl. c
* Wysdome hath bene before all thynges, and the vnderstandyng of prudence from euerlastyng. (Gods worde in the heygth is the well of wysdome, and the euerlastyng comaundementes are the entraunce of her.)

Vnto whom hath the rote of wysdome bene declared? Or who hath knowen her wyrt? Vnto who hath y doctrine of wysdome bene discovered & shewed? ad who hath vnderstande y many folde entraunce of her?

There is one: euen the best, the maker of all thynges, the Allmyghty, the kyng, of power (of whom men ought to stande greatly in awe) which sytteth vpon his throne, beinge a God of dominio: he hath created her thorow the holy goost: he hath sene her, nombred her, ad measured her: he hath poured her out vpon all hys workes, and vpon all flesh accordyng to hys gyfte: he geueth her ryche vnto the that loue hym: The feare of the Lorde is wysdome and triumphe, gladnesse and a ioyfull crowne: The feare of the Lorde maketh a mery hert, geueth gladnesse, ioye and longe lyfe. Who lo feareth the Lorde, it shall go well wyth hym at the last, and in y daye of hys death he shall be blessed.

The loue of God is honorable wysdome: loke vnto whom it appeareth, they loue yt, for they se what wonderful thynges it doth.

* The feare of the Lorde ys y begynnynge of wysdome, ad was made with the faythfull in the mothers wombe: yt shall go wyth the chosen women, and shalbe knowne of the ryghteous and faythfull. The feare of the Lorde is the ryght Gods seruyce, that preserueth

Jesus the sonne of Syrach, Ho. xxxvii.

serueth and iustifieth the herte, and geueth myght & gladnesse. Who so feareth y Lorde shall be happy, and when he hath neede of cōforte, he shall be blessed. To feare God is the wysdome that maketh rich, and bygeth all good with her. She fylleth the whole house with her gyftes, and the garners with her treasure. The feare of the Lorde is the crowne of wysdome, and geueth plenteous peace and health. He hath sene her & nombred her: (both these are the gyftes of God) knowledg and vnderstandyng of wysdome hath he poured out as rayne, and the that helde her fast, hath he brought vnto honour.

D The feare of the Lorde is the rote of wysdome, and her braunches are longe lyfe. In the treasures of wysdome is vnderstandyng and deuocyon of knowledg, but wysdome is abhorred of synners. The feare of y Lorde dyspueh out synne: for he that is without feare cannot be made righteous, and his wylfull boldnes is his awne destruccyon. A patient man wyll suffre vnto the tyme, & then shall he haue y rewarde of ioye. A good vnderstandyng wyll hide his wordes for a tyme, & many mens lippes shall speake of his wysdome. In the treasurs of wysdome is y declaracyon of doctryne, but the synner abhorreth the worshippe of God. My sonne, yf thou desire wysdome, kepe the commaundement, and God shall geue her vnto the: for the feare of the Lorde is wysdome and nurture, he hath pleasure in fayth and louyng mekenesse, & he shall fill the treasures ther of. Be not obdurate and vnfaythfull to the feare of the Lorde, and come not vnto hym with a double hert. Be not an ypocrite in y syght of me, and take good hede what thou speakest. Marke well these thynges, lest y happē to fall and byryng thy soule to dishonoure, and so God discour thy secretes, and cast the downe in the myddest of the congregacyon: because thou woldest not receaue y feare of God, and because thy herte is full of faynednes and disceate.

The ii. Chapter.

He exhorte the seruantes of God to ryghteousnes, loue, vnderstandyng, and patience, & exhorte hym that feareth God, to beleue, to hope, and to loue, because God nether confoundeth ner forsaketh them y trust in hym. A curse vpon the felle, fere, and impacient of herte.

My sonne, yf thou wilt come into y seruyce of God, stande fast in ryghteousnes and feare, and arme thy soule to tēcyon: sette thyne hert and be patient: bowe downe thyne eare: receaue the wordes of vnderstandyng, and synke not a waye, whē thou art entyled. holde the fast vpo God, ioyne thy selfe vnto him, and suffre that thy life maye encrease at y last. Whatsoeuer happeneth vnto y receaue it: suffre in heynesse, and be patient in thy trouble. * For lyke as golde & syluer are tryed in the fyre, euen so are acceptable me in y fornaice of aduersite. Welcme i God, & he shall helpe the: orde thy waye a ryght, and put thy trust in him. holde fast his feare and growe therein. O ye that feare the Lorde take sure holde of his mercy: synke not a waye from him, that ye fall not. O ye that feare y Lorde, beleue him, and your reward shall not be emptye. O ye that feare y Lorde, put your trust in him, and mercy shall come vnto you for pleasure. O ye y feare y Lorde, set poure loue vpon hym, and poure hertes shalbe lychtened.

Consyde the olde generacions of me (O y pe chylzen) & marke them well: * was the reuer eny one confounded, that put his trust in the Lorde? Who euer continued in his feare, and was forsake? Or whom dyd he euer despise, that called faithfully vpo him? For God is gracious & mercifull, he forgue thy synnes in the tyme of trouble, and is a defender for all them that seke him in the trouth. Who be vnto him, y hath a double hert, wyche lippes and euell occupied handes, and to the sinner that goeth two maner of wayes. Who be vnto the y are loose of herte, which put not their trust in God, & therfore shall they not be defended of hym. Who be vnto the that haue lost patience, forsaken y right wayes, and are turned back into frowarde wayes. What will they do, when the Lorde shall begynne to dysset them?

They that feare the Lorde, wyll not mistrust his worde, and they y loue hym, wyll kepe his commaundement. They that feare the Lorde, will seke out the thynges, that are pleasaunt vnto him, & they that loue hym: shall fulfyll hys lawe. They that feare the Lorde, wyll prepare theyr hertes, and humble their soules in his sight. They that feare y Lorde, kepe hys commaundementes, and will be patient tyll they se him self, sayyng: * better it is for vs to fall into y hades of y Lorde, then into the handes of men: for hys mercy is as grete as hym selfe.

The iii. Chapter.

To oure father and mother ought we to geue double honour. Of the blessing and curse of the father and mother. No mā ought ouer curpous ly to seache out the secretes of God.

The chylzen of wysdome are a congregacion of the righteous, and their exerceple is obedience and loue. Hecare me poure father (O my dreare chylzen) and do there after, that ye maye be safe. * For y Lorde wyll haue the father honoured of the chylzen: and loke what a mother commaundeth her chylde to do, he will haue it kepte. Who so honoureth hys father, his synnes shall be forgiven him: & he that honoureth nouret his mother is lyke one þ gathereth treasure together. Who so honoureth his father, shall haue ioye of his awne chylde: & whē he maketh his prayer he shall be herde. He þ honoureth his father, shall haue a lōge lyfe: and he that is obedyent for the Lordes sake, his mother shall haue ioye of hym.

Ecc v noureth

B He that feareth the Lord, honoureth his father & mother, and doth the scrupce, as it were vnto the Lord him selfe. Honoure thy father in dede, in worde & in all paciēce, that thou mayest haue Gods blessing, & his blessing shall abyde with the at the last.

* Eccl. xxi. b.

* The blessing of the father buydeth vp the houses of the childe, but þ mothers curse roteth out the foundations. Reioyse not whē thy father is reproued, for it is not honoure vnto the, but a shame. For the wor- ship of a mā's father is his awne worship, & where the father is without honour, it is the dishonour of the sonne. My sonne, make moch of thy father i his age, and greue him not as longe as he liueth. And þ his vnder- standyng faple, haue pacience wth hym, and despise him not in thy strength. For the good dede þ thou shewest vnto thy father, shall not be forgottē, and when thou thy self wantest, it shall be rewarded the (& for thy mothers offence thou shalt be recompensed with good, yee it shall be founded for the in- ryghteousnes) and in the daye of trouble þ shalt be remembred: thy synnes also shall melt awaye, like as the ple in the fayre war- me wether.

C He that forsaketh his father, shall come to shame: and he that defiect his mother, is cursed of God. My sonne, pferourne thy worckes with louynge mekenesse, so shalt þ be loued aboue other mē. The greater thou art, þ more humble thy self (in all thynges) and thou shalt fynde fauour in the syght of God. For greate power belōgeth onely vnto God, and he is honoured of the lowlye.

* Seke not out the thynges þ are aboue thy capacite, and searce not the grounde of soch thynges as are to myghte for the: but loke what God hath commaunded the: thynke vpon that all waye, and be not curpous in many of his worckes. For it is not nede- full for the, to se wth thyne eyes the thyn- ges þ are secrete. Make not thou to moche searce in superfluous thynges, and be not cu- rious i many of his worckes: for many thin- ges are shewed vnto the all ready, which be aboue the capacite of men. The medlinge w- soch hath begiled many a man, and tangled their wittes in vanite. Now he that loueth parell, shall perishe therein.

D An harde herte shall fare euell at the last: (and he that loueth daunger, shall perishe therein) an herte that goeth two wayes, shall not prospere: and he that is froward of herte will ener be worse and worse.) A wycked herte shall be laden with sorowes, and the vn- godly synner wil heape one synne vpo an a- ther. The coscel of þ proude hath no healt for the plante of synne shall be roted out in the, and not knowne. The herte of hym that hath vnderstandyng shall perceaue þe thin- ges, and a good eare will gladly herken vnto wisdom. An herte that is wise and hath vnderstandyng, will abstayne from synnes, and increase i the worckes of righteoulnes. Water quencheþ burnyng fyre, & mercy reconcileth synnes. God hath respecte vnto him that is thanckfull: he thynketh vpon him agaynst þ tyme to come: so that whē he falleth, he shall fynde a stronge holde.

The. iiii. Chapter.

C Almes must be done with all meakenes. The studie of wisdom is her frute. A iudge ought to be mercifull, An exhortacion to eschue euell and to do good.

My sonne, * defraude not þ poore of his almes, and turne not awaye thyne eyes fro hym that hath nede. Despise not an hongry soule, and defie not the poore in his necessite: greue not the herte of him that is helpelesse, and with- drawe not the gift from the nedefull. Refuse not þ prayer of one that is in trouble, tur- ne not awaye thy face from the nedye. Cast not thyne eyes asyde from þ poore, for anye euell wyll, that thou geue hym not occasion to speake euell of the. For þ he complayne of the in þ vtternes of his soule, his prayer shall be herde: euen he that made him, shall heare him. Be courteous vnto the company of the poore, hūble thy soule vnto the elder, and bowe downe thy head to a man of wor- shippe. Let it not greue the to bowe downe thyne eare vnto þ poore, but paye thy dett, and geue him a frendly answere, and that w- mekenesse.

* Delpyer hym that suffreth wronge from the hāde of the oppreſſour, and be not saynt harted when thou syttest in iudgement. Be mercifull vnto the fatherlesse as a father, & be in steade of an hūbande vnto their mo- ther: so shalt thou be as an obediēt sonne of the hieſt, and he shall loue the more thē thy mother doth: Wylsome bresteth lyfe into her chylde, receaue them that seke her, & will go before the in the waye of righteou- nes. He that loueth her, loueth life: and they that seke her diligently, shall haue greate ioye. They that kepe her, shall haue the he- ritage of lyfe: for where she entreth in, there is the blessing of God. They that honoure her, shall be the seruantes of the holy one: and they that loue her, are beloued of God. Who so geueth eare vnto her, shall iudge þ weathe: and he that hath respecte vnto her, shall dwell safely.

He

C He that beleueth her, shall haue her in pos- session, and his generacion shall endure: for when he falleth, she doth go with hym, and choseth him among the best. Feare, dyle & temptation shall the bynge vpon him, and trye him in her doctrine: tyll she haue so pro- ued him in his thoughtes, that he commytt his soule vnto her. Then shall she stablishe hym, bynng the ryght waye vnto hym, ma- ke him a glad man, shewe him her secretes, and heape vpon him the treasures of know- ledge, vnderstandyng and ryghteousnes. But þ he go wrong, she shall forsake him, and geue hym ouer into the handes of his enemye.

D My sonne, make moch of thy tyme, eschue the thyng that is euell, and for thy lyfe sha- me not to saye the trueth. For there is a sha- me that bringeth synne, and there is a shame that bringeth worshippe and fauour. * Ac- cepte no person after thyne awne wyll, that thou be not confounded to thyne awne de- cape. Be not a shamed of thy neyghboure in his aduersite, and kepe not back thy coucell when it maye do good, nether hyde thy wys- dome in her bewty. For in the tōge is wys- dome knowne, so is vnderstandyng know- ledge and lerninge in the talkyng of þ wise, & stedfastnesse in the worckes of ryghteou- nes. In no wyse speake agaynst the worde of treuth, but be ashamed of the lyces of thine awne ignoraunce. Shame not to cōfesse thy- ne erroure, and submytte not thy selfe vnto euery man because of synne. Withstāde not the face of the mighty, & strue þ not against þ streame. But for ryghteousnes take pay- nes with all thy soule, & for the truth try- ue thou vnto death, and God shall fyght for the agaynst thyne enemyes. Be not hastye in thy tong, nether slack and negligēt in thy worckes. Be not as a lyon in thyne awne house, destroyng thy housholde folkes, and oppreſſing the that are vnder the. * Let not thyne hande be stretched out to receaue, and put when thou shuldest geue.

C In thynges maye we not put any confidence. The vengeance of God ought to be feared, and to re- pentance maye we not be slowe.

* Luke. xxi. c.
* Eccl. xxi. c.

Rust not vnto thy riches, & saye not: tush, I haue ynough for my lyfe. (For it shall not helpe in the tyme of vengeance and tempta- cyon.) Followe not the lust of thyne awne herte in thy strength, and saye not: tush, how haue I had strength, or who will bynng me vnder because of my worckes: for doubtles God shall auenge it. And saye not. I haue commytted no synnes, but what euell hath happened me: For the almyghtye is a pa- ciēt rewarder. * Because thy synne is forge- uē the, be not therfore without feare, nether heape one sinne vpo another. * And saye not: tush, the mercy of the Lord is great, he shall forgue me my synnes, be they neuer so ma- ny. * For lyke as he is mercifull, so goeth wrath from hym also, and his indignacyon commeth downe vpon synners.

Make no tarpeng to turne vnto þ Lord, and put not of from daye to daye: for sode- nly shall his wrath come, and in the tyme of vengeance he shall destroye the. * Trust not in wycked riches for they shall not helpe the in the daye of punisshment & wrath. Be not caried about to euery wynde, & goo not into euery waye: for so doth the synner that hath a double tōge. Stāde fast in the waye of the Lord, be stedfast in thy vnderstandyng, abyde by the worde, ad folowe the worde of peace and righteoulnes. Be gentle to heare the worde of God, that thou mayest vnder- stande it, & make a true answere with wis- dome. * Be swift to heare, but slowe & pa- ciēt in geuyng answere. If thou hast vnderstandyng, shawe thy neyghboure an an- swere: If no, laye thine hād vpo thy mouth: lest thou be trapped in an vndiscrete worde, and so confounded. Honour and worshippe is in a mans wyse talking, but the tōge of the vndiscrete is his awne destruccio. * Be not a preuy accuser as longe as thou lyuest, and vse no sleaunders wth thy tōge. For shame and sorow goeth ouer the cheſe, & an euell name ouer him that is double tonged: but ye þ is a preuy accuser of other mē, shall be hated, enuyed and confounded. C It is þ propriete of a synner to be euell tonged. The doctrine & good coscell of þ wyse is to be embraced, wyldome shuld be searched for. The preſect thereof.

Be not thy neyghbours enemye for thy frendes sake: for who so is euell shall be the heyre of rebuke and dishonoure, and whosoeuer beareth enuye & a double tōge offendeth. * Be not proude in the deuyce of thyne awne vnder- standyng (lest thy strength be hurt by foolp- nes, and) lest thy leaues wither, ad thy frute be destroyed, ad so thou be left as a drie tree (in the wilderness.) For a wycked soule de- stroyeth him that hath it, maketh him to be laughed to scoorne of his enemyes, (& byn- geth hym to the porciō of the vngodly.) * A swete worde multiplyeth frendes, and pa- cifieth them that be at variaunce, & a thak- full tōge will be plenteous in a good man. An enemy is swete in his lippes, he ca make many wordes & speake many good thiges: yee he can wepe with hys eyes, but in hys herte he ymagineth, how to throwe the into y pytt: & yf he may fynde oportunitie, he will not be satisfied with bloud. If aduersite come vpo y, thou shalt fynde him there first, & though he ptefede to do the help, yet shall he vndermune the. He shal shake his head, and clappe his hades ouer y for very gladnes: & whyle he maketh many wordes, he shal desygne his countenance.

The. xlii. Chapter.

The companies of the proude and of the ryche are to be clicheued. The loue of God: yf he do company with the ryche.

Who so toucheth pyttch, shal be fylled with thall: and he that is familiar w the proude, shal clothe him selfe w pydde. He taketh a burthen vpon him, that accompanieth a more honorable man then him selfe. Therefore, kepe no familiarite with one that is richer then thy selfe. How agree the ketell and the pot together? for yf the one be smytten agaynst the other, it shall be broke. The ryche dealeth vnrygh- teously, & threatheneth withal: but y poure he yng oppressed & wrongeously dealt with- all, suffreth scarcenes, & geneth fayre wo- zes. If thou be for hys profyt, he vseth the: but yf thou haue nothyng, he shal forsake y. As longe as thou hast eny thing of thyne a wne, he shal be a good felow with the: yee, he shal make the a bare man, and not be so- ry for the. If he haue nede of the, he shal de- fraude the: and (with a prey mocke) shall he put the in an hope, and geue the all good wordes and saye: what watest thou? Thus shall he shame the in his meate, vntill he ha- ue supte the cleane vpon thylse of thyse, ad at y last shall he laugh y to scozne. Afterward, when he seyth that thou hast nothyng, he shal forsake the, and shake his heade at the. (Submytte thy selfe vnto God, and wayte vpon hys hande.)

Beware, that thou be not disceaued and brought downe in thy symplenesse. Be not to humble in thy wisdom: lest when thou art brought lowe, y be disceaued thowow fooly- quies. If thou be called of a myghtye man, absent thy selfe, so shall he call the to him y more oft. Desease not y vnto him, that thou be not shutt out: but goo not y farre of, lest he forgett y. Withdraue not thy self fro his speach, but beleue not his many wordes. For w moch comunicaciō shall he tēpte the, & (with a prey mocke) shall he questyon the of thy secrettes. The vnnereyfull minde of his shal marck thy wordes, he shal not spa- re to do y hurte, & to put y in prison. Bewa- re, ad take good hede to thy selfe, for y wal- kest in parcel of thy ouerthrowyng.

Now when thou hearest his wordes, ma- ke y as though thou werest in a dreame, and wake vp. Loue God all thy lyfe longe, and call vpo him in thy nede. Euery beast loueth his like, eue so let euery mā loue his neygh- bour. All flesh will resorte to their lyke, and euery man will kepe company with soch as he is him self. But as y wolfe agreeth with the lambe, so doth y vngodly with the righ- teous. * What felyshipp shulde an holy man haue with a dogge. How can the ryche & the poure agree together? The wilde Ass is the Lyons praye in the wyldernes, euen so are poure men the meate of the ryche. Lyke as the proude mape not awake wyth lowly- nes, euen so doth the ryche abhorre the pou- re: If a ryche man fall, hys frendes set hym vp agayne: but when the poure falleth, hys aquapntaunce forsake hym. If a ryche man fall into an erreure, he hath many helpers: he speakech proude wordes, and yet men iustifye hym.

But yf a poure man go wronge, he is pu- nyshed: yee though he speake wisely, yet can it haue no place. When the ryche man spea- keth euery body holdeth his toge: and loke what he saith, they prayse it vnto the clou- des. But yf the poure mā speake, they saye: What felowe is thys? and yf he do amysse, they shal destrope him. Riches are good vnto him that hath no synne in his conscience, and pouerte is a wicked thing in the mouth of the vngodly. The herte of man chaigeth his countenance, whether it be in good or euell. A chearfull countenance is a token of a good herte, for els it is an harde thyng to knowe the thought.

The. xliii. Chapter.

The offence of the tongue. Man is but a bayne thyng, happy is he that cōtynneth in wyseboome.

Blessed is y man, * that hath not fallen w the worde of his mouth, and is not pycked with y consci- ce of sinne. Happy is he that hath no heynenes in his mynde, and is not fallen from his hope. It becometh not a couetous man and a nygarde, to be ryche: and what shulde a nygarde do w golde? He that with al his carefulness heapeth together vnrygh- teously, gathereth for other folkes, & ano- ther man shal make good chere w his goo- des. He that is wicked vnto hym selfe, how shulde he be good vnto other men? How can soch one haue eny pleasure of his goo- des? There is nothyng worse, then whe one disfaouerech hym self, and this is a rewar- de of his wyckednes. If he do eny good, he doth it not knowyng therof, and agaynst his wyll, and at the last he declareth his vn- graciousnes. A nygarde hath a wycked eye, he turneth awaye his face, & despyseth his a wne soule. * A couetous mā eye hath neuer ynough in the porcyon of wyckednes vntyll the tyme that he wyther awaye, and haue lost his a wne soule.

A wycked eye spareth bred, and there is scarcenes vpo his table. My sonne, do good to thy selfe of y thou hast, and geue the Loz de his due offerynges. Remembre that death tarieth not, & how that y couenaunt of the graue is shewed vnto the: for y couenaunt of this world shal dye y death. * Do good vnto thy frende before thou dye, and accor- dyng to thy abylyte reach out thyne hand, and geue vnto y poure. Be not disapoynted of the good daye, and let not the porcyon of the good daye ouerpasse the. Shalt thou not leaue thy trauayles and labours vnto other men? In the deuydyng of the herita- ge geue & take & sanctifye thy soule. Wor- ke thou ryghteousnes before thy death, for in the hell there is no meat to fynde. * All flesh shal fade awaye lyke grasse, and lyke a flouyng leafe in a grene tre. Some growe, some are cast downe: euen so is y ge- neracyon of flesh and bloude: one cometh to an ende, another is borne.

All transytoythynges shal faple at the last, and y worcker therof shal go withal. Euery chosen worke shalbe iustified, and he that medled withal, shal haue honour the- rin. Blessed is y man y kepeth hym in wyl- dome, ad exerceyth hym selfe in vnderstan- dyng, and with dyscrecyon shal he thynke vpon the foze knowledge of God. The. xlv. Chapter.

The goodnes that foloweth hym which feareth God, God reiecteth and casteth of the synner. God is not the auctor of euell.

De feareth God, will do good: & who so kepeth the lawe, shall optayne wylsome. As an ho- norable mother shall she mete hym, & as a virgyn shall she re- ceauie him. * With y bled of lyfe & vndersta- dyng shal she fede hym, & geue him y wa- ter of wholsome wylsome to dryncke. If he be constāt in her, he shal not be moued: yf he holde hym fast by her, he shal not come to confusyon. She shal byryng hym to ho- noure amonge his neyghbours, and in the myddest of the congregacyon shal she open his mouth. With y sprete of wylsome and vnderstandyng shal she fyll hym, and clothe hym w the garment of glory. She shal hea- pe the treasure of myrth & ioye vpon hym, and geue hym an euerylastyng name to he- ritage. Folysh men will not take holde vpo her: but soch as haue vnderstandyng, wyll mete her (Folysh men shal not se her) for she is farre from pryde & disceate. Men y go aboute w lyes, wyll not remembre her: but men of trouth shalbe founde in her, and shal prospere euen vnto the beholdyng of God. Prayse is not semely in y mouth of the vn- godly, for he is not sent of the Lord. For of God cometh wylsome, and the prayse shall stande by the wylsome of God, and shall be plenteous in a faythfull mouth, and y Loz- de shal geue her vnto hym.

Saye not y: It is the Lordes faute that I am gone by, for y shal not do the thyng y God hateth. Saye not y: he hath caused me to do wroge, for he hath no nede of y vngod- ly. God hateth all abhominacion of errour, & they that feare God wyll lone none soch. * God made man fro the begynnyng, & left him in y hand of his counsell. He gaue him his cōmaundementes & preceptes: yf y wylt obserue y cōmaundementes, & kepe acceptable faithfulness for euer, they shal preserue the. * He hath sett water & fire before the, reach out thyne hāde vnto which y wilt. Before man is lyfe & death, good & euell: loke what him lyketh, shalbe geuen him. For y wyl do me of God is greate and myghty in power, & beholdeth all men contynually. The. xvi. Chapter.

Of vngodly and wicked chylde. No man can hyde hym selfe from God: An exhortacion to the craunge of instruccyon.

I Clype not thou in the multitude of vngodly chylde, and haue no pleasure in them, yf they feare not God. Trust not thou to thy lyfe, ad regarde not thy labours: for one sonne of feareth God, is better, the a thousande vngodly. And better it is for a man to dye without chylde, then to leaue behynde hym such chylde as are vngodly. For by one he hath vnderstandynge, maye a whole ctyte be vpholden, but though he vngodly be many, yet shal it be wasted thowow them. Many such thynges hath myne eye sene, & greater thynges the these haue I herde with myne eares. * In the congregacyon of he vngodly shall a fyre burne, & among vnsapthfull people shall the wrath be kyndled.

* Eccl. xxi. b.

The olde gyauntes optayned no grace for thynges, which were destroyed, trusting to thynges a wne strenght. Neither spared he the among who Loth which was a straunger, but smot the & abhorred the because of the pride of thynges wordes. He had no pytie vpon the, but destroyed all he people, & were so skoute in synne. * And for so moch as he ouerlawe not the fyre hundreth thousande, that gathered the felices together in he hardenes of their herte: it were maruell yf one hepyng hardnecked, shuld be free. * For mercy & wrath is w hym: he is both myghty to forgyue and to poure out displeasure. Lyke as his mercy is greete, euen so is his punysshment also, he iudgeth a man accordyng to his workes. The vngodly shall not escape in his spoyl, & the lōge paciēce of him that sheweth merce, shall not byde behinde. All merce shall make place vnto eueri man accordyng to he worthynes of his workes, & after he vnderstandynge of his pylgremage.

Saye not thou: I wyll hyde my selfe fro God, for who wyll thynke vpon me from aboue? I shall not be knowne i so greete a heape of people, for what is my soule among so many creatures? Beholde, heauen, yee the heauen of heauens, the depe, the earth, and all that therein is, shall be moued at his presence: the mountaynes, the hylls, & the foundacyon of he earth shall shake for feare, when God visyfyeth them. These thynges doth no herte vnderstande, but he vnderstandeth eueri herte, & who vnderstandeth his wayes? No man seyth his secretes, and the moost part of his workes are secrete. Who wyll declare the workes of his ryghteousnes? Or who shalbe able to abyde them? For the couenaunt is farre from some, and tryenge out of men is in the ende. He that is humble of herte, thynketh vpon soche thynges: but an vnde and erroneous man casteth his mynde vnto folysh thynges.

My sonne, herken thou vnto me, and lerne vnderstandynge, and marche my wordes with thyne herte. I wyll geue the a sure doctryne, & plainly shal I instructe the (marke my wordes the in thyne herte: for in ryghteousnes of he spete do I speak of the wonders that God hath shewed among his workes from the begynnyng. And in he truely do I shew he knowledge of hym.) God hath sett his workes in good order from the begynnyng, and parte of them hath he sundred from the other. He hath garnysed his workes from euclastynge, and they be gympynges, accordyng to their generacyons. None of the hyndered another, nether was any of them dysobedient vnto his wordes. After this, God looked vpon he earth, and fylled it with his goodes. With all maner of luyngge beastes hath he couered the grounde, and they all shalbe turned vnto earthe agayne.

The creatyon of man, and the goodnes that God hath done vnto hym. Of faulmes and repentaunce.

God * Hope man of the earth, and made hym after his owne ymage, & turned hym vnto earthe agayne, and clothed him with his awne strength. He gaue him the nombze of dayes and certayne tyme, yee & gaue him power of he thynges that are vpon earthe. He made all they to stande in awe of hym, so that he had the domynyon of all beastes and foules. * He made out of hym an helper lyke vnto him selfe, & gaue them dyscrecyon and toge, eyes & eares, and a herte to vnderstande, and fylled them with instruccyon & vnderstandynge. He created for them also the knowledge of the spete, fylled their hertes with vnderstandynge, & shewed them good & euell. He sett his eye vpon they hertes, declaring vnto them his greete and noble workes: that they shulde prayse his holy name together, reioyse of his wonders, & be tellyng of his noble actes. * Besyde this he gaue them instruccyon, and the lawe of lyfe for an heritage.

They that haue had vnderstandynge, haue dealt wysely in wordes, haue vnderstande the true thynges, and haue sought out wysely sentences and iudgements. * For lowe not thy lustes, but turne the from thyne awoe wyll. Wysely men make wysely men rennagates, and put men of vnderstandynge to reprove: and he that accompanieth aduocaters, shall become a wycked man. Mothes & wormes shall haue hym to heretage, yee he shall be set vp to a greater example, and his soule shall be rotd out of the nombre. * He that is hasty to geue credence, is lyght mynded, & doth agaynst hym selfe. * Who so reioysyth in wyckednes, shall be punyshed: he y hateth to be reformed, his lyfe shall be shortned, & he that abhorreth bablyng of wordes, quencheth wyckednes. He that offendeth agaynst his awoe soule, shall repent it: and he that reioysyth in wyckednes, shall be punyshed.

* Eccl. xlii. d and. xlii. c.

* Eccl. xlii. d and. xlii. c.

Rehearse not a wycked & churlysh word twyle, and y shalt not be hyndered. Shew thy secretes nether to frende ner foe: and yf thou hast offended, tell it not out. For he shall herken vnto the & marck y: and when he fyndeth oportunitie, he shall hate y (and so shall he be allwaye aboute y). * If thou hast herde a worde agaynst thy neyghbour, let it be deed wythyn the: and be sure, thou shalt haue no harme thereby. A foole traunpeth with a word, lyke as a woman that is payned with bearynge of a chyld. Lyke as an arowe shot in a dogges thynghe, so is a worde in a foles herte. * Tell thy frede his faute, lest he be ignoraunt, and save: I haue not done it, or yf he haue spoken, that he do it nomoze. Reproue thy neyghboure, that he kepe his tonge, & yf he haue spoken, that he save it nomoze.

Tell thy neyghbour his faute, for oft tymes an offence is made, & geue not credence to euery worde. A man falleth somtyme with his tonge, but not with his wyll. For

* what is he, that hath not offended in his tonge: geue thy neyghbour warnynge, before thou threaten him, & geue place vnto the lawe of the Lord. The feare of God is all wysdome, and he that is a ryght wysely man, kepeth y lawe. As for the doctryne of wyckednesse, it is no wysdome, and the proudece of synners is no good vnderstandynge: it is but wyckednesse, & abhominaccon & a blasphemynge of wysdome. A simple man of small vnderstandynge y feareth God, is better then one y hath moch wysdome, & trasgesseth y lawe of y hys selfe. A crafty sottell man can be wysely, but he is vnyghteous, & wyth gyftes he wasteth the open & manifest lawe. A wycked man can behaue hym selfe humbly, and can douke with his head, & yet is he but a dysceauer wythyn. He bydeth his face, & dysguyseth it: & because he shulde not be knowne, he preuenteth the.

And though he be so weake that he can do y no harme, yet when he may fynde oportunitie, he shall do some euell. A man may be knowne by his face, & one y hath vnderstandynge, may be perceaued by y loke of his countenance. * A mans garmet, laughter, & goynge, declare what he is.

The. xx. Chapter.

Of correccion and repentance. Of the gyfte of the wysely man, and of the sole. Of synners.

Some man * reproveth his neyghbour oft tymes, but not in due season: Agayne, some ma holdeth his tonge, & he is wysely & dyscrete. It is moch better to geue warnynge and to reprove, then to beare euell wyll: for he y knowledgeth hym self opely, shall be preserued fro hurt & destruccyon. Lyke as when a gelded man thowow desyre & lust dyspleth a mayden, euen so is it with him that vseth violence: and vnyghteousnes in y lawe. * How good a thyng is it, a man that is reprovod to shew openly his repentance: for so shalt thou escape wyllfull synne.

Some man kepeth silence, and is founde wysely: but he that is not ashamed what he sayeth, is hatefull. Some man holdeth his tonge, because he hath not y vnderstandynge of the language: & some man kepeth silence, waytynge a couenient tyme. * A wysely man wyll holde his tonge tyll he se oportunitie, but a waton and vnydiscrete body shall regarde no tyme. He that vseth many wordes, shall hurte his awoe soule: & he that taketh auctorite vpon hym vnyghteously, shall be hated. Some ma hath oft tymes prosperite in wycked thynges: Agayne, some man getteth moch, and hath harme & losse. There is some gyft y is nothig worth: Agayne there is some gyft, whose rewarde is double. Some man getteth a fal for beyng to proude, & some cometh to wysdome fro lowe estate.

estate. * Some man byeth moch for a lytle pryce, and must paye for it seuen folde.

A wysely man with his wordes maketh hym selfe to be loued, but the fauoure of foolles shall be poured out. The gyft of the wysely shall do the no good, for his eyes are seuenfolde. * He shall geue lytle, and save he gaue moch: he openeth his mouth and cryeth out, as it were one that cryeth out wyne. On dape he ledeth, to morow asketh he agayne, and soch a man is to be hated. The foole sayeth: I haue no frende, I haue no thanke for all my good dedes: yee euen they y eat my bread, speake no good of me. * How oft, & of how many shall he be laughd to scoone: he taketh a more perelous fall by soch wordes then yf he fell vpon the grounde: euen so shall the falles of wycked men come hastely. In y mouth of hym that is vntaught, are many vnconuenient & vnmete wordes. A wysely sentence shall not be allowed at y mouth of the foole, for he speaketh it not in due season.

Some man synneth not, because he hath not wherewithall, and in his reast he shall be stynged. Some man there is y destroyeth his awoe soule with shame, and for an vnwysely bodys sake destroyeth he it, and with acceptynge of personnes shall he vndo hym selfe. Some man promyseth his frede a gyft for very shame, and getteth an enemye of hym for naught. A lyfe is a wycked shame in a man, yet shall it be euer in the mouth of the vnwysely. A thefe is better, then a man y is accustomed to lye, but they both shall haue destruccyon to heretage. The condicions of lyers are vnhonest, and they shall be euer with them.

A wysely man shall byng hym selfe to honour with his wordes, * and he that hath vnderstandynge, shall be set by amonge grete men. * He that tyllteth his lade shall encrease his heape of corne: he that worketh ryghteousnes, shall be exalted, and he that pleaseth grete men, shall escape moche euell. * Rewardest and gyftes blynde the eyes of the wysely, & make hym domine, that he can not tell men they fautes. * Wysdome y is hyd, and treasure that is hoorded vp, what profyt is in them both: Better is he that kepeth his ignoraunce secrete, then a man that bydeth his wysdome.

The. xxi. Chapter.

Of the repentaunce of synne. We may not heape synne vpon synne. The boldnesse of an heretike. The ende of synners. Of the foole and of the wysely man. Of hym that curseth the deuell.

Monne, yf thou hast synned, do it nomoze: * but praye for thy foresynnes, that they maye be forgoen the. * He from synne, euen as from a serpent: for yf thou comest to nye her, she wyll byte the. The tethe therof are as the tethe of a lyon to slep the soules of men. The wyckednes of man is as a sharpe two edged swerde, which maketh soch woundes that they can not be healed.

Stryfe and wrongeous dealynge shall waste awaye a mans goodes, & thowow proude a ryche house shall be brought to naught: so the ryches of y proude shall be rotd out. * The prayer of the poore goeth oute of the mouth, and cometh vnto the eares, and his vengeaunce (or defence) shall come, and that hastily. Whoso hateth to be reformed, it is a token of a vngodly personne: but he y feareth God, wyll remembre hym selfe. A myghty man is knowne a farre of by his tonge: but he that hath vnderstandynge, perceaueth that he shall haue a fall.

Who so buyldeth his house wyth other mens cost, is lyke one that gathereth stoncs in wynter. * The congregaccon of y vngodly is lyke stubble gathered together, they ende is a flume of fyre. The waye of y vngodly is set with stoncs, but in they ende is hel, darchnes, & paynes. He that kepeth the lawe, wyll holde fast the vnderstandynge therof, and the ende of the feare of God is wysdome & vnderstandynge. He that is not wysely, wyll not be taught in good: but y vnwysely man aboundeth in wyckednesse: and where bytternes is, there is no vnderstandynge. The knowledge of y wysely shall flowe lyke water that renneth ouer, & his counsell is lyke a fountayne of lyfe.

The hert of a foole is lyke a broken vessel, he can kepe no wysdome. When a man of vnderstandynge heareth a wysely worde, he shall commende it, and make moch of it. But yf a voluptuous man heare it, he shall haue no pleasure therein, but cast it behynde his back. The talckyng of a foole is lyke an heuy burthen by y waye: but to heare a wysely ma speake, it is a pleasure. Where a doute is in the congregaccon, it is asked at the mouth of y wysely, and they shall pondre his wordes in they hertes. Lyke as is a house that is destroyed, euen so is wysdome vnto a foole. As for the knowledge of y vnwysely, it is but darke wordes. Doctryne is vnto hym that hath no vnderstandynge, euen as fetters aboute his fete, and lyke many clees vpon his ryght hand. * A foole lyfteth vp his voyce with laughter, but a wysely man shall scarce laugh secretly.

Lernynge is vnto a wysely man a Jewell of golde, & lyke an armelet vpon his ryght arme. A foolyhe mans fote is soone in his neyghbours house, but one that hath experience, shall be ashamed at y personne of the myghty. A foole wyll pepe in at y wyndow into y house, but he that is wel nourished, yf he will Wyll stande without. A foolysch man standeth herkenynge at the doze, but he that is wysse, wyll be ashamed.

The lyppes of the vnywysse wyll be telling foolysch thynges, but the wordes of soch as haue vnderstādyng, shalbe weyed in the balace. The hert of foolis is in their mouth, but the mouth of the wysse is in their herte. When the vngodly curseth the blasphemers he curseth hys owne soule. * A preuy accuser of other men shal desyle hys owne soule, and be hated of euery man: (but he that kepeth hys tonge & is dyscrete, shal come to honoure.)

The. xxi. Chapter.

The purgacion of the slouthfull. Of a foolysch sonne and daughter, we must haue dyscrecion how and to whom we ought to preache, of forswyng upon a deed. A foole is not to be much talked with all. Injuries and wronges do breake frendshyp and amptye.

A slouthfull body is moulded of a stone of claye, and euery man wyll speake to his dyspayse. A slouthful body is made of the donge of oxen and euery one that toucheth him must wash hys handes agayne. A mysfurnozed sonne is the dyshonoure of a father. A foolysch daughter shalbe lytle regarded. A wysse daughter is an heritage vnto her husbāde: but she that cometh to dyshonour, byngeth her father in heynnes. A daughter that is past shame, dyshonoureth both her father and her husband: a vngodly shal regarde her, but they both shal despile her. The playenge of a lycke is not mete where heynnes is, eue so is the correccion and doctryne of wysdome euer vnpleasant vnto foolis.

Who so teacheth a foole, is euen as one that gleweth a potherde together: as one that telleth a tale to hym that heareth him not, & as one that rayleth a man out of an heuy slepe. Who so telleth a foole of wysdome, is euen as a man, whych speaketh to one that is a slepe. When he hath tolde hys tale, he sayeth: what is a matter? When one dyeth, lamentacon is made for hym, because the lyght fapleth hym: euen so let men mourne ouer a foole: for he wanteth vnderstādyng. Make but lytle wepyng because of a deed: for he is come to rest, but the lyfe of the foole is worse then a deeth. Seuen dayes do men mourne for hym that is deed, but a lamentacon ouer a vnywysse & vngodly shuld endure all the dayes of theyr lyfe.

Talke not moch with a foole, and go not with hym that hath no vnderstādyng. Bewarre of hym, lest it turne the to trauayle, and thou shalt not be despyled whys synne. Depart from hym, & thou shalt fynde rest, and shalt not be drawen back into hys folyshnes. What is heuier then leader? And what shuld a foole be called els but leader?

* Sande, salt, & a lumpe of yron is easier to beare then an vnywysse, folysch, & vngodly man. Lyke as a band of wood boude together in a foudacion of a house canot be lowsed: euen so is it with a hert that is stablyshed in a thought of counsell. The thought of the wysse shal nether feare, ner be offended at any tyme.

Lyke as a fayre playstred wall in a town: after house, & an hys buyldyng, may not abyde a wynde & storme: euen so is a foles hert afrayed in his ymagynacon, he feareth at euery thyng, and cannot endure. (A wayeryng hart in a ymagynacon of a foole wyll not euer stond in awe, but he that abydeh in a comaundementes of God, wyll allwaye feare.) He that byngeth a mans eye, byngeth forth teares: and he that byngeth a hert, byngeth forth a meanyng & thought. Who so casteth a stone at the byrdes, frayeth them awaye: & he that blasphemeth his frend, breakeh the frendshyppe: though thou dreywest a swerde at thy frende, yet dyspayse not, for thou mayest come agayne to thy frende. If he speake sowrely, feare not, for ye may be agreed together agayne: excepte it be that a blasphemie him, disdayne hym, open his secretes and woude him traytorously: for all soch thynges shal dyspue awaye a frende.

We saythfull vnto thy neyghbour in his pouerte, that thou mayest reioyse with him also in his prosperyte. Abyde stedfast vnto hym in the tyme of hys trouble, that thou mayest be hepye with hym in hys heritage. Lyke as the vapour and smoke goeth out at the ouen before a fyre, euen so euell wordes, rebukes and threatenynges go before bloudsheddyng. We not ashamed to defende thy frende: as for me, I wyll not hyde my face from hym, though he shulde do me harme. Who so euer heareth it, shal beware of hym. * Who shal set a watch before my mouth, & a sure scale vpon my lyppes, that I fall not with them, and that my tonge destruye me not?

The. xxiii. Chapter.

A prayer agaynst pryde, lechery, and glotony. Of othes, blasphemie, and of wysse communycacyon. Of the chye kyndes of synnes. Agayn synnes procede of aduoutre. Of the feare of God.

O Lord, father and gouernoure of my lyfe, leaue me not in theyr ymagynacon and counsell. Oh lett me not fall in soch reprofe. Who wyll kepe my thought with the scourge, and the doctryne of wysdome in myne herte: that he spare not myne ignorance, that I fall not with them, lest myne ignorances increase, that myne offences be not many in nombre, and a my synnes excede not: lest I fall before myne enemyes, & so my aduersary reioyse. O Lord, father & God of my lyfe, leaue me not in not in theyr ymagynacon. O let me not haue a proude looke, but turne awaye all voluptrousnes fro me. Take fro me a lustes of a body, let not the helyres of vncleennes take holde vpon me, and geue me not ouer into an vnchastite. O oblyuate mynde.

Hear me (O ye chyldre) I wyll geue you a doctrine, how ye shal orde your mouth: who so kepeth it, shal not perissh thorow his lyppes, ner be hurt thorow wicked wordes. As for a synner, he shal be taken in his awne vanyte: he that is proude & curled, shal fall therin. * Let not thy mouth be accustomed to swearyng, for in it there are many falles. Let not the namyng of God be continually in thy mouth: (and medle not with the names of sayntes, for a shal not be excused of the) for lyke as a seruaut which is oft purged cannot be without some soze, euen so whatsoeuer he be that sweareth & nameth God, shal not be cleane purged fro synne. I ma that vseth moch swearyng, shalbe fylled with wyckednes, & the plage shal neuer go from his house. If he begyle his brother, his faute shalbe vpon hym: yf he knowledg not his synne, he maketh a doble offence, & yf he sweare in wayne, he shal not be foude ryghteous for his house shal be full of plagis.

* The wordes of the swearer byngeth deeth (God graunte a if he not founde in the house of Jacob.) But they that feare God, eschue all soch, & lye not weltryng in synne.

* Use not thy mouth to vnholist and fylthy talkyng, for in it is a worde of synne. Remembre thy father & thy mother, when thou art set among great men: lest God forget the in theyr syght, and lest thou dotynge in thy custome, suffre rebuke, & wyth not to haue bene bozne, and so curse the dape of thy natyuite. * The man that is accustomed with the wordes of blasphemie, wyll neuer be reformed all the dayes of his lyfe. To synne wyse is to moch, but the thyrd byngeth wrath & destruccyon. An hote stomack cannot be quenched (euen lyke a burnyng fyre) tyll it haue swalowed vp somthyng: euen so an vnchast man hath no rest in hys flesch, tyll he haue kyndled a fyre.

All byed is swete to an whozomonger, he wyll not leaue of, tyll he haue hys purpose. A man that breaketh wedlock, & regardeth not his soule, but sayeth: * Cusch, who seyth me? I am compassed aboute with darchnes, I walles couer me, no body seyth me: whom nede I to feare? The byest wyll not remembre my synnes. He vnderstandeth not a his eyes se all thynges, for all soch feare of men byngeth awaye the feare of God from hym: for he feareth onely the eyes of men, and cōfydeth not that the eyes of the Lorde are cleare then the sunne, beholdyng all the wayes of men and the grounde of the depe, and lokyng euen to mens hertes in secrete places. The Lorde God knewe all thynges: or euer they were made, and after they he brought to passe also he loketh vpo the all.

* The same man shalbe openly punysshed in the stretes of a cyte: & shalbe chased abrode lyke a ponge horse foale: and when he thynketh lest vpo it, he shalbe taken. This shal be put to shame of euery man, because he wolde not vnderstāde a feare of the Lorde. And thus shal it go also with euery wyse, that leaueth her husbāde, & getteth enherytaunce by a straunge mariage. * First, she hath bene vnfaythfull vnto the lawe of the byest: Secodly, she hath forsaken her awne husbāde. Thyrddly, she hath played the whoze in aduoutre, and gotten her chyldre by another man. She shalbe brought out of the cōgregacyon, and her chyldren shalbe lokod vpon. Her chyldren shal not take rote: & as for frute, her braunches shal byynge forth none. A shamefull reposte shal she leaue behynde hyr, and hyr dyshonoure shal not be put out. And they that remayne, shal knowe, that there is nothyng better, then the feare of God: and that there is nothyng sweter then to take hede vnto the comaundementes of the Lorde. A great worthyppe is it to folowe the Lorde, for loge lyfe shalbe receyued of hym.

The. xxv. Chapter.

A prayse of wysdome procedyng forth of the mouth of God. Of her wo:ches & place where she reaseth.

Wysdome shal prayse her self, and be honoured in God, & reioyse in the myddest of his people: In the cōgregacyon of a byest shal she open her mouth, and triumphe in the beholdyng of his power: In the myddest of her people shal she be exalted, and wondred at in the holy fulnesse. In the multitude of the chosen she shalbe comēded, and amonge soch as be blessed she shalbe praysed, and shal saye: I am come out of the mouth of the byest, fyrt bozne before all creatures. I caused a lyght that fapleth not to aryse in a heauen, and couered al the earth as a cloude. My dwelling is aboue in the hepyth, and my seate is in a pylle of the cloude. I my selfe alone haue gone rounde aboute a cōpasse of heauen, & pearced a grounde of a depe: I haue walked in a floudes of the see, and haue stande in all landes: my domynion is in euery people & in euery nacion, & with my power haue I troden downe the hertes of al, both hye & lowe.

In all these thynges also I sought rest, and a dwelling in some eueritaunce. So the creator of all thynges gaue me a comaundement: and he that made me, appoynted me a tabernacle, and sayde vnto me: Lett thy dwelling be in Jacob, & thyne inheritaunce Iff iii in Jf.

my power. I toke rote in an honorable people, euen in I porcyon of the Lorde & in hys herptage, and kepte me in the fulnes of the sapyntes. I am set vpon hye lyke a Cedar vpon Litanus, and as a Cypress tre vpon the mount Hermon. I am exalted lyke a palme tre in Cadex, & as a rose plante in Ieri-cho. As a fayre Olive tre in the felde, & am exalted lyke as a plantyne tre by I water syde. I haue geuen a smel in the stretes, as the Cynamon & Balme, that hath so good a sauour: pee a swete odoure haue I geuen as it were Myrrer of the beest.

 Job. xv. a.* I haue made my dwellynges to smell as it were of rosin, Galbanum, of Cloues, and Incense, and as Libanus when it is not hewen downe, and myne odoure is as the pure Balme. As I Cerebynte haue I stretched out my bzaunches, and my bzaunches are I bzaunches of honoure & loupge fauour. *
 Job. xiii. a.* As I vyne haue I brought forth frute of a swete sauour, and my floures are I frute of honoure and ryches. I am the mother of bwyte, of loue, of feare, of knowledge and of holy hope. * In me is all grace of lyfe and trouth. In me is all hope of lyfe & ver-tue. Come vnto me all ye I be despyous of me & fyll your selues with my frutes: for my sprete is sweter then hony, and so is my inherytance more then I hony combe: the remembraunce of me endureth for euermore.
They that eate me, shall haue the more ho-ger, and they I dyspyck me, shall thyrst the more. Who so herkeneth vnto me, shall not come to confusyon: & they that worke in me, shall not offende. They that make me to be known, shall haue euerlastyng lyfe.

 Eccl. xxi. a.* All these thynges are I boke of lyfe, the
and. xxi. a. couenaunt of the best, and the knowledge of the trouth. * Moses comaunded I lawe in the preceptes of ryghteousnes for an herytage vnto the house of Iacob, and comit-ted I promyses vnto Israel. * (Out of Da-uid hys seruaunt he ordered to rayse vp a most myghty kyng, sytting in the seat of honour for euermore.) * Chys fylleth with wysdome lyke as the floude of Bysson, and as the floude of Tygris, when the new fru-tes are a growynge.

 Job. xiii. c.* Chys byngeth a plenteous understan-dunge lyke Euphrates: and fylleth it vp, as Iordane in the tyme of haruest. Chys ma-keth nourture to breake forth as the lyght, & as I water Cyhon in I haruest. The fyrst hath not knowne her perfectly, nomore shall I last seke out I ground of her. For her thought is fuller then the see, and her coun-cell is profounder then the greate depe.

I wysdome haue cast out floudes. I am as a great waterboke out of I ryuer. I am as the ryuer Doxir, and as a water conbyte am I come out of the garden of pleasure.
I sayde: I wyll water I garden of my por-ge plantes, and fyll the frute of my byrth.
So my water boke became exteadynge greate, & my ryuer approached vnto the see.
For I make doctrine to be vnto all men as lyght as the fayre moonyng, & I shall make it to be euer I clearer. I wyll pearse thorow all the lower partes of I earthe, I wyll loke vpon all soch as be a slepe, & lyghter: all them I put theyr trust in the Lorde. I shall yet powre out doctrine, lyke as prophete, & leaue it vnto soch as seke after wysdome, & their generacyons shall I neuer fayle, vnto the holy euerlastyng world. * Behold, how that I haue not laboured for my selfe onely but for all them that seke after the treuth.

The. xlv. Chapter.

 Eccl. xxi. a.* Of these thynges whych please God, and of these whych he hatech. Of nyne thynges that be not to be suspect, and of the tenth: cheafely of the malice of a woman.

In these thynges there are, that my sprete I faouureth, whiche be also allowed before God and men. * The vynte of byethzen, & I loue of neyghbours, * a man and wyfe that agree wel together.

These thynges there be whiche my soule hateth, and I utterly abhorre the lyfe of them. A poore man that is proude. A ryche man that is a lyar, & an olde body that doteth, and is vnchaste.

If thou hast gathered nothyng in thy youth, what wilt I fynde then in thyne age.
How pleasaunt a thinge is it, when gray headed men are discrete, & when I elders can geue good counsell: How comely a thyng is wysdome vnto aged men: pee understan-dunge & counsell is a gloriouse thyng. The croune of olde men is to haue moche experie-ce: & the feare of God is theyr worshippe.

There be nyne thynges, whych I haue indged in my herte to be happye, & the teth wyll I tell forth vnto men with my tonge.
A man I whyle he lyueth, hath tope of his chyliden, and scyth I fall of hys enemyes.
Well is hym that dwelleth with an houswyfe of understadyng, & that hath not fallen with his tonge, & that hath not bene fayne to serue soch as are vnmete for hym.
Well is hym, I fyndeth a faythfull frende:
and well is him, whiche talketh of wysdome to an eare that heareth him. How great is he, I fyndeth wysdome and knowledge: Yet is he not aboue hym, I feareth I Lorde.
The

The feare of God hath set it selfe aboue all thynges. Blessed is the man, vnto whom it is graunted to haue the feare of God. Vnto whom shal he be lyckened, that kepeth it fast?
The feare of God is the begynnyng of his loue, and the begynnyng of fayth is to cleue fast vnto it. The heynnes of the hert is al the punysshment, & the wyckednes of a woman goeth aboue al. All punysshment & pla-ge is nothyng in comparisoun of the plage of the hert, euen so all wyckednes is nothyng to the wyckednesse of a woman.

 Eccl. xxi. a.* Whatsoeuer happeneth vnto a mā is no thyng in coparison of it, that his euell wil-lers do vnto hym: and all vengeaunce is no thyng to the vengeaunce of the enemye.

There is not a more wycked heade then the heade of the serpent, & there is no wyath aboue the wyath of a womā. * I wyll rather dwell with a lyon and dragon, then to kepe house wyth a wycked wyfe. The wyckednesse of a womā chaungeth her face, she shal moffel her countenaunce as it were a Beare, & as a sack shal she shewe it amonge I neghbours. Her husbāde is brought to shame amonge his neyghbours, and whē he heareth it, it maketh him to syghe. Al wyckednes is but lytle to the wyckednes of a woman, the porcyon of the vngodly shal fall vpon her.

 Eccl. xxi. a.* Lyke as to clymme vp a sandy waye is to the fete of the aged, euen so is a wyfe full of wordes to a styll quyet man. * Loke not to narrowly vpo the bewtye of a womā, lest thou be prouoked in desyre toward her. The wyath of a woman is dishonoure and great confusyon. Vnto a woman get the masterye, the is the contrary to her husbāde. A wycked wyfe maketh a soyr herte, an heuy countenaunce and a deed woūde. * (Weake hādes and feble knees is a womā that byr husbāde is not the better for.) Of the woman came the begynnyng of synne, & thowoe her we all are deed. Geue thy water no passage, no not a lytle, nether geue a wycked womā her wyll. Vnto the walcke not after thy hande, she shall confounde the in the syght of thy ene-myes. Cut her of then fro thy flesch, that she do not alwaye abuse the.

The. xlv. Chapter.

 Eccl. xxi. a.* The praple of a good woman. Of the feare of these thynges and of the fourth. Of the jelouse ad bron-ken woman. Of two thynges that cause sorowe, and of the thyrde whiche moueth wyath.

Ippye is the man that hath a berteous wyfe, for the nombre of his peares shal be dubble. An honest woman maketh her hus-bāde a ioyfull man, & we shall fyll I peres of his lyfe in peace. A verteous woman is a noble gyft, whiche shal be geuen for a good porcyon vnto soch as feare God: Whether a mā be rich or poore, he maye haue euer a mery herte, and a chearefull countenaunce. There be thre thynges that my hert feareth, and my face is afrayed of I fourth.

Treason in a cytye, a sedicious people, and noy some tonges, all these are heuyer then I death. But whē oue is gelous ouer his wyfe, it byngeth payne and sorowe vnto the hert: and a woman that telleth out all thin-ges, is a scourge of I tunge. When one hath an euell wyfe, it is euen as when an vnlyke payre of oxen must draw together, * he that getteth her, getteth a scorpyon. A bronken woman is a greate plage, for she cannot couer her a wyne shame.

 Eccl. xxi. a.* The whordome of a womā maye be knowen in the pryde of her eyes and eye lyddes.
* If thy daughter be not shamefast, holde her straitlye, lest she abuse her selfe thowoe ouer moch lyberte. Beware of all the disho-nestye of her eyes, and maruell not if she do agaynst the. Lyke as one that goeth by the waye & is thyrstie, so shal she ope her mouth and dyspycke of euery nexte water that she maye get. By euery hedge shal she fytt her arowe. A loupge wyfe reioyseth her hus-bāde, and fedeth hys bones wyth her wyldome. A womā of fewe wordes is a gyfte of God, and to al well nurtured myndes maye nothyng be compared.

An honest and manerly woman is a gyft aboue other gyftes, and there is no weyght to be compared, vnto a mynde that can rule it selfe. Lyke as the Sunne when it ariseth, is an ornament in the hye heauē of I Lorde, so is a verteous wyfe the bewtye of all her house. Lyke as the cleare lyght is vpon the holy candelstick, so is the bewtye of the face vpon an honest body. * Lyke as the golden pylers are vpo the sockettes of syluer, so are the fayre legges vpon a woman that hath a constant mynde. Perpetual are the foundacions I be layed vpon a whole stoupe rocke so are the commaundementes of God vpon the herte of an holy woman.

There be two thynges that greue my hert and in the thirde is a displeasure come vpon me. Whē an experte man of warre suffreth scarlenes ad pouerte. When men of under-standunge & wysdome are not sett by: And when one departeth from ryghteousnes vnto synne. Who so doth soch, the Lorde hath prepared hym vnto I swerde. There be two maner of thynges, whych me thyncke to be herde and perplous. A marchaunt can not lyghtely kepe him from wygge, nether a ta-uerner hym selfe from synne.

The. xlv. Chapter.

Of the poe that moue be ppe. The probacon of the man that feareth God. The unconstantie of a soule. The secretes of a synne are not to be vitered. The wicked punysshment edell, which resourceth vpon hym selfe.

Because of ponerte haue many one offended: ad he that seketh to be ryche, turneth hys eyes asyde. Lyke as a nape in the wall sticheth fast betwixte two stonies, euē so doth synne stiche betwixte the byer and the seller. If he holde hym not diligently in the feare of the Lorde, his house shall soone be ouerthrowne, Lyke as whan one syteth the sylthynes remaineth in synne: So remaineth there some vncleane thyng in the thought of man.

* Gen. vii. b

The out proueth p potters vessel, * so doth temptacion of trouble trye ryghteous men. * The tre of the felde is knowe by his frute, so is the thought of mans hert knowe by his wordes. Praple no man except thou haue herde him, for a mā is knowe by his wordes. If thou folowest ryghteousnes, thou shalt get her, ad put her vpon the as a fayne garment. And thou shalt dwell with her, ad she shall defende the for euer, and in the daye of knowledg thou shalt finde stedfastnesse. The bydes resorte vnto theyr like, so doth the trouth turne vnto the that be occupied withall. The lyon wayteth the praple: so do the synners lurke vpon p wordes of wyckednes. The talkyng of hym that feareth God, is nothyng but wyl dome: as for a fole he chaūgeth as the Moone. If p be amōg the vndiscrete, kepe thy worde to a conuenient tyme, but amōge soche as be wyse, speake on hardely. The talkyng of foolis is abhominacion, & their spoite is volupuousnesse ad misnurtoure. * Moch swerunge maketh the herte to stande vp: and to styue wpyth soch, stoppeth the eares.

* Eccl. xxi. b

* Eccl. xxi. b
and .xii. b

The styffe of the proude is bloudsheddynge, and theyr blaspheming is heuy to heare. * Who so discovereth secretes, leleth his credence, and fyndeth no frynde after hys wil. Loue thy frinde, ad bynde thy selfe in faythfulness with hym: but if thou be wyse, kepe thy secretes, thou shalt not gett hym agayne. For lyke as the man is that destroyeth hys enemye, so is he also that dealeth falsly in p frendshipp of his neyghboure.

Lyke as one that letteth a byde go out of his hande, cannot take her agayne: Euen so thou, if thou geue ouer thy frynde, thou canst not gett him agayne: For thou canst not come by hym, for he is to farre of. He is vnto the as a Roo escaped out of the snare, for his soule is wounded. As for woundes, they maye be bounde by agayne, & an eucl word maye be reconeyled: but who so be wyse, kepe the secretes of a frynde, there is no more hope to be had vnto hym.

* 10. x. b

* He that wycketh with the eyes, pmagi-neth some euell, and noman shall take hym from it. Whē thou art present, he shall bylie commed and praple thy wordes: but at the last he shall turne his taylor, and schalder thy sayenge. Many thynges haue I hated, but nothyng so euell, for the Lorde him selfe also abhorreth socha one.

* Who so casteth a stone on hys, it shall fall vpon hys awne head: and he that smyteth with gyle, woundeth him selfe. * Who so diggeth a pyt shall fall therein: & he that layeth a stone in his neyghbours waye, shall stromble theron: & he that layeth a snare for another, shall be take in it him selfe. * Who so geueth a wicked nopsome cosicel, it shall come vpon hym selfe, ad he shall not knowe fro whence. The proude blasphemie, and are scoornfull, but vengeaunce lurketh for them as a lyon. They that reioyse at the fall of p ryghteous shall be taken in the snare, anguythe of hert shall consume them before they dye. Anger & rygousnes are two abhominable thynges, & the vngodly hath the both vpon him.

The .xxviii. Chapter.

We ought not to desyre vengeaunce, but to forgiue the offence. Of the bydes of the tonge, and of the daungers therof.

Who that seketh vengeaunce, shall fynde vengeaunce of p Lorde, which shall surely kepe hym hys synnes. * Forgiue thy neyghboure the hurte that he hath done the, & so shall thy synnes be forgiue the also, whē p prayest. A man p beareth hatred agaynst another, how darre he desyre forgiuenesse of God? He that seeth no mercy to a man which is lyke hym selfe, how darre he aske forgiuenesse of hys synnes? If he that is but flesch, beareth hatred and kepeth it, who wyl intreate for his synnes? Remembre the ende, ad let enmyte passe, which seketh death and destruccion, & abyde thou in the commaundementes. Remembre the commaundement, so shalt thou not be rygous ouer thy neyghboure. Thincke vpon the couenaunt of the byest, & forgiue thy neyghbours ignoraunce. * Bewarre of strife, and p shalt make thy synnes fewer. For an angrie man kindleth variaunce, ad the vngodly disquieteth frendes, and putteth discorde among them that be at peace. * The more wadd there is, p more vehemēt is the fyre: and the myghtier that mē be, the greater is the wrath: and the longer p strife endureth, the more it burneth.

A hastye byawlinge kindleth a fyre, ad an hastye strife sheddeth bloude: A tonge also that beareth false witnesseth death. If thou blowe the sparke it shall burne. If p syt vpon it: it shall go forth, and both these out of p mouth. * The schalderer & dubble tonged is cursed, for many one p frendes letteth setteth he at variaunce. The thynde tonge hath disquieted many one, and druen them from one lande to another. Stronge cytycs of the riche hath it broken downe, and ouerthrowne the houses of greute men. (The strength of p people hath it brought downe and bene the decaye of myghtye nacpōns.) The thynde tonge hath cast out many an honest woman, & robbed the of theyr labours. Who so herkeneth vnto soch shall neuer finde rest, & neuer dwell safely. The stroke of the rod maketh edders, but the stroke of p tonge smyteth the bones in sunder. There be many that haue perished with the sword, but many mo thozowe the tonge.

Well is hym that is kepte from an euell tonge, and cometh not in the anger therof, which draweth not the pock of soche, and is not bounde in the bandes of it. For the pock therof is of pzon, and the bande of it of stele. The death therof is a very euell death: hell were better for one, then socha tonge. But the fyre of it maye not oppresse them that feare God, and the flamme therof maye not burne the. Socha forsaie the Lorde, shall fall therein: and it shall burne them, and noman shall be able to quenche it. It shall fall vpon them as a Lyon, and deuoure them as a leopard. Thou hedgest thy goodes wpyth thornes: why dost thou not rather make dozes and barres for thy mouth? Thou wepest thy golde and syluer: why dost thou not wepe thy wordes also vpon the balace? Bewarre, that thou syde not in thy tonge, and so fall before thyne enemyes, that lape wayte for the, (and thy fall be incurable, euen vnto death.)

The .xxix. Chapter.

We ought to lende oure money, and do almes. Of a faythfull man answeryng for his synne. Of lyberallite and hospitaletye.

Who so wyl thewe mercy, * lett hym lende vnto hys neyghboure: and he that is able, lett hym kepe the commaundement. Lende vnto thy neyghboure in tyme of his nede, & paye thou thy neyghboure agayne in due season. Kepe thy worde, and deale faythfully with him, and thou shalt alwaye fynde the thyng that is necessary for the. There haue bene many, that when a thyng was lent them, rekened it to be founde, and made them traunple and laboure, that had helped them. Whyle they receaue thyng, they kysse the bandes of soch as gyue them, and for theyr neyghbours good they hable their voyce. But when they shulde paye agayne, they kepe it back, and geue euell wordes, ad make many excuses by reason of the tyme: and though he be able, yet geueth he scarce the halfe agayne, and rekeneth the other to be founde. And if he with holde not his moneye, yet hath he an enemy of hym, and that vndererued.

He payeth hym with cursynge and rebu-de. He adgeueth hym euell wordes for his good dede. There be many one which are not glad for to lende, not because of euell, but they feare to lese the thyng that they lende. Yet haue thou pacience with the synple, and with holde not mercy from him. Helpe the poore for the commaundementes sake, and let hym not goe emptye from the, because of hys necessity. Lese thy money for thy brother and neyghbours sake, and burpe it not vnder a stone, where it rusteth ad corrupteth. * Gather thy treasure after the commaundement of the byest, and so shall it byng the more profyte then golde. * Laye vpon the almes in the hande of the poore, and it shall kepe the from all eucl. * A mans almes is as a purse with hym, and shall kepe a mans fauoure as the apple of an eye: and after warde shall it arple and paye euery man his rewarde vpon his head. It shall fyght for the agaynst thyne enemyes, better then the shyloc of a gy-aunte or spere of the myghtye.

A good honest mā is suertie for his neyghboure, but a wycked personne letteth hym come to shame. Forget not the frendshipp of thy suertie, for he hath geuen his soule for the. The vngodly despiseth the good dede of his suertie, and the vnteachfull and ignoraunt leaueth his suertie in daunger. Some man promyseth for his neyghboure: ad whē he hath lost his honesty, he shall forsaie him. Suertishyppe hath destroyed many a riche man, and remoued the as the waues in the see. Myghtie people hath it orpuen awaye, and caused the to wandre in straunge countrees. An vngodly man transgressyng the commaundement of the Lorde, shall fall into an euell suertishyppe: and though he force hym self to gett out, yet shall he fall into wdgement. Helpe thy neyghboure out after thy power, and beware, that thou thy selfe fall not in soch dett. * The cheste thyng that kepeth in thy lyfe, is water, ad byed, clothynge and lodgyng, to couer the shame.

Better is it to haue a poore luyng in a mans awne house, then delicate fare amōg the straige. * Be it lytle or moch that thou hast, holde the content withall, & thou shalt not be blamed as a vagabonde: for a myserable lyfe is it, to go from house to house: & where a man is fremde, he darre not open his mouth. Though one be lodged, ad haue meate and dryncke, yet shall he be taken as vntowrthy, and heare many bytter rough wordes, namely thus: Go thy waye thou straunger, and prepare a table for thy selfe, and fede me also of that thou hast. A waye thou thou strange (so that he regardeth his honoure no more) my brother cometh into my house, & so he telleth hym the necessity of his house. These thynges are heuy to a man that hath understandyng: namely, the folye of dyng of the house, and that the lender calleth hym in the teth.

The xxx. Chapter.

Of the correction of chyldren. Of the comynode of health. Death is better then a folye full lyfe. Of the wylde wynde. Of the ioye & sorow of the hert.

Who so loveth his chyldre * holdeth him styl vnder correccion, that he maye haue ioye of him afterwarde and that he grieve not after his neyghbours dozes. * He y teacheth his sonne shall haue ioye in him, & nede not to be ashamed of him among his aquaintance. Who so enfourmeth & teacheth his sonne, greueth the enemye: and before his frendes he maye haue ioye of him. Though y father dye, yet is he as though he were not deed: for he hath left one behynde him that is lyke hym. In his lyfe he sawe hym and had ioye in hym, & was not sorry in his death, neither was he ashamed before the enemyes. For he left behynde him an avenger agaynst his enemyes, and a good doer vnto the frendes. For y lyfe of chyldren he shall vynde the woldes together, and his hert is greued at euery crye. An vntamed horse wyl be harde, & a wanton chyldre wyl be wylfull. If thou bring up thy sonne delicately, he shall make y a trayed: & if thou playe with hym, he shall byrge the to heynnes. Laugh not wyth hym, lest thou wepe with him also, and lest thy teth be set on edge at the last.

* Gene hym no lyberte in his yowth, & excuse not his foly. Bowe downe his necke while he is yonge, byt hym vpon the sydes while he is yet but a chylde, lest he waxe stubborne, and geue no more force of the, and so shalt thou haue heynnes of soule. Teach thy chyldre, and be diligent therein, lest it be to thy shame. Better is the poore byrge whole & stronge, then a man to be ryche, & not to haue his health: health and welfare is aboue al golde, & a whole body aboue all treasure. There is no ryche aboue a sounde body, & no ioye aboue the ioye of the hert. Death is better then a wretched lyfe, & eternall rest better then contynual syknes. The good thynges that are put in a close mouth are like as whe meate is layed vpon the graue.

What good doth the offerynge vnto an Idol? * For he can neither eate, tast, nor smel. Euen so is he that is chafed of the Lorde, & beareth the rebukes of iniquyte. He seyth wyth his eyes, & groweth lyke a gelded ma, that lyeth with a vyrgyn & sygeth. * Geue not ouer thy mynde into heynnes, and vexe not thy self in thine awne counsel. * The ioye and chearfulness of the hert is the life of man, and a mannes gladnes is the prolonging of his dayes. Loue thine awne soule, and comforte thine hert: as for sorow and heynnes, dryue it farre fro y. * For heynnes hath slayne many a man, & byrgeth no profit. Zele & anger shorten the dayes of the lyfe: carefulness and sorow byrge age before y tyme. Vnto a mery hert euery thyng hath a good tast that he eateth.

The xxxi. Chapter.

Of the ought to geue diligent hede to honeste. Of them that take payne to gather ryches. The praye of a ryche man without a fault. We ought to be dyronken and folowe sobernesse.

Rauyle & carefulnes for ryches taketh a waye the slepe, & maketh the flesh to consume. When one lyeth & taketh care, he waketh euery wy, like as gret syknes breaketh the slepe. The ryche hath gret labour in gathering his ryches together, and then with the pleasure of his ryches he taketh his rest: and is refreshed. But who so laboureth and prospereth not, he is poore: & though he leaue of, yet is he a begger. He that loveth riches, shall not be satisfied: and who so foloweth corruption, shall haue ynough therof. * Many one are come in gret misfortune by the reason of gold, & haue founde theyr destruction before them. It is a tree of fallynge vnto them that offere it up, and all soch as be folysh fall thereyn. Blessed is the ryche, which is found without blemyshe, and hath not gone after golde, nor hoped in money & treasures. Where is there soch a one? and we shall commend hym, & call hym blessed, for greate thynges doth he among his people. Who so is tryed, & founde perfecte in soch thynges, shall be comended and prayled. Who myght offende, and hath not offended: Who coulde do euell, and hath not done it? Therefore shall his good be stablished, and the whole congregacion shall declare his almes. If thou sytt at a greate mans table, open not thy mouth wyde vpon it, and make not many wordes. Remember that an euell eye is a lyewe.

What thinge created is worse then a wicked eye? therefore wepeyth it before euery mans face: Laye not thine hand vpon euery thyng y thine eye seyth, & styue not w hym in the dysce. * Wonder by thy selfe what thy neyghboure wolde sayne haue, & be descrete in euery pointe. Eate the thing that is set before the manerly, as it becometh a man and eate not to moch, lest thou be abhorred. Leauethou of first of al, because of nourtoure, lest thou be he whom no man maye satisfye which maye turne to thy decaye. When y sytttest among many men, reach not thine hande out fyrst of all. * How wel content is a wylde man with a lytle wyne: so that in slepe y shalt not be sycke therof, ner felle any payne. A wylde whollome slepe shall soch a one haue, & felle no inward grefe. Herseyeth up by tynes in the moynynge, & is wel at ease in him selfe. But an vnfacible eater slepeth vnquietly, and hath ache and payne of the body. If thou felest that thou hast eate to moch, aryse, goo thy waye, cast it of thy stomach, and take thy rest: and it shall ease the, so that thou shalt byrge no syknes vnto thy body.

Why sonne, heare me, and despyse me not: & at the last thou shalt fynde as I haue told the. * In all thy workes be diligent & quicke, so shall there no syknes happē vnto y. * Who so is liberal in dealynge out his meate, many men shall blesse him, & prayse hym with theyr lippes: & the same is a sure token of his loue & faythfulness. But he that is vnfaythfull in meate, the whole cite shall complayne of hym: and that is a sure experience of his infidelite & wyckednes. * Be not thou a wyne bybber, for wyne hath destroyed many a man. The fyre proueth the hard yron, & so doth wyne proue hertes of the proude, when they be dyronken.

Whyne sobriety dyronken, quyketh the lyfe of man. If thou dyronkest it measurably, thou shalt be temperate. What lyfe is it, that maye continue without wyne? (What taketh a waye the lyfe? euen death.) Wyne was made fro the begynnyng to make me glad (ad not for dyronkenes) Wyne measurably dyronke is a reioysing of y soule & body. (A measurable drinkynge is health to soule and body.) But if it be dyronken with excess, it maketh bytternes and sorow vnto the mynde. Dyronkenes fylleth the mynde of the folysh with shame and ruyne, minyseth the strength, and maketh woundes.

* Rebuke not thy neyghboure at the wyne, & despyse him not in his myrth. Geue hym no despytefull wordes, and plesse not vpon hym with contrary sayenges.

The xxxii. Chapter.

Of the discrecion and prayse of the preacher, and of the hearer. Of the feare, fayth, and confidence in God.

If thou be made a ruler, * pryde not thy selfe therein, but be thou as one of y people. * Take diligent care for the and loke wel therto: & when thou hast done all thy dewtye, syt the downe, that y mayest be mery wyth the, and receaue a crowne of honoure. Take wysely and honestly, for wysdome becometh the ryght well. Hynder not musike. Speake not, where there is no audyence: & poure not forth wysdome out of tyme, at an impoportune. A lyke as y Caruncle stone syneth that is set in golde, so doth a longe garbly the wyne feast: and as the Smaragde that is set in golde, so is the sweetnes of Musike by the myrth of wyne. (Geue care, and be still, and for thy good be haueour thou shalt be loued.)

Thou yonge man, speake that becometh the, and that is profytable, & yet scarce whe thou art twyse asked. Comprehende moche with fewe wordes. In many thynges be as one that is ignorant, geue care, and holde thy tonge withall. If thou be amonge men of hyper auctoryte, despyre not to copare thy selfe vnto them: & when an elder speaketh make not y many wordes therein. Before y thonder goeth lyghtenynge, and before nourtoure and shamefastnesse goeth loue & fauoure. Stande up by tynes and be not the last: but get the home sone, & there take thy pastime, & do what thou wylt: so that thou do no euell, & despye no man, but for all thynges geue thackes, vnto him that hath made the, and replenished the with his goodes.

Who so feareth the Lorde, wyl receaue his doctrine: and they that get them to him by tynes, shall fynde grace. He that seeketh the lawe, shall be fylled withall. As for him that is but fayned, he wil be offended therat. They that feare the Lorde shall fynde the iudgement, and theyr ryghteousnes shall be kindled as a lyght. An vngodly man wyl not be reformed, but can helpe him self with the example of other in his purpose. A man of understandynge despyseth no good counsell: but a wylde and proude body hath no feare. (Ye eue when he hath dealt rashly w another man, but his awne doynges shall be his rebuke.) Why sonne, do nothing without aduysment, so that it not repent the after y dede. So not in the waye wher thou mayest fall, ner where thou mayest stumbe agaynst the stone. Geue not thy self into a laborious slippyng waye, and beware of thynne awne chyldren, (and take hede of them that be of thynne awne houtholde.) In all thy workes put thy trust in God, fro thy whole hert, for that is the keyynge of the commaundmentes. Who so beleueth Gods word, taketh hede to the commaundmentes: and he that putteth his trust in the Lorde, shall wante nothyng.

The xxxiii. Chapter.

Of the despyraunce of hym that feareth God. The answere of y wylde. The lyttell discrecion of a foole. What is in the hande of God, as the earth is in the hande of the potter. We ought not to dyspoule our selues, to become subject to other.

Here shall no euell happē vnto him that feareth God: but whe he is in temptation, the Lorde shall deliuer hym & kepe hym fro euell. A wylde man hateth not the lawe, but an ypocrite is as a thyp in ragynge water. A man of understandynge geueth credence vnto the lawe of God.

Wagame, p. they maye knowe, how that there is none other God but only thou, that they maye thew thy wonderous worckes; ad be thou thy peoples heretage, lyke as from the begynnyng. O Lord haue mercy vpon the people that hath thy name, ad vpon Israel. * who p. hast lphened to a fyrst bozne sonne. O be mercyfull vnto Jerusalem the cite of thy Sactuary, * the cyte of thy rest. Ipyll Sion with thy vspeakable vertues, & thy people with thy glory. Geue wytnes vnto thy creature, whom thou madest from the begynnyng, & rapse vp the prophccyes that haue bene shewed in thy name. Rewarde the that wayte for the, that thy Prophetes maye be foude saythfull. O Lord heare the prayer of thy seruantes, accordyng to the blessing of Aaron ouer thy people (ad gyde thou vs in p. waye of righteousness) * that all they whych dwell vpon the earth maye knowe, that thou art the. Lorde the eternal God, which is from euerlastyng.

Che hely deuoureth all meates, yet is one meate better then another. Like as p. tounge tasteth verryso, * so doth an herte of vnderstandinge marck false wordes. A frowarde hert geueth heupnes, but a man of experiece listeth hym vp agayne. The woman receaueth euery man, yet is one daughter better the another. A sayre wife reioyseth her husband, & a man loueth nothing better. Pf the be loupnge & vertuous with all, then is not her husbande lyke other men. He that hath gotten a vertuous woman, hath a goodly possession: she is vnto him an helpe, and p. ler wherupō he resteth. Where no hedge is, ther p. goodes are spoyled: & where no husbande is, there the frendles mourneth. Lyke as there is no credence geue to a robber, that goeth from one cytie to another: So is not the man beleued, that hath no nest, ad must turne in, where he maye abyde in the nyght.

Che. xxxvii. Chapter.

Chow a man shulde knowe frendes & counsellors, and search the company of a holy man.

Alery frēde sayeth: I wyl be frendly vnto hym also. But there is some frende, which is onely a frende in name. Remayneth there not heuines vnto death, when a cōpanyon & frēde is turned to an enemye? O most wicked presumption: from whence art thou spronge vp, to couer p. earth with falshe & disceat? * There is some cōpanyon which in prosperyte reioysseth with his frende: but in p. time of trouble, he taketh parte agaynst hym. There is some cōpanyon p. mourneth with his frende for the hely sake: but whē trouble cometh he taketh holde of the wynde. For get not thy frende in thy mynde, and thinke vpo him in thy ryches. Seke no counsell at thy kynsmen, and hyde thy counsell fro soch as beare the no good wyl. * Euery counseller byngeth forth his counsell. Neuertheles, there is some p. counceleth, but for his awne profet: Beware of the counseller, and be aduised afore wherto thou wilt vse him, for he wil counsell for him selfe. Lest he cast the lot vpo the, & sape vnto the. Thy waye & purpose is good, & afterwarde he stāde agaynst the, and loke what shall become of the.

Alke no counsell at him, that suspecteth p. for an enemye, and hyde thy counsell fro soch as hate the. Alke no counsell at a woman cōcernyng p. thinges that she longeth for: ner at a fearfull and saynt herted body, in matters of warre: or at a marchaūt, how deare he will cheape thy wares towarde his: or at a hyper, of sellpge: Or at an enuious mā, of thanckesgeuynge: Or at the vnmerryful, of louing kindnes: (or at an vnhonest man, of honestye.) Or at a flouthfull, of working: Or at an hyzelyng which hath no house, or profyt or wealth. (An ydle body wolde not gladly heare spake of moche labour.) Take no soch folckes to counsell, but be diligent to seke counsell at a vertuous mā that feareth God, soch one as thou knowest to be a keper of the cōmaundemētes, which hath a mynde after thyne awne mynde, and is sozr for the when thou stomblest.

And holde thy counsell fast in thyne herte: for there is no mā moze saythful to kepe it: then thou thy selfe. For a mā mynde is so tyme moze disposed to tell oute, then seuen watchmen that syt aboue in an hye place lo kyng about the. And aboue all this praye the hyest, p. he wyl lede thy waye in saythfulness and trueth. Before all thy worckes aske counsell fyrst: ad or euer thou doest eny thyng, be wel aduised. There be foure thynges that declare a chaunged herte, wherout there springeth euell and good, death & lyfe, and a masterful tounge that habyleth moche. Some mā is apte and well instructe in many thinges, ad yet very vnprofyttable vnto him selfe. Some man there is, that can geue wyle and prudent counsell, and yet is he hated, and continueth a begger: for that grace is not geue him of God to be accepted. Another is robbed of all wylsome, yet is he wysse vnto him selfe, and the frute of vnderstandyng is commendable in his mouth.

Awyle man maketh his people wise, & the frutes of his wylsome sayle not. A wyle mā shal be plentifully blessed of God: & al they that se him, shal speake good of hi. The lyfe of man standeth in the nombze of the dayes, but the dayes of Israel are innumerable.

Awyle

Awyle man shal opteyne saythfulness and credence amonge hys people, and hys name shalbe perpetuall. Wylsome, proue thy soule in thy lyfe: and p. p. teeny euell thyng, geue it not vnto her. * For all thinges are not profitable for all mē, nether hath euery soule pleasure in euery thyng. Be not gredy in euery eatyng, and be not to hastyte vpon all meates. * For excelle of meates byngeth syknes, & glotony cometh at the last to an vnnearable heate. Thozow surfett haue many one perpyth: but he that dyeteth him selfe temperatly, proungeth his lyfe.

Che. xxxviii. Chapter.

CA physycion in syknes ought we to praye, and to fynde a physycion which healeth by prayer. The bewepynge of the deed. Sabnes, wylsome. Artificers of craftes.

Honoure p. Physycion: honoure him because of necessity. God hath created hym (for of the hyest cometh medycine) and he shal receaue giftes of the kyng. The wylsome of p. Physycion byngeth hym to great worshyppe, & in p. syght of the greate men of thys worlde, he shalbe honozably taken. The Lorde hath created medycine of the earth, and he that is wyle, wyl not abhorre it. * Was not the bytter water made swete with a tre: p. men myght learne to know p. vertue therof. The Lord hath geuen men wylsome, and vnderstandyng, p. he myght be honoured in hys wonderous worckes. With soch doth he heale men, and taketh awaye theyr paynes: Of soch doth the Apotecary make a confection yet can no man perfourme all his worckes. For of p. Lorde cometh prosperous wealth ouer all the earth.

Wylsome, despyse not thys in thy syknes, but p. praye vnto the Lord, and he shal make the whole. Leauē of from synne, and ordze thy handes a ryght, clense thine herte fro all wyckednes. Geue a swete lauoured offeryng, and p. fyne floure for a token of remembrance: make the offeryng fat, as one that geueth p. fyrst frutes, and geue rowme to the Physycion. For the Lord hath created him lett him not go from the, for p. haste nede of hym. The houre maye come, that p. sycke maye be helped thozow them, when they praye vnto p. Lorde, that he maye reconer, & gett health to lyue longer. He that synneth before his maker, shal fall into the handes of the Physycion.

Wylsome, bynng forth thy teares ouer the deed: and begynne to mourne, as pf thou haddest suffred greate harme thy selfe: and then couer his body after a cōuenient maner & despyse not his buryall. Enforce thy selfe to wepe, and prouoke thy selfe to mourne, * and make lamentacyon expediently, & that a daye or two, lest thou be euell spoken of:

and then cōfōrte thy selfe because of p. heupnes. * For of heupnes cometh death, the heupnes of the hert breaketh strength. Heupnes and pouerte greueth the herte in tentacyon & offence. Take no heupnes to herte, dryue it awaye, and remēbre the last thynges. Forget it not, for there is no turnyng agayne. Thou shalt do hym no good, but hurte thy selfe. Remēbre his iudgemēt, thyne also shalbe lyke wyle: vnto me pester daye, vnto p. to daye. * Let p. remembrance of p. deed cease in his rest, & cōfōrte thy selfe agayne ouer hym, sepnyng his sperte is departed from hym. The wylsome of p. scribe is at cōuenient tyme of rest: and he p. ceaseth from exercise and labour, shalbe wyle. He that holdeth the plough, and hath pleasure in proddynge, & dryupng p. oxen, and goeth aboute with soch worckes, he can speake of oxen: he setteth his herte to make forowes, & is diligent to geue the kyne fodder. So is euery carpēter also & worckmaster, p. labour: eth syll nyght & daye: he carueth, graucth & cutteth oute, & his desyre is in sondrye cōnyng thinges, his hert ymagineth, how he maye cōnyngly cast an ymage, his diligēce also & watchyng perfourmeth the worcke. The prouyngh in lyke maner bydeth by his stithye, & doth his diligence to labour the prou. The vapoure of the fyre kzeneth his flesh, & he must fyght w. the heate of the for nace. The noyse of p. hammer soundeth cuer in his eares, & his eyes loke syll vpon the thyng that he maketh. He hath set hys mynde there vpon, that he wyl make out his worcke, and therfore he watcheth, how he maye set it out, & bynng it to an ende.

So doth the potter syt by his worcke, he turneth p. whele aboute with his fete, he is diligēt and carefull in all doynges, and his labour & worcke is without nombze. He fashioneth p. clape with hys arme, and with his fete he tempereth it. Hys herte ymagineth how he maye make it pleasaunt, & his diligence is to clense the ouen. All these hope in their handes, and euery one thynketh to be cōnyng in his worcke. Without these maye not the cyties be maynteyned, inhabited ner occupied: yet come they not hye i the congregacyon: they vnderstande not the cōuenant of p. lawe: they cannot declare equitye and iudgemēt: they cannot fynde out the darcke sentēces, but thozow them shal the creature of p. worlde be mayntayned: theyr prayer concerneth onely the worcke and labour of cōnyng.

Che. xxxix. Chapter.

CA wyle man. The worckes of God. vnto the good, good thynges do profyt: but vnto the euell euill good thynges are such.

Egg bet hat

In that applieth hys mynde to vnderstande the lawe of God, doth diligently seke out the wysdome of them of the olde tyme, and exerceyth hym selfe in the prophetes. He kepeth the saynges of famous men, & preaseth to the vnderstandyng of darck sentences of wysdome. He seketh oute the myserie of secreete saynges, & exerceyth hym selfe therein continually. He doth seruike amonge grete me, & appeareth before y prince. He goeth into a straunge countre, & trauaileth thorow it: loke what good or euell is amonge men, he proueth it & seketh it out. He purpoiseth in his herte, to reioyce early vnto the Lord y made hym, & to praye before the hyest God. He openeth his mouth in prayer, & prayeth for hys synnes. When y grete Lord wyll, he shalbe fylled with y sperte of vnderstandyng, that he maye then poure out wyse sentences, & geue thankes vnto the Lord in hys prayer. He shal orde his deuice, and lede his knowledge a ryght, & geue hym vnderstandyng of secreete thynges. He shal helpe forth y science of his lernynge, and reioyce in the couenaunt of y lawe of y Lord. The whole congregacyon shal commend hys wysdome, and it shal neuer be put out. The remembraunce of hym shal neuer be forgoten, & his name shal continue from one generacyon to another. * His wysdome shalbe spoken of, amonge the people, and the whole congregacyon shal openly declare his prayse. Whyle he lyueth, he hath a greater name then a thousande besyde: and after hys death, y same name remayneth vnto hym. Yet wyll I speake of mo men of vnderstandyng, for I am full as the Moone.

Herken vnto me (ye holy vertuous chyl-dren) byng forth frute, as the rose y is plantyd by the brokes of the felde, and geue ye a swete smell as Libanus. Florish as y rosegard, synge a songe of prayse. O geue thankes vnto God ouer all his worckes. Geue glory and honoure vnto the Lord, shew his prayse with poure lippes. Pee euē with the songe of your lippes, with harpes and playnge, and in geupnge thankes vnto hym, sape after this maner. * All y worckes of the Lord are excedyng good, and all his commaundementes are mete and conuenient in due season.

A man nede not to sape: what is y? what is that? for at tyme conuenient they shal all be sought. At his commaundement the water was as a wall, & at the worde of his mouth the water stode still. * In his commaundement is euery thyng acceptable and reconcyled, and his health cannot be mynyshed. The worckes of all flesh are before him, and there is nothyng hyd fro his eyes. He seyth from euerlastyng to euerlastyng, & there is nothyng to wonderfull or hye vnto hym. A man nede not to sape then, what is thys, or that? For he hath made al thynges to do good vnto man. His blessing shal renne ouer as the streame, and mofure y earth lyke a floude of water. Lyke as he maketh the water for drouth, so shal his wyth fall vpon the heathen.

His wayes are playne & ryght vnto the iust, but the vngodly stumbe at them. For the good, are good thynges created from the begynnyng, & euell thynges for y vngodly. * All thynges necessary for the lyfe of man are created from y begynnyng: water, fyre, yron & sale, meel, wheate, and hony, mylk & wyne, oyle & clothyng. * All these thynges are created for the best to the faythfull: But to the vngodly shal all these thynges be turned to the hurte and harme. There be spertes that are created for vengeaunce, & in their rygorousnes haue they fastened their tormentes. * In the tyme of the ende they shal poure out theyr strength, and pacifye the wyth of hym that made them. * Fyre, hayle, hunger & death: all these thynges are created for vengeaunce.

The teeth of wyldenoyfome beastes, the scorpions, serpentes, and y swerde are created also for vengeaunce, to the destruccyon of y vngodly. They shal be glad to do his commaundementes: and when nede is, they shal be ready vpon earth: & when theyr houre is come, they shal not ouerpasse the commaundement of the Lord.

Therfore haue I take a good corage vnto me from y begynnyng, and thought to put these thynges in wyrtynge, & to leaue them behynde me. * All y worckes of y Lord are good, and he geueth euery one in due season, & whan nede is, so y a man nede not to sape: thys is worse then that. For in due season they are all pleasaunt & good: And therfore prayse y Lord w whole hert and mouth, & geue thankes vnto his name.

The .xl. Chapter.

A many myseries lyght in a mannes lyfe. All thynges passe awaye, but a fyne and stable sayth remayneth. Of the blessing of the ryghteous, and prerogatyue of the feare of God.

A grete trauaple is created for all men, and an heuy yock vpon all men chyl-dren, from the dape that they go out of theyr mothers wombe, tyll they be buryed in (the earth) the mother of all thynges: namely, their thoughtes and ymaginacyons, feare of the hert, counsell, meditacyons, longynge and desyre, the dape of death: from the hyest that lyteth vpon the glorious seate, vnto the lowest and most symple vpon the earth: from hym that is gorgeously araped and weareth a crowne, vnto hym that is, but home-land ly and simply clothed. There is nothyng but wyth, zeale, fearfulness, vniquietnes, and feare of death, rygorous, anger and stryfe. And in the nyght when one shulde rest and slepe vpon his bedd, the slepe chaunged hys vnderstandyng and knowledge. A lytle or nothyng is hys rest, in the slepe as well as in the dape of labour.

He feareth & is dysquyeted in the vspyon of his hert, as one that renneth out of a bat-tayll: and in the tyme of health he awaketh & marueleth that the feare was nothyng. Soch thynges happen vnto all flesh, both man and best: but leuen folde to y vngodly. * Moreover, death, bloudshedding, stryfe and swerde, opprellsion, honger, destruccyon and punyshment: * these thynges are all created agaynst y vngodly, & for theyr sake came y floude also. * All y is of y earth, shal turne to earth agayne: & all waters ebbe agayne in to y see. All byrdes & vnyrghtconlynes shalbe put awaye, but faythfulness & truethe shal endure for euer. The substance & goodes of the vngodly shalbe dyed vpon and syncke awaye as a water floude, & they shal make a sounde lyke a grete thoder in the rayne.

Lyke as the ryghteous reioyseth when he openeth his hande, so shal the transgressours be fayne, when theyr goddes vanysh and consume awaye. * The chyl-dren of the vngodly shal not obtayne many braunches, and the vncleane rotes vpon y hye rockes shalbe roted out before the grasse by the water syde & vpon the ryuer bankes.

Frendlynes and liberalite in the increase & blessing of God, is lyke a paradyse and garden of pleasure: soch mercy also & kyndnes endureth for euer. * To labour & to be content w that a man hath, is a swete pleasaunt lyfe: and that is to fynde a treasure aboue all treasures. To beget chyl-dren and to repayre y cctie, maketh a perpetuall name: but an honest woman is more worth then they both. Wyne and mynstrelsy reioyse the hert, but the loue of wysdome is aboue them both.

Wyspyng & harpyng make a swete noyse, but a frendly tonge goeth beyonde them both. Thyne eye desireth fauoure and bewtye, but a grene sede tyme, rather then they both. A frende and companyon come together at oportunitie, but aboue them both is a wyfe y agreeth with her husbande. One brother helpeth another in the tyme of trouble, but almes shal deluyre more then they both. Golde and syluer fasten the fete, but a good counsell is more pleasaunt then they both. Tempozall substance and strenght lyft vp y mynde: but the feare of the Lord more then they both. The feare of the Lord wanteth nothyng, and nedeth no helpe. The feare of the Lord is a pleasaunt garden of blessing, & nothyng so bewtyfull as it is. My sonne, lede not a beggers lyfe, for better it were to dye then to begg. Who so loketh to another mans table, taketh no thought for his owne lyuige how to vpholde hys lyfe, for he fedeth hym selfe w other mens meat. But a wyfe and well nurtoured man wyll bewarre therof. Beggyng is swete in the mouth of the vnchamfast, but in hys bely there burneth a fyre.

The .xli. Chapter.

Of the remembraunce of death. Death is not to be feared. A curse vpon them that forsake the lawe of God. Good name and fame. An exhortacyon to geue hede vnto wysdome. Of what thynges a man ought to be ashamed.

Death, how bytter is the remembraunce of y, to a man that seketh rest and comforte in hys substantiaunce & ryches, vnto y man that hath nothyng to vexe him, and that hath prosperite in all thynges, pee vnto hym that yet is able to receaue meate. Death, how acceptable and good is thy iudgemēt vnto the nedefull, and vnto him whose strength fayleth, and that is now in his last age, & that in all thynges is full of care and fearfulness: vnto him also that is in dyspayre, and hath no hope ner pacience. Be not thou afrayed of death: remembre them that haue bene before the: and that come after the: thys is the iudgemēt of the Lord ouer all flesh. * And why woldest thou be agaynst thys pleasure of the hyest? Whether it be ten an hūdrēth, or a thousande peares: death asketh not how longe one hath lyued.

The chyl-dren of y vngodly are abominable chyl-dren, & so are they that kepe company with the vngodly. * The inheritance of vngodly chyl-dren shal come to naught, & theyr posterite shal haue perpetuall shame and confusyon. The chyl-dren coplayne of an vngodly father, and why: for his sake they are rebuked & despyed. Wo be vnto you (O ye vngodly) whyche haue forsaken the lawe of the hyest God: yf ye be borne, ye shal be borne to cursyng, yf ye dye, yf curle shal be poure porcyon.

All that is of the earth, shal turne to earthe agayne: so go the vngodly also out of the curle into destruccyon. The sorowe of men is in theyr body: but the name of the vngodly shal be put out, for it is nothyng worth. * Labour to get the a good name, for that shal contynue surer by the, then a thousande grete treasures of golde. A good lyfe hath a nombre of dayes, but a good name endureth euer.

My chyl-dren, kepe wysdome in peace: for wysdome that is hyd and a treasure y is not scie, what profyt is in the both. A man that dyeth hys folynnes, is better then Egg is a man a man that hydehys wylfdoine. Therfore be ye turned at my wordes: for it is not good, in all thynges and alwaye to be ashamed. True sayth must proue & measure it.

Be ashamed of whoredome, before father and mother: Be ashamed of lesynge, before the pynte and men of auctorite: Of synne, before the iudge and ruler: Of offence, before the congregacyon & people: Of vnrpgh-tousnes, before a companyon and frende: Of theft, before thy neyghbours. * As for the trueth of God & hys counaunt, be not ashamed thereof.

Be ashamed to lye with thyne elbowes vpon þy bryd: Be ashamed to lye vpon bar lotes: Be ashamed to turne awaye thy face from thy frende: Be ashamed to take & not to geue: Be ashamed also to lye vpon another mans wyfe, and to make many try-fyng wordes with her mayden, or to städe by her bedsyde. Be ashamed to vpbryde thy frende: when thou geuest eny thyng, cast hym not in the tette withall.

The. xlii. Chapter.

Secrete mapes not be opened. The lawe of God must be taught. A daughter. A woman. God knoweth all thynges, yee euen the secretes of the herte.

Echearse not a thyng twyse, & dysclose not the wordes, þ thou hast herde i secrete. Be shame-fast and well manered in dede, so shall euery man fauoure the. Of these thynges be not thou ashamed, and accepte no personne to offende. Namely, of these thynges be not ashamed: Of the lawe of God, of the couenaunt, of iudgement: to bypunge the vngodly from hys vngodlynes vnto ryghteousnes, & to make hym a good man: to deale saythfully wyth thy neygh-boure and companyon: to distribute the heritage vnto the frendes: to be diligent to kepe true measure and weyght: to be content, whether thou gettest moch or lytle: to deale truly with tēporall goodes in bypunge and sellynge: to bypunge vpon chyldren wyllyng-ly: to correcte an euell seruaunt: to kepe that thyne is from an euell wyfe: to sett a locke where many handes are: what thou delyue- rest & geuest out to be kepte, to tell it, and to wepe it: to wypte vpon all thy outgeyng and receayunge: to enfourme the vlnerned and vndoyle: Of the aged, that are iudged of the ponge. If þ be diligent in these thynges, truly thou shalt be lerned & wyse and accepte of all men.

The daughter maketh þ father to watch secretly: and the carefulness that he hath for her, taketh awaye his slepe: yee in þ yowth, lest she shulde ouergrowe hym: And when she hath an huf bande, lest she shulde be hated: lest she shulde be despyled or rauyshed in her virgynite, or gotten w chylde in her fa- thers house: Or (when she cometh to the man) lest she behaue her self not ryght, or co- tinue vnfrutfull. * If thy daughter be wä- ton, kepe her straitly, lest she cause thyne enemyes to laugh the to scozne, & the whole cytie to geue þ an euell reporte, & so thou be fayne to heare thy shame of euery man, & be confounded before all the people. * Beholde not euery bodys bewtye, & haue not moch dwellyng amonge women. For lyke as the wyne & moth cometh oute of clothynge, so doth wychednes come of women.

It is better to be with an euell man, then with a frendly wyfe þ putteth one to shame and rebuke. I wyll remēbre þ wordes of þ Lorde, and declare the thyng þ I haue sene. In þ wordes of the Lord are his wordes. The Sunne ouerloketh all thynges with his synne, and all his wordes are full of þ clearnes therof. Hath not þ Lord brought to passe, þ his sayntes shuld tell out all his wonderous wordes, which the Almyghty Lorde hath stablyshed: All thynges endure in his glory. He seketh out þ grounde of the depe and þ hert of men, and he knoweth all theyr ymaginacyon & wylfdoine. For þ Lor- de knoweth all sciēce, & he loketh into the to- ken of the tyme. He declareth the thynges that are past and for to come, and discloseth thynges þ are secrete. * No thought maye escape hym, nether maye eny worde be hyd from hym. He hath garnysed þ hys excellēt wordes of his wylfdoine, & he is frō euery- synge to euerylastynge. Vnto hym maye no thyng be added nether can he be minyshed, he hath none also of eny mans counsell. How amiable are all his wordes, and as a sparke to lye vpon. They lye all, & en- dure for euer: & when soeuer nede is, they are all obedient vnto hym. They are all dubble, one agaynst another: he hath made nothing þ hath faute or blemyshe. * He hath stably- shed the goodes of euery one: & who maye be satysfied w his glory, when he seyth it.

The. xliii. Chapter.

The summe of the creatyon of the wordes of God.

The glory of the heygth, is the fa- vour & cleare firmament, the bewtye of the heauen is hys glorious clearnes. The sunne when it appeareth, declareth the daye in þ goyng out of it, a maruelous wor- ke of the hysst. At noone it burneth þ earth and who maye abyde for the hefte therof? Whoso kepeth an ouen when it is hote, the tymes moze doth the Sunne burne vpon the mountaynes, when it bryeth oute the fy- rie beames & syneth with the bygthnes of it, it blyndeth the eyes. Great is the Lord that made it, and in his commaundment he causeth it to renne hastily.

The

The Moone also is in all, and at conue- nient season it sheweth the tymes, & is a to- ken of the tyme. * The token of the solkyne feast is taken of þ Moone, a lyght that my- nysheth & increaseth agayne. The Moone is called after the Moone, it groweth won- derously in her chaungynge.

The armye of heauen also is in þ heygth in the firmament of heauen it geueth a clea- re & glorious synne. Thys is the clearnes of þ starres, the bewtyfull apparell of hea- uen, the apparell that þ Lorde lyghteneth in the heygth. In his holy worlke they co- tinue in theyr ordre, & not one of them fay- leth in hys watch. * Loke vpon the rayne bowe, and prayse hym that made it: very bewtyfull is it in hys synne. He compaseth the heauen aboute w hys clearnes & glory, the hādes of the hysst haue bended it. Tho- row hys commaundement he maketh the snowe to fall, and the thonder of hys iudge- ment to synpe hastily. Thorow hys comma- dement þ treasures are opened, and the clou- des he as the foules. In hys power hath he strengthened the cloudes, and broken the hayle stones.

The mountaynes melt at þ syght of him, þ wynde bloweth accordynge to hys wyl. The sounde of hys thonder beateth þ earth, & so doth þ storme of the north: the whyrle wynde also lyghteth downe as a fethered foule, casteth oute and spredeth the snowe abroad: and as þ grethoppers that destrope all, so falleth it downe. The eye marueleth at the bewtye of the whytenesse therof, and the herte is afrayed at the rayne of it. He poureth out the frost vpon earth, lyke salt, and when it is frosen, it is as sharpe as the pyrke of a thysle.

When the colde Northwynde bloweth, harde Chyshall cometh of the water. He lyghteth downe vpon all the gatherynge together of water, & putteth on the waters as a brest plate. He deuoureth þ mountay- nes, and burneth the wyldernes: and loke what is grene, he putteth it out lyke fyre. The medycyne of all these is, when a cloude cometh hastily: and when a dewe cometh vpon þ heate, it shalbe refreshed agayne.

In hys worde he styllteth the wynde: In hys counsell he setteth þ depe, & (the Lord) Jesus planted it. They that sayle ouer the see, tell of þ paryls and harmes therof, and when we heare it with our eares, we mar- uell therat. For there be straunge wonde- rous wordes, diuerse maner of nyce bea- stes and whatsythes. Thorow hym are all thynges sett in good ordre and perfourmed and in his worde all thynges endure.

I speake moch, but I can not sufficiently attayne vnto it, for he him selfe sheweth the perfeccon of all wordes. We shulde prayse þ Lorde after al oure power, for he is great in all hys wordes. The Lorde is to be fea- red, yee very greate is he, * and maruelous is hys power. Prayse the Lorde, and ma- gnifye him as moch as ye maye, yet doth he farre excede all prayse. * Magnifye him with all poure power, and labour earnest- ly, yet are ye in no wyse able sufficiently to prayse him. Who hath sene him, þ he myght tell vs: * Who can magnifye him so great- ly as he is? For there are hyd yet greater thynges then these be: as for vs, we haue se- ne but fewe of his wordes. For the Lord hath made all thynges, and geuen wylfdo- me to soch as feare God.

The. xliiii. Chapter.

The prayse of certen holy men, Enoch, Noe, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob.

Et vs commēde the noble famous men, and the generacyon of oure fore elders and fathers. Many mo- re glorious actes hath the Lorde done, and shewed his great power euer sene the begynnyng. The noble famous men raygned in theyr kyngdomes, and bare ex- cellent rule. In theyr wylfdoine & vndersta- dyng, they folowed þ counsell shewed in the prophetes. * They led þ folke thorow the counsell and wylfdoine of þ Scrybes of the people. Wyse sentences are founde in theyr instruccyon. They sought þ sweteness and melody of musycke, and brought forth the pleasaunt songes in scripture. They were ryche also, and coude comforte and pacifye those that dwelt with them. All these were very noble and honorable men in theyr ge- neracyon, and were wel reported of in theyr tymes. These haue left a name behynde them, so that theyr prayse shall alwaye be spoken of. Afterward there were some, who se remembraunce is gone. * They came to naught & perished, as though they had ne- uer bene: & became as though they had ne- uer bene borne, yee and theyr chyldren also with them.

Neuertheles these are louyng men, who- se ryghteousnesse shall neuer be forgotten, but cōtinue by theyr posterite. Theyr chy- dren are an holy good heritage: Theyr sede endured fast in the couenaunt. For theyr sa- kes shall theyr chyldren & sede cōtinue for euer, & theyr prayse shall neuer be put doxi- ne. Theyr bodys are buryed in peace, but theyr name lyueth for euermore. The peo- ple can speake of theyr wylfdoine, & the con- gregacio can talke of their prayse. * Enoch walked ryght & acceptably before the Lor- de: therfore was he translated for an exam- ple of amēdemēt to the generacions. * Noe was a stedfast & ryghteous man, and in the tyme of wyath he became a reconceylynge.

Therefore was he left a remnant unto the earth, when flood came. An everlasting covenant was made with him, that all flesh should be perished of the water. Abraham was a great father of many people, in glory was there none like unto him. He kept the law of the best, and came into a covenant with him. He set a covenant in his flesh, and when he was pruned, he was found faithful. Therefore swore God unto him with an oath, that he would bless all people in his seed, that he would multiply and increase him as dust of the earth, & to exalt his seed as the stars: yee & that his seed should have possession, an inheritance of the land from sea to sea and from the river unto the borders of the world.

With Isaac did he stablish the same covenant, for Abraham his fathers sake. Yee that gracious blessing & health of all men, and covenant did he stablish with Isaac, and made it to rest upon the head of Jacob. He knew him in that he prospered him so well and richly, and gave him an heritage and sundred his portion by it selfe, & parted it among twelve tribes. Whereof full men brought he out of him, which found favour in the sight of all flesh.

The xlvi. Chapter.

The prayer of Moses, Aaron, and the Levites.

Moses be loved of God & men, whose remembrance is in the prayer: him the Lord made like in his glory of the sanctes, and magnified him, so that the enemies stood in awe of him, though his wordes he did great wonders. He made him great in the sight of kings, gave him commandement before his people, & showed him his glorious power. He stablished him with faithfulnes & mekenes, and chose him out of all men. For he herde his voice, and he led him in the darke cloud, & and there he gave him the commandementes, yee the lawe of life and wisdom that he might teach Jacob the covenant, and Israel his lawes.

He chose Aaron his brother also out of the tribe of Levi, exalted him, & made him such like. An everlasting covenant made he with him, and gave him the priesthood in his people. He made him glorious in beautyfull array, and clothed him with the garment of honour. He put perfect love upon him, and gave him strength. He decked him with lyde clothes, and a tunicle, with an overboddy robe also & a gyrdle. Round about made he him belles of golde, and that many: that when he went in, the sounde might be herde, & they might make a noise in the Sanctuary, and give people warning. The holy garment was wrought and broderd with golde, purple, sapphire and purple. And in the breastplate there was a goodly worke, wherein was fastened light and perfectnesse.

Upon the same also there was a worke fastened, & set with costly precious stones, all bounde with golde: and thus he brought in his ministracion. The stones were fastened for a remembrance, after the nombre of the twelve tribes of Israel. Upon his mytre there was a plate of pure golde, a graven ymage of holynes, a famous and noble worke, garnished, and pleasaunt to loke upon. Before him were there sene no such fayre ornaments, and these it behoued him alwaye to use: There might none other put them on, but onely his children & his childrens children perpetually. Wherewith perfumed he his burnt offerings two tymes. Moses tyld his handes, and anointed him with holy oyle.

Thus was now confirmed him with an everlasting covenant, and to his seed, as the dayes of heauen, namely: that his children should alwaye minister before him, and performe the office of the priesthood, and wyse the people good in his name. Before all men lyfynge chose he him, & he should offer incense before the Lord, and make obours for a sweete savoure & remembrance, that he should reconcile the people of the Lord with him agayne. He gave him authority also in his commandementes and in the covenant, that he should teach Jacob the statutes and testimonies, and to enforce Israel in his lawe.

Therefore there stood by certayne agaynst him, & had enuye at him in the wilderness: namely, they that were of Dathan, & Abiram, & the furious congregacion of Chore. Thus the Lord sawe, and it displeased him, and in his wrathfull indignacion were they consumed. A great wonder did he vpon them, and consumed them with the fyre. Wherby thus, he made Aaron yet more honorable and glorious. He gave him an heritage, and parted the first frutes unto him. Unto him specially he appointed the bred for sustenance, (for the priestes dyd eat of the offerings of the Lord) thus gave he unto him & his seed. He had no heritage nor portion in the land and with the people. For the Lord him selfe is his portion and inheritance.

The thirde noble & excellent man is Phineas sonne of Eleazer, which pleased the God of Israel, because he had the zeale & feare of the Lord. For when the people were turned backe, he put him selfe forth right soone, and with a good will, to pacifie the wrath of the Lord towards Israel. Therefore fore was there a covenant of peace made with him, & he should be principall among the righteous & the people, that he & his posterite should have the office of the priesthood for ever. (Like as there was made a covenant with David of the tribe of Juda, that from amonge his sonnes onely there should be a king.) And that Aaron also & his seed should be the heritage, to give us wisdom in our herte, to iudge his people in righteousness: that his goodes should not come in to forgetfulness, and their honoure might endure for ever.

The xlvi. Chapter.

The prayer of Josue, Caleb, and Samuel.

Only a strong battayll was Jesus sonne of Naue, which in steade of Moses the prophet was geuen to be captayne of the people, which accordynge unto his name was a great sauoure unto the electe of God, to punish his enemies that rose up agaynst Israel, & Israel might optayne the inheritance. How great, noble, & excellent was he, when he lyft up his hand, and drew out his swerde agaynst the Egyptians? Who stood so manly before him? For the Lord him selfe brought in his enemies. He stood not the sunne still at his commaundement, and one daye was as longe as two: he called upon the best and most myghty when his enemies pressed upon him on every syde, and the Lord herde him with the haile stones. They smote the heathen people myghtely, & in fallynge downe they flew all adversaries, so that the heathen knewe his host, and all his defence, that the Lord him selfe fought agaynst them, for he followed upon his myghty men of them.

In the tyme of Moses also, he & Caleb the sonne of Iephune, did a good worke, which stood agaynst his enemies, with helde the people from synne, & stilled the wicked murmuring. And of syxe hundred thousande people of fote, they two were preferred, to bringe them into the heritage, namely, a lande that floweth with mylke & hony. The Lord gave strength also unto Caleb, which remayned with him unto his age: so that he wente up into the hye places of the lande and his seed conquered the same for an heritage: that all the children of Israel might see, how good a thinge it is, to be obedient unto the Lord. And the iudges or rulers (every one after his name) whose hert wote not a whorng, nor departed from the Lord, and that forsoke not the Lord unfaythfully, whose remembrance hath a good reporte: Yee their bones flourish oute of their place, and their names shall neuer be chaunged,

(but honoure remaineth still with the children of those holy men.)

Samuel the prophet beloved of the Lord, & ordeyned a king, & anointed the princes over the people. In the lawe of the Lord ruled he, and iudged the congregacion, and the Lord had respecte unto Jacob. The prophet was founde diligent in his faithfulnes: yee in his faithfulnes was the faithfulnes of the vision knowne. He called vpon the Lord in all myghte, when his enemies persecuted vpon him on every syde, what tyme as he offered suckynge lambes. And the Lord thoudred from heauen & made his voice to be herde with a greates noise. He discomfited the princes of Tyre, and all the rulers of the Philistines. Before his last ende he made protection in the sight of the Lord, & his anointed, that he took neither substance nor good of any man, nor so much as a shoe, & no man might accuse him. After this he tolde, that his ende was at hande, & showed his kynge also his ende & death, and from the earth lyft he up his voice in the prophete, that the vngodly people should perishe.

The xlvi. Chapter.

The prayer of Nathan, David, and Salomon.

After warde in the tyme of king David, there rose up a prophet called Nathan: for like as fat is taken awaye from the offering, so was David chosen out of the children of Israel. He took his pastyme with the lyons, as with kyddes, and with beares like as with lābes. He was not a gaunte when he was yet but yonge, and took awaye the rebuke from his people: what tyme as he took the stone in his hande, and smote downe proude Goliath with the syngge. For he called vpon the best Lord, which gave him strength in his right hande, so that he overthrew the myghty gaunte in the battayll, that he might set up the borne of his people agayne. Thus brought he him to worshippe above all princes, and made him to have a good reporte in the prayer of the Lord, that he should wear a crowne of glory. For he destroyed the enemies on every syde, roted out the Philistines his adversaries, and brake the horn in sunder, like as it is broken yet this daye. In all his workes he praised the best and holiest, and ascribed the honour unto him. With his whole hert did he prayse the Lord and loued him that made him. He set syngers also before the altar, and in their tune he made sweete songes. He ordeyned to kepe the holy dayes worshipfully, and that the solempne feastes thow the whole peare should be honourably holden, with praylinge the name of the Lord.

The boke of

Lord, and with syngynge by tymes in the mornynge in the Sanctuary.

C * The Lord toke awaye his synnes, and exalted his horne for ever. He gaue hym the councail of kyngdome, and the throne of worshyppe in Israel. * After him there rose up yf wyle sonne called Salomon, & for hys sake he droue the enemyes awaye farre of. This Salomon raygned w peace in his tyme (for God gaue him rest fro his enemyes on euery syde, that he myght buylde him an house in his name, & prepare the Sanctuary for ever) lyke as he was well instructe i his yowth, & fylled with wylsome & vnderstandynge, as it were w a water floude. He couered & fylled the whole lande with similitudes & wyle prudent sentences.

D hys name wente abroad in yf Ales, because of his peace he was beloued. All landes marueled at his songes, prouerbes, similitudes, and at his peace, and at the name of the Lord God, which is called the God of Israel. * He gathered golde as tynne, & he had as moch syluer as leade. * He was moued in inordynate loue towarde wemen, and was overcome in affectyon. He stayned hys honoure & worshyppe, pcc his posterite despyled he also, in byngynge yf wrath of yf Lord vpon his chyldren, and sorowe after hys toye: so that his kyngdome was deuoyded, and Ephraim became an vnfaythfull, and an vncoustant kyngdome. * Neuertheles God forsoke not his mercy, nether was he vttterly destroyed because of hys workes, that he shulde leaue him no posterite.

C As for yf sede yf came vpon him, which he loued, he brought it not vttterly to naught but gaue yet a remnaunt vnto Jacob, and a rote vnto Dauid out of him. Thus rested Salomon with hys fathers, and out of hys sede he left behynde hym a very foolysheynes of the people, and soche one as had no vnderstandynge: * euen, Roboam, which turned awaye the people thowow his counsell, and Jeroboam the sonne of Nabat, * which caused Israel to synne, & shewed Ephraim the waye of vngodlynes: In so moch that their synnes and mysdedes had the vpper hāde so sore, that at the last they were dzyuen out of the lande for the same: Pee he sought out and brought vp all wyckednes, tyll the vengeance came vpon them.

The .xlvi. Chapter.

The prayse of Eliab, Elizeus, Iheremias, and Esay.

A Then stode vp * Eliab the prophet as a fyre, & his worde bzent lyke a creschet. He brought an hunger vpon them, & in his zeale he made them fewe in nombze. For they myght not awaye w the comaundementes of the Lord.

Therow the worde of the Lord he shute the heauen, * & thre tymes brought he the fyre downe. Thus became Eliab honorable in his wonderous dedes. Who maye make his boast to be lyke him? * One that was deedly rapled he vp from death, and in the worde of the hyst he brought him oute of the graue agayne. He cast downe kynge and destroyed them, & the honorable fro their seate. Vpon the mounte Synahe herde the punishment, & vpon Horeb the iudgement of the vengeance. He prophced recompensynge vnto kynge, * ordeyned prophetes after hym. * He was taken vp in yf storme of fyre, in a charet of horses of yf Lord. He was ordeyned in the repprounges in tyme to pacyfy the wrath of yf Lord, * to turne the hertes of the fathers vnto the chyldren, and to sett vp the trybes of Jacob agayne. Blessed were they that saw the, & were garryshed in loue: for we lyue in lyfe: (but after death we shall haue no such name.)

* Elias was couered in yf storme, but he-lyseus was fylled w his sprete. Whyle he lyued he was afrayed of no prynce, and no man myght overcome hym. There coude no worde disceauce hym, * & after his death his body prophced. * He dyd wōders i his lyfe, and in death were his workes maruelous. For all this, yf people amēded not, nether departed they fro they synnes: * tyll they were carped awaye prisoners out of yf lāde, & were scatred abroad in all countrees, so that of them there remayned, but a very lytle people, and a prynce vnto the house of Dauid. Howbeit some of them dyd ryght, and some heaped vp vngodlynes.

* Iheremias made his cytie strōge, coueped water into it, dygged thowow yf stony rocke with yron, & made vp a well by yf water syde. * In his tyme came Sennacherib vp, & sent Rabshakes, lyft vp his hāde agaynst Syon, and despyed them with greute pryde. Then trymbled they hertes and hādes, so that they sorowed lyke a woman trauaylyng woth chyld. So they called vpon the Lord, which is mercyfull, & lyft vp they handes before hym. Immediately the Lord herde the out of heauen: (he thought nomore vpo they synnes, ner gaue them ouer to they enemyes:) but deliuered them by the hande of Elay. * He smote the hoost of the Assyrians, and his angell destroyed them. For Iheremias had done yf thynge that pleased the Lord, & remayned stedfastly in the waye of Dauid his father. Which Elay was greute & faythfull in his visions. * In his tyme the Sunne wente backward, and he lengthened the kynge's lyfe. With a ryghte sprete prophced he, what shulde come to passe at the last: and to soche as were sorowful in Syon he gaue consolacyon, wherewith wherewith they myght confort them selues for euermore. He shewed thynge that were for to come and secrete, or euer they came to passe.

The .xli. Chapter.

Of Iosiah, Iheremias, David, Iheremias, Iosababel, Iosus, Iheremias, Enoch, and Joseph.

A The remembraunce of * Iosias is lyke as whan the apotycary maketh many precious swete smellynge thynge together. His remembraunce shal be swete as honny in all mouthes, and as the playeng of Musyck at a basket of wyne. He was appointed to turne the people agayne, and to take awaye all abhominacyons of the vngodly, he directed his herte vnto the Lord, and in the tyme of the vngodly he set vp the worshyppe of God agayne. All kynge's (excepte Dauid, Iheremias and Iosiah) comitted wickednes, for euen the kinges of Iuda also forsoke the lawe of God. For they gaue they horne vnto other, they honoure and worshyppe also to a straunge people.

Therfore was the electe cytie of yf Sanctuary bzent wth fyre, * & the stretes thereof laye desolate and waste: for they intreached Iheremy euell, whyche neuertheles was a prophet ordeyned from his mothers wōbe, that he myght rote out, breake of, * and destroye: ad that he myght buylde vp, & plant agayne. * Ezechiel sawe the glory of yf Lord in a vision, which was shewed hym vpon yf charrette of the Cherubins. For he thought vpon the enemyes in the rayne, to do good vnto soch as had ordeed their wayes a right. And the bones of the twelue prophetes flopyd fro out of they place: for they gaue comforte and consolacyon vnto Jacob, and deliuered them faythfully. * How shall we prayse Iosababel, which was as a ryng in the ryght hande?

* So was Jesus also yf sonne Of Iosede: these men in they tymes buylde the house and set vp the Sanctuary of yf Lord agayne which was prepared for an euermore worshyp. * And Iheremias is alwaye to be commēded, * which set vp for vs the walles that were broken downe, made the portes and barres agayne, and buylde oure houses of the new. * But vpon earth is there no man created lyke Enoch, for he was takē vpfro the earth. * And Joseph, which was lord of hys byethzen, and the vpholder of hys people: his bones were couered and kept. Seth and Sem were in great honour amonge the people: and so was Adam aboue all the beastes, whan he was created.

The .l. Chapter.

Of Symon the sonne of Onias

Symon * the sonne of Onias the hyst preste, whyche in hys lyfe sett vp the house agayne, and in hys dayes made fast yf temple. The heygth of the temple also was founded of hym, the double buyldynge, and the hyst walles of the temple. In hys dayes the welles of water flowed out, and were excedynge full as the see. He toke care for hys people, and deliuered them fro destruction. He kepte his cytie and made it strong, that it shuld not be besieged. He dwelt in honoure and worshyppe amonge his people, & enlarged the entraunce of yf house, and the court. He gaue lyght as the mornynge starre in the myddest of the cloudes, and as the moote whā it is full. He shyned as the sunne in the temple of God. He is as byggt as the rayne bowe in the fayre cloudes, and flourisheth as the floures ad roses in the spring of the peare, and as lyllys by the ryuers of water: Lyke as the braunches vpon the moūt Libanus in the tyme of Sommer: as a fyre and incense that is kyndled. Lyke as an whole ornament of pure golde, sett with all maner of precious stones, ad as an Olyue tree that is frutefull, ad as a Cipres tree which groweth vp an hyst.

Whan he put on the garment of honoure, and was clothed wth all bewtys: whan he went to the holy aulter, to garnish the couerynge of the Sanctuary: whan he toke yf portions out of the prestes hande, he hym selfe stode by the herth of the aulter, and his byethzen rounde about in ordze. As the braunches of Cedze tree vpon yf mount Libanus, so stode they rounde about him. And as the braunches of the Olyue tree, so stode all the sonnes of Aaron in they gloze. And yf he myght suffyciently perfourme hys seruyce vpon yf aulter, and garnish the offryng of the hyst God, he stretched out hys hande, and toke of yf bypnyck offryng, and powred in of the wyne: so he powred vpon the botome of the aulter a good smell vnto the hyst prynce.

Then beganne the sonnes of Aaron to syng, and to blowe with trompettes, and to make a great noyse, for a remembraunce and prayse vnto the Lord. Then were the people afrayed, and fell downe to the earth vpo their faces, to worshyp the Lord their God. ad to geue thanckes to the almyghty God. They songe goodly also with their voyces, so yf there was a pleasaunt noyse in yf great house of the Lord. And the people in they prayer besought the Lord the hyst, that he wolde be mercyfull, tyll yf honour of yf Lord were perfourmed, thus ended they they ministryng & seruyce. Then went he downe and stretched out his handes ouer the whole multitude of the people of Israel, that they shulde geue prayse and thanckes out of their lippes vnto the Lord, & to reioyse in his name. He beganne yet once also to praye, that he myght openly shewe the thankesgeyng before þe hyst, namely thus: O gene prayse and thankes (ye all) vnto the Lord our God, which hath euer done noble and great thynges: which hath increased oure dayes from our mothers wombe, and dealt wth vs accordyng to his mercy: that he wyl geue vs the ioyfulness of hert, and peace for oure tyme in Israhell. Which faythfully kepeth his mercy for vs euermore, and alwaye delyuereþ vs in due season.

There be two maner of people that I abhorre from my hert: as for the thirde, whom I hate, it is no people. They that spt vpon the mountayne of Samaria, the Philistynes, and the foolyshe people that dwell in Sichimis.

I Iesus the sonne of Syrach Eleazarus of Ierusalem, haue tokened vp these infor-macyons and doctrynes of wysdome and vnderstādyng in this booke, and poured out the wysdome of my herte. Blessed is he that excrcyseth hym selfe therein: and who so taketh soch to hert, shal be wyse for euer. If he do these thynges, he shal be stronge in all. For the lyght of the Lord ledeþ hym.

The. li. Chapter.

The prayer of Iesus the sonne of Syrach.

I wyl thanke the, O Lord ad kyng, and prayse the, O God my sauoure. I wylelde prayse vnto thy name: for thou art my defender and helper, ad hast preserved my body from destruction, from þe snare of traytorous tonges, and fro the lyp-pes that are occupied with lyes. Thou hast bene my helper, fro soch as stode vp against me, and hast delyuered me after the multitude of thy mercy, & for thy holy names sake. Thou hast delyuered me from the roaring of the that prepared them selues to deuoure me, out of the hādes of soch as sought after my lyfe: from the multitude of them þe troubled me, and went aboute to sett fyre vpon me on euery syde, so þe I am not bzert in the myddest of the fyre: from the depe of hell, from an vncleane tonge, from lypenge wordes, from the wycked kynges, and fro an vnyghteous tonge. My soule shal prayse the Lord vnto death, for my lyfe dzeuē npe vnto hell downwarde.

They cōpassed me rounde aboute on euery syde, and there was no man to helpe me. I looked aboute me, yf there were any man þe wold socoure me: but there was none. Then thought I vpon thy mercy, O Lord, and vpon thy actes that thou hast done euer of olde: namely, that thou delyuereþ soche as put theyr trust in the, and ryddest them out of the handes of the heathē. Thus lyft I vp my prayer from the earth, ad prayed for delyueraunce fro death. I called vps the Lord my father that he wolde not leaue me without helpe, in the daye of my trouble and in þe tyme of the proude: I praysed thy name continually, yeldyng honoure & thankes vnto it: and so my prayer was herde. Thou sauest me from destruction, and delyueredest me from the vnyghteous tyme. Therefore, wyl I a knowledge and prayse þe, and magnifye the name of the Lord.

When I was yet but yonge, oz enen I went astraye, I despyed wysdome openly in my prayer. I came therefore before the tēple, ad sought her vnto the last. Then flozshed she vnto me, as a grape that is soone ripe. My hert reioysed in her, then went my fote the ryght waye, yee fro youth vp, sought I after her. I bowed downe myne eare and receaued her. I founde me moch wysdome: ad prospered greatly in her. Therefore wyl I ascrybe the glozy vnto him, that geueth me wysdome: for I am aduysed to do thereafter. I wyl be gelous co cleue vnto the thynges þe is good, so shal I not be confounded. My soule hath wrestled with her, & I haue bene diligēt to be occupied in her. I lyft vp myne handes an hpe, then was my soule lightened thozow wysdome, that I knowleged my folyshnes. I ordred my soule after her, she and I were one heart from the begynnyng and I founde her in clennessē. And therefore shal I not be forsaken.

My herte longed after her, and I gatt a good treasure. Thozow her the Lord hath geue me a new tōge, wherwith I will prayse hym. * Come vnto me ye vnierned, and dwell in the house of wysdome: withdraue not your selues from her, but talke and comen of these thynges, for your soules are very thyrtyshe. I opened my mouth, and spake. * Come ad bpe wysdome without money, bowe downe your neck vnder her yock, and poure soule shal receaue wysdome. She is harde at hande and is content to be founde. Behold, with your eyes, * how that I haue had but lytle labour, and yet haue founde moch reast. * Receaue wysdome, ad ye shal haue plenteousnes of syluer ad golde in possession. Let your mynde reioyse in his mercy, & be not ashamed of hys prayse. Worke hys worke by tymes, and he shal geue you your rewarde in due tyme.

The ende of the booke of Iesus the sonne of Syrach, whych is called in Latyne, Ecclesiasticus.

The booke of the

Prophete Baruch.

The first Chapter.

Baruch wrote a booke, duringe the captiuite of Babylon, wher he readde before Iechoniah and all the people. The Jewes sent the booke with money, vnto Ierusalem, to theyr other brethren: to the intent that they shulde praye for them.

And these are the wordes of the booke, whych were wyrtten by Baruch the sonne of Nerias, the sonne of Maasias, the sonne of Sedechias, the sonne of Sedechias, the sonne of Iehchias, at Babylon in the xvjth yere, and in the seuenth daye of the moneth, what time as the Caldees toke Ierusalem, and bzert it vp with fyre.

And Baruch dyd reade þe wordes of this booke, that Iechoniah the sonne of Ioachim kyng of Iuda myght heare: and in the presence of all the people, that were come to beare the booke: yee and before all the noble kynges sonnes, before the lordes of the counsell and elders: and before the whole people, fro the lowest vnto the hyst: before all them that dwelt at Babylon, by the water of Soby. Which whā they herde it, wepte, fasted, and prayed before the Lord.

They made a collectio also of money, accordyng to euery mans power, and sent it to Ierusalem vnto Ioachim the sonne of Iehchias, the sonne of Salū preste, wth þe other prestes: and to all the people whych were w hym at Ierusalem, what tyme as they had gotten the ornamentes of the temple of the Lord (that were taken awaye out of þe temple) that they myght byngne the agayne in to the lande of Iuda, the tenth daye of þe moneth Siban: namely, syluer vessels (whych Sedechias þe sonne of Josiah kyng of Iuda had made) after that Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon had taken Iechoniah, wth all his princes, lordes, and all the people, ad led them captiue from Ierusalem vnto Babylon.

And they sayd: Behold, we haue sent you money, * to bpe you burnt offerynges & incense withall: make you vnierned bzed, ad offere for synne vpon the aulter of the Lord oure God. * And praye for the prosperyte of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon, & for the welfare of Balthasar his sonne: þe theyr dayes maye be vpon earthe, as the dayes of heauē: that God also maye geue vs strength and lyghte our eyes, that we maye lyue vnder the defence of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon, and vnder the proteccion of Balthasar his sonne: that we maye longe do the seruyce, and fynde fauoure in theyr syght.

Praye for vs also vnto the Lord oure God, for we haue synned agaynst the Lord oure God, and vnto this daye is not hys weath turned yet awaye fro vs. And se that ye red this booke (whych we haue sent vnto you to be rehearsed in the temple of the Lord) vps the hpe dayes, and at tyme conuenient.

Thus shal ye saye: * The Lord oure God is ryghteous, but we are worthy of confusion & shame: lyke as it is come to passe this daye, vnto all Iuda, and to euery one that dwelleth at Ierusalem: to our kinges, princes, prestes, prophetes and to oure fathers. We haue synned before the Lord oure God, we haue not put our trust in hym, ner geuen hym credence, we haue not obeyed hym, we haue not hearkened vnto þe voyce of þe Lord oure God, to walke in the commaundementes that he gaue vs. Sens the daye that he brought our forefathers out of the lande of Egypt vnto this present daye, we haue bene euer a myfelyng and an vnfaithful people vnto the Lord oure God: destroyeng our selues vtterly, and shynkyng backe, that we shulde not heare his voyce.

* Wherefore there are come vps vs great plagues and dyuerse curses, lyke as þe Lord dyuyd by Moses hys seruant: * whych brought our forefathers out of the lande of Egypt, to geue vs a lande, that floweth w mylch ad hony, lyke as it is to se this daye. Neuerthelesse, we haue not hearkened vnto the voyce of the Lord oure God, accordyng to all the wordes of þe prophetes, whome he sent vnto vs ad to our rulers: but euery mā folowed his awne mynde & wycked ymaginacyon: to offere vnto straunge goddes, & to do euell in the syght of the Lord oure God.

The. ii. Chapter.

The Jewes confesse that they sūfere Justly for theyr synnes. The true confession of the Jewes. The Jewes desyre to haue the wrath of God turned fro them. The Lord wyl that we obey vnto princes although they be cruel. He promyseth that he wyl call agayne the people from captiuite, ad geue them a newe and an euerydayng testamēt.

I O the * which cause the Lord oure God hath perfourmed hys deuyce, wherof he certyfyed vs, and oure heades that ruled in Ierusalem: yee and oure kinges, our princes with al Israel and Iuda. And soche plagues hath the Lord brought vpon vs, as neuer came to passe vnder the heauen lyke as it is fulfilled in Ierusalem, * accordyng as it is wyrtten in the lawe of Moses: that a man shulde eate the flesh of hys awne sonne, and the flesh of hys awne daughter. Moreover, he hath delyuered them into the handes of all the kynges, that are rounde aboute vs (to be confounded and desolate) and scatred them abrode in al landes and nacions. Thus are we broughte

Beneath and not aboue, because we haue synned agaynst the Lorde our God, & haue not bene obediēt vnto his voyce. * Therefore the Lorde our God is ryghteous, and we wyth our fathers (as reals is) are brought to ope shame, as it is to se thys dape. And as for these plagues that are come vpon vs al ready, the Lorde had deuyled the for vs: yet wolde we not praye vnto the Lorde our God, that we myght euery man turne fro his vngod-ly wayes. So the Lorde hath caused such plages to come vpon vs: for he is ryghteous in all his workes, which he hath commaunded vs: which we also haue not done, ner herkened vnto his voyce, for to walke in the commaundementes of the Lord, that he hath geuen vnto vs.

* And now, O Lord God of Israell, thou that hast brought thy people out of the land of Egypte with a myghty hande, wyth tokens and wondres, wyth thy great power & out stretched arme: ad hast gotten thy self a name, as it is come to passe thys dape. O Lord our God, we haue synned, we haue done wickedly, we haue behaued our selues vngodly in al thy ryghteousnesses. Turne thy wrath from vs (we beseeche the) for we are but a few left among the hepythen, where the Lorde hath scatred vs. * Heare our prayers (O Lorde) and our peticions, byngge vs out of captiuyte, for thyne awne sake: gett vs fa-uoure in the lyght of the, which haue led vs alwaye: that all landes maye knowe, & thou art the Lorde our God, and that Israell and hys generacyon calleth vpon thy name.

O Lord, loke downe from thy holy house vpon vs: enclpne thyne eare, and heare vs.
* For the deed that be gone downe to theyr graues, ad whose soules are out of their bodys, ascribe vnto the Lord, nether prayse ner righteoumakynge: but the soule that is vexed for the multitude of her synnes, which goeth on heuely and weakely, whose eyes begynne to faile: pee loch a soule ascribeth prayse and ryghteousnesse vnto the Lorde.

O Lorde, we poure out our prayers before the, ad requyre mercy in thy lyght, O Lord our God: not for eny godlynesse of our forefathers, but because thou hast sent oute thy wrath and indignacion vpon vs: accordyng as thou dydest threaten vs, by thy seruau-tes the prophetes, sayenge:

Thus sayeth the Lorde: Wo be downe your shulders and neckes, and serue the kyng of Babylon, so shall ye remayne still in the lande, that I gaue vnto your fathers. Ye ye wyll not do thys, ner heate the voyce of the Lorde your God, to serue the kyng of Babylon: I shall destroye you in the cyties of Juda, within Ierusalem and wythout. I wyll also take from you the voyce of myrth & the voyce of ioye, & voyce of the bypdegromie ad the voyce of the bypde, and there shall no mā dwell more in the lade. But they wolde not herken vnto thy voyce, to do the kyng of Babylon seruyce: and therefore hast thou perfourned the wordes that thou spakest by thy seruantes the prophetes: namely, that the bones of oure fathers shulde be translated out of theyr place.

And lo, now are they layde out in the heat of the sunne, and in the colde of the nyght, & deed in greate mysery, wyth hunger, wyth sweard, wyth pestilence & are clene cast forth.
As for the tēple wherin thy name was called vpon, thou hast layde it wast, as it is to se this dape: & that for the wickednes of the house of Israell and the house of Iuda. O Lorde our God, thou hast intreated vs after al thy goodnes, & accordyng to all that great loupnge mercy of thyne, lyke as thou spakest by thy seruant Moses, in the dape whan thou dydest commaunde hym, to wypte thy lawe before the chyldre of Israell, saying:

* Ye wyll not herke vnto my voyce, then shall this great multitude be turned into a very small people, for I wyll scatre them abode. Not wythstandynge I am sure that this folke wil not heare me: for it is an hard necked people. But in the lande of their captuyte, they shall remembre them selues, ad lerne to knowe, that I am the Lorde theyr God, whan I geue them an herte to vnderstande, and eares to heare. Then shall they prayse me in the land of their captiuyte: ad thyneke vpon my name. Then shall they turne them from theyr harde backes, and from their vngodlynes. Then shall they remembre the thynges, that happened vnto theyr forefathers, whych synned agaynst me. So wyll I byngge them agayne into the lande, which I promysed with an ooth vnto theyr fathers: Abraham, Isaac, ad Jacob: & they shal be lordes of it, pee I wil increace them, and not minyssh the. * And I wyll make another couenaunt with them: soch one as shal endure for euer: namely, that I wil be theyr God, and they shal be my people: and I wyll nomore dryue my people the chyldren of Israell, out of the lande that I haue geuen the.

The. iii. Chapter.

The people contynue in theyr prayer begonne for theyr deliuerance. He prayeth wythoutme vnto the people, shewing that so great aduersities came vnto them for the despayre therof. Only God was the sunder of wylsome. Of the incarnation of Christ.

And now, O Lord almyghty, thou God of Israell: our soule that is in trouble, and oure sprete that is bered, cryeth vnto the: heare vs (O Lorde) and haue pitie vpon vs, for thou art a mercifull God: be gracious vnto vs, for we haue synned before the. Thou endurest for euer, shulde we then vterly perishe?
O Lorde

O Lorde almyghty, thou God of Israell: heare now the prayer * of the deed Israelites and of theyr chyldren, whych haue synned before the, and not herkened vnto the voyce of the Lorde their God, for the which cause these plagues hange now vpon vs. O Lorde, remembre not the wickednes of our forefathers, but thinke vpon thy power ad name now at this tyme: for thou art the Lord our God, and the (O Lorde) wyll we pray-se. * For thou hast put thy feare in oure her-tes, to the intent that we shuld call vpon thy name, and praise the in our captiuyte: & that we myght turne fro the wyckednes of oure forefathers, that synned before the.

Behold, we are yet this dape in our captuyte, where as thou hast scatred vs, to be an abhomy nacion, curse, and synne: * lyke as it hath happened vnto oure fathers also, because of all theyr wickednesse and depar-tyngge from the.

O Israell, heare the edmaundementes of lyfe: pondre the well with thyne eares, that thou mayest lerne wylsome. But how happeneth it Israell, that thou art in thyne enemies land: thou art waxe olde in a straunge countre, ad despyled wyth the deed. Why art thou become lyke them, & go downe to their graues? Eue because thou hast * forsake the well of wylsome. For ye thou haddest walked in the waye of God truly, & shuldest haue remained still safe in thyne awne lande.

* Lerne then where discrecyon is, where vertue is: where vnderstandyng is: that thou mayest knowe also from whence cometh longe lyfe, a necessary luyng, the lyght of the eyes, and quyetnes. Who euer founde out her place: or who came euer into hys treasures.

Where are the princes of the heathen become, and soch as ruled the beastes vpon the earth? They that had their pastyme wyth the foules of the ayre, they that hoorded by syluer and gold (wherin men trust so moch) ad made no ende of their gatheringe: What is become of the that coynd syluer, and were so carefull, and coude not byngge their wokes to passe? They be roted out, & gone dow-ne to hell, and other men are come vp in their steades. Vponge men haue sene lyght, & dwelt vpon earth: but the waye of reformatio haue they not knowne, ner vnderstode the pa-thes therof: nether haue their chyldren recei-ued it, pee right farre is it from the. It hath not bene herde of in the lande of Canaan, nether hath it bene sene at Cheman.

The Agarenes sought after wylsome, but that which is earthly, lyke as the marchantes of the lande do. They of Cheman are conynge also, and they labour for wil-some and vnderstandyng: but the waye of true wylsome they knowe not: nether do they thinke vpon the pathes therof. O Israell how great is the house of God: & how large is the place of his confessio: * Great is he, & hath none ende: pee & vnmeasurable. What is become of those famous grauntes, that were so great of bodyes, and so worthy men of warre? Those had not the Lorde chosen, nether haue they founde the waye of reforma-cyon, therefore were they destroyed: ad for so moch as they had no wylsome, they perished because of theyr foolysnesse.

Who hath gone vp into heauen, to take wylsome there, and brought her downe fro the cloudes? Who hath gone ouer the see to fynde her, and hath chosen her aboue golde, ad so brought her byther? No man knoweth the wayes of wylsome, nether is there eny that can seke out her pathes. But he the woteth all thynges, knoweth her, and he hath foude her out w his foreknowledge. * Thys same is he which prepared the earth at the begynnyng & fylled it with all maner of foules & beastes. * When he sendeth out the lyght, it goeth: and when he calleth it agayne, it obeyeth hym wyth feare. The starres kepe theyr watch, and geue theyr lyght, pee and that gladly. When he calleth them they saye: here we be. And so wyth chearfulnesse they shewe lyght vnto hym that made them.

* This is oure God, & there shall none other be compared vnto hym. It is he that hath founde out all wylsome, and hath geuen her vnto Jacob his seruant, and to Israell hys beloued. * Afterward dyd he shewe him selfe vpon earth, and dwelt amonge men.

The. iiii. Chapter.

The rewarde of them that kepe the lawe, and the pur-posment of them that despayle. A comfortyng of the people begynne in captiuyte. A complaine of Ieru-salem, and vnder the figure therof, of the church. A consolacion and comfortyng of the same.

Thys is the booke of the commaunde-mentes of God, and the lawe that endureth for euer. All they that kepe it, shal come to lyfe: but soch as forsake it, shal come to death. Turne the O Jacob, and take holde of it: walke by this waye thow we hys byghnesse and myne. Seue not thyne honoure to another, and thy wysdomme to a straunge people. O Israell, * how happye are we, sayng the God hath shewed vs soch thyngges as are pleasaunt vnto hym: Be of good chere, thou people of God, O thou auncient Israell. * Now are ye solde amonge the heathen, howbeit, not for your vter destruction: but because ye prouoked God the Lorde to wrath and displeasure, therefore were ye deliuered vnto your enemies: for ye displeased the euer-lastyng God that made you, offeringe vnto deuils & not to God. Ye haue forgotten hym that brought you vp, and your nurse haue pe

pe greued, O Jerusalem.

Whan the lawe of the wrath of God was commynge vpon you, the sayde: herken O ye that dwell aboute Syon, for God hath brought me into great heuynesse: and why? I se I captyuite of my people, of my sonnes and daughters, which the euerlastyng God wyll bypunge vpon them. Wythiope dyd I noyly the, but now must I leaue the wyth wepyng and sorow.

Let no man reioyce ouer me wyddowe & forsaken: which for the synnes of my chyldre am desolate of enery mā. For why? they departed from the lawe of God: they wold not knowe his ryghteousnes, ner walke in the waye of his commaundementes: and as for the pathes of the truth and godlynesse, they had no lust to go in them.

O ye dwellers aboute Syon: come, and let vs call to remembraunce the captyuite, & the euerlastyng God hath brought vpon my sonnes & my daughters. * He hath brought a people vpon the from farre, an vncircumcised people and of a straunge langage: whych nether regarde the olde, ner vntie the yong.

These haue carped awaye the deare beloued of my wyddowes, leauyng me alone, both desolate and childles. But alas, what can I helpe you? Now he that hath brought these plagues vpon you, deliuer you also fro the handes of our enemyes.

So your wape (O my chyldren) go your wape: for I am desolate & forsaken. * I haue put of the clothynge of peace, ad put vpon me the sack cloth of prayer: and for my tyme I wyll call vpon the moost hyest. Be of good cheare O my chyldren: crye vnto the Lord, and he shal deliuer you from the power of the prynces, your enemyes.

For verely, I haue euer a good hope of your prosperous health: yee a very gladnes is come vpon me from the holy one, because of the mercy that ye shall haue of oure euerlastyng saupoure.

Wyth mourning and wepyng dyd I let you go from me, but withiope and perpetuall gladnes, shal the Lord bypunge you agayne vnto me. Lyke as I neyghbours of Syon sawe your captyuite from God. Eue so shal they also se shortly poure health in God, which shal come on you with great honoure and euerlastyng worshyppe.

O my chyldre, * suffre patiently the wrath that shal come vpon you. For the enemye hath persecuted the, but shortly thou shalt se his destruccyon, and shalt treade vpon his necke. Wyth derlynges haue gone rough harde wayes, for they are led awaye as a flocke that is scattered abrode wyth the enemyes. But be of good comforte (O my chyldren) and crye vnto the Lord: For he that led you awaye, hath you yet in remembraunce:

and lyke as ye haue bene mynded to swarue from your God, * so shall ye now endeuour your selues. x. tymes more, to turne agayne and to seke hym. For he that hath brought these plagues vpon you, shal bypunge you euerlastyng ioye agayne with your health. Take a good herte vnto the, O Jerusalem: for he which gaue the that name, exhorteth the so to do.

The wycked doers that now put the to trouble, shal perishe: and soch as haue reioyced at thy fall, shal be punyshed. The cypres whom thy chyldren serue, and that haue carped awaye thy sonnes, shal be correct. For lyke as they be now glad of thy decaye (and reioyse at thy fall) so shall they mourne in theyr awne destruccyon. The ioye of theyr multitude shal be taken awaye, and theyr cheare shal be turned to sorowe. For a fyre shal fall vpon the from the euerlastyng God longe to endure: and it shal be inhabited of deuils for a great season.

The. v. Chapter.

Jerusalem is moued vnto gladnes for the retourne of her people, and vnder the figure thereof, the church.

Jerusalem, loke aboute the towarde the east, and beholde the ioye that commeth vnto the from God. For lo, thy sonnes (whō thou hast forsaken, and that were scattered abrode) come gathered together, from the east and west, reioysynge in the worde of the holy one, vnto the honoure of God.

But of thy mournynge clothes (O Jerusalem) and thy sorow, and decke the wyth the worshyppe and honoure, that commeth vnto the from God, with euerlastyng glory. God shal put the garment of righteouslyesse vpon the, and sett a crowne of euerlastyng worshyppe vpon thine head: for vpon the wyll God declare his bypghtnesse, that is vnder the heauen. Yee an euerlastyng name shal be geuen the of God, wyth peace of ryghteousnesse, and the honoure of Goddes feare.

Aryse, O Jerusalem, stande vpon hye: loke aboute the towarde the east, and beholde thy chyldren gathered from the east, vnto the west: whych reioyce in the holy worde, haupnge God in remembraunce. They departed fro the onfore, and were led awaye of theyr enemyes: but now shal the Lord bypunge them carped with honoure, as chyldren of the kyngdom. For God is purposed to bypunge downe all stoute mountaynes, yee and all hye rockes, to fyll the valleys, and so to make them euen wyth the grounde: that Israel maye be diligit to lye vnto the honoure of God. The woddes and all pleasaunt trees shal ouershadow Israel, at the commauncommaundement of God. For hyther shall God bypunge Israel with ioyful myrth, and in the lyght of his magestye: with the mercy and ryghteousnes, that commeth of him selfe.

The. vi. Chapter.

A copie of the epistle that Jeremie sent vnto the Jewes, whych were led awaye prisoners by the kyng of Babilon: wher in he certifieth them of the chynge, that was commaunded hym of God.

Because of the synnes that ye haue done agaynst God, ye shall be * led awaye captyue vnto Babilon, eue of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon. So whan ye become into Babilon, ye shall remayne there many yeres, ad for a longe season: namely seuen generacions: and after that wil I bypunge you awaye peaceably from thence. Now shal ye se in Babilon, goddes of golde, of syluer, of wode and of stone, bozne vpon mens shoulders, to cast out a fearfulnesse before the heathen. But loke that ye do not as the other: be not ye afrayed, and let not the feare of them ouercome you.

Therfore, whan ye se the multitude of people worshypynge them behynde ad before, saye ye in your hertes: O Lord, * it is thou, that oughtest only to be worshipped: Myne Angell also shal be with you, and I my selfe wyll care for your soules. As for the tymbre of those goddes, I carpenter hath polisyed them: yee gylded be they, ad layed ouer with siluer, yet are they but vayne thynges, and canot speake. Lyke as a wech that loueth peramours is trymply deckte, eue so are these made & hanged with golde. Crownes of golde verely haue they: goddes vpon their heades: so the prestes them selues take golde and syluer from them: and put it to theyr awne vles: yee they geue of the same vnto harlots, and trymme theyr whores withall: agayne, they take it from the whores, and decke theyr goddes therewith. * Yet cannot these goddes deliuer the selues fro rust and mothes. When they haue couered them wyth clothynge of purple, they wyppre their faces for the dust of the temple, wherof theyr is moch among the. One hath a sceptre in his hande, as though he were iudge of the coultre: yet can he not slaye soch as offende him. Another hath a sweard or an are in his hande, for all that is he nether able to defende hym selfe from battaylle, ner from murderers.

Wyth this ye maye vnderstande, that they be no goddes: therfore se that ye nether worshyppe them, ner feare them. For lyke as a vessel that a man vseth, is nothyng worth when it is broken, euen so is it wyth theyr goddes. When they be set vpon in the temple, theyr eyes be full of dust, thowowe the fete of those that come in. And lyke as I doers are shut in rounde aboute vpon hym that hath offended the kyng. Or as it were a dead body kepte besyde the graue. Euen so the prestes kepe the doers with barres and lockes, lest their Goddes be spoyled with robbers. They set vpon candels before them (yee verely and that many) wherof they canot se one but eue as blockes, so stand they in the temple. It is sayde, that the serpentes and wodmes, whych come of the earth, gnawe out their hertes, eatyng them and theyr clothes also, ad yet they felc it not. Theyr faces are black thowowe the smoke I is in the temple. The oules, swalowes, and bydes fle vpon the, yee & I catteres runne ouer theyr heades.

Wyth this ye maye be sure, that they are not goddes, therfore feare them not. The golde that they haue, is to make them be wyppull: for all that, except some body byght of their rust, they wyll geue no myne: and whē they were cast into a fourme, they felt it not.

They are bought for money & haue no byrth of lyfe wythin them. * They must be borne vpon mens shoulders, as those that haue no fete: wherby they declare vnto men, that they be nothyng worth. * Cōfounded be they then that worshyppe the. For yf they fal to the grounde, they cannot ryse vp agayne of them selues. Yee though one helpe them vp and set them ryght, yet are they not able to stande alone: but must haue ppropes set vnder the lyke deed me. As for the tyng that is offred vnto them, their prestes sell it, and abuse it: yee the prestes wyues take therof, but vnto the lycke and pooze they geue no thyng of it, the women wyth chyldre and the menstruous laye handes of their offrynges: Wythys ye maye be sure, that they are no goddes, therfore be not ye afrayde of them. From whence commeth it the, that they be called goddes? The women sytt before the goddes of syluer, golde and wode, and the prestes sytt in theyr temples, haupnge ope clothes, whose heades ad beerdres are shaued and haue nothyng vpon their heades: roring and cryeng vpon their goddes, as me do at the feast, when one is deed.

The prestes also take awaye the garments of the ymages, and deck their wyues ad chyldre wythal. Whether it be good or euil that eny man do vnto, the they are not able to recompence it: they can nether sett vp a king ner put hi downe. In lyke maner they maye nether geue ryches, ner rewarde euil: * Though a man make a vowe vnto them and kepe it not, they wyll not requyre it. They can saue no man from deat, nether deliuer the weake from the myghty. They cannot restore a blinde man to his sight, ner helpe eny man at his nede. They can shew no mercy to the wyddowe, ner do good to the fatherlesse

And they walked in symphony best of pflame, praysonge Gods magnifyge p Lord.
Asarias stode vp, & prayde on this maner. Euen in the myddest of p fyre opened he his mouth, & sayde: Blessed be p (O Lord God of oure fathers) ryght worthy to be prayled & honoured is p name of thyne for euermore: for p art ryghteous i all the thynges p thou hast done to vs: Pce, saythfull are all thy woorkes, thy wayes are ryght, ad all thy iudgementes true. In all p thynges p p hast brought vp vs, & vp p holy cytie of oure fathers (euen Ierusalem) p hast executed true iudgement: pce accor-dyng to ryght ad equyte hast p brought all these thynges vp vs because of oure synnes.

For whyp we haue offended, & done wy-kedly, departynge fro the: * In all thynges haue we trespassed, ad not obeyed thy coma-ndementes, ner kepte the, nether done as p hast bydd vs, p we might prosper. * Wherfore, all that thou hast brought vp vs, and euery thig that thou hast done to vs, thou hast done the in true iudgement: As in dely-uerynge vs into p handes of oure enemyes, amonge vngodly and wycked abhomyacions, & to an vnyghtuous kyng, pce p most frowarde vpon earth. And now we maye not open oure mouthes, we are become a shame & reprofe vnto thy seruauntes, ad to the that woorthyppe p. Yet for thyne names sake (we beseeche the) geue vs not vp for euer, bryake not thy couenaunt, and cake not a waie thy mercy from vs, for thy beloued Abraham sake, for thy seruaunt Isaac sake and for thy holy Israels sake. To who thou hast spoken & promised * that thou woldest multiplie the p seide as p starres of heauen, and as the lande that lyeth vpon the see shore. For we (O Lord) are become lesse then enye people, and be kepte vnder thys daie i all the world, because of oure synnes: So p now we haue nether pynne, duke, prophet, burntofferynge, sacryfyce, oblacion, incense, ner Sanctuary before the.

Reuert helesse, in a contryte herte and an humble sprete let vs be receaued, p we maye opteyne thy mercy. Lyke as in p burnt offeryng of rammes and bullockes, & lyke as in thousandes of fat lambes so lett oure offeryng be in thy syght this daie, that it maye please p, * for there is no cofusion vnto the, p put there trust i the. And now we folowe the with all oure herte, we feare the, & sche thy face. But vs not to shame, but deale w vs after thy lounge kindnesse, & according to p multitude of thy mercyes. Welouer vs by thy myracles (O Lord) and get thy name & honoure: that all they which do thy seruauntes euell, maye be cofounded. Let them be ashamed thow thy almyghty power, & let they strength be broke: that they maye knowe, how p thou only art the Lord God, & honoure worthy thow out all p worlde.

so that the flame wete oute of the ouen vpo a xlii. cubytes: pce it toke awaye & bryt vp those Caldees, that it gat holde vpo besyde downe into the ouen to Asarias and hys felowes, and smote the flamme of the fyre out of p ouen, and made the myddest of the ouen as it had bene a colde wynde blowynge: so p the fyre nether touched them, greued them, ner dyd them hurte. Then these thre (as out of onc mouth) prayled, honoured, and blecsed God in the forname, sayenge,

* Blessed be thou, O Lord God of oure fathers: for thou art prayled and honoured wo-thy, pce and to be magnified for euermore.
* Blessed be p holy name of thy glory, for it is worthy to be prayled, and magnified in mple of thy glory, for aboue all thynges thou art to be prayled, p & more the worthy to be magnified for euer. Blessed be p in p tro-ne of thy kingdome, for aboue all p art wo-thy to be well spokē of, & to be more then ma-gnified for euer. Blessed be thou, that lokest byns: for thou art worthy to be prayled, ad aboue all to be magnified for euer. Blessed be thou in the firmament of heauen, for thou

* O ye angels of p Lord, spake good of the Lord, prayse him, & set hym vp for euer.
O ye heauens, spake good of the Lord:
prayse hym, and set hym vp for euer.

All ye waters that be aboue the firmament, spake good of the Lord: prayse him and set hym vp for euer.

All ye powers of p Lord, spake good of the Lord, prayse hym, & set him vp for euer.
* O ye Sunne & Moone, spake good of p
Lord: prayse hym, and set him vp for euer.

O ye starres of heauen, spake good of the Lord: prayse hym, and set him vp for euer.

* O ye howers & dew, spake good of the fatherlesse. They goddes of wood, stone, golde, and syluer, are but euen as other stones, that be hewen of the mountayne. They that woorthyppe them, shall be confounded.

How shulde they then be taken for goddes?
Pce how darre men call them goddes? And though the caldees woorthypped them not, hearyng that they were but domme & could not speake. Yet they them selues offe vnto Well, and wolde sayne haue hym to speake: as who saye, they coulde fele, that maye not moue. But when these men come to vnder-standing, they shal forsake the, for their god-des haue no felynge. A greute sorte of we-men gyde wyth coardes, spt in the stretes, and burne olyue beries. Now p one of them be coucyed awape, and lye wytheny soch as come by: the casteth her neyghbours in p teth, because she was not so woorthelye reputed, ner her coarde broken. Whatsoeuer is done for them, it is but in wayne and lost. How maye it then be thought o sayde, that they are goddes? Carpenters and golde smythes make them, nether be they eny other thig but eue what the woorkemen wyll make of them. Pce the golde smythes the selues that make them, are of no longe continuance.
How shulde then the thynges that are made of them, be goddes? Clayne therfore are the thynges (pce very same is it) p they leaue behynde them for they prosper. For as soone as there cometh eny warre or plage vpon them, then the prestes ymagin, where they maye hyde them selues with the. How can men thynke then that they be goddes, which nether maye defende them selues fro warre, ner delyuer them from myffortune?
For seynge they be but of wood, of stone, of syluer and of golde: all people and kynges shall knowe herafter that they be but vayne thynges: pce it shal be opely declared, that they be no goddes: but eue the very woorkes of mens handes, and that God hath nothing to do with them. (It is manifest then that they are no goddes, but the woorkes of mens handes, and no worke of God in the.) They can set no kyng in the lande, ner geue rayne vnto men. They can geue no sentence of a matter, nether defende the lande fro wrong.
For they are not able to do so moche as a crowe, p lyeth betwixte heauen and earth.

When there happeneth a fyre into the house of those goddes of wodde, and syluer, and of golde, the prestes wyll escape and saue them selues, but the goddes burne as the balkes therin. They cannot withstode eny kyng or battel: how maye it the be thought or graunted, p they be goddes? Moreover, these goddes of wodde, of stone, of golde and syluer maye nether defende them selues fro theues ner robbers: pce the very wycked are stronger then they. These stripe them out of their apparell, that they be clothed withall, these take they golde and syluer from the,

and so get the awaye: yet can they not helpe the selues. Therfore it is moche better for a man, to be a kyng, & so to shewe his power: or els a profitable vessel in a house, wherein he that oweth it might haue pleasure: pce or to be a doze in a house, to kepe soch thynges safe as be therein, the to be soch a vayne god.
The Sunne, the Moone and al the starres, seyng they geue they thynne and lyght, are obediēt, and do men good. When the lyghtenynge glysteth, all is cleare. The wynde bloweth in euery countre: and whā God comaundeth the cloudes to go rounde aboute the whole world, they do as they are bydde.
When the fyre is sent downe from aboue ad comaunded, it burneth vp hylles & woddes.
But as for those goddes, they are not lyke one of these thynges, nether in bewty nether strength. Wherfore men shulde not thynke ner saye that they be goddes, seynge they cā nether geue sentence in iudgment, ner do me good. For so moche now as ye are sure, that they be no goddes, then feare them not. For they can nether speake euil ner good of kinges. They can shewe no tokens in heauen for the hepyth, nether thynne as the Sunne, ner geue lyght as the Moone: pce the vnrea-nable beastes are better then they, for they can get them vnder the rose, and do the sel-ues good. So can ye be certifyd by no maner of meanes, that they be goddes: therfore feare them not. For lyke as a scarcrowe in a garden of herbes kepeth nothyng, euen so are they goddes of wod, of syluer and gold:
and lyke as a whytethorne in an orcharde, that euery byrde sitteth vpon: pce lyke as a deed body that is cast in the darcke. Eue so is it wyth those goddes of wodde, syluer and golde. By the purple ad scarlet whych they haue vpon them, and soone saydeth awaye, ye maye vnderstande, that they be no god-des: pce they them selues shall be consumed at the last, whych shall be a great confusion of the land. Blessed is the godly man, that hath no ymages and woorthyppeth none, for he shal be farre from reprofe.

Here dwelt a man in Babylō, called Joachim, & toke a wyfe, whose name was Susanna, & daughter of helchia, a very faire womā and soch one as feared God. Her father and her mother also were godly people & taught theyr daughter accordynge to the lawe of Moses. Now Joachim (her husbāde) was a greater rch mā, and had a fayre orcharde ioryng vnto hys house. And to him resoted the Jewes comely, because he was a mā of reputacyon amonge them. The same yea-re were there made two iudges, soch as the Lorde speaketh of: All the wyckednesse of Babylō, cometh from the elders (that is) from the iudges, whych seme to rule the people. These came oft to Joachim's house, and all soch as hadeny thyng to do in the lawe came thither vnto them.

Now when the people came agayne at after noone. Susanna went into her husban-des orcharde, to walke. The elders seinge thys, that she went in daylye, and walked:
they burned for lust to her, yee they were almost out of theyr wyttes, and cast downe theyr eyes, that they wuld not se heauē, ner remembre, that God is a ryghteous iudge.
For they were both wounded with the loue of her, nether durst one shewe another his grete. And for shame, they durst not tell her theyr iordynate lust, that they wolde sayne haue had to do w her. Yet they layed wayte for her earnestly from daye to daye, that they myght (at the leest) haue a syght of her And the one sayde to the other: Up, lett vs goo home, for it is dyner time. So they wēt theyr waye from her.

When they returned agayne, they came together, enquerynge out the matter betwixe them selues: yee the one tolde the other of hys wycked lust. Then appoynted they a tyme, when they myght take Susanna alone.

It happened also that they spyed oute a conuenient tyme, when she went forth to wal-ke (as her maner was) & no body wyth her, but two maydens, & thought to wash her selfe in the garde, for it was an hote season:
And there was not one person there, excepte the two elders, that had hyd them selues to beholde her. So she sayde to her maydens: go ferme oyle and sope, and put the orcharde doze, that I maye wash me. And they dyd as she bad them, and shut the orcharde doze, ad went out them selues at a backe doze, to fet the thyng that she had comaunded: but Susanna knewe not, that the elders laye there hyd within. Now when the maydens were

were gone forth, the two elders gat the vp:
and ranne vpo her, sayng: now the orchard dozes are shut, that no man can se vs: we haue a lust vnto the, therfore consent vnto vs.
and lye wyth vs.

If thou wylt not, we shall byrnye a testimoniall agaynst the: that there was a poge felowe with the, and that thou hast sent awaye thy maydens fro the for the same cause. Susanna syghed, & sayde: Alas. I am in trouble on euery syde. Though I folowe your mynde, it wyl be my death, & yf I co-sent not vnto you, I ca not escape your hades. Well, it is better for me, to fal ito your hāde wythout the dede doyng, then to syn-ne in the syght of the Lorde: and with that, she cryed out with a loude voyce: the elders also cryed out agaynst her.

Then ranne there one to the orcharde dore, and smote it open. Now when the seruantes of the house herde the crye in the or-charde, they rushed i at the backe doze, to se what the matter was. So when the elders tolde them, the seruantes were greatly ashamed, for why: there was neuer soch a reporte made of Susanna. On the morow after came the people to Joachim her husbāde, & the two elders came also, full of myscheu-ymagynacyō agaynst Susanna, to byrnye her vnto death, & spake thus befoze the people: Sende for Susanna & daughter of helchias, Joachim's wyfe. And immediatly they sent for her. So she came wyth her father & mother, her chyldren & all her kynred. Now Susanna was a tender person, and meruelous fayre of face. Therfore the wycked mē comaunded to take of the clothes fro her face (for she was couered) that at the leest, they myght so be satisfied i her beutie. The her frendes, yee and al they that knewe her, beganne to wepe.

These two elders stode vp in the myddest of the people, & layed theyr handes vpon the heade of Susanna: which wepte, and loked vp towarde heauen, for her herte had a sure trust in the Lord. And the elders sayde: As we were walkynge in the orcharde alone, thys woman came in with her two may-dens: whom she sent awaye from her, & sparred the orcharde dozes: with a ponge felowe (which there was hyd) came vnto her, and laye with her. As for vs, we stode in a corner of the orcharde. And when we sawe this wyckednes, we ranne to her: and perceaued, that they had medled together. But we coulde not holde hym, for he was stronger then we:
thus he opened the doze ad gat hym awaye.

Now when we had taken thys woman, we asked her, what ponge felowe this was:
but she wolde not tell vs. This is the matter, and we be wytnesses of the same.

The come sozte beleued them, as those that were the elders and iudges of the people, ad so they condēned her to death. Susanna cryed out with a loude voyce, and sayd: O euerlastige God, thou sercher of secretes, & that knowest all thynges afoze they come to passe: thou wotest, that they haue bozne false witnes agaynst me: & beholde, I must dye, where as I neuer dydeny soch thynges, as these men haue malyciously inuēcted agaynst me.

And the Lorde herde her voyce. For whē she was led forth to death, the Lorde rapted vp the sprete of a poge child, whose name was Daniel, whych cryed with a loude voyce: * I am cleane from this bloude. The all the people turned them towarde hi, & sayd: What meane these wordes, that thou hast spokē?
Daniel stode in the myddest of them, & sayd:
Arc ye soch faoles, O ye children of Israel, that ye can not discerne ner knowe the tru-eth? Ye haue here condēned a daughter of Israel vnto death, and knowe not the tructh wherfore: So o spt on iudgemēt agayne, for they haue spokē false wytnesse, agaynst her.

Wherfore the people turned agayne in all the haste. And the elders (that is, the princi-pall heades) sayd vnto hi: come spt downe here amonge vs, and shewe vs this matter, seynge God hath geuen the as grete honoure as an elder. And Daniel said vnto the: Put these two asyde one from another, and then shall I heare the. Whē they were put asunder one from another, he called one of them and sayd vnto hym: O thou olde cankerde carle, that hast vled thy wyckednesse so log: thyne vngreace dedes which thou hast done afoze, are now come to lyght. For thou hast geuen false iudgements, thou hast oppressed the innocent, & letten the gyltye go fre where as yet the Lord sayeth: * The innocēt & ryghteous se thou slaye not. Well thā, yf thou hast sene her tell me vnder what tre-se wast thou them talkynge together: he answered: vnder a Holbery tree. And Daniel sayde: very well, now thou lyste euen vpon thyne head. Lo the messaunger of the Lord hath reccaused the sentence of hym, to cut the in two. Then put he hym asyde, & called for the other, & sayde vnto hym: O thou sede of Canaan, but not of Juda: thyneynesse hath dysceaued the, ad lust hath subuerted thyne herte. Thus dealte ye afoze with the daughters of Israel, and they (for feare) consented vnto you: but the daughter of Juda wolde not abyde poure wyckednesse. Now tell me thā vnder what tree dydest thou take the, speakyng together: he answered: vnder a pō-granate tree. Then sayde Daniel vnto him: very wel, now thou lyste also eue vpon thy-ne head. The messaunger of the Lorde stan-deth wayting with the swerde, to cut the in two and to slaye you both.

Mal. xlii. a Daniel dyd eate at y kynges table, & was had in reuerence aboue all his frendes. There was at Babylō an ymage, called Bel: & there were spēt vpon hym euery daye. xii. cakes. xl. shepe, & dyngre grete pottes of wyne. hym dyd y kyng wyth hym selfe, & wente daylye to honour hi: but Daniel wythshipped hys awne God. And y kyng sayde vnto hym: why dost not y wor-shyppe Bel? he answered & sayde: * Because I maye not worshyppe thynges y be made w handes, & but the lyuynge God, which made heauē & earth: & hath power vpon al fleche.
The kyng sayde vnto hym: thynkest y not that Bel is a lyuynge God? & seyst thou not how moch he eateth and dryncketh eu-ery daye: Daniel smyled, and sayde: & kig, disceane not thy selfe: for thys is but made of claye within, & of metall wythout, * nether eateth he euer any thyng.

Then the kyng was wroth, & called for his prestes, and sayde vnto them: If ye tell me not who is thys, that eateth vpon these expenses, ye shall dye: but yf ye cā certifie me that Bel eateth the, then Daniel shall dye, for he hath spokē blasphemy agaynst Bel.
And Daniel sayd vnto the kyng: let it so be accordyng as thou hast sayde: The prestes of Bel were. lxx. besyde theyr wyues & children. And the kyng wente with Daniel in to the temple of Bel. So Bels prestes sayd Lo, we wyll go out, and set thou the meate there (y kyng) and poure in the wyne: the quitt the doze fast, and scale it wyth thynne awne sygnet: and to morow when thou comest in, yf thou fyndest not that Bel hath eaten vpon all, we wyll suffre death: or els Daniel, that hath lyed vpon vs. The prestes thought them selues sure ynough, for vnder the altare they had made a preynt in traunce, and there wente they in euer, & dyd eate vpon what there was.

So when they were gone forth, the kyng set meates before Bel. Now Daniel had comaunded his seruantes to bringe all theys, & these he syfted thorow out all the temple, that the kyng myght se. Then wente they out, and sparred the doze, scalynge it wyth y kynges sygnet, & so departed. In the nyght came the prestes wyth theyr wyues & chyldren (as they were wote to do) & dyd eate & dryncke vpon al. In the mornynge by tymes at the breake of the daye, the kyng arose, and Daniel wyth hym. And the kyng sayd: Daniel, are the scales whole yet? he answered: Yee (y kyng) they be whole. Now as soone as he had opened y doze, the kyng looked in to the aultare, and cryed wyth a loude voyce: Create art thou O Bel, & with the is no disceate. The laughed Daniel, and helde the kyng that he shulde not go in, and sayd: We holde the pauement, marke well, whose fo-testepes are these? The kyng sayd: I se the forestepes of men, women and chyldren.

Therfore the kyng was angrie, and to-ke the prestes, with theyr wyues and chyldren, and they shewed hym the preynt dozes, where they came in, & dyd eate vpon such thyngges as were vpon y aultare. For the whych cause the kyng slewe the, & deliuered Bel into Daniels power, which destroyed hym and his temple.

And in that same place there was a great Dragon which they of Babylon worshypped. And the kyng sayd vnto Daniel, sayest thou that this is but a God of metall also?
lo, he lyueth, he eateth & dryncketh: so that thou canst not saye, y he is no lyuynge God, therfore worshyppe hym. Daniel sayd vnto the kyng: I wyll worshyppe the Lord my God, * he is the true lyuynge God: as for this he is not the God of lyfe. But geue me leaue (y kyng) and I shall destroye thys Dragon without swearde or staffe. The kyng sayd: I geue y leaue. The Daniel toke pitch fatte and heartye woll, & dyd sette them together, and made lompes therof: this he put in the Dragons mouth, and so the Dragon burst in sonder: and Daniel sayd: lo there is he whom ye worshypped. When they of Babylon herde y, they toke grete indignacion and gathered them together agaynst y kyng,

So they came to the kyng, and sayd: let vs haue Daniel, or els we will destroye the and Now when the kyng sawe, that they rus-shed in so sore vpon hym, and that necessite constrayned him, * he deliuered Daniel vnto them: which cast hym into the Lyons denne, where he was lyre dayes. In the denne there were seuen Lyons, and they had geuen them euery daye two bodyes & two shepe: whych then were not geuen them, to the intent that they myght deuoure Daniel.

There was in Jewry a prophete called Abacuc, which had made potage, and broke bred in a depe platter, and was goynge into the felde, for to bringe it to y reapers. But the Angell of the Lord sayde vnto Abacuc go carpe the meate that thou hast lto Babyllon, vnto Daniel, which is i the Lyons denne.
And Abacuc sayde: Lord, I neuer sawe Babylon: and as for the denne, I knowe it not. * Then the Angell of the Lord toke hi by the toppe, and bare hym by the heare of the head, and (thorow a myghtie wynde) set him in Babylon vpon the denne. And Aba-cuc cried, sayenge: O Daniel * y seruant of God, haue, take y break fast, that God hath sent the. And Daniel sayde: O God, halt y thought vpon me: well, thou neuer faplest cuc in his awne place agayne immediatly.

kyng wyth a loude voyce, sayig: Create art
